"It has been and still is very common among us, though it may be losing ground somewhat lately. But I do not think that Catholics have at any time been much interested in it compared with some other people. With regard to the next life, we have our faith to instruct us and are not inclined so much as others to ask the spirit-rappers to give us information. But still many Catholics have gone to their meetings, and would have little scruple in going now, just, as they say, from curiosity. They think there is nothing in it; that it is only a more or less clever piece of jugglery. Now in this they should understand that they are likely to be greatly mistaken. Jugglery and trickery it is sometimes, no doubt; but there is the gravest reason to suspect that in many cases the spirits actually have a hand in the matter. Not, it is true, the spirits of the departed who are invoked, but evil and lying spirits who personate them and wish by information seeming to come from them to weaken or destroy our belief in the truth of revelation. It is then no joking matter, but a very serious and dangerous one, to put one's self in the power and under the influence of these spirits from hell; and this is what one who goes to these spiritual seances, as they are called, may probably do. Remember then, to have nothing to do with them if you value your immortal soul."

LITERATURE.

HAND-BOOK OF PROHIBITION, 1885. By A. J. Jutkins, D.D., Cor. Sec'y National Prohibition Party. pp. 177. Price, cloth, 60 cents; paper, 25 cents.

This is an historical book, yet not a history; rather the facts, data or preparation for a history of a great movement for the GREATER EMANCIPATION of all races in our land from the slavery of the saloon. The rise of the Prohibition party, its nominations and conventions from 1869 to 1884 and especially the St. John campaign and the politics of the W. C. T. Union. A considerable portion of the work is devoted also to temperance legislation in the different States, and provides therein much valuable information upon this subject. As a review of the prohibition movement in politics this work will have a special value to thousands. It is interesting to note that, though this national political movement was first set afoot by the Grand Lodge of Good Templars, the stream has so grown that the poison of the fountain seems hardly perceptible. It is a people's, not a lodge movement. Indeed, the lodge but took advantage of a popular feeling that was bound to break out into national politics, and though the first agency to inaugurate the movement we are not inclined to give it great credit for the work. The lodge row at the Pittsburg convention in July last, Dr. Jutkins notices briefly, but very justly, throwing the blame upon the members of the convention, who violated the courtesies of the occasion. This book will be valuable for frequent reference, and may be obtained of Dr. Jutkins at 87 Washington street, Chicago.

FUN AND WISDOM gained by two city boys in a summer vacation. By John C. Hervey. 16 mo. pp. 117. Price 35 cents. John B. Alden, New York.

This is a story of amusing and homely experiences most charmingly told. Every city boy may read it with much profit and more pleasure; and the country boys also. Of an excellent, healthful moral tone it charms the understanding without exciting the imagination, as is sadly too often the effort of writers for the young. This story was published in Alden's Juvenile Gem and formed one of the most attractive features of that paper.

The Confessions of St. Augustine, revised from a former traslation by Rev. E. B. Pusey, D. D., Professor of Hebrew at Oxford, is the first part of a "Library of the Fathers of the Church," to be issued twice a month at the rate of 25 cts. per copy or $5.00 per year. This effort to popularize these very valuable writings should be met by a liberal patronage.

The North American Review for May has a new poem of considerable length by Robert Buchanan, on "The New Buddha." It is noted that sixty-six years ago Bryant's popular "Thanatopsis" was first published in the Review. The first position in the magazine is given to Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton for a splenitic and illogical attempt to prove that Christianity has not improved the condition of woman. Not long since this lady attempted to prove the monstrous and absurd proposition that the Bible sanctions polygamy. It is no wonder that common people fail to appreciate the advocacy of female suffrage by one who is so absurdly wrong on important questions. It is a sufficient refutation of her present article to look upon the nations to-day. Which honor and elevate woman to her proper place, Christian or pagan? But Rev. J. S. Spaulding, Roman Catholic bishop of Peoria, labors to refute Mrs. Stanton and exalt Mary, "the Mother of God" whom his church deifies. David Dudley Field has a thoughtful and well written article on "Industrial Co-operation" which approves of co-operation and gives a general plan for securing it. Pres. J. L. Pickard, of Iowa, writes on "Why crime is Increasing." Other articles are, "What is Academic Freedom?" "Success in Fiction," and "Superstition in English Life." The attitude of Catholicism toward our public schools —a problem of grave concern at the present time— is to be discussed from opposite premises in the June number of the North American Review, by M. C. O'Byrne, of North Carolina, against the Roman Catholic church, and Bishop Keane, of Virginia, in defense of its policy.

The English Illustrated Magazine for May is rather more entertaining than usual. "Wolseley: a Character Sketch" by Archibald Forbes is the story of the battles, escapes and promotions of the commander of the English army, illustrated with a fine portrait. "Legends of Toledo" has some fine pictures of an interesting old Spanish city, "About the market gardens," the conclusion of Bret Harte's story, "A ship of '49," and a continuation of the poem "The Sirens Three's," are the other illustrated papers.

The Electra of Louisville, Ky., begins its third year as a magazine of "pure literature" conducted by women. The May number has interesting sketches of Charlotte Bronte, and of Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, whose management of Anne, afterward Queen of England, was a sore trial to William of Orange.

People generally, and even those who may be termed steady readers and close observers, have but a faint conception of the magnitude and influence the press of this country has attained. From a careful examination of the advance pages of the 1885 edition of the "American Newspaper Directory, issued May 1st, by Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, it appears that there are 14,147 newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and Canada; of these the United States has 12,973, an average of one paper for every 3,867 persons. In 1884 the total number of newspapers was less by 823 than at present, and while the gain this year is not so marked as in some previous years, it is still considerable. Kansas shows the greatest increase, the number being 78, while Illinois follows with a gain of 77. It is curious to notice that New York, the scene of so much political activity during the last campaign, should have only about one-third as many new papers as the State of Pennsylvania. As an index to the comparative growth and prosperity of different sections of the country, especially the Territories, the number of new papers forms an interesting study, and may well occupy the attention of the curious.

THE NATIONAL REFORM CONVENTION.

At the late meeting of the National Reform Association at Pittsburgh, addresses were delivered by Rev. Wm. Weir, of Ohio, on "The Rights of Christian Citizens;" by Rev. David McAllister, professor of political science in Geneva College, on "The Social Compact Theory False and Pernicious;" by Rev. F. M. Spencer, D. D., president of Muskingum College, on "The State and the Sabbath;" by Rev. I. N. Hays, D. D., on "The United States Mail-Service and the Sabbath;" by Rev. R. J. George, on "The Duty of the State to Christ;" by Rev. Samuel W. Dike. of Royalton, Vermont, corresponding secretary of the National Divorce Reform League, on the work of that association; by Rev. W. J. Coleman, on "The Christian Amendment to the National Constitution;" and by Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, of Ohio, on the theme, "Shall the Republic be Perpetuated?"

Much attention was given to the question of the national mail-service and the Sabbath. Facts and figures laid before the association showed that this form of Sabbath-desecration is rapidly increasing, and the number of towns at which the mail is delivered and the post-office is kept open on the Sabbath is much greater every year, and the post-office is increasingly resorted to, even by Christian people, on the Lord's-day. Some hundreds of thousands of officials and employes are constrained by the regulations of the postal-service to labor on the Sabbath. It was resolved to direct the efforts of the association very largely in the future to the discontinuance of the whole mail-service on the Lord's-day. The creation of a department for the suppression of Sabbath desecration by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, as well as their work for temperance, was hailed with profound satisfaction, and their co-operation was invoked in the work referred to.

I confess that our diet here is but sparing; we get but tastings of our Lord's comforts; but the cause of that is not because our steward, Jesus, is a niggard, but because our stomachs are weak.—Rutherford.

THE HOME.

A WORD ABOUT WORDS.

Ah me! these terrible tongues of ours,
Are we half aware of their mighty powers?
Do we ever trouble our heads at all
Where the jest may strike, or the hint may fall?
The latest chirp of that "little bird,"
That spicy story "you must have heard"—
We jerk them away in our gossip rash,
And somebody's glass, of course, goes smash,
What fames have been blasted and broken,
What pestilent sinks been stirred,
By a word in lightness spoken,
By only an idle word.

A sneer—a shrug—a whisper low—
They are poisoned shafts from an ambushed bow!
Shot by the coward, the fool, the knave,
They pierce the mail of the great and brave;
Vain is the buckler of wisdom or pride
To turn the pitiless point aside;
The lip may curl with a careless smile,
But the heart drips blood—drips blood the while.
Ah me! what hearts have been broken,
What rivers of blood have been stirred,
By a word in malice spoken,
By only a bitter word,

A kindly word and a tender tone—
To only God is their virtue known!
They can lift from the dust the abject head,
They can turn a foe to a friend instead;
The heart close-barred with pashion and pride
Will fling at their knock its portal wide,
And the hate that blights and the scorn that sears
Will melt in the fountain of childlike tears.
What ice-bound griefs have been broken,
What rivers of love been stirred,
By a word in kindness spoken,
By only a gentle word. —Selected.

YIELDING TO MOODS.

The moods to which we yield are always the darker ones. The morose, the cynical, the desponding moods dominate us, freezing us with their coldness, or spurring us to frenzy; while the healthful, happy, cheery moods never assert themselves at all. We need not resist them. We are simply bathed in them; float on their calm current as a swimmer on the summer waves; mount on them as a bird beating upward rises to heights of pure ether.

Nobody is conscious of being overcome by cheerfulness; many a person is drearily despotized by depression, and very much ashamed that he cannot exorcise the demon which haunts him, or drive it hence by an effort of the will.

That cannot be a perfect home, doing the work and affording the refuge which a home is bound to do and offer, in which any person is habitually moody. A capricious, exacting, fault-finding father, of whom the children are afraid, who is never satisfied and always critical, diffuses an air of blackness over a family, of which the occasional dark days we all remember are only faintly typical.

A morbid, selfish, scolding mother, whose "continual mooding" is an incessant exasperation to the temper and nerves of everybody around her, is the most successful modern imitator of the bad faries of our childhood. Beneath her frown all the home flowers wither, and the pearls of conversation are changed to hateful things, venemous and spiteful.

A petulant, spoiled child, or a grim and despondent servant, can do a great deal in the wet blanket line; but father or mother, having the larger influence and the more immediate responsibility, may each of them blight the plants of daily pleasure at the root. Alas, that this they so often do!

The genesis of our lower moods may be discovered without much search. Indigestion, ill-health, lack of sufficient sleep, and lying back of these, our national sin of over-work and our human-nature sin of over-anxiety, account for much of our despondency. Living beyond our means, assuming a style which the income does not justify, buying pretty things which we cannot easily pay for, lavish outlay to keep up appearances—these and kindred causes make the heads of a family frequently bitter and severe. They are so worried that they cannot be cheerful, and their daintily set table is served with sauce of unkind speech which mars the flavor of every dish.

A great deal of depression is due, too, to the fact that men and women live in practical scorn of God's promises. They go through a daily form of prayer, but they neglect to lean on the sure word, "As thy days shall thy strength be." Not in constant strain, not in weary routine, not in lack of recreation are we to find the reason of sense of our dullness and discouragement, but in this pitiful dependence upon ourselves only, when the everlasting arms are held wide for our help. Those who have tested the thing in their daily lives know beyond a peradventure that there is in human experience possibility of dwelling in perfect peace.—Christian Union.

INJURIOUS TALKING.

A Frenchman, speaking of a person known to his comrades, said: "His mouth costs him nothing, for he always opens it at the expense of others." There are multitudes of persons to whom that remark will apply. Exaggeration and defamation are two fertile sources of social mischief. We meet with persons who sensitively shrink from the deliberate violation of truth, who will habitually over-color their statements to such an extent that a false impression is conveyed to the mind of the listener. They thus lower the tone of their own mind, destroy the power of accurate perception, diminish the confidence of their friends, and sow the seeds of much error in the world. They soon discover that they are not credited even when they speak soberly. Their moral drafts upon social confidence are dishonored.

But perhaps the most injurious talk is that which detracts from the character of another—that which openly or in disguise strikes at the reputation of a brother pilgrim—that which "cuts men's throats with whisperings"—that which is adopted by the envious rival who seeks to build "his name on the ruins of another's fame." Little does the slanderer think what a bitter harvest he will himself reap from the calumnious words he has uttered. A lady visited Philip Neri on one occasion, accusing herself of being a slanderer. "Do you frequently fall into this fault?" he inquired. "Yes, very often," replied the penitent. "My dear child," said Philip, "your fault is great, but the mercy of God is greater; I now bid thee do as follows: Go to the nearest market and purchase a chicken just killed and still covered with feathers, then walk to a certain distance, plucking the bird as you go. Your walk finished, return to me. The woman did as directed, and returned anxious to know the meaning of so singular an injunction. "You have been very faithful to the first part of my orders," said Philip; "now do the second part and you will be cured. Retrace your steps, pass through all the places you have traversed and gather up one by one all the feathers you have scattered." "But," said the woman, "I cast the feathers carelessly away, and the wind carried them in all directions." "Well," my child," replied Philip, "so it is with your words of slander; like the feathers which the wind has scattered, they have been wafted in many directions. Call them back now if you can. Go, sin no more."

THE ART OF THINKING.

One of the best modes of improving the art of thinking is to think over some subject before you read upon it, and then observe after what manner it has occurred to the mind of some great master; you will then observe whether you have been too rash or too timid; what you have omitted and what you have exceeded; and by this process you will insensibly catch the manner in which a great mind views a great question. It is right to study; not only to think when any extraordinary incident provokes you to think, but from time to time to review what has passed, to dwell upon it, and to see what trains of thought voluntarily present themselves to your mind. It is a most superior habit in some minds to refer all the particular truths which strike them to other truths more general, so their knowledge is beautifully methodized, and a particular truth at once leads to the general truth. This kind of understanding has an immense and decided superiority over those confused heads in which one fact is piled upon another without any attempt at classification or arrangement. Some men read with a pen in their hand, and commit to paper any new thought which strikes them; others trust to chance for its appearance. Which of those is the best method in the conduct of the understanding must, I suppose, depend a good deal on the understanding in question. Some men can do without preparation—others, little with it; some are fountains, others reservoirs.—Sidney Smith.

JOY IN RELIGION.—There are a good many people who wonder that they do not have joy in their religion. The reason is that they do not feed upon the Word; that is where they get the joy. If we neglect the manna that God has given us for our soul's nourishment, of course we won't have joy; but people whine and say it is a great mystery to them that they do not have joy as others do. See how happy some are! Why? They feed upon the Word of God. That is why. They are not living upon the old stale conversion that they had long ago. It makes me sick to hear men tell how happy they were long ago when they were first converted. The idea that they should not be happier since then! We ought to grow in grace and be advancing. Suppose I should keep telling my wife, "I loved you very much when I married you!" That is the way many treat the Lord, telling him how much they loved him once.—Moody.

Satan always rocks the cradle when we sleep at our devotions. If we would prevail with God, we must wrestle; and if we would wrestle happily with God, we must wrestle first with our own dullness.—Bishop Hall.

HOW THE EARTH IS KEPT UP.

In an interesting book entitled, "Glimpses of the Globe," written for young readers, by Mr. J. R. Blackiston, of Trinity College, Cambridge, we have the following instructive conversation between a little boy and his uncle:

"Uncle, I have often meant to ask you how the earth is kept up as it travels spinning around the sun?"

"I thought you would be asking me that some day. I fear you will have to wait till you are much older before you can hope to understand it. Do you see yon bright star rising over the windmill? That also, like the earth, is a roamer round the sun. Yon star setting behind Dungeness is another planet, and there are many others, some greater, some less, which wheel day and night without ceasing round the sun, spinning as they speed along."

"Then they, too, have days and nights as we have?"

"Yes; and perhaps seasons, for they all travel as we do, somewhat aslant. Two of them are as much larger than our earth as a large and a small orange are than a pea; and have, one, four, and the other, eight moons, wheeling around to light them by night."

"And they travel as quickly as we do?"

"The largest planet (large enough to make 1,300 earths) spins more than twice as fast as the earth. Even at the equator the earth spins only at the rate of seventeen miles in a minute."

"Seventeen miles a minute? Why, I wonder we are not all of us, houses and everything, hurled off, as the water when one trundles a mop."

"Look at the hands of a clock. You know the large hand goes all round once every hour, and the short hand takes twelve hours to go round once. Well, if your eyes are good enough to see the long hand moving, you certainly cannot see the short hand move, can you?"

"No indeed!"

"Now, the earth takes twice as long as that to roll once round."

"Yes, I remember it takes twenty-four hours to roll round. How many miles is it round the earth?"

"Nearly twenty-five thousand at the equator. Thus every hour the earth has there to roll more than a thousand miles an hour. It would take a train five weeks to go around the earth if it went thirty miles an hour, day and night without stopping."

"You once told me that the sun was as much larger than the hearth as an orange is than a tiny seed. Is the moon, too, as large? It looks as big."

"Oh, dear no! The moon is far smaller than the earth, but it is not so far away as the sun is. More than a million earths could be made out of the sun. Fifty moons might be made out of the earth."

"And how many stars could be made out of the moon? I've heard Widow Jones say the old moons were cut up to make stars."

"Why, dear boy, the stars are mostly great suns, so far away that if a new star were created years would pass before its light could travel through space to reach our eyes and enable us to see. If one of them were destroyed, years would pass before its light would cease to twinkle. Such a thing has really happened oftener than once. A star has blazed up, burnt out, and been seen no more."

"What an awful thing to think of!"

"Aye, Charlie, you know the Psalm, 'The heavens declare the glory of God.' There are few things more solemn than to sail for days together over the great deep, and to watch the countless stars rise and set as one keeps watch on deck at night. They that go down to the sea in ships see the wonders of the sky as well as of the deep. Alone with God, we hear his small, still voice speaking to us in the night watches."

"What a grand sight it would be to sit somewhere so that one could see the earth rolling round the sun! How fast does it travel?"

"Every minute it speeds more than a thousand miles on its way; every second more than eighteen miles. But figures like these are mere words to us. We can neither see nor feel the earth's motion. You may form some faint idea of a heavenly body's motion from a sling. As you keep the sling whirling round your head, the stone is kept tight. Let go the string, and off flies the stone. The string is as the sun, drawing in the planets, which else would fly off—who knows where?"

A LION'S AFFECTION.

Gerard, the great lion-hunter, captured a whelp in the mountains of Jebel-Meziour (Algiers), named it "Hubert," and brought it up as he would bring up a dog from puppyhood—until the child of the king of the desert regarded him with a dog's affection, and followed him everywhere. After some time, his huge pet becoming too dangerous to go at large, Gerard made a present of the animal to his friend the Duc d'Aumale, and Hubert travelled to Paris in a big cage, bemoaning his separation from his old master. The next year Gerard himself visited Paris, on leave of absence from the army, and went at once to the Jardin des Plantes to see his exiled favorite. He describes the interview as follows:

Hubert was lying down half-asleep, regarding at intervals with half-shut eyes the persons that were passing and repassing before him. All of a sudden he raised his head, his tail moved, his eyes dilated, a nervous motion contracted the muscles of his face. He had seen the uniform of the Spahis, but had not yet recognized his friend. I drew nearer and nearer, and no longer to restrain my emotion, I stretched out my hand to him through the bars.

Without ceasing his earnest gaze, he applied his nose to my hand and drew in knowledge with a long breath. At each inhalation his attitude became more noble, his look more satisfied and affectionate. Under the uniform that had been so dear to him he began to recognize the friend of his heart.

I felt it only needed a single word to displle all doubt.

"Hubert!" I said as I laid my hand on him, "my old soldier!"

Not another word. With a furious bound and a note of welcome, he sprang against the iron bars that bent and trembled with the blow. My friends fled in terror, calling me to do the same. Noble animal! You make the world tremble even in your ecstasies of pleasure.

Hubert was standing with his cheek against the grating, attempting to break down the the obstacle that separated us, magnificent to behold as he shook the walls of the building with the roars of joy and anger.

His enormous tongue licked the hand that I abandoned to his caresses, while with his paws he gently tried to draw me near to him. If any one tried to come near he fell into frenzies of rage, and when the visitors fell back to a distance he became calm and caressing as before, handling me with his huge paws, rubbing against the bars, and licking my hand, while every gesture and moan and look told of his joy and his love.

When I turned to leave him he shook the gallery with his heart-rending roars; and it was not till I went back to him twenty times and tried to make him understand that I would come again that I succeeded in quitting the place.

After that I came to see my friend daily, sometimes spending several hours with him in his cage. But after awhile I noticed that he became sad and dispirited, and when his keeper alluded to his furious agitation and excitement every time I left him, and attributed his worn out and changed appearance to this cause, I took his advice, and made my visits as seldom as possible. One day, some four months from the time of my first meeting him in Paris, I entered the Garden, and one of the keepers came forward, saluting, and said, "Don't come any more sir; Hubert is dead."—Youth's Companion.

SOUND MAXIMS.

Keep good company or none.

Never be idle.

If hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your own mind.

Always speak the truth.

Make but few promises.

Live up to your engagements.

Keep your own secrets if you have any.

When you speak to any person look them in the face.

Good company and good conversation are the very sinews of virtue.

Good character is above all things else.

Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts.

If any one speaks ill of you let your life be so that none will believe him.

Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors.

Ever live within your own income, misfortune excepted.

When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing through the day.

Make no haste to be rich if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency with tranquility of mind.

Never play at any kind of game of chance.

TEMPERANCE.

THE DRUNKARD'S DEATH.

WRITTEN BY A YOUNG READER OF THE CYNOSURE.

A drunkard lay a dying
  Upon a cheerless bed;
His eyes were dim and glassy
  For his life had nearly fled;
His smile, once bright and happy,
  Was changed to a look of despair,
And the bitter remorse of a drunkard's death,
  Seemed greater than he could bear.

A bitter tear stole down his cheek
  As he gazed on his wife by his side;
She who but one short year ago,
  Was made a happy bride.
He turned his face away,
  For he seemed to behold a sight
Which made his form quake with fear,
  And filled his soul with fright.

"Oh! Mary, see that snake
  On yonder floor," he cries,
"With open jaws and deadly fangs
  And green and glistening eyes;
And look! 'tis coming nearer;
  'Tis dancing round my bed,
And there's a tongue of fire,
  Quick darting from its head."

"Oh look at yonder demons:
  They in the midst of their glee,
With wands of death in their hands,
  Seem to be beckoning me."
A look of horror o'er-spread his face,
  He sprang upon the floor;
He uttered one wild piercing cry,
  And the drunkard was no more.

N. H. GUILD.

WAR NOTES.

The trustees of the new Roman Catholic church which is being erected in New York, recently received a check for one hundred dollars from a prominent liquor-dealer. They promptly returned it with a polite note in which they said that they could not consistently accept help from money amassed in liquor traffic.

The late Kansas Legislature passed a law prohibiting the sale or giving away of tobacco in any form to persons under sixteen years of age. Nebraska has a similar law, the prohibited age being fifteen. The W. C. T. U. is credited with these sensible enactments.

Texas votes on the prohibition amendment next August, the first square contest of the year. There is much anxiety about the result, and Northern and Western temperance men are urged by local friends to render all possible aid in the way of speaking and circulating temperance literature. It is possible that Gov. St. John may make a campaign in the State, under the direction of the campaign committee.

One of the latest incidents in the war against liquor sellers, being conducted in Kansas, is the refusal of the Pacific Express company to carry and deliver within the State, any malt or spirituous liquors purchased from dealers outside of Kansas. Vice-President Morsman, of the express company, has addressed to the employes a circular calling attention to the clauses in the statute which prohibits such transportation, and which holds personally responsible the agents who knowingly receive for carriage any liquor.

The Kansas Legislature not only voted down the resolution changing the name of "St. John" county, but it also defeated the re-submissson resolution by a vote of 71 to 33. A bill which was originally designed to make saloons out of drug stores has been amended so as to materially limit the "medical" sales and punish evasions with more certainty and greater severity.

—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union has entered into the foregin field. Miss Frances E. Willard makes a plea in behalf of Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, a "white ribbon woman," who is now at the Sandwich Islands, and proposes to sail to Australia to estabish the Unions, and thence to the farther East, India, China, and Japan. Miss Willard warmly commends her and her work and solicits help for her. Any money for this purpose can be forwarded to Miss Esther Pugh, Cleveland, Ohio.

The prohibition movement in Iowa has developed some novel features. Evidently the majority of the people throughout the State are thoroughly in favor of it, and do not propose to rest content with any more nominal suppression of the liquor traffic. If there is any such thing as carrying the law into execution with uniformity it will be done. The statute seems to be pretty generally respected now except in the larger river towns, and the citizens of the interior propose to take a hand in its enforcement in the present strongholds of the traffic. This is going a step farther than the prohibitionists of any other State have attempted to go, and the result of the policy inaugurated at Epworth will be watched with interest. That policy, is to furnish money, and if need be muscle, to enforce the provisions of the prohibition act.—Inter Ocean.

An organization of saloon keepers in this city, known as the "Liberal League," plays an important part in city and State politics. It was before this august body of rummies that Nick Ford made a little speech last fall, swearing allegiance to liquor and opposition to prohibition. The president of this whisky-inspired class is quite prominent in local politics, and in one of the late city conventions named the candidate for mayor. The main business of the convention is to make the saloon a power in politics. The saloonists are wiser, and more practical, and more devoted to their interests than the weak-kneed temperance folks, who don't believe in "running temperance into politics." The saloonists would introduce their interests into religious affairs if necessary. They are aggressive. The man who fights them must throw conservatism to the winds, and follow them into politics. That's where they found their license and influence, and that's where they must be defeated. There is something wrong with the temperance idea of the man who goes to the ballot box year after year, with the same ballot, and under the same banner, as the saloonist. The saloons will remain while they control so many votes in organized political parties. Stand out against them, and say with your ballot every time you vote, "The saloons must go."—St. Louis Life.

LIQUOR IN SOUTHERN ELECTIONS.

But there are two days on which Uncle Tom is in his glory—a sovereign factor in their events. One is election day. In the Southern States poll-taxes are required of all voters under the age of sixty. There is no way of enforcing the payment of these taxes except where the voters have property out of which it may be raised by levy. Since the general ascendency acquired by the white element in the South, in the years between 1872 and 1876, fully one-half of the negroes have quit voting. Having no stimulus to pay their poll-taxes, they are in default for periods ranging from five to ten years. To bring up these arrears costs more than most of the negroes value the privilege of the ballot. (Thus, in indirectly, it is coming to psas that suffrage rests, in the main, upon a property qualification.) Voters over the age of sixty are exempt from poll-taxes. Hence, precious in the eye of the candidate is the aged negro. He is worth more than a score of able-bodied men. In the elections frequently occurring in the South on local option, the liquor men, who receive aid from the West, pay the taxes of their colored allies in order that their votes may be counted; but in other campaigns the election funds are not adequate to such outlays. In the ordinary State and county elections, in which the rival candidates bid for the colored vote, the venerable sovereigns are always in demand. They are treated to free rides to the polls in the "phaetons" which after they have been worn out by the gentry, are used as hacks. Under shrewd management, they are voted, with perfect innocence on their part, early and often. In the elections on the liquor question Uncle Tom is always solid for license. "Whisky was here when I come," says he, "and I want it to stay till I go." "But, Uncle Tom, slavery was here when you came, and you did not want that to stay." The argument had no force. Uncle Tom had evidently extracted some good out of both evils, and was as unsound on abolition as on prohibition.—From "Uncle Tom Without a Cabin," in the Century.

THE CHURCHES.

—The Rockford Congregational Association expects soon to receive into fellowship a congregation of Swedes in Rockford, Ill., numbering about 300.

—The Baptist Theological Seminary held its anniversary this year at Morgan Park near this city, where the iustitution is located. A class of fourteen graduated. The alumni association and Theological Union met at the Grand Pacific hotel in the city. Of the latter Mr. E. Nelson Blake, President of the Board of Trade, was chosen President.

—Over five hundred conversions have resulted from the evangelical work of the Rev. S. Hartwell Pratt, of Pittsfield, Mass., during the past winter.

—Dr. George P. Hays, moderator for 1884, will preach the sermon at the opening of the Presbyterian General Assembly in Cincinnati, on Thursday May 21.

—It is estimated that there were 40,000 additions to Methodist and 25,000 to Presbyteriau churches in the Western States in the first three months of this year.

—Recent deciphering of the cuneiform inscriptions on the Babylonian tablets in the British Museum revealed 26 names mentioned in Genesis, and confirmed the Biblical record of the migration of Abram from Ur of the Chaldees.

—At a recent meeting of between 300 and 400 of the students of the Edingurgh University, among whom there has been a powerful revival, an association was formed for carrying on evangelical services in Scotland, and more than 100 students voluntcered to take part.

—Rev. M. W. Fairfield, whose able paper upon the un-Christian character of Freemasonry before the Michigau Congregational Association, was published some years ago, has just left Muskegon after a four years' pastorate. A new church has been built during the time, the church has made permanent growth and the Sabbath-school has doubled.

—A systematic attempt is being made by the Lutherans of Philadelphia to establish a Deaconess Institute in that city in counection with the German hospital. During the past wiuter lectures were delivered on this subject, and a great deal of interest awakened. Seven deaconesses are alrcady engaged in the good work, and four others are on probation. An appeal has been published in the interest of the project. The plan is a novel one for the American branch of this church; but in Germany this Institute has already an excellent record of noble work.

—The Internatioual Committee, whose duty it is to prepare a third course of Sunday-school lessons for seven years' study, met April 15th and 16th, in Cincinnati. It was agreed to have three years of study in the Old Testament, and four in the New, with an alternation once in six months. Lessons were selected for the first year only. For the first three-quarters there will be lessons on temperance and on missions, to be used in place of or in addition to, the quarterly Review.

—The evangelistic branch of our service, says the Union Signal, was never more active than now, if we may judge by the constant accessions to the corps of workers and the careful superintendence of the chief—Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith. Among newly certified workers are Mrs. Annie M. Palmer of Boonsboro, Iowa—who has already made full proof of her ministry"—Mrs. Isabella Hayes of Milford, Mich., and Mrs. R. W. Marriage of Oskaloosa, Iowa.

—There was organized, a few weeks ago, a religious body, unique even iu American church life, namely the Evangelical Lutheran Church Society of Icelanders in America. These people are to be found chiefly in Dakota and Manitoba, and the confereuce was held in the Icelandic settlement at the mountain Dakota. Pastors and delegates were present. An Icelandic church paper is published at Winnipeg, Manitoba, and is called Leifur.

—Mr. Spurgeon has returned to his home after his winter's rest at Mentone, France. Referring to his health, he says it is improved, so that he is able to get to work again, though he feels so far disabled as not to expect strength for continuous labor. His great congregation of five thousand members was busy while he was away. It takes on new energy upon his return. He asks contributions from all who read his sermons, for his various schools, and especially prayer, which he needs most of all.

—The Council of Brooklyn Congregational churches refused to install Rev. S. Miller Hageman as pastor of the Miller Memorial church in Stuyvesant avenue, Brooklyn, L. I., because he expressed disbelief in eternal punishment.

—Lord Radstock, an earnest English Christian, now on an evangelical visit to India, writes to the London Christian that prejudice agaiust Christianity seems to be dying out all over that country. There are more students in the Christian college in Madras than in the government and Hindoo colleges together. Christians in India are convinced that a great preparatory work is going on, to be soon followed by large results.

—Among the fruits of the recent revival at Kalgan, North China, says the Missionary Herald, is a Mongol, probably the only one of his race who is a communicant in a Protestant church. The Mougols number two millions.

—In the University of Berlin a scholarship has been established, open to all theological studeuts ouly on condition that they go as missiouaries to the East Indies, or to accept a professorship at the European missiouary schools in Calcutta or Madras.

—The report of the meeting of the International Sabbath-school Lesson Committee, which met recently in Cinciunati, is published. All members were present but one. It is composed, it will be remembered, of members, usually miuisters, of the larger evangelical churches. A great number of suggestions, petitions and memorials were presented to it. All were referred to a committee, of which Dr. Johu Hall was chairman. No material change is to be made in the plan heretofore followed. "For the third term of seven years' study, the Lesson Committee agreed upon three years in the Old Tes tament, and four years in the New, with an alternation once in six months, save in a few exceptional cases. Lessons were seleeted for the first year only, it being understood that for subsequeut years such modifications of detail may be made as circumstances may seem to require."

—The Finns that have emigrated to the United States number altogether 2,685, and the Hungarians, 52,386. Of these numbers 2,942 Fiuns and 41,156 Hungarians have arrived within the last five years. Since 99 per cent of the 2,000,000 population of Finnland and 1,113,508 of the population of Hungaria are Lutherans, we see that two new and promising fields are opening very rapidly to our American church within the last five years, demanding in two different languages, new ministers, new schools, new churches, a new literature and new synods, which may become equal to the Danes or the Norwegians, since they have nearly as large a population in Europe to draw from. This can be done only by laying the right foundation among the few who are already here.—Evangelist.

—The Rev. Joseph Neesima, of Japan, who has been spending some months in Boston with the benefactor who in 1864 took him from the ship on which he had escaped from home and provided means for his education, visited friends in New York this week. In the autumn he will return to his work as the guiding spirit of the university in Kiyoto, the old capital of the Empire, and he wishes to raise $80,000 for the endowment of several professorships in honor of the establishment of a constitution and a national assembly—the event promised by the Emperor for 1890.

—The receipts of the American Baptist Home Mission Society for the year just closed, reached the noble total of $447,379.05. The work of this society, however, has grown so immensly that even this large amount fails to cover the cost of it by more than $50,000. The debt now stands at $117,988.28. About half of this was brought over from last year.

—The Woman's Baptist Foreign Mission Society —headquarters in Boston—held its aunual meeting in that city, at the same time that the society of the West was holdiug its meeting in Toledo. The Boston meeting was full of interest and showed that the work of the society had been prosecuted with great vigor and success. The receipts into the treasury have been $65,696.95, and the expenditures, includiug $1,000 entered in a "contingent fund," were $65,535.42. Adding together the amounts raised by the women of both societies, we have, as the total, $93,951.36—an amount which seems to us highly creditable.—Journal and Messenger.

The Board of Trustees of the Kalamazoo College, conducted under the auspices of the Baptist denomiuation, voted to suspend the institution at the close of the current school year, June 30, until the invested funds are sufficieut to provide for the expense of maintenance.

THE SECEDING REFORMED CHURCHES.

The Dutch Reformed churches in Grand Rapids and Holland, Mich., which refused to acknowledge any longer the authority of their General Synod because of its complicity with the lodge, have maintaiued their cause in the Michigan courts under much difficulty, but thus far successfully. A correspondent of the Intelligencer states thus the present condition of the case:

"Actions were commenced by the Fourth Church of Grand Rapids and Church of Holland against the seceders. The cases at the trial term were decided against the prosecutors upon the construction of the statutes of Michigan.

"An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. Upon the hearing the judges were equally divided in opinion, therefore the judgment rendered at the trial term stands unreversed.

"Proceedings were then instituted to inquire by what warrant or authority the elders and deacons of the seceding churches exercised certain powers. In legal parlance this is called a quo warranto proceeding. In January, 1885, the Supreme Court rendered its decision. It is of some length. The cases are reported in the North Western Reporter, and the headnote embraces the substance of the decision. It is as follows:

"'A purely ecclesiastical office such as that of a deacon in a church, an office not created or expressly authorized by State law, but created by an uniucorporated ecclesiastical body and filled by election, by a body which possesses no corporate powers or functions, is not under the jurisdiction of a Michigan court so as to be made the subject of a quo warranto proceeding.'

"The court thus holding that it has no jurisdictiou by quo warranto proceeding, leaves the whole matter at present undecided, except as first stated. In what form the matter will come up again is not known. The question of the right of secession is of so much importance, it is presumed that it will be presented to the court in some way for a final determination upon its merits."

The National Reform Association made some amendments to its constitution, broadening its survey by a little, and identified its mission with that of other reformatory bodies. We confess to some astouishment that an association aiming to ally itself with the importaut moral aud Christian reforms of the day should wholly ignore the existence of secret societies and the menace they offer alike to church and state.—American.

Moody says, "Christians often ask, 'What's the harm in doing this or that?' When they get the right spirit they inquire, 'What's the use?'" This is true; if we have the spirit of Christ, we will not try to see how near we may go to the world and still maintain our Christian integrity; but our effort will be to see how near we can keep to our blessed Master. There is a great difference between being in the world and having the world in us. In the Christiau's heart the world finds no place. It has been swept and garnished for the Spirit of God.—Gospel Messenger.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	2
20	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	4
21	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
22	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
23	Satan's Cable Tow	4
24	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
25	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	4
26	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
27	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
28	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
29	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
30	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
31	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	4
32	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
33	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
34	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
35	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	2
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	4
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

The great head center of the Fenian organization twenty years ago, James Stephens, has been driven out of France on suspicion of being implicated in the dynamite explosions in England last fall and is at Brussels, old, poor, and feeble.

—A perpetual injunction was granted Monday at Louisville against the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Honor, electing officers outside the State of Kentucky.

—St. Bernard Knight Templar Commandery of this city had last week a dance, concert and drill to get money to buy new robes.

—Voltaire was a Freemason, made in Paris, France, on February 7, 1820. So says a Masonic sheet printed in Detroit. No doubt it is true.

—At its last session the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star resolved to build a Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home in the State of Illinois. Each subordinate chapter was empowered to raise funds to aid in its erection and completion. The Queen Esther chapter of this city sets an example by starting a grand ball, the proceeds of which go to the building.

—The Independent order Free Sons of Israel was organized in 1848 or 1849 in New York and remained an Eastern order for a number of years. About eighteen years ago it spread Westward and lodges were instituted in various Western cities. The objects of the order are largely charitable and beneficiary. There is a grand lodge made up of representatives from all the lodges, the grand body meeting biennially. Elections in the lodges take place once in six months. The territory is divided into districts and the seat of the District Grand Lodge of this section is in St Louis. The district comprises a large extent of country and has in it lodges in Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Indianapolis, and at other smaller points, thirty lodges in all. There are ten lodges in Chicago, with a total membership of about 1,600.

—Dr. Darius Wilson, of Boston, 33 degree, 90 degree and 96 degree, Most Illustrious Grand Master General of the Sovereign Sanctuary, United States America, lectured a while since at the Grand Opera House, New York. The subject of his discussion was his newly named Royal Masonic rite. Wilson has recently had some legal trouble with Dr. Alexander B. Mott as to who was entitled to the title of "Most Illustrious Grand Master General of the Sovereign Sanctuary of the United States of America." Dr. Wilson attacked the Scottish Rite Masons who confine themselves to the third -seeond degree. He claimed that they were not properly organized and had been working without authority since their organization in 1817. At the end of his lecture the Doctor stated that the Sovereign Sanctuary was the only properly organized rite in the world that had the right to work above the fourth degree, that it had been organized in Boston in December by a body who was a representative in the highest degree. The Doctor said that the other organizations were of a monarchical character, but that the Sovereign Sanctuary was democratic. When he had finished the lecture he called upon his lawyer, Thomas Winsor, to state his case with Dr. Alexander B. Mott. Wilson was interrupted at one time by a Mason, who said, "Doctor, you will please recollect that there are some that are not Masons in the room."

The International Immigrant Union of Chicago proposes to secure for settlers from 160 to 640 acres each, as they may choose—beautiful valley land—at government prices, $1.50 per acre, under the Desert Land Act, the settlers paying 50 cents per acre, cash, at the time of their application, and $1 per acre within three years thereafter. Shares in the Snake River Water Company are sold to the settlers, who thus aequire an interest in the canal of the company for irrigation. Under the law each settler's ownership in the canal company, whatever the number of shares, it is represented, makes it possible for him to secure a patent for his land as soon as he has money enough to pay for it, without waiting for three years to elapse.

The Union is in charge of Wm. H. Martin, who has colonized lands in California for man years, and who was Land Commissioner for Disston's 4,000,000 acre tract of land in Florida. The Union has its enterprises in Idaho as well as in California, where it is also engaged in locating colonies.

WHETHER CHOLERA

Is coming or not every householder should know that cleanliness and disinfection are the greatest preventives. The principal and surest factor for this purpose is a perfect cleansing, bleaching and purifying soap, making clothes beautifully white and sweet. It should be exclusively used in all departments of a household. DREYDOPPEL'S SOAP is sold in full pound bars only by all wholesale grocers and firstclass retailers.

DREYDOPPEL'S BORAX SOAP,

SKIN DISEASES,

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Sores, Pimples, and all Itching Skin Eruptions, are surely cured and prevented by the exclusive use of BEESON'S AROMATIC ALUM SULPHUR SOAP, an exquisite beautifier of the complexion and toilet requisite. 25 cents, by druggists or sent by mail.

Address WM. DREYDOPPEL, manufacturer, 208 North Front Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dreydoppel's Disinfecting Powder, 15 cts. a large box.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. MME. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. ☞Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	89½	@90
No. 3	80	@82½
Winter No 2	1 00	@1 03
Corn—No. 2		48½
Oats—No. 2	35	40½
Rye—No. 2		71
Bran per ton		11 00
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@15 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 25
Butter, medium to best	12	@24
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 45
Eggs		11
Potatoes per bus	35	45
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 53
Flax	1 30	1 39
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 80	@5 65
Common to good	2 40	@4 60
Hogs	3 50	@4 50
Sheep	3 25	@4 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter		@1 02½
Spring		1 01¼
Corn	57	@60
Oats	42	@51
Mess Pork		13 00
Eggs		15
Butter	8	28
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 75	@5 40
Hogs	3 80	@4 20
Sheep	1 50	@4 00

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean,	Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co.,	Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse,	Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood,	Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D.,	NewYork.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivauts everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligenee and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and aceredits it with being the surest and speediest souree of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements aeeepted. The confidenee of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	10 per cent
" " "	50	15 " "
" " "	100	20 " "
" " "	250	25 " "
" " "	500	30 " "
" " "	1000	35 " "
" " "	1500	40 " "
" " "	2500	50 " "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY; OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.
Furnished in any quantities at

FARM NOTES.

SELECTING CORN FOR PLANTING.

A subscriber in Stowe, Mass., asks us to tell him from which part of the ear the best kernels are obtained for planting, as some tell him to select the top kernels, others those from the butt, while still others recommend planting all the kernels on the ear. It is well-known that many careful New England farmers have made a practice of rejecting the small kernels from the tip of the ears when shelling seed corn for planting. Some have been particular to reject the crooked, ill-shaped butt kernels also. We know of no one who has attempted to investigate the question systematically excepting Dr. Sturtevant, director of the New York experiment station. He told us in personal conversation, several years ago that a certain eccentric farmer, who had gained a reputation for raising good seed corn, made a point of planting all the kernels on the ear, and claimed it necessary to do so to keep a variety from changing its character. Within the past few years, Dr. Sturtevant has made several experiments for the purpose of testing the relative value of corn from different parts of the ear, and the results are published in the New York station reports for the years 1882 and 1883. In the first report named is an account of an experiment in planting a strip of land, dropping the corn lengthwise of the rows in such a manner that the kernels would maintain the same relative position to each other that they held in the ear, that is to say, the butt kernels were all at one end of the rows, the middle kernels coming next in order, and the top kernels at the opposite end of the rows. It was thought that in this method of arrangement any variation in the character of the product would be noticeable to the eye during the growth of the corn; but little, if any, difference could be discerned. The butt and tip kernels germinated and grew just about in the same proportion as the kernels from the middle of the ear.

In the accurate calculation made from the harvest product, the following surprising results were shown:

1. The tip kernels were the most prolific of good corn.

2. The butt kernels were more prolific of good corn than the central kernels.

3. The tip kernels bore longer ears than the other kernels, the butt kernels the next, and the central kernels the shortest. This fact was apparent to the sight as the different lots lay on the ground after husking.

4. The merchantable ears from the butt were distinctly heavier than those from the central kernels.

5. The butt kernels furnished more unmerchantable corn than did the central kernels, and the central more than did the top kernels.

The same year another plat was planted, one-half with perfect seed from selected seed ears, the other half with good kernels, from very inferior-looking ears, the yield in both experiments being so near uniform that no conclusion could be drawn in favor of the selected ears over those which were crooked and twisted.

From experiments continued in 1883, it seems reasonable to conclude that seed corn is equally good from either portion of the ear, certainly that the tip kernels are equal to the others for planting. In corn ears that are well capped over at the tip end, the kernels having more room, are less compressed and take a different shape from those on the middle of the ear; and it is quite probable that there is less difference in the actual weight of the two forms than one might suppose from a casual glance. Tip kernels that are imperfect, or not half filled up with starchy material, would certainly start into life with less apparent vigor than kernels that were plump and full. Yet when the roots get hold of the soil, and the plant becomes independent of the parent kernel, which will be in a very few days after germinating, it may soon catch up with, or even outgrow, its neighbor from plump seed. The conclusion to be drawn from these experiments is that it is certainly safe to plant all the sound kernels on an ear.—The Independent.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for "THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST," and a new Portrait of GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. Phillips, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

NELSON'S
Sunday School Books and Cards.
Approved by all Evangelical Denominations.
Send for Catalogue.
T. NELSON & SONS, 42 Bleecker St., N.Y.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,
To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address
T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00. W. I. Phillips.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.
For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW
Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.
In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."
The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship," the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.
National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in Batavia, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE MEDICAL USE OF EGGS.

For burns and scalds there is nothing more soothing than the white of an egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer as a varnish for a burn than collodion, and being always on hand can be applied immediately. It is also more cooling than the "sweet oil and cotton" which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from ordinary accidents of this kind, and anything which excludes the air and prevents inflammation is the best thing to be applied.

The egg is also considered one of the very best remedies for dysentery. Beaten up lightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends by its emollient qualities to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines, and by forming a transient coating for these organs to enable nature to assume her healthful sway over the diseased body. Two, or at the most, three eggs per day would be all that would be required in ordinary cases; and since the egg is not merely a medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is the recovery.

OUT-DOOR LIFE FOR WOMEN.

The redemption of women's health, I am more and more convinced, depends upon their taking to out-door life and activities. Reading high class memoirs which are in every one's hands now-a-days, of the Carlyles, the Sterlings, and F. D. Maurice, one is distressed to hear the continual story of weak health, and women who, brought face to face with the realities and efforts of life, immediately droop, languish, and are a long time dying. If they have a house to keep, and a share of the actual work, like Mrs. Carlyle at Craigenputtock and Chelsea, they sicken mysteriously, and their life is a time of wrestling with household affairs, alternating with refuge on the sofa, or months in the doctor's hands, in that wretched, unimprovable state which justified the sigh of a much-tried husband who "wished his wife would get better or something!" Have I not, through the ignorance of my day and generation, wasted life enough in attacks of the familiar household demon, nervous prostration, which only vanishes on turning the patient out of doors? Twice and again friends have looked pityingly on me as good as gone, but taken out of doors ten hours a day, as good for nothing else, sun and wind brought their spell of healing, and health came again. Henceforth no more in-door life than must be for me, and I would urge other women to fashion their lives so as to spend them more in the open air.—From "How to Dress for the Garden," in Vick's Magazine for May.

To destroy ants, fill small vials two-thirds with water, and add sweet oil to float on the water to within half an inch of the top. Plunge these upright near the nests or runs of the ants. They will come for a sip and go home to die. No insect can exist with oil stopping up its spiracles or breathing pores.

To stop leaks, beat yellow soap and whiting with a little water into a thick paste. Rub this over the part where the leak is, and it will be instantly stopped.

A piece of red pepper the size of your finger nail dropped into meat or vegetables when first beginning to cook, will aid greatly in killing the unpleasant odor arising therefrom. Remember this for boiled cabbage, green beans, onions, and chicken, mutton, etc.

It is said that a tea made of chestnut leaves and drank in the place of water, will cure the most obstinate case of dropsey in a few days.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

In Constipation.

DR. J. N. ROBINSON, Medina, O., says: "In cases of indigestion, constipation and nervous prostration its results are happy."

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen, $2 00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keyetone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, givee the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich, and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lehbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2 00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each, per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees. 304 pages.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland on Friday made the following diplomatic appointments: Hon. Geo. V. N. Lothrop, of Michigan, Minister to Russia; Boyd Winchester, of Kentucky, Minister to Switzerland; John E. W. Thompson, of New York, Minister to Hayti.

Ex-Senator Blanch K. Bruce, Register of the Treasury, has tendered his resignation. It is reported that his resignation was requested.

Postmaster General Vilas has notified the members of Congress that they must determine the postmasters of the fourth class for their respective districts. This will give Congressmen employment for some months to come.

Secretary Lamar has seut to the President the report on the assignment of lands in severalty to the Santee Sioux. It appears there are 42,000 acres left after giving each man, woman and child 160 acres. This excess will be thrown open to settlement.

J. M. Taylor, the President of the Mormon church, is at Washington, in company with ex-Delegate Cannon and Delegate Caine, their mission being to see the President in regard to his Mormon policy.

The Romish bishops have decided on Washington City as the location for the great university for which their Baltimore council provided.

COUNTRY.

General Irvin McDowell, Union general at the first battle of Bull Run, died at San Francisco at midnight Monday, aged 67 years.

Wm. H. Cooke, once a wealthy civil engineer, but who through drink, was reduced to beggary, blew out his brains in a low dive at Pittsburg, Wednesday night.

A verdict for $400 was rendered Thursday against Professor Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen for slapping a boy, in 1883, at West Hampton, L. I., causing him to become deaf.

While insane from the use of intoxicants at Newark, N. J., Monday night, Mrs. Lucy Gilchrist decapitated her six-month-old babe with an axe.

In Brooklyn Tuesday morning the wall of one of a series of connected buildings used as manufactories collapsed, having been screwed unevenly by jacks, overturning soap-boilers on the second floor and crushing in frame residences adjoining, the embers from the cook stoves causing a general conflagration. The disaster was rendered complete by the explosion of four boilers. In the structures a number of men and girls were employed, some of whom threw themselves from the windows. Three bodies, burned beyond recognition, have been recovered, and twenty-six persons are missing, seven of whom are girls. A score or more were injured, a few fatally.

In the election in the thirty-fourth Illinois district to choose a successor to representative Shaw, by a Republican scheme, secretly arranged, no Republicans appeared at the polls till 3 P. M., and then surprised the Democrats by their numbers. The result was the election of Weaver, Republican, which will give them a majority in the Legislature at Springfield and break the dead-lock for United States Senator.

A second attempt was made early Monday morning to burn the Childreu's Home at Covington, Ky. The little inmates were badly frightened by the smoke. No clue to the incendiary.

The strike of 260 miners along the line of the Valley railway in the Connotton district in Ohio it is feared will result in the strike of 6,000 miners in that and the Tuscarawas district.

The striking coal miners at Bloomington, Ill., have decided to construct a cooperative shaft, and citizens are subscribing freely for shares.

By order of Gov. Oglesby, four companies of the Fourth Illinois Infantry, with a gatling-gun detachment, left Joliet Monday morning for Lemont, where the striking quarrymen threatened trouble. The militia was confronted by a mob of several hundred excited men, who refused to disperse, and were charged at quick step with fixed bayonets. The crowd retreated in sullen mood, taking refuge in houses and side streets, while strikers in the rear began assailing the troops with stones, and the troops found themselves hemmed in. Some opened fire without orders and charged the mob driving them off. Eleven men are reported injured. One was shot dead, another died of his wounds, and two others are suffering from bayonet thrusts.

A heavy fire broke out in the lumber district in the southwest part of Chicago near the Union Stock Yards on Friday. Lumber, planing-mills, and cottages valued at some $600,000 were destroyed. Twenty engines and a fire tug battled the flames for hours, a high wind prevailing.

At Plymouth, Pa., there were six deaths from typhoid malarial fever Sunday and nine funerals were held.

FOREIGN.

Vesuvius is again in a state of eruption and presents a grand spectacle at night. It is viewed by crowds of visitors. Professor Palmieri thinks there is no serious danger from the eruption.

Advices from Afganistan state that a small force of Russians, with four guns, now occupies Penjdeh. The same advices contain the statement that the Russians have completely won over the Sarikh Turcomans. The telegraph line is now completed to a point 120 miles beyond Askabad. There is an apparent lull in the Russian preparations for war. The Afgan troops along the Bala-Murghab, not having received any pay for some time, are greatly demoralized.

It is reported from Egypt that the Mahdi's forces have suffered fresh defeats at the hands of the insurgents in Kordofan, aided by the garrison at Senaar. The Mahdi himself is at Omderman, near Khartoum, but he has only a few troops with him, and is unable to send re-enforcemeuts against the insurgents. General Wolseley urges the army to perfect themselves in their novel duties, as they would be wanted on the Nile in the autumn. The speech is significant, as indicating the General is not in favor of the government's policy of abandoning Suakim.

Several battles with undecisive results have been fought between the rebels and Canadian troops in the Northwest during the week. The losses of the latter have not been heavy but Riel's forces are said to have suffered severely.

The British Cabinet held a special session to discuss a proposition made by Baron de Staal, the Russian Embassador, which provides that if further evidence disproves the claim made by Sir Peter Lumsden, British Commissioner at Herat, that the Russians were responsible for the attack on Penjdeh, this evidence shall be accepted as conclusive, and the proposed settlement of the difficulty by arbitration abandoned. It is believed that the proposition has been accepted, the condition being that Russia shall agree to a definite treaty, pledging herself not to make further advances into Afghanistan. In the meantime there seems to be no relaxation of war preparations.

PUBLISHERS DEPARTMENT.

BUSINESS.

The extracts from letters such as have appeared in this column during the past few weeks, will not appear after this number, for already sufficient examples have been given to show the donors of the Cynosure that not only are their efforts appreciated but also that the reform has been thereby advanced. The Cynosure has gone to colored as well as white ministers, and to six different denominations, and into sixteen states. We ought to be very thankful for the great number of sympathizing friends in the South, among ministers, which this effort has discovered to us, and also for the impulse to the reform which the weekly visits of the Cynosure has given in the sixteen different states to which these donations have sent it.

The agents of the N. C. A. have always said that where the Cynosure has preceeded them there they have found a field prepared for their work.

What a splendid opportunity for some man like Rev. P. S. Feemster to take the Southern field next year. Your donation of the Cynosure has prepared the field and made new openings known as never before in our work.

Your attention is called to this not only that you may rejoice in the past, but do better if possible in the future! The Cynosure could easily be placed to-day in four times as many ministers' hands where the work already done would be duplicated over and over again, if the funds for it could be had. Will you not bear this in mind and give what you can for this part of the work?

ALABAMA

Wetumpka.—"I would be glad to have it in all of our churches. I will try and get up a club of ten for the paper."

INDIAN TERRITORY.

"I am becoming more and more awakened each week upon the subject of anti-secrecy."

MARYLAND.

Elkton.—"I firmly believe it is one of the best papers published to put in the hands of a young convert. It saved me from being caught in the lodge snare (Free Masonry) which has proved the eternal ruin of many young men. I pray the Lord to give the Cynosure wings of the morning."

NORTH CAROLINA.

New Market.—"I would here acknowledge my gratitude to the kind friend who paid the subscription for the Christian Cynosure to be sent me one year. I like the paper very much and after carefully reading it I hand it to others for their perusal, trusting that it may be of advantage to them also.

KENTUCKY.

Williamsburg.—"Having traveled almost constantly in nine states for the past 25 years, holding union meetings, I think I am safe in saying that I have seen the withering influence of the Masonic order and other secret societies in the family and church. I hold that the Christian Cynosure ought to be the paper of the churches."

MISSOURI.

Hoover.—"We enjoy the Cynosure; it is a welcome visitor every week; it is profitable and does us good.

TENNESSEE.

Dickson.—Am I pleased and benefited by the Cynosure? I can answer very sincerely and truthfully and decidedly in the affirmative. For financial reasons I appreciate the kindness and good will the more, of the donor of the Cynosure for the year."

TEXAS.

Ennis.—"The Cynosure sent by some unknown friend, has been a blessing to my home. My children and wife also enjoy it very much. I have been a Mason myself, but I praise Jesus Christ our Lord that he has given me grace to witness a good confession, even in Texas against Masonry and the secret empire.

GEORGIA.

Savannah.—"Thanks for the Christian Cynosure. I was connected with the Masonic order; am not now. I united through the influence of my minister when quite young. I had an idea to join a secret temperance order but shall not now."

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the two week, ending Friday, May 8:

J. P. Stoddard, Wm. H. Oliphant, Wm. Morrow, R. B. Smith, Simeon Rowley, J G. Mattoon, C. C. Hayden, Abel Plummer, Ganet Keppel, George T. Markey, Samuel [illegible]Pratt, H. Blackman, R Burlington[illegible] S. Perry, L. S. Stegner, J H. Jo[illegible]mes Cation, Mrs. E I. Wimbish[illegible]Enlow, S. Y. Orr, A. S Hammon[illegible] N. McLawry, A. J. Simmons, L. A[illegible]s, Isaac Flagg, S. H Halsey, C. A Ev[illegible]d, J. S. Lewis, E. B. Cronkhite, J. K Weber, S. E. Miller, J. E Ross, M. Orton, A. J. McFarland, James Anten, Wm Gray, Geo. M. Smith, John Motter, J. Hamaker, Mrs. L. Boon, Mrs S. L. Carpenter, Wm. Chectham, Wm. Knight, James Reid. B. M. Amsden, B. A. Wilsou, D. Griffith, Jehiel Cass, Rev. C. Bender, Chas. B. Rice, C. Quick, Mrs Rob't Adrain. Rev St. Clair Ross, T. Kingsworth, Mrs. U. P. Merrill, J. L. Burrell, Miss A. J. Carothers, Mrs. M. W. Bingham.

LOOK AT THE YELLOW TAG
AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIBES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.
Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the
FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES
They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

HAND-PAINTED SILKS for Patchwork, Tidies, Screens, etc. Send $1 for package, or 50 cts. for beautiful samples. WESTERN ART CO., Salem, O

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV CHINIQAY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.
Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED! Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER.
Mention the Christian Cynosure. Racine, Wis.

THE NOVELTY
RUG MACHINE.
[PAT. DEC. 27, 1881.]
Makes Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc., with ease and rapidity. Price only one dollar. Single machine, with full directions, sent by mail on receipt of price. Agents wanted. Apply for circulars to E. ROSS & CO., Patentees and Sole Manufacturers, Toledo, Ohio, Lock Box 184; also Manufacturers of Rug Patterns.

THE PERFECTION FASTENER and COLLAR BUTTON will hold any necktie or scarf in place perfectly. Send 15 two cent stamps for gold plated sample. A. L. GILBERT, Box 133. Milwaukee, Wis.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TAUEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER

ANY MAN Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill Chicago.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.
An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by Jacob O. Loesburg
PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.
Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.
Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.
Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 35. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1885. WHOLE No. 786.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The Swedish Question.... 8
Are Congregationalists a Sect?..... 8
Hon. Gerrit Smith..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Too Much Knowledge for their Virtue..... 1
The Ancient Order of Druids..... 2
Another Reformation Needed..... 2
The Ancestry of Communism and Masonry..... 2
Life and Writings of Geo. E. Flower..... 2
SELECTED:
When Shall we Win?..... 3
Address of Gerrit Smith.. 3
Young Men and Freemasonry..... 3
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
OBITUARY..... 13
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Church Union Congress; The Free Church Leaders of Sweden; Ohio Letter; Blowing out the Lights; Pith and Point.. 4,5
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XX..... 4
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
To Christian Reformers in New England..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

The Revised English Bible will be issued this week. Copies of the new version of the Old Testament were given to the newspapers at midnight last Friday. Subscriptions for the "authorized" edition, issued from the Oxford Printing House, England, have been taken for weeks all over the world, but as usual, American publishers will have their books out as soon as the others. Orders for a million copies are reported, but there will be no such excitement as when, May 20th, just four years ago, the revised New Testament was cabled from London to the Chicago Times and Tribune, and publishers had a force of printers setting up the book as they crossed the ocean. Three millions of the "authorized" edition were sold during the year, and there were some thirty American reprints, which had a large sale. This later work of revision has been more conservative than the other, and the religious public will not be so surprised and sometimes indignant at unexpected changes. This will be greatly in its favor, as there is no doubt that the New Testament revision has sunk to the level of a mere commentary, on account of the frequent needless and somtimes pedantic changes from the old version which has become imbedded in the religious affection of mankind like gems in amber.

There is some satisfaction that justice has not altogether been defeated by the secret lodge in the Short-Phelan stabbing case in New York. The circumstances of the attempted assassination of Phelan in O'Donavan Rossa's office, the Fenian headquarters in New York, are not yet forgotten. Phelan, for some indiscreet statements, was enticed from Kansas City for the purpose of visiting upon him the penalty of his lodge oath. That he was attacked by Short with the purpose of murder was as plain as Brooklyn bridge, but what does evidence avail with lodge-sworn perjurers on a jury? Judge Van Brunt was astonished and indignant at the verdict, and instantly cried out, "Gentlemen of the jury, I cannot but express my surprise at the verdict you have rendered. You are discharged from further attendance at this court." The dynamitards who crowded the court room shouted themselves hoarse at the result, while every decent citizen realizes how much his personal safety and the peace of his family are imperilled by such a verdict. It is, therefore, with a sense of recovered security that the public hears that one of the jurors was brought back before Judge Van Brunt, this time as a prisoner, and after a brief, sharp trial, sentenced to thirty days imprisonment and a fine of $250. This is an example that may be followed with profit to the public in every city.

GERRIT SMITH.

Bro. Hinman will have several thousand thanks for his excellent letter and observations from the Hartford congress. That great meeting, the first of its kind, proves the inward struggle of the enlightened spirit of men against the external formulas that restrict the operation of Gospel truth among men. There were grave mistakes, and there will be in any such movement where human methods are consulted. The display of a large portrait of Horace Bushnell in front of the desk, as a grand central figure of the movement, was enough to kill such a meeting, had there not been a great truth holding its members together. The question of worship and preaching is one of great importance. No doubt the latter has been put forward in our churches altogether out of its due proportion, while the idea of Christian worship in the house of God has been elbowed out of doors by fine music and learned essays. It is astonishing that the learned gentlemen who discussed this subject, instead of turning to the New Testament to inquire into the practice of the early church, stop short at the innovations of ritualism and commend a heathen instead of a Christian principle.

There is no doubt that thousands of Freemasons keep up a financial relation to the order in order to secure an insuranee investment. The "Mutual Benefit" societies are doing their full share in holding together the crumbling walls of Masonry. But there begins to be a warning heard. Lodge insurance may not always be safe. The courts and the public are asking that insurance companies, secret or legitimate, be open to official inspection. Already they begin to go down. In Vigo county, Ind., the circuit court has Odeclared the "United rder of Foresters" insolvent. The lodge owes $40,000, and $37,000 is for insurance.

Neither England nor France are finding the profits of Jingoism at all commensurate with the outlay. The Beaconsfield administration interfered with the Russian advance on Constantinople at the close of of the late war with Turkey, and by what he was pleased to term a "brilliant" policy secured the Berlin couneil, and by a secret treaty wrenched away the island of Cyprus from the Porte. That possession has been a burying-ground for British troops. The dispatches tell us that Gladstone has got it off his hands for the privilege of passing his war vessels into the Black Sea. The Afghan trouble began with Beaconsfield's crazy scheme of a "seientific boundary." His armies penetrated Afghanistan, putting down one ruler and setting up another, and making engagements unprofitable at least for England. France under Ferry has had the same mad ambition for foreign conquest. But the moment of insanity is passed. Peace is made with China, and now the government will be glad of any excuse to evacuate Tonqnin. The climate is unfit for Europeans, and many of the troops have perished from starvation. Mules died from heat after a few days' work, and the expense of construction will prevent any railway building. So, too, the Madagascar invasion has proved to be nothing but an excessive burden to tax-paying France, and her troops will soon no doubt be withdrawn.

Nothing can be more repugnant in our judgment to the whole spirit of the Gospel than for parents to treat children as though they did not belong to Christ and were not a part of his purchased possession, until in later life they may have come into some startling religious experienee, through which they themselves shall recognize that relation.—Dr. Pentecost.

TOO MUCH KNOWLEDGE FOR THEIR VIRTUE.

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

How many times in our lives have we wondered that our knowledge should be so limited, so circumscribed. Why, in some certain ways, should our intelligence be less than the lower orders of being? Would it not be better if we could see beyond the limits of our natural senses, and so look through nature's "mill-stone," looking into every "secret chamber," and through all the labyrinths of our being, present and future? These, and scores of such queries, may engage our thoughts, to all which let the sentence at the head of this article answer. Too much knowledge for our virtue already. Taking the world as we find it, pregnant with wicked propensities and passions, what would be the state of things if every thief and robber could see and know all you may know of your own affairs? Whose property and person would, for a moment, be safe from the human fiends that infest our world?

Let every assassin in our land know the weak points of his intended victim, and who would be safe? Fiendishly wicked as men are, in the main part, their knowledge may be said to outstrip their virtue immensely. Were the virtue of the people of our earth up to the plane of their intelligence, our world would be a paradise comparatively. God has mercifully chained the "brutes," "beasts," the "dogs," the "vipers," the "wolves," in human form, named in the Scriptures, by limiting their knowledge. To-day I might be his victim, did my enemy know my situation and my defenseless condition. Did he know where to find my treasure and how to lay his hands on it, he would have it before morning. Doubtless there are many, and possibly better reasons still, in the mind of Him who "formed the eye" and framed our sources of intelligence, for limiting them where they are. While the powers of the wicked are greatly limited by this measure, the righteous are supposed to be guided by a wisdom that knows no bounds. For "the secret of the Lord is with them who fear him."

This leads us to remark, that all wisdom as well as all power is committed to the use and the defense of those who are fully consecrated to God's service, not less now than in days of primitive Christian triumph. Why not? Does not the, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," establish this position? This pledge of our Captain secures to the saint an immense advantage by putting unlimited wisdom and power against the limited powers of earth and hell.

Now turn our thoughts to the scores of thrilling examples recorded in the Old and New Testaments, in which the "Captain of our salvation" has out generaled and defeated the enemy by his supreme knowledge, turning apparent disaster into complete triumph. The history of the redeemed abounds with such examples. From such cases it need not be doubted that whenever our virtue is up to the plane of our knowledge, God will greatly enlarge our wisdom. God will greatly add to those who use their talents, with equity, to his glory. See this in the parables of the talents.

Let us remember that to all intents and purposes, practically and actually, he who acts in full harmony with God's will has all the wisdom and power of heaven committed in his behalf. He may be considered the same as omnipotent and all-wise to the accomplishment of all legitimate work by and through his agency. What an incentive to godliness! No danger can reach such souls. No device of men and demons find such beings. They are not subject to any absolute evils. When such are made martyrs, as they may sometimes be, then martyrdom is their glory and their crown; while "their ashes become the seed of the church." Martyrs of Jesus have a special song as they have a special mission. Without the martyr's work, the martyr's blood and the martyr's song, the redeemed would be divested of much of their glory. Martyrs can sing and shout "Thou wert slain for us," while the crucified One sends back the celestial Amen, and the response, And thou wert slain for me.

Thompson, Pa.

THE ANCIENT ORDER OF DRUIDS.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Among the many imitations of the ancient heathen mysteries, of which Freemasonry is the most prevalent, is this Order of Druids, whose Journal of Proceedings for the years 1882 to '84 is before me. Like the other forms of ancient mystery, this was a modification of sun worship, and had many most impure and bloody rites. How close is the modern imitation it is difficult to say; the astonishment is, that in a Christian land there should be found any who are willing to be received as descendants and copyists of such a system.

In its exoteric character it follows closely in the lines of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship, having copied something from each. Its government, like Freemasonry, is purely despotic. It is under the "supreme" jurisdiction of "The Grand Grove of the United Ancient Order of Druids of the United States," which alone has power to grant charters for the Grand Groves of the States, territories or districts in the United States, and is the ultimate tribunal in all things relating to the Order, having legislative, executive, and judicial power, "with exclusive jurisdiction over the issuance and sale of traveling and clearance cards, diplomas, rituals, blanks for charters, odes, jewels or badges, etc.," from which considerable revenue is derived.

The presiding officer is called a "Most Noble Grand Arch," who, besides other autocratic powers, it is declared "shall have the prerogative, either in person or by deputy, to make Druids at sight," to confer three degrees upon them, and empower them to become the founders of a grove. In this and other respects his powers are like the Grand Master of a Grand Lodge of Masons.

2. Like the other orders it restricts its membership and so-called charities to males of twenty-one years of age and under fifty, who must be able-bodied and possessed of the ability to secure a support.

There is, however, like the others, a lean-to for women, called a Druidical Circle, which must always be officered by men who belong to the regular groves, to which no woman has ever gained access.

3. Like the other orders it raises large sums of money, professedly for benevolent purposes, but consumes much the greater part in contingent expenses.

The Grand Treasurer reports the total receipts for two years to be $7,633.91. The total expenses for salaries, printing, postage, etc., $2,545.94, which is just about thirty-three per cent of the income, and corresponds almost exactly with the cost of Odd-fellowship. It ought to be remembered that our great missionary and other benevolent societies that are carried on by the churches hardly cost six per cent for running expenses, and no insurance company that conducted its business in so wasteful a manner could continue to receive patronage.

4. Like Masonry and other orders, a large majority of those who are initiated into this order are disgusted with it and speedily withdraw, or are suspended for the non-payment of dues. Thus there were initiated in 1882, 1,456 members; withdrawn, suspended and expelled, 1,130. In 1883, initiations, 1,857; loss in the same way, 1,276. In 1884 the initiations were 1,964; the loss in same way, 1,108. This does not include loss by death.

It will be seen that while a large number are annually induced to join the order, about five out of six as promptly withdraw. This is also true of Freemasonry. During the last year there were added to the Masonic fraternity in the United States and British America, 49,282 members. There was lost to the order during that period 43,227. Most people in either case resent the imposition.

5. But unlike the other orders, while copying many of the usages of the ancient Druids, who were positively religious, this order makes no pretension to religion. I find no trace of altar, prayer or priest. It has, however, a somewhat gorgeous burial service, and makes some wonderful declarations about the future of all who die in good standing in the order, as will be seen from the following extracts from the "address" provided for funeral occasions:

"Never shall we forget thee, brother; often shall we miss thee in our councils and social gatherings until we meet again in the mysterious Groves of eternity."

"We, therefore, place on thy coffin this green branch (the Noble Arch here places the branch on the coffin), the symbol of our order. May the love we have cherished for thee while living accompany thy immortal spirit on its wanderings in the elysian Groves above. Thy work is done; rest safely and in peace."

(To the relatives.) "He has but gone before you to a beautiful, etherial home."

"Farewell, my brother, and as the seed is laid in the earth to spring into new, beautified and expanded life, so may you, my brother, spring in the grand, beautiful and spiritual life of peace and harmony through all the vast, mysterious ages to come."

After the close, the brethren walk round the grave and throw in a mistletoe or other evergreen, just as did the ancient heathen.

It will be seen that this order, like the others, assumes that good standing in its books is a guarantee of everlasting life, and that all mention of the Divine Saviour, Jesus of Nazareth, is an absolute idea that need not even be referred to. Surely this is one anti-Christ of which there are many.

ANOTHER REFORMATION NEEDED.

BY H. G. FOSTER.

Great desire for temporal possessions makes men lose sight of duty and moral responsibility; and as all our hearts will testify, the greater our gains the stronger this desire, and the stronger the desire the more willing we are to overlook moral principle and Christian duty. As a rule, financial assistance of whatever kind is looked upon with respect by the corrupt heart. This seems to be the chief cause of the immoral drift of mankind. We take it that when the end of time comes, the world will be in one of these great drifts, and God will have it as a ground of condemnation against those who pushed humanity down the steep of unbelief into the sea of eternal death. In the time of the German Reformation this greed for gain was found in the Catholic church, and it was against this consequently that the forces of truth were arrayed. But we cannot at this age point to Catholicism and say truthfully that it only is drowning the sensibilities of the human soul; but in our midst there is an organization that, by its principles and greed for gain, gain of friendship, and frendship's assistance to financial prosperity, is doing more harm to our country by sapping our Christianity and our genuine sympathy for humanity than Catholicism, namely, the secret organizations. While members of these give their money in the name of benevolence, facts prove it not to reach this end. While they may not claim it to be a Christian institution and one that saves from the woes of hell, facts prove hundreds to be going to their graves annually, trusting to its efficacy for salvation. While they may not claim to assist fellow members to the disparagement of others, yet facts prove they do. These are sufficient to put an end to such an institution and turn all Christian people against it with strong conviction.

These societies are not upheld by worldly people only, but like the sale of indulgencies four centuries ago, they are assisted by people who profess to stand for God's truth, by those who preach the Gospel of Jesus, and by these, many who are babes in divine truth are led to think it all-sufficient for their soul's welfare. How much is such sin commited now, more aggravated than four centuries ago. "Of how much sorer punishment suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy who, [in this age] hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace." Then, but few Bibles were to be found, now the country is full of them; then nothing but the impurest of Catholicism, now the Christian Gospel reaches every ear. All this surely shows the great need of another reformation.

The secret orders not only seek to and do stop the mouths of those who join, but in many instances have hushed the pulpit on the subject by its influence of popularity, and few there are indeed, who, like Luther are willing to stem the tide of public opinion and uphold right. This evil seems to be worse than Catholicism, from the fact it has crept so quietly and yet with such determination into the Christian church, and holds such sway. Why is it that we, as Christian, cannot speak our minds in regard to these orders, regardless of their threats of bankrupting our influence and our pocket-books? Why is it Christians cannot adopt as their own that practical faith that enables them to remember the source of even their earthly blessings, and remember these are assured only to the upholders of God's truth?

Christian minister and Christian people, God has not given to you, personally, the conviction that secret organism is wrong, to lie dormant as though it were rolled up in a napkin and hid in the earth. No; he will come and require this conviction with usury. How many, when he comes, will be able to return more than was given him by God? We will be judged according to the use we make of the belief God has given us grace to enjoy.

Bellefontaine, Ohio.

THE ANCESTRY OF COMMUNISM AND MASONRY.

One of the earliest instances we find of Communism occurs in Persian history in the disciples of Mazdak, and was subsequently eradicated from that country in a similar manner to that of Jehu (2 Kings 10: 18–28). But Gibbon tells us in the 42d chapter and accompanying notes of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, that their doctrines were soon adopted by the Gnostic sects of Christians in Asia Minor and spread to the extremities of Africa. The Manichean Gnostics having been subsequently colonized in Thrace, their religious principles were also transmitted to distant parts of Europe.

The same author states in the 58th chapter that at the head of one body of Crusaders in the twelfth century were carried a goose and a goat, which an ingenious writer (R. W. Billings) interprets as signifying respectively, from Egyptian symbols, the Son of God and Typhon or the devil, embracing the opposing principles of good and evil of the Manicheans, thus connecting them with the Gnostics of the sixth century. Some other ingenious writer may yet trace the relationship to the Socialists and Communists of the present day, and prove their identity with the disciples of Mazdak.

There is a probable difference between Socialism and Freemasonry as they are sometimes opposed to each other, but at the distance of another six hundred years immaterial distinctions will be so obscured by time that the future historian may confound them in the same manner as the above writer confounded the Gnostics and the Templars from whom the modern association claim descent. The modern Communists may be low-grade or spurious Masons, of whom the genuine discourse; but if a connecting link with the past is desired, this supplies the only historical line of descent from reliable authority.

LIFE AND WRITINGS OF GEO. E. FLOWER.

This work is by Isaac Errtt, of the Christian Standard, Cincinnati, whose name is a guarantee for its excellence. Geo. E. Flower and his father were born in the State of Illinois, near Albion, and the blood of the Anglo Saxons and the Huguenots flowed in their veins. They were sincere, earnest, devout men, and both were preachers of the Gospel, holding the Scriptures as their only creed.

His biographer tells us that while this amiable, gentle-spirited man was ever indignant at wrong doing, "he had no love of strife," but scorned "cowardly subjection to popular sentiment." His great grand-father owned valuable real estate near Hertford, England, and took an active part against the slave trade and slavery in the West Indies. His grand-father was author of a volume published in 1882, by the Chicago Historical society. The English colony in Edwards county turned the scale against establishing slavery in Illinois, in 1823. The inheritor of love of liberty and reverence for divine truth, Geo. E. Flower was active as a preacher of the Gospel of the New Testament. He was a prohibitionist and a zealous co-worker with Murphy for some months at Paducah with great success and yet without a personal enemy among the liquor dealers.

It was but natural for such a man to condemn "human creeds" and "such worldly associations as divide the sympathies and affection of Christians and impair the efficiency of their religious life.

Thus he tells of a visit to one church that had invited him to preach for them: "I had a very muddy ride for ten miles. Got there just in time for the night meeting. Found many of the male members had gone to the Masonic and Odd-fellow lodges, which only strengthened me in the belief that these societies are doing much to retard the progress of Christianity, for we find almost without exception that Christians who belong to them have more interest in their success than in the success of the church. They can miss prayer meetings, but not their lodge meetings. I wish that as a Christian people we could be more forcibly impressed with the grandeur and surpassing worth of Christianity, remembering that it is perfect and that any thing added to it decreases its power."

Noble words which mark the noble man and the noble Christian! Although the writings of the most prominent leaders of that body of Christians concured with the sentiments quoted above, yet it is lamentable to find lodgery so prevalent in some churches that the cause of Christ is made secondary to the claims of the orders. Would that all their shepherds were as faithful in their testimony as this young and able preacher. The Cross of Christ had ever been his loved theme. He had much genial humor naturally and shortly before the end came he thus replied to his beloved wife, "Well, Ollie, I never died before, but," more gravely, "if this is death, it is the happiest hour I have ever known."

His valuable essays on Wyekliffe, Luther, the Huguenots, Cromwell, etc., etc., are very interesting and instructive, and form the greater part of the volume, which has a fine portrait. It is published by the Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati.

T. H.

WHEN SHALL WE WIN?

When shall we win? Why, when we fire
Straight to the mark, and never tire;
When we hold fast, as we've begun,
And still work on till all is done.

When shall we win? When filled with zeal,
We face the foe of human weal,
And flinging to the wind each fear,
God's trumpet call alone we hear!

When shall we win? When we're content
To die, nor to retreat consent;
Resolved to shun the recreant's shame,
And rather choose a martyr's name.

When shall we win? 'Tis best to say—
"What can we do, from day to day?"
With truth, and faith in truth, we dare
Not faint, or falter, or despair.

The cause of right is charged to win—
Omnipotence is not with sin—
Since God is King, his cause will see
The light and crown of victory.

Be this our care: that we endure,
'Tis this will keep our conscience pure,
And when the righteous cause has won,
We, too, shall hear the words, "Well done!"

—Dawson Burns, in Alliance News.

GERRIT SMITH.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION, 1870.

My chief objection to secret societies is that their feature of secrecy gives them an undue and fearful advantage over outsiders. They can see what outsiders are designing and doing;—but outsiders cannot see what they are designing and doing. The genius of our American institutions calls for equal rights—in other words, for equality all around. But to have equality all around, there must, necessarily, be openness all around. When men find themselves in the hands of a despot, it may be entirely proper for them to plot in secret against him. But, here, in this land of liberty and equal rights, there can be no justification for any plotting against each other. It is said that those who join our secret societies are too virtuous and just to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded by their secret tie to wrong outsiders. If they are so, then indeed, how painful the evidence that a secret fraternity has the power to transform virtuous and just persons who join it into criminals—ay, even into murderers! Masons murdered Morgan. Alas, that horrid murder! Although it is between forty-four and forty-five years since it was perpetrated, it seems as fresh in my memory as if it had taken place but a year ago. As often as I pass the Canadaigua jail—that jail, which Masonry-infatuated men used so freely to facilitate their murderous scheme—I am thrilled with horror and my opposition to secret societies becomes more intense. I am aware it is said only a few, and these the least respectable, of the members of the Masonic society, had a part in the murder of Morgan. But it was manifest that hundreds, and amongst them the most respectable citizens, had a more or less direct part in it. It was the crime not of one lodge only, but of a wide plurality of lodges. The truth is that Masonry was aroused to bloody vengeance. It devilized its disciples. Its laws called for murder: and its disciples were trained to regard these laws as paramount to all other human laws, and, indeed, as more sacred and obligatory than all the laws of heaven.

Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them. It overrode the laws of the land and ruled the courts and the ballot-boxes. Moreover, it is capable of repeating the crimes. Why then should we not dread secret societies, and do what we can to bring them to an end? It is true that several persons were convicted of the steps they took in the Morgan murder. But no one was convicted of actually murdering him—of giving him the finishing blow. Then, too, the punishment which followed the convictions was slight—generally but a few months' imprisonment, and in no instance more than two and one-third years. Nor must we forget that their Masonic brothers made martyrs of the prisoners, and supplied them with luxurious living during all their confinement. Even ladies vied with each other in honoring and feasting them. Slavery had so debauched the public sentiment of the South that her ladies presented canes to the wretched man who had sought to assassinate Charles Sumner, that noble champion of freedom. And Masonry had so debauched the public sentiment of the North that her ladies were eager to honor and feast Masonic murderers.

But has not Masonry repented of the murder of poor Morgan, and expelled from her fellowship his murderers? She has not expelled one of them—but, on the contrary, she has honored and promoted many of them.

We who, at the time of the murder of Morgan, had reached manhood, are much to be blamed for having suffered the agitation against Masonry to subside and pass away. We should have kept up the agitation against Masonry as long as a single lodge remained to imperil life, to control the ballot-boxes, or override the laws and the courts. As the king, referred to in the Scriptures, stopped smiting the ground too soon, so also did we stop too soon our smiting of secret societies. Like that king we smote and "stayed." We should have kept on smiting until those societies were all "consumed." Had we continued this agitation, Masonry would ere long have been in bad odor throughout the land, and tens of thousands of our beloved youth, who, because we suffered them to fall into ignorance of its character, connected themselves with Masonry, would have been withheld from the bad connection.

We who wronged you by this unfaithfulness will probably not live to see the end of Masonry and of other secret societies. But you, who are young and you who are middle aged, will, if you do your duty and work "arm and soul" for the overthrow of these abominations, witness the end of them. By the way, woman, who is soon to be a greater power in our land than she has been, will come to your help and will work with you for the extinction of these secret societies, which by excluding her, insult her. Greatly does woman suffer from these societies. Greatly too, does she suffer from those kindred associations called clubs, which, like secret societies, are composed exclusively of men. The excitements of these clubs make tame and insipid the sweet and healthful enjoyments of the family fireside; and thus do they wean, from their wives and children, thousands of husbands and fathers.

The church, whose blessed Founder did nothing in secret but everything openly, will surely come to your help—for she will surely see that it is most unseemly to have her members, members also of a society whose deeds are those of secrecy, darkness, and concealment. It cannot be that this attempt to blend the religion, whose "yea" is simply "yea" and whose "nay" is simply "nay," with a religion (if religion it may be called) of horrifying oaths and imprecations, will much longer continue.

I close with saying that we have reached an age of the world to which these secret and exclusive societies are emphatically unsuited, and from which they should rapidly pass away. These societies are composed of men who forsake the human brotherhood, and to a remarkable extent confine their sympathies and fellowship to one another. Now the age in which it is our happiness to live, is one which calls for the solidarity and oneness—the cordially recognized solidarity and oneness—of all human beings. The simple, sweet, and sure religion, preached by Jesus, is fast coming to be preached the earth over. This only true religion, which bids us look upon every man as our brother and even another self, leaves no room for the partiality and exclusiveness of Masonry and other kindred societies. This religion goes to draw and hold all human beings together. But these secret societies go to part them from each other, and to build impassable barriers across the human brotherhood. In this religion there is neither male or female, but all are one in Christ Jesus. Masonry, on the contrary, shuts out woman, and well may it shut her out from witnessing its horrid oaths and indecent and blasphemous ceremonies. Which, my hearers, shall we choose for our portion? I say which?—for we cannot choose both. We cannot choose both, for they are opposites. The one excludes the other. May God help us to make a wise choice!

YOUNG MEN AND FREEMASONRY.

There are some young men—mostly ill-instructed and ill-read young men—who grumble against the attitude taken by the church against the Freemasons. There is no harm in Freemasonry, they say. They know crowds of good fellows that belong to the Masons. The rites and the ceremonies, the grip and the oath, are only innocent amusements, which do nobody any harm, etc. * * *

The young man takes for granted all the Freemasons say of themselves. He sees himself that many of them are well meaning men, who would shrink from the horrors known to be planned and executed by the Continental Masons: who believe in God, although the Grand Orient of France has declared that God does not exist. The exaggeration of Masonic horrors which certain people in their zeal, occasionally resort to, do more harm than good, since the young men who find out these exaggerations are inclined to doubt that any horrors are to be rightly connected with Freemasonry.

Another illusion which young men entering life are fond of cherishing is, that the Masonic societies are safe investments for widows and orphans. "How charitable they are!" cry our young men. "Why have not we a society that will look after our relatives when we are gone?" The praise given to the Masons for their immense charity to their associates is very much overrated, as is also the great temporal benefit gained by being a Mason. Recently, in New York, an aged Mason, a member of numerous lodges, died. He was thoughtfully supplied with a coffin, and the transporting of the corpse to the place of burial was paid for out of the Masonic funds to which he had liberally and interestedly contributed. That was all.

The Freemason is a paper recently begun in Toronto, Canada. From this publication we take extracts from a letter, written by a "grand officer:"

"The time has arrived when the brethren should enquire what they are paying for," writes this "grand officer." "Where does all the money go, and if we are to attend lodge for the sole purpose of 'manufacturing Masons,' the cry comes from all over the jurisdiction that the craft is degenerating, and this is owing to the want of some practical effort to arouse the enthusiasm of the craft in the direction of benefiting mankind. But what is the old and wealthy Grand Lodge of Canada doing to benefit mankind? Is the paltry $30 given to a few pensioners, and the few dollars granted to transient brethren in distress calculated to arouse the brethren to take a deeper interest in the craft?

"Now, about dues, we pay in about three or five dollars annually, according to locality. What do we get in return? In some cities an apology for refreshments in the shape of stale beer, cheese and antiquated biscuits, or cold coffee, sour milk and confectionery whose age alone entitles it to respect. In the country, an oyster spread, say, once a year. The sum left after paying for these 'luxuries' is hardly sufficient to pay the rent and capitation tax. This may seem harsh criticism, but I ask my brethren to honestly state if it is not correct in every particular? Now, I want to know how we can expect the brethren to retain a living interest in the fraternity when there is no other motive apparent?"

The "apparent motive" in Freemasonry is mutual assistance. But it is not the real motive, which is never apparent in secret societies. The remarks of the Canadian "grand officer" apply to American lodges.—From the N. Y. Freeman's Journal, March 21, 1885.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E. E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XX.

TOM'S DREAM COMES TRUE.

It was some time before Tom recovered animation, and then he developed symptoms so serious that Dennis O'Sullivan was dispatched for a physician. This was not simply for the reason that he was close at hand; but Peter Snyder was now as earnest to be his brother's keeper as hitherto to be his destroyer, and it was with a determination to help Providence keep the demijohn empty for one day at least that he sent him on the errand, having first fortified him against his alcoholic cravings with a cup of strong coffee.

"An' shure, Mr. Snyder," said Dennis, when he was told to go for one who lived four miles away, "I moight foind ye a doctor nigher'n the Forks."

Mr. Snyder (for it is a singular proof of the power of Christianity to uplift a man socially as well as morally that even his old cronies no longer addressed him in their old, familiar fashion) glanced up from the helpless form over which he was working, chafing the cold hands and feet and applying restoratives, and hesitated an instant, but only an instant. Then he answered decidedly:

"I know you could, but I've got my reasons. If it was a dozen miles instead of four I wouldn't have the other one."

The doctor "nigher than the Forks" happened to be one of those medical practioners with whom a free prescription of whisky seems to be the one resource when, as not infrequently happens, their knowledge is at fault and their materia medica exhausted. Peter knew that the first thing he would be likely to do would be to order alcoholic stimulants in some form, and this repentant rumseller was determined by the grace of God that he would never again be even an accessory to putting the bottle to his neighbor's lips. That the doctor in question was also a Freemason may have somewhat affected his decision, but before the reader accuses Peter Snyder of unfairness and bigotry, let us present the case.

The bright and shining example of Masonic charity to which he had just been a witness was in itself an argument strong enough to appeal to obtuser minds than his. He had read the story of the Good Samaritan, or rather had managed to spell it out with much difficulty, but his narrow range of literary attainments did not incapacitate him from judging for himself, which carried out most fully both the letter and spirit of the parable: he and Dennis O'Sullivan who had never enjoyed the benefit of lodge instructions on the subject; or the man of the square and compass who could coolly turn away and leave a fellow-being lying by the roadside, exposed to the pitiless storm, with the hasty surmise that it was all that fellow-being's fault! Supposing he had been right. Were the thieves who lay in wait between Jericho and Jerusalem, and who only took a man's purse and bodily ill-treated him, half as bad as the modern thieves who lay in wait to rob and murder him soul and body, and then shield their crime under a government license? Peter Snyder thought not, and it must be acknowledged that he had both logic and Scripture truth on his side. Furthermore, the chances were ten to one that the Masonic doctor would forget to come. He had this convenient habit of forgetfulness when his patients were from a lower strata in society than he cared to attend: and sometimes—for he disproved the assertion that doctors never take their own drugs by a free use of his own alcoholic prescriptions—he was not in a condition to remember anything.

Martin Treworthy, when he heard that Tom had been found and where he was, may be pardoned if he entertained at first some disagreeable suspicions. He had not heard anything of Peter Snyder since he left Jacksonville, and the name suggested only a human spider whose custom was to catch and devour all the foolish human flies he could inveigle into his trap; though, of course, had the question been fairly put to him, "Can there be saving grace with the Eternal for such a wretch?" Martin, who held firmly to all the cardinal points of evangelical doctrine, would have answered, "Yes," most emphatically. Still, as I said before, let us forgive him if such a thing as Peter Snyder's conversion had not yet occurred to him as among the possibilities. But upon his arrival he looked in upon a scene very different from what he had imagined.

Tom lay very quiet. All his vital powers exhausted, his feeble mind, still more enfeebled by disease, was only conscious of having been terribly tired and terribly cold, and being suddenly lifted into an atmosphere of warmth and rest. There were bright, red drops on the coarse napkin with which Mr. Snyder at intervals tenderly wiped his mouth and lips, but his eyes were closed and he breathed as softly and evenly as a sleeping child. The vision of Nelson and the farm no longer danced before his bewildered brain, but in place of it had come a feeling of delicious assurance that it was all coming true by and by, only he would have to wait a little while longer.

Some have advanced the theory that in the resurrection state, a certain subtle atmosphere emanating from and enveloping us with a mantle of personal individuality as strong and unmistakable as the physical habits or the bodily features which belong to us in our mortal existence, may form the basis of spiritual recognition. And Martin Treworthy had now an experience slightly similar. This was Peter Snyder, but over him had passed a change—that miraculous making over of the entire man when a new heart and a new spirit is put within him, and a new song in his mouth, even praise to Him who hath redeemed him to God by his blood and made him in the glory and mystery of salvation a king and priest forever. Such a wonderful thing to happen to him!

There were moments when Peter Snyder stood dazed with the strangeness of it—that it should really be given to him—the new name and the white stone, and the ineffable blessedness of pardon, and most wonderful thing of all that he could actually begin his life over again and live an existence as different and as utterly separate from his former one as an angel's from a fiend's.

He rose hesitatingly when Martin Treworthy entered. Something of the shame of his old misdeeds clung about this new life still, like a kind of husk which would never quite drop away; and perhaps it was best that it should not, for it was a healthy shame and had its own mission to perform in making him a better man.

"I s'pose you remember me for a poor, miserable, God-forsaken critter, Mr. Treworthy," he said humbly; "but you won't see any rum bar'ls round here, nor smell any tobaccy, nor hear any swearing. I've knocked clean off from them things and I want folks to know it, and that Jesus Christ has stood by and helped me all along, and if I ain't what I was once all the praise and glory is his. I want you to know it special"—Peter Snyder paused an instant, and then he went on in a tone that, while still humble and even appealing, had a certain manly dignity. "Maybe you'd prefer to find this sick boy of yourn in other hands, and I can't say I blame ye for the feeling, but I found him layin' by the roadside in a dead faint, and I've done all for him I know'd how. And if you are a Christian, and somehow I take it you are, you'll feel as the Lord does—glad to give me a chance even if I don't deserve it."

Perhaps there was a little touch of—what shall we call it?—not defiance, not resentment, but the natural feeling of a converted publican who is conscious that his former life has given his fellow-men great reason to mistrust him, and yet in whom the unspeakable "kindness and love of God our Saviour" has wakened a strange longing to be trusted.

(To be continued.)

FREEMASONRY IN GEORGIA.—In this, the Empire State of the South, "the ancient and honorable order" does not seem to flourish. There is a smaller percentage of Masons in proportion to population, we believe, than in any other state in the Union. The lodge membership in 1875 was 15,158; in 1883 it was 9,750, a net loss of 5,394, during which time the population had doubtless increased by a large per cent. The number added to the lodge according to last official report was, during the year, 943. The loss in the same year 1003: net loss 146. Most of the loss was by withdrawal.

RELIGION AND BUSINESS.—The New York Nation, commenting on the panic and the business failures of the past year, says: "The great trouble of the day is, that religion does not interfere enough with business life. The separation of religion and business has long been painfully evident. It is too much the custom for business men to leave their religion up town during business hours. It is told of one of our prominent financiers, that, being reproached with some sharp practice in Wall street, as unbecoming in so prominent a professor of religion as he was, he said, 'Up town I endeavor to do my duty to God, the church, and my family, but down town I have to take care of myself.'"

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CHURCH UNION CONGRESS.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 12, 1885.

The Church Congress convened in the large and elegant Allyn Hall in this city at 7:30 P. M., of the 11th. There was from the first a very full attendance, and many indications that the best Christian sentiment had been arrested and drawn to this movement. It was opened by singing a hymn, and prayer by Rev. Dr. Burton, after which Gov. Harrison, as presiding officer, made a brief and appropriate address, in which he spoke of the commonwealth of Connecticut as founded in the religious convictions of its citizens and having a profound reverence for God. He was followed by Rev. E. D. Parker, of Hartford in an address of welcome, in which he stated the object of the congress to be the promotion of Christian unity and the advancement of the Divine Kingdom. He dwelt at length on the importance of visible union and paid a glowing tribute to Rev. Horace Bushnell, whose eloquent plea for union among Christians was largely quoted.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Anderson, of Waterbury, read an historical sketch of the present movement which originated with an Episcopal clergyman in Western, Massachusetts, but elicited the sympathies of Christians generally, all agreeing that a more perfect union was the first great want.

The first paper was read by Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, of New York, on the "Relations of a Divided Christendom to Aggressive Christianity." To say that it was most able and eloquent were but faint praise. It was a most terrible indictment of the evils of division, and a powerful plea for visible unity. No other speaker seemed so fully to comprehend the difficulties to be removed, or to be so clear in his suggestions as to the methods of its accomplishment. The essentials to unity, said he, are:

1st. "The subordination of externals." The largest liberty should be accorded to Christians and churches in forms.

2d. "The spiritual character of the church must be emphasized." All who are practical unbelievers must be excluded. Christians must not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers.

3d. There must be "a grading of doctrinal beliefs." Some truths are vital, others are subordinate. There can never be perfect agreement in subordinate points. There must be in the great facts of Christianity.

The next paper was by Rev. J. H. Hopkins, D.D., of Williamsport, Pa. It was a scarcely less powerful indictment of the evils of sects, but the remedy, (suggested rather than stated) was a return to the fold of a church with a uniform and established ritual. This thought did not meet the convictions of his auditors.

The next speaker was Dr. Power, pastor of the Garfield Memorial church, Washington City. His address was evidently prepared with great care and delivered with notes. Like the others it was a powerful indictment of the evils of sects, but in the presentation of the remedy it seemed to savor of an assumption of infallibility in his interpretation of Scripture.

Other speakers were Dr. J. O. Peck, (Methodist Episcopal) of New Haven, Conn., who thought the only union practicable was a union (in work) of denominations. Rev. Theo. C. Williams, Unitarian, of New York, thought the only bond of union was Christian character. Rev. Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost, of Brooklyn was not hopeful of immediate results, but expected union to come, and felt that it was most earnestly to be prayed for.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Miner, (Universalist) of Boston, was the last speaker of the first day. That he was eloquent, all who heard him at the N. C. A. convention at Washington last year may imagine. He spoke briefly on the fact that Christian unity must be a unity in Christ.

The whole discussion was a remarkable illustration of Paul's experience in the 7th of Romans. There were a large number of eminent Christians sadly pained at the existence of divisions, longing earnestly for a more excellent way, and yet each unwilling or unable to give up his sect and stand simply on the platform of a common Christianity. "To will" was present with them, "but how to perform that which is good," they find not. They have a delight in the law of the Lord after the inward man, but they find another law in their members warring with the law of their minds and bringing them into captivity to the law of sin that is in their members. O wretched men that they are, who shall deliver them from the body of this death?

On Tuesday the church congress met at 10

A. M. The subject of discussion was the function of worship in promoting the growth of the church, opened by Rev. N. J. Burton of Hartford. He thought the Christian church had grown in doctrine, in morality and in worship. There ought to be continued growth, and the time had come when the nonritualistic churches should have a ritual that should express and develop the truths that all hold. It was an earnest plea for ritualistic worship by a Congregational minister, and indicated the drift of sentiment in all the churches.

He was followed by Dr. Samuel Hopkins (Presbyterian) of Pennsylvania, who held that the church and the ministry were losing their hold on the people; that the average citizen cares very little for preaching, and that the remedy is to be found in making the worship in the Sunday service more impressive. He said that as a Presbyterian he felt the need of ritualistic worship.

The next speaker was Rev. C. C. Grafton, who told us that he was an Episcopalian, a high church man and a Puseyite. It was an earnest plea for ritualistic service, in which he developed the idea that the sacrament of the Lord's supper was a perpetual and obligatory sacrifice.

He was followed by Rev. Dr. Boardman of Philadelphia, who told us that he was a low church Baptist. He insisted that while forms may be necessary, the great fact was that prayer and all worship must be in spirit and in truth.

Bishop Coxe next followed and made an eloquent plea for Christian union, but said very little about worship, except to defend the use of the Apostles' Creed.

Rev. Thos. K. Beecher of Elmira, N. Y., next spoke and dwelt on the importance of praying always in the Holy Ghost. President Long of Antioch College, Ohio, spoke on Christian union, which he said was inevitable.

The last speaker was Prof. P. E. Chase, a Quaker from Haverford College, Philadelphia, and was such a plea for Christian union as would include all Unitarians, etc. He said nothing about worship.

To my poor apprehension, the entire drift of the session was toward ritualism—toward Rome. Every true reformation, every revival of primitive piety, has been a reaction against ritualism, and not in its favor. Ritualistic worship is made the SUBSTITUTE FOR TRUE PIETY. It is so in the Romish church. It is so largely, in the Church of England, and it is coming to be so in nearly all our American churches. Moreover, Freemasonry and other secret orders owe their main strength to the innate love of a gorgeous ritual. This is true of most heathen worships. Any plan of church union based on the adoption of a universal ritual is not only undesirable, but greatly to be deprecated. The Spirit of Christ is the life of the church. Without it there will be death even though it is galvanized into seeming life. So from ritualism, worldliness and all works of the devil may the "good Lord deliver us."

The third session of the congress was devoted to the discussion of the relations of the secular press to Christianity, and was opened by an able paper by Rev. Washington Gladden of Columbus, Ohio, followed by Rev. Julius H. Ward, of New York. Both noted the increased interest taken by the press in religious affairs, and ascribed it to judicious business enterprise, rather than religious conviction. Church people commonly have pence and are disposed to patronize those who report their doings. What is needed, is not that the press shall simply reflect public opinion, but shall lead and educate it. The men of the press that shall, like the old prophet, declare the whole truth, whether men will hear or forbear will be the men worthy of honor. Mr. Ward thought the divided state of the church was the occasion of the poor conception of and inadequate treatment of religious questions. He thought a state church did much to steady public opinion. He urged that editors have a religion of their own. Gen. Hawley of the Hartford Courant was apologetic. He said the press represented the entire people, and must report and represent everything, what Mr. Ingersoll said, as well as others. Rev. J. F. Clarke thought that when divisions ceased among Christians the religious work of the press would be easy.

The fourth session, Wednesday, May 13th, was, perhaps the most interesting of all. It was opened by an able paper on the "Historical Christ the Center of Union," by Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Boston. It expressed a profound and humble reverence for the Saviour of men. How such a paper could be written by a Unitarian remains to be explained. Surely its words and spirit were soundly orthodox. Nothing short of the entire paper could do it justice; but I notice one or two points: It was the historical Christ that concerns us, rather than the ideal or metaphysical. It is of far more importance that we believe in Christ, than that we believe certain things about him. In the historic Christ we see not only the eternal law of God, but the blessed hope of humanity. In him, "mercy and truth have met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other." Around him the entire Christian world may gather as the universal Head. The conclusion was a most beautiful poetic tribute to Jesus of Nazareth.

The next speaker was Pres. Robinson of Brown University. He spoke without notes and with great ability. He said that some of the agencies intended to reveal Christ had been used to hide him. Among these were: 1. An organized crystallized church. It was faith in the church that had been substituted in place of faith in Christ.

2. The creed systems of theology hide Christ.

3. Systems of philosophy about Christ, scholastic theology, separate from the personal Christ. The knowledge of Christ is a divine revelation to each soul. No man knows what Christianity is until he is born into it. All the great religions are now looking each other in the face. That which does most for humanity will prevail. In the knowledge of a personal Christ and in this alone can mankind be won.

He was followed by Pres. Noah Porter of Yale College, who among many other excellent things, said, "Our missionaries have to forget their philosophy, and deny their divisions, which are the shame and scandal of Christendom." Other speakers were Rev. Chauncey Giles of Philadelphia, Rev. T. B. Lightner of Delaware; and Dr. A. Brown of Boston, who is a speaker of great pith and power, alluded to the Andover that was.

Congratulatory and valedictory speeches were then made, and at 12.30 the congress adjourned, probably to meet next year in St. Louis, Mo.

H. H. HINMAN.

THE FREE CHURCH LEADERS OF SWEDEN.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 8th, 1885.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: In your last issue you have an editorial on "Scandinavian Theology." Your sincerity and impartiality are good to behold. I hope you will not take it amiss if I add a few statements.

1. Waldenstrom is universally classed with Socinians, both in Sweden and in this country. Of course he differs from Faustus Socinus in many points, but he has followed him thus far, and he goes further every day. At first his teachings as to the divinity of Christ were very guarded and vague. He still retains the expression "Son of God," but believes that he is a son of God in the same way that we are sons of God. He compares him in hundreds of places to Paul, John the Baptist, Luther and Christians in general. He did all his miracles, not in his own power, but in "God's." I can lay my hand on about a dozen of places this morning in which he says so. Christ is endowed with great power, he maintains, but this will be again surrendered up to God when his work is completed, In one place he says: "When the whole of that work is completed for the sake of which the Father gave him this power, then shall he (Christ) surrender again to God and the Father the Kingdom and he himself be put in subjection under God, that God may be all in all as it was in the beginning" (Stycken af Lifvetsord, p. 61). Sometime ago this question was put to Waldenstrom: "What think ye of Christ?" His answer was: "Any way he is not absolute God."

2. Waldenstrom emphatically denies in toto Christ's vicarious atonement, and so does Ekman, and all who intelligently follow them. His remarks on the doctrine held by all Christian denominations, the world over, are most irreverent. He treats it with contempt, and time and again he has declared it to have no foundation whatever in the Bible. In order to take away all traces of this doctrine he has made a translation of his own of the Bible and is now at work on writing his own commentary. Still we are happy to state that many of his so-called followers never understood this or followed it.

3. Waldenstrom adopts the Augsburg Confession in the same manner as all the members of the State church do it. All the Free-thinkers adopt it, too; there is no way of escape as long as they are members of the State church, and Waldenstrom is a member of that church. Waldenstrom is an exceedingly shrewd man; he accepts most everything when it comes to that. But then he puts his own constructions on everything. You can never get a definite answer from him.

4. As far as lodgery is concerned no doctrinal difference has kept them from shouldering that evil thus far. Those who are dragged into Congregationalism may have to change their views, but up to this day they have fought it in their papers.

INTERESTED.

OHIO LETTER.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Recently on my way to a prohibition meeting I took occasion to distribute tracts among the passengers on the train, and among others gave the tract "Ministers at Rival Altars" to a thin, grey-bearded gentleman who occupied a seat alone, beside a large portmanteau. After reading, the gentleman arose, came to me and requested me to give him another tract like the first, as he desired to mark a certain passage and send it to a clerical friend of his. A conversation followed in which he stated that he had been a Mason, had taken all the degrees up to and including the Knight of Malta degree, but that for some years he had had no affiliation with that body and had practically ceased to be a Mason, although he considered their secrets inviolate in his own breast. He said that Freemasonry was not in itself a bad thing, but that it had got into the control of bad men who used it for selfish ends, hence he had left it. He said that in one respect Anti-masons did not know the truth, or if they did, did not tell the truth, viz., in regard to Masonry being an anti-Christian institution. He maintained that although the lower degrees contained nothing distinctively Christian the higher degrees were intensely so, and that Masonry as a whole, was not opposed to Christianity. He said that for his part he would be glad to see every secret order swept from the land, including the temperance orders, although he himself was a Good Templar and Royal Templar of Temperance.

Upon his stating that he was engaged in the temperance work I enquired his name and was somewhat surprised to learn that I had been talking to D. W. Gage, State Organizer of the Prohibition party in Ohio, who was on his way to the same meeting for which I was bound. I spent the remainder of the day in his company, and found him to be an earnest worker, a good speaker, and an agreeable companion. I learned that it was through his influence that Hon. Ferdinand Schumacker failed to attend our Washington convention. He said that Mr. Schumacker wrote to him about the matter, and that he in reply had said that our candidate, Mr. Pomeroy, had been too recently a Republican to be taken up with safety and that there was no danger of prohibition being betrayed by Freemasonry as there were too many sterling prohibitionists in that order.

Now the facts are that Mr. Pomeroy had been active with the American party for several years, while St. John had been out of the Republican party only a few weeks when he was nominated, and as to Masonic betrayal we have enough instances of that peculiar characteristic of the invisible empire to warrant us in saying that prohibition will never be a success while Masonic judges and juries are allowed to sit in judgment upon Masonic whisky-sellers.

It is strange that a man who has gone through thirteen degrees of Freemasonry with its oaths to conceal and never reveal, to extricate a brother from every difficulty whether he be right or wrong, and to keep a brother's secrets inviolate without exception, together with the Christless prayers and murderous penalties and the heathen practices of stripping, blindfolding, playing a mock death and resurrection, drinking from a human skull, etc., etc., —it is strange, I say, that one who has gone through all this can say with any degree of sincerity, "Freemasonry contains nothing contrary to Christianity." But such is the blinding, befogging influence of the lodge idolatry that those who have seen the most of it are the most in the dark. I am certain that Bro. Gage is in want of information, as he has never taken the Cynosure, only having seen it occasionally, and he had a vague impression that our Dr. Blanchard was formerly a lumber dealer in Iowa. I hope that Americans will rain in tracts and Cynosures on him at Cleveland until he is thoroughly aroused to the importance of Americans and Prohibitionists uniting in one common cause. We are organizing for vigorous work during the coming campaign and will roll up a larger prohibition vote next fall than Ohio has ever given.

COLUMBIAN.

BLOWING OUT THE LIGHTS.

I am told by a member of Toddsville lodge of Good Templars that blowing out the lights in sessions was one of their diversions; while an initiate of Fly Creek lodge states that they were frequently extinguished in the anti-room. It is sufficiently suspicious that their acts are shielded from the world by tyled doors, but when they are concealed from one another by darkness it is still more reprehensible. The promiscuous assemblage of the sexes in the skating rinks is everywhere reprobated, and stringent laws are being enacted for their regulation, but in the Good Templar halls often little effort is made to exclude objectionable characters, and we learn from their expositions that it is one of the fundamental rules of the order that no evil reports shall be indulged in by one member against another, and such a violation of their laws would be attended by the expulsion of the accuser instead of the offender. This multiplies facilities for evil, and such lodges should be suppressed or subjected to the surveillance and control of the law.

The rinks are modest rivals but are being tabooed within a year of their revival, while the Good Templar lodge has flourished for twenty years. This is another confirmation of the Masonic statement that their deeds cannot endure publicity, but must be tyled to perpetuate them. Give the rink a tyler and bombastic names to evade the eye of the law and its permanency will be equally secure. B. T.

PITH AND POINT.

AN OLD U. B. BROTHER PROTESTS.

My grandfather was one of General Washington's body-guard. He died a United Brethren in Christ. Grandmother lived to be a hundred years old and died in the United Brethren faith. Father and mother lived to a good old age. They were old soldiers in the U. B. church. They long ere this have made a triumphant voyage, landing on the evergreen shore. Nearly half of their large family of children have crossed the river. Some are standing on the brink waiting for the signal; while to others the shores are growing nearer. And I have been clinging to the United brethren willows for over thirty-five years, sipping at the inexhaustible fountain. I would hate awfully now to be horned out of the old homestead by a few unruly goats.—D. K., Douglas Co., Kansas,

GOOD TEMPLARS BETRAYING PROHIBITION.

I learn casually, that Harry B. White, the head of the Good Templar organization in Ohio has turned traitor, and is playing Prohibitionists into the hands of the Republicans by foisting such speakers as Ellen J. Foster and others upon them. The secret temperance societies with their Masonic chiefs in sworn brotherhood with the Masonic chiefs of the Republican party are like calves with rings in their noses—liable to be led wherever the Republicans who hold the strap desire them to go.—C. M. S., Clearport, O.

GROWING INTO ONE SPIRIT.

I had supposed that I was supplied for the year with all the papers that I could find time to read but since the Cynosure was added to my list I have read every number of it; and I am becoming more and more awakened each week upon the subject of anti-secrecy. I had never given that theme special thought, and while I was not in the main favorable to secret societies, I considered that the high standing of many persons belonging to them was evidence that those organizations were not of a seriously dangerous character or tendency. I admire the fearlessness, honesty, ability and vivacity with which your paper is edited. I bid you God-speed in your noble work. I endorse the Christian Cynosure, I believe, in every particular, except that I am not quite so ultra Anti-masonic as it is. I am growing more so since my acquaintance with it began.—FRANKLIN ELLIOTT, Shawneetown, Ind. Ter.

COUNT ON THIS VOTE.

I am opposed to secret societies of every description. If there had been an American electoral ticket in this State last year, and I had been a voter, I should have voted that ticket. I am a temperance man; am 57 years old; never bought a dram in my life; never had one given me or drank one. If the Prohibitionists were running a Mason for the Presidency, I would not vote for him. In 1880, where I lived, Garfield and Hancock were the only candidates voted for. I voted for neither. In 1884 I had no vote. In this town, I am informed, there are thirteen different secret orders in a population of 2,000. I wish something could be done to stop the terrible work. —L. C. EBEY, Bowling Green, Mo.

A MASON CONFESSES.

I was once asked by a Mason to join that order, he telling me the good qualities and advantages of the system. He said: "You ought to belong; it's a wonder you haven't joined before. The reason I didn't join sooner was I never was asked. We can do anything we undertake. The lawyers and judges are generally all Masons. You heard of that case I had in justice court with Mr. ——? ("Yes") If I had been in the wrong I'd come out right any how, for I had a Mason on the jury to hang it in my favor." The man he was in law with was not a Mason. It is needless to say the Mason won, and they generally do when in law with a non Mason. How does this gaining the case when one is wrong correspond with the oath in the 7th degree?—"I will protect a companion Royal Arch Mason in the wrong as well as in the right, murder and treason not excepted," as given in "Bernard's Light on Masonry."—J. C.

THE CYNOSURE FOR LIFE.

I have been one of its first subscribers, was taking it when everything was burned in the Chicago fire. When I got my first paper after the fire my heart was thrilled with joy, though the sheet was hardly larger than the one that this scribbling is on, but it was joyfully received. When we moved to Oregon we gave our paper to one of our friends and so we neglected it until two years ago, when we subscribed again; and now we intend to keep up our dues while life shall last, for we are as strong on the anti-secrecy question as any one you can find. With another brother in our township I voted for St. John and I have been cast out since that time by many who once appeared to be my friends. But praise God who giveth us the victory, for in his strength I am going on to overcome the enemy and get home to glory where our Forerunner has gone before us. Let us go on in this good work until all secret societies and all intoxicating drinks are banished from our land. God bless you.—WILLIAM SHARICK, Damascus, Oregon.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON IX.—May 31, 1885.—Paul's Charge to Timothy. 2 Tim. 3: 14-17; 4: 1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation. 2 Tim. 3: 15.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

The duty of venerating our early teachers. v. 14. The exhortation to Timothy to "continue in the things which he has learned, remembering of whom he has learned them," is much needed advice in an age like the present when there is such a fondness for new and strange theories. Grandmother Lois and mother Eunice knew whereof they affirmed. Their religious faith had no mixture of conjecture and guess work, and above all they witnessed to the truth of their doctrine by holy lives. But there are many religious teachers whose advice to Timothy would have been very different from Paul's. They would have told him to judge and think for himself. They would have hinted that Grandmother Lois especially, had old fashioned ideas, and was hardly up with "advanced thinkers." But it is no sign of a strong, rather of a weak mind to despise the teachings of old and experienced Christians and want to strike out new paths for ourselves—paths which far oftener lead to skepticism and general doubt of everything than to truth. Mr. Gladstone on this point has spoken words which should be regarded: "Unhappily, the rejection of authority is often a cover for indolence as well as wantonness of mind, and the rejection of solid and venerable authority is avenged by lapses into the most ignoble servitude."

The Bible the great educator. vs, 15–17. The Old-Testament was the text-book of Timothy's childhood, but there are many in our day who would practically close up this grand armory of Christian truth as obsolete and unfitted for modern needs. This is a great mistake. "All Scripture is given by inspiration;" therefore all Scripture is "profitable." Much of the prevalent loose views regarding the Bible must be traced directly to the influence of the Masonic lodge. To tear from the Scriptures, as it profanely does, the one name which makes them the Bible, the Book, is like tearing the sun from the heavens. No wonder that where Masonry prevails darkness should cover the earth and gross darkness the people. The world needs a whole Bible just as it needs a whole Christ and a whole Gospel. The tendency of so-called "liberal thought" is to reason away so much of revealed truth as to leave a dead system in place of a living faith, and the consequences are a sad lessening in the number of those who are "thoroughly furnished to every good work."

3. The motives for being zealous and earnest. vs. 1-8. Every Christian has these three prime incentives to fidelity: (1) Christ's coming. We know not the time; we only know it will be sudden and unexpected. This thought should keep us watchful, as if he were already "at the door." (2) These are evil times, when even Christians turn away their ears from the truth. The more need we should boldly proclaim it. (3) The Pauls of to-day are leaving the battlefield for their crowns. Their places stand empty for us to fill. Let us fill them worthily.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How did David value the Scriptures? Ps. 119. How did the Pharisees once fall into an absurd error by not knowing the Scriptures? Mark 12: 24. What is the doom of lodge teachers who mutilate God's word? Rev. 22: 18.

EXPLANATORY.

The second epistle to Timothy may be regarded as the dying counsels of the most eminent of the apostles to one who had just entered on the ministerial life. We should read it with the interest with which we do the last words of the great and the good. We feel that, having little time to express his wishes, he will select topics that lie nearest his heart, and that he deems most important. Let us sit down at such a man's feet, and listen to his parting counsels.—Barnes.

"Which are able to make thee wise unto salvation." The present tense indicates that the Holy Scriptures had not completed their work on Timothy, when in his boyhood, he first mastered their contents. It was still going on.—Ellicott. The education of Timothy is a convincing proof of the blessing of family devotion to God. Church and school must be inwardly united, if they will work upon the heart for faith and conversion.—Lange.

"Through faith which is in Christ Jesus." Faith in Christ is the key which will unlock and give access to the treasures of saving wisdom which are laid up in the Old Testament.—E. M. Goulburn.

"Given by inspiration of God." Literally, "God-breathed." Ct. 2 Pet. 1: 21, "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." The word does not enable us to establish or give preference to any of the theories of the mode of inspiration, but it does seem (Cook) fairly either to assume or to enunciate this vital truth; that every separate poraion of the Holy Book is inspired, and forms a living portion of a living and organic whole. While, on one hand, this expression does not exclude such verbal errors, or possibly such trifling historical inaccuracies as man's spirit, even in its most exalted state, may not be wholly exempt from, and human transmission and transcription may have increased, it still does certainly assure us, on the other, that these writings, as we have them, are individually pervaded by God's Spirit, and warrants our belief that they are (in the words of Clement of Rome ad Cor. 1: 45) "the true utterances of the Holy Ghost, and an assertion of the full inspiration of the Bible."—Ellicott.

"For instruction in righteousness." Literally, "for the training which is in righteousness;" the teaching and exercising the believer in all the parts and duties of the Christian life. Thus, as Bishop Ellicott well enumerates the uses of Holy Scripture, it teaches the ignorant, convicts the evil and prejudiced, corrects the fallen and erring, and trains in righteousness all men.—Cook.

THE BIBLE TRAINING FOR PERFECT MANHOOD. One of the great dangers to Christian character is a one-sided development. Men are good in one direction and fail in another. They cherish certain virtues, and forget others quite as important. Dickens' description of the Skitzlanders is not a wholly distorted picture of the moral condition of men. Now the Bible is specially fitted to guard against this danger, and to make complete and perfect character.—Peloubet.

"In season, out of season." But, "for thy work, set apart no no definite and fixed hours, no appointed times. Thy work must be done at all hours, at all times." St. Paul urges on God's true servants a restless, sleepless earnestness, which struggles on with the Master's work in spite of bodily weakness and discouragement, in face of dangers and the bitterest opposition.—Ellicott. Just as the fountains, though none may draw from them, still flow on: and the rivers, though none drink of them, still run; so must we do all on our part in speaking though none give heed to us.—Chrysostom.

"For the time will come." It has come in every age after the first glow of enthusiasm has grown a little dim, and some who were gathered into the church are found to have been merely warmed from without, not truly converted. It always comes in a worldly church.—Cook.

"Having (the people having) itching ears." That is, seeking to hear for their own pleasure; wanting their vices and infirmities to be tickled.—Alford. Desiring to be pleased, rather than instructed; to hear what was pleasant, not what was true.—Peloubet.

"Do the work of an evangelist." Much the same as a preacher or missionary of the Gospel, a carrier of its good tidings, without, as in the case of a pastor, being fixed to any definite locality.—Buller. Probably Timothy's usual work. Even while over the church in Ephesus, he must not limit his work. The church is no club seeking only the good of its own members. They and their minister must always be seeking the lost, going out into the by-ways and hedges. This is true broadness and liberality.—Ellicott.

"For I am now ready to be offered." He sees, in his present suffering, in his harsh treatment, the beginning of that martyrdom in which his life-blood would be poured out.—Ellicott. He represents his violent death under a gentle lovely figure of the peace-offering. He was in the condition of the victim on whose head the wine and oil had been already poured, and which was just about to be put to death.—Barnes.

"I have kept the faith." His own personal faith in Christ, and the truths of Christianity committed to his charge. Through all trial, and mockery, and persecution, and suffering he had held fast by the saving truths which he received by special revelation from above, and which as a chosen vessel he was sent forth to declare to a perishing world. (Gal. 1: 12; Acts 9: 15).—Fairbairn.

A knowledge of Bible geography is not essential to salvation, but is necessary to a complete understanding of the Scriptures as the Holy Spirit has given them. In spite of the attention given to these subjects many scholars are deplorably ignorant of the locality and relative position of places mentioned in Bible stories. One very effective way of attracting children's attention and securing their interest is to draw an outline of Palestine, and then to mark every place as it is first mentioned in the lessons. If this sheet is looked at two or three minutes every Sabbath, with a brief review of the places noted, the Scriptural topography can easily be fixed in the minds of the dullest scholars.—S. S. World.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissett, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.
1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.
1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.
1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has oone but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conferenee.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be exeepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

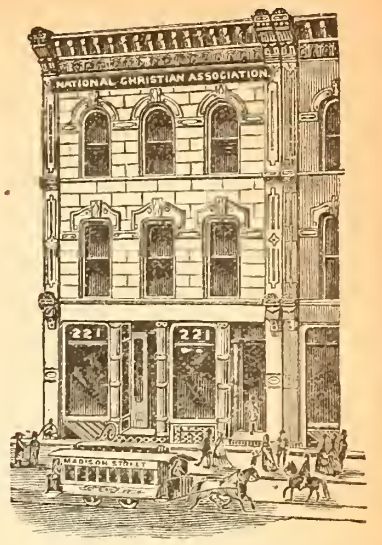
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beanchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1885

JOSEPH COOK'S LECTURE should not be forgotten. If any have lost or not received the printed form of request to Mr. Cook, please write for one to Secretary Stoddard, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Every one who signs a request for Mr. Cook to lecture against the lodge, commits himself in favor of the discussion. Get names.

Dr. G. P. HAYS, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church in Denver, Colorado, and moderator of the last Presbyterian General Assembly, preaches the opening sermon this year at Cincinnati. Like Napoleon's Marshal Lannes, he is one of the "Bravest of the brave." We ascertained at Saratoga last May that he is no Freemason, and he is in favor of Mr. Cook's address.

THE SWEDISH QUESTION.

A Swedish Lutheran letter which we give in this number on the Free church leaders in Sweden, is the production of an able and honest man and Christian. We shall send it to Dr. Waldenstrom, and Pres. Ekman and our readers shall know what they say for themselves.

The Cynosure deplores the controversey about the nature of God and the mode of his infinite existence. The history of the Unitarian or Socinian controversy is a history of religious relapse; and the sin lies at the door of those who disturb the masses by speculations which prevent their worshiping Christ as "every creature in heaven and on earth" will yet do. Rev. 5: 13.

A godly woman was muddled and perplexed by Unitarian arguments, till one day she fell on the text, "As therefore ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." It flashed across her mind, "I know that when I received Christ, I received him as Thomas did, (John 20: 28) as my Lord and my God, and so I was complete in him." This makes nothing against the other Scriptures, that God "is one God," "none beside" him, none like him; nor against the fact that Christ was "sent," that the Father "sent him," or that the Father was "greater" than Christ in his humiliation. Christ is man to pity us and God to save us. The way to attain to a knowledge "of God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent," is to take the words of the Bible as they stand and believe them, and pray that the Holy Ghost, who is the "Spirit of truth" "may lead us into all truth."

We do not wish to keep the Lutherans from becoming Congregationalists, or vice versa, if any Swedes wish to join a godly Congregational church, or any Congregationalists join Lutheran churches, as hundreds have done. But we pray that, joining Congregational churches they may see to it that those churches are hermetically sealed against the worship of devils in the lodge.

ARE CONGREGATIONALISTS A SECT?

Our good Bro. Hinman speaks of them as "These sectarian churches," in his article of last week.

The Puritans, with Cromwell at their head, did not unchurch or disfellowship even the church whose bishops put them in prisons and pillories. They insisted that all religionists should be unmolested, unless, like Mormons, they committed crime, and called that religion.

So in this country, Congregationalists formed all the first mission boards as unsectarian bodies. Their first churches would not be called Congregational, as witness the First churches in Hartford and New Haven. They did not intend to be a sect, but simply churches of Christ. They formed the American Missionary Association, as unsectarian, and it remained so till sectarians drew off from it. Bancroft (vol. 1, p 279) says they insisted that "not even a ceremony should be tolerated unless it was enjoined in the Word of God." Thus they were opposed to secret societies by origin and constitution.

The society to aid American colleges paid Congregational money to avowedly Presbyterian and Lutheran colleges.

They were thus anti-secret and anti-sect, and they have suffered in numbers for both reasons. Thirty-nine years ago, in Farmington, Ill., the Illinois State Congregational Association voted that "An organization requiring an oath or pledge of secrecy, is thereby different from, and OPPOSED to a church of Christ and a republican state." Iowa, Wisconsin, and Ohio State Congregational bodies followed the Illinois example. Similar resolutions were steadily voted in Illinois General Association for a full quarter of a century: and never did one genuine Congregational man or woman object. The Farmington resolution, therefore, repeated from year to year, and acquiesced in by the churches IS CONGREGATIONAL DOCTRINE; and we should acknowledge it.

But Bro. Hinman says, "The name of the venerable President J. Blanchard was dropped from the roll of the General Congregational Association of Illinois, to get rid of faithful Christian testimony" against the lodge. This is literally true. But the name was dropped by a clerk, M. C. Hazard, not legally a member of the body (as the regular delegate was present); and the name was dropped by him as the agent of a conspiracy of a handful of men in Chicago, who are not pastors, yet who intimidate Chicago pastors, and who really run the State Association. This clerk without a word said then or since, dropped the name of Pres. Blanchard; and these Chicago conspirators have prevented any inquiry into this dropping of one of their oldest members! But the mass of the Illinois Congregationalists would, if they understood the facts, abhor this act as conspiracy and crime.

As to sectarianism, though it is an easily besetting sin, the above facts show that it is not specially a sin of Congregationalists. "A National Congress of churches" of all denominations met last week in Hartford, Conn., seeking the death of sect and schism. But sects cannot be destroyed by forming a new sect; nor by dissolving existing churches, and resolving society into its elements; nor by teaching that membership in a Baptist, Methodist, or Presbyterian church is to be repented of as a sin and put away. It is not a sin. The Holy Ghost meets men in such churches. Yet the present division of Protestants is a terrible evil, and promoting and keeping it up is a sin in all who do it. We can only become one in Christ, by seeking first his kingdom, opposing all that obstructs its coming, and ourselves ignoring sectarian divisions, and condemning and exposing schism.

—Elder Hezakiah Davis, in his Fast-Day sermon in the Congregational church at Southington, Ct., named as one reason for fasting the prevalence and power of secret societies.

—Bro. O. A. Williams, of Gladstone, Ill., in sending a contribution for the Illinois State work, speaks of the pleasure he takes in reading of Bro. Dissette's labors through hitherto unvisited regions.

—Secretary Stoddard spoke last week Wednesday evening to a fair audience in Pastor Ranseen's Swedish Lutheran church on the corner of May and Huron streets in this city, and on Friday went to Freeland, Ill., to fill an appointment.

—The attention of friends in New England is especially called to the notice of Bro. Hinman on the 12th page of this number. While located at Willimantic, Conn., and ministering regularly to the Independent church of that place, he is free to use a great part of his time in the reform lecture work. Send for him and you will wish him to come again.

—Friend Lawrie Tatum of Iowa, a former Indian agent, continues to have a deep interest in the condition of the Indians. In a letter to the Christian Worker he mentions the fact that the Osages have from the Government about $60 annuity every six months for each member of the tribe. He sagely observes, "that amount paid to white people, with the understanding that it was to be continued during life, would largely take the energy out of very many of them."

—The Norwegian publishing Company of Chicago, incorporated in July, 1884, publishes a political weekly journal in the Norwegian language called "Amerika." This paper has been regularly issued since the first of January this year, and has already a circulation of about 4,000. Among the sterling principles in the form we read with surprise and pleasure these: "It will defend positive Christianity and Christian morality;" "It will not encourage secret societies either by advertisements or otherwise, but when deemed necessary will expose the unchristian principles upon which they are founded, and also reveal their doings from time to time." All Norwegians should patronize such a paper.

—There are more studeuts in the Christian college in Madras than in the Government and Hindoo colleges together. Christians in India are convinced that a great preparatory work is going on, to be soon followed by large results.

HON. GERRIT SMITH.

This distinguished gentlemau was the Napoleon of morals. As at the terrible battle of Lodi when thirty Austrian cannon were raking the long, narrow bridge, which must be crossed to reach the enemy, when his colors had passed from falling hand to hand, Napoleon seized the lead-riddled banner, and pushed over to victory at the head of his columns, single and alone; so Mr. Smith would have crossed over any gulf of wrong upon a single stringer of right in the face of all the batteries of "Earth and hell confederate."

He was one of the handsomest men and had perhaps the finest business capacity and best voice and natural education of his age. At one time he was said to have owned a million and a half acres of land. He seemed to have the touch of Midas which turned everything to gold. Yet his thrift and wealth had none of their ordinary concomitants, narrowness and avarice. His wealthy old father, Peter, the founder of Peterboro and the fortunes of his son, though himself a volunteer missionary and tract distributor, complains that "Gerrit gives too much to the missionaries."

Whoever remembers the business smash-up in 1837, when good men found it hard to get specie enough to take a double letter from the post-office, recollects how banks were suspended, business was blocked, and land unsalable at any price. This panic, which crushed thousands, enriched Mr. Smith. His friend and his father's friend, John Jacob Astor, loaned him two hundred and fifty thousand dollars on his Oswego property. The county clerk neglected to forward the mortgage, as ordered; and that quarter million of dollars loan rested quietly for weeks on Astor's confidence in the word and integrity of Gerrit Smith. He modestly refers to this loan as "A mercy from God:" which forcibly brings to mind Cromwell's report of his stupendous victories to Fairfax, or to Parliament.

Gerrit Smith was graduated from Hamilton College at twenty-one years of age, and married the only daughter of his college President, Dr. Backus, within a year. His father about the same time put into his hands the whole of his princely estate, which kept him from political and professional life and chained him to business. But the key to his greatness, like that of Cromwell and John Quincy Adams, is to be found in his religion.

It was a season of religious awakening, the most extraordinary ever known in this country, unless the revivals of Whitefield, Edwards and the Tennents be an exception. Charles G. Finney, a young lawyer in the forests of Jefferson county, N. Y., had been converted to Christ and left the Masonic lodge. He said to the writer of this sketch, "As soon as I was converted to Christ, my moral nature loathed it, and I went to the lodge and demanded my discharge." This was in the autumn of 1821. At that time the leading men in the counties and churches of New York were almost all Masons. Finney's renunciation of the lodge, though he said nothing in public about it, by the silent working of the Spirit of God preceded and presaged a mighty religious upheaval of the popular mind,

"As coming events cast their shadows before."

Five years after his quitting the lodge, Morgan was killed by Masons; 1,500 lodges went down, and 228,000 votes were cast against it in 1832. Thurlow Weed, "The Warwick of American politics," started his paper in Rochester, and the leading minds throughout the State of New York, freed from the lodge-sorcery, and left at leisure to think and reason, turned their thoughts toward God. In the city of Rochester especially, it was said that there was not a professional man of any kind who did not become a consistent professor of religion. "The strong man armed" being cast out by the fall of his secret worships left the popular mind vacant and free to be filled and occupied by the Holy Spirit. Such will be the world's experience when Christ's worship excludes Satan's.

Such was the religion Gerrit Smith experienced when the devils were cast out of his State. In his journal we are permitted to see the religion of his house and heart. Like Caleb and Joshua he "wholly followed the Lord." He writes:

"Mar. 6, 1834. This evening my dear wife and myself, under a sense of our sins, resolved to spend the following day in fasting and prayer, and searchings of heart."

"April 6. The past week has been a week of great mercies to our church, of great humbling of heart, of sincere repentance, of many confessing to God and man. My dear son manifested yesterday more religious tenderness, more concern for his soul than I ever knew him to before. Upwards of one hundred persons have taken anxious seats."

Many similar entries are given. Indeed, his diary is as near like Cromwell's as his different circumstances and surroundings permitted. Nor was his religion mere sentimentalism and emotion. In the year 1826, March 17th, he joined the Presbyterian church, making a public profession of his faith in Jesus Christ as his God and Saviour.

He writes Sept. 14th, 1828, of members of his household: "The first Sabbath after they left us they spent on the way from Albany to New York. They have profaned a great part of this holy day. May I truly lament this sin in members of my family." And next year, 1829, he drew up a petition to Congress against opening post-offices and transmitting the mail on the Lord's day. The petition closes:

"By the memory of our fathers, whose piety, as well as their wisdom and blood, contributed to secure our independence, and frame the Government under which we live; * * and lastly, we conjure you, by that final accountability, which will be no less rigid in the public and official, than in the private acts of men, to spare the Sabbath and the inestimable temporal and eternal blessings that are bound up in it."

Many years later (1869) he printed and distributed a sheet against excluding the Bible from schools, in which he says: "But it is said the school will fall if the Bible is left in it. Then let it fall. However great might be this loss, it can better be afforded than the insulting God by singling out this book, and this only, for expulsion from the school."

And in 1873 he writes: "Any institution may be regarded as near its end, when to prolong its life, it falls to compromising. One of the proposed compromises is to forego prayer in the school. Another is to forbid all religious teaching, and especially to exclude the Bible from it. Nothing could justify the ostracising of Shakespeare or Milton from the schools. Still less can anything justify ostracising the Bible from them. For even admitting what may be said of errors in the Bible, no other book equals it in specimens of the truest eloquence, and in the wisdom and purity of its precepts."

At the same time, when Mr. Smith was pleading with Congress and the public for the Sabbath and the Bible in the schools he was pushing another plank of the American platform. He writes in his diary, Oct. 19th, 1828:

"I find that many members of our church are opposed to our measures for suppressing intemperance. Their eyes are not yet opened to the magnitude of the evil. Oh that God would give us all a spirit to inquire of him what is our duty in this matter!"

And his speech at Syracuse against the lodge, published in this number, taken with these three topics: the Sabbath, the Bible, and prohibition, show that the whole American platform was born of God in this one great mind, more than half a century ago.

In Shakespeare Hall, Syracuse, Nov. 15th, 1870, Mr. Smith appeared on the platform along with the now sainted David Bernard and Samuel D. Greene, and gave the speech printed in this number of the Cynosure. He saw with holy satisfaction, as in a mirror, his own grand conceptions reflected in the revival of Anti-masonry, and nothing but the weight of seventy-three years prevented his taking his place at its head and helping to usher in the better day which it foretells.

Great men are meek. It was the consciousness that his principles were so far in advance of those of the American people, and so must make him seem ultra and singular that made him shrink from public life. When elected to Congress by the voters of Oswego and Madison counties, by a large majority, in 1852, in his letter to his constituents he praises their "very rare generosity in electing a man to represent them, the peculiarities of whose political creed leave him without a party." He then presents them his (American) creed, woman suffrage and anti-war included. Yet he knew the Republican party in the fearful grapple, would need and demand the co-operation of a partisan member, and so he resigned at the end of a single Congressional session. Singularity and the notoriety which it gives when allied to talent, is painful to the feeling heart; and so, after uttering his testimony in the teeth of the human beasts whom slavery had sent up, like Dawson, Brooks and other assassins, to legislate with bowie-knives and bludgeons, for the establishing "an Empire whose corner stone was slavery," on the ruins of popular government, Mr. Smith published his speeches and allowed a member of the Republican party to take his seat in Congress.

But, one says, he was singular and inconsistent. He gave John Brown money to invade Virginia, and force her by war to free her slaves: and then offered bail to Jefferson Davis, who inaugurated a bloody rebellion to make the slaves' bondage perpetual.

Granted. And did not the celebrated and amiable moralist, Paley, prosecute a man for stealing from him, and then fee a lawyer to defend him; saying, "In prosecuting him I did my duty to the State, but I bear no malice against the wretch, and if the law gives him a loophole of escape to his family, I am willing?"

Yes, but Mr. Smith denounced war in his political creed, and offered to arm and equip a regiment of slaves to shoot down their masters who were rebels?

Yes, this too is true. So did another godly man, in the ranks, take close aim with his rifle, and always utter a prayer for the rebel's soul before he fired, and brought him down. "O Lord have mercy on his soul." The spirit of war is not the spirit of Christ. A godly Congregational deacon, near Mendota, Illinois, brought his daughter to Wheaton College. He was in the Union cavalry, and a piece of a shell passed through his body and he fell over on the neck of his horse. His company were in the rage of a retreat before the rebels. He said to his comrades, "Lean me up against that tree and give me my arms. I will do for some of them if they come this way."

"But," said the writer, "would you have shot down men, when supposed to be dying yourself?"

"Yes," said the godly man, "the spirit of war was in me. I don't pretend to justify it."

So Mr. Smith said at a war meeting in Peterboro: "A word to the armed men who go South. They should go more in sorrow than in anger. The sad necessity should be their only excuse for going. They must still love the South. But conquer her, and most completely, too, we must, both for her sake and our own." "Slavery which has infatuated her, is the crime of the North as well as of the South." Here was a great soul struggling for principle where there are no principles. For it is an old maxim that "Necessity has no law." Inter arma leges silent. Amid arms the laws are silent, and sense and reason then take their place: and Mr. Smith had large reason and sense.

Mr. Greeley's Cyclopedia tells us that Mr. Smith "underwent considerable fluctuations in his religious creed." This is perhaps true. It is true, too, that like the great Robert Hall, his reason suffered a temporary eclipse. As Macauley delicately insinuated in a letter to Mr. Hall, "His mind was crushed by the friction between things as they are, and things as they ought to be."

Let us glance at Mr. Smith's religious life, and see if we can account for apparent aberrations.

As we have said, he was an Adonis in manly beauty, and lapped in praise and adulation. Of course, being human he suffered somewhat from that solvent of virtue which Cowper thus apostrophises:

"O Popular Applause, what heart of man
Is proof against thy sweet seducing charms?
The wisest and the best feel urgent need
Of all their caution in thy gentlest gales;
But, swelled into a gust--who then, alas!
With all his canvass set, and inexpert
And therefore heedless, can withstand thy power?
Praise from the shrivelled lips of toothless, bald
Decreptitude; and in the looks of lean
And craving poverty, and in the bow
Respectful of the smutched artificer,
Is oft too welcome; and may much disturb
The bias of the purpose. How much more,
Poured forth by beauty splendid and polite,
In language soft as adoration breathes."

And such "popular applause" was the atmosphere in which Gerrit Smith breathed. He married at twenty-one. Before the year was out he had entire control of his father's immense estate, and knew how to handle it. He bought half the city of Oswego for thousands and sold it by millions. At his father's death in 1837, he paid to his brother's and sister's children one hundred and sixty thousand dollars for their share of the property which then became his own. But, as the property greatly increased in value, in 1860 he paid them $160,000 more; and as it further increased in value, in 1862 he paid them $160,000 more, and in 1864 he added $80,000. Of this vast sum, $320,000 was mere gratuity, yet simply entered in his account as a matter of "equity," the property having proved to be worth more than he took it at. Such was his conscientiousness. And his benefactions to religious and benevolent objects all the time flowing as a stream.

Such wealth and popularity were a sufficient ordeal. But his religious ordeal was far greater.

The year of his graduation, of his marriage, the Presbyterian General Assembly voted slavery to be "an atrocious violation of the most precious rights of human nature; utterly inconsistent with the law of God and the Gospel of Christ." In 1826, six years later, himself and wife joined the Presbyterian church. That year Morgan was murdered and Freemasons were required to confess their sins of lodge-blasphemy and corruption which they did. Such was the Presbyterian church when Gerrit Smith joined it.

In 1837 that same General Assembly excinded four synods, including the one to which Mr. Smith's church belonged, professedly to get rid of New Schoolism, but really to get rid of Abolitionism and Anti-masonry. The writer sat and heard Dr. W. S. Plummer, D. D., of Virginia, assign as a reason for cutting off those four synods, that their ministers "went to Presbytery with their saddlebags stuffed with Anti-masonic almanacs:" and Geo. Baxter, D. D., avowed as his reason for quitting the New and joining the Old School, that the Old School were not and the New School were Abolitionists. Dr. Baxter was president of the Theological Seminary, Prince Edwards county, Virginia, and a few years later that assembly petted and lionized James H. Thornwell of Columbia Theological Seminary, S. C., who was a promnent secessionist and rebel, the author of a resolution declaring slavery to be "no moral evil!" Rev. George Bourne, a Southern minister, had been cast out years before, as a hopeless fanatic for publishing a book with a picture of a slave-holder who strapped his slave to a log for attempting to run away, and, in presence of his slaves began to chop him off from his feet toward his head, the sufferer crying "Oh massa! God a massa, do begin at the other end!"

Gerrit Smith had not studied theology. His religion was practical and facts like the above, of which there are enough to fill a volume, filled him with loathing for the church which he had loved. The Methodists had censured two of their ministers for attending and praying at an anti-slavery meeting, and one of their bishops had become a slave-owner and refused to manumit them. The Baptists, who were loosely united in a national missionary society, split on the same rock, more Baptists being slaveholders than of any other denomination. What was Mr. Smith to do? This is what he did do. He built a plain chapel and preached in it himself, and kept up family prayer to the day of his death. The American Board, to which Mr. Smith had given thousands on thousands, in 1845, on motion of Dr. Woods, voted slave-holding to be no bar to Christian fellowship! And while Satan had thus secured the vote of the organizations representing orthodox Christianity, Dr. Channing laid his immense popularity on the altar of his country and humanity, and wrote a book which incurred the threatened vengeance of the slave-holders. Garrison, Sumner, and Lydia Maria Child, with a host of followers, either discrowned Christ as Channing did, or cast off all visible religion and assailed slavery, the Bible, the Sabbath and the churches, with equal bitterness. In this tempest, more terrible than that raised by "The Prince of the power of the air" on the Gallilean lake to swamp Christ's disciples, Mr. Smith set sail on his own single plank. He stood firm by the Constitution which Garrison, Stanton and the Burleighs denounced as "a covenant with death, and an agreement with hell;" and as we have seen, above, though unable to meet all the assaults upon it; stood firmly by the Bible, prayer and communion with Christ to the last. Mr. Frothingham, whose religion was of the frothy sort, yet, as his biographer does justice to Mr. Smith, on page forty-seventh of his book, writes: "A pious Methodist minister at Peterboro in 1873 [only a little while before he died] recalls with warm emotion Mr. Smith's demeanor at the Lord's Supper, and his devout manner of conducting service in his own free chapel." And the writer of this sketch, too, bears earnest testimony, almost amounting to homage, to the piety of Mr. Smith. He knelt with him at family worship in the spacious parlor of that mansion which sheltered the Abolitionists who were driven from Utica by a mob led by a Democratic member of Congress. No Bible was needed. Mr. Smith repeated the Scriptures from memory in tones "like the memories of joys that are past, pleasant yet mournful to the soul."

Great, glorious, childlike man! The sublime and beautiful blend in thee. Thou wert "converted" and as "a little child," and so fit for the kingdom of heaven, The seed thou hast sown will yet wave in an abundant harvest; though thou wert meek and ready to apologize for seeing farther and clearer than others.

In the trials yet before us,
In the evil days to come,
In the shadow of the prison,
Or the cruel martyrdom,
We will think of thee, O brother,
And thy sainted name shall be
In the prayer of the captive
And the anthem of the free.

Such minds as thine can only be free where what is true in theory is reduced to practice, and fact and right are the same. Heaven seems dearer because Gerrit Smith is in it; and earth's storms seem lighter because they no longer fall on him.

—Misses Jennie Smith and Adelaide Sherman, railroad evangelists, connected with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, are doing a good work amongst the hundreds of railroad employees residing in Atlanta.

THE HOME.

SATISFIED.

Not here! Not here! not where the sparkling waters
Fade into mocking sounds as we draw near—
Where in the wilderness each footstep falters;
I shall be satisfied—but oh, not here!

Not here, where all our dreams of bliss deceive us,
Where the worn spirit never gains its goal;
Where, haunted ever by the thoughts that grieve us,
Across us floods of bitter memory roll.

There is a land where every pulse is thrilling
With rapture earth's sojourners may not know;
Where heaven's repose the weary heart is stilling,
And peacefully life's time drossed currents flow.

Far out of sight, while mortal robes enfold us,
Lies the fair country where our hearts abide;
And of its bliss is naught more wondrous told us
Than these few words, "I shall be satisfied."

What! truly satisfied? The spirit's yearning
For sweet companionship with kindred minds,
The silent love that here meets no returning,
The inspiration which no language finds—

Shall they be satisfied? The soul's vague longings—
The aching void which nothing earthly fills?
Oh, what desires upon my soul are thronging
As I look upward to the heavenly hills!

Thither my weak and weary steps are tending;
Saviour and Lord, with thy frail child abide!
Guide me toward home, where, all my wanderings ending,
I then shall see thee, and "be satisfied."

—Selected.

WALKING WITH GOD.

Sometimes we read in the Bible of walking before God, as when He said to Abram, "Walk before me, and be thou perfect," (Gen. 17: 1). Sometimes we read of walking after God, as when Moses said to the Israelites, "Ye shall walk after the Lord your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him and cleave unto him," (Deut. 13: 4). But of Enoch and Noah it is said that they walked with God. To walk before reminds us of a child, running and playing in the presence of a father, and conscious of perfect security because he is near and behind. To walk after is becoming to a servant, but to walk with indicates fellowship and frendship.

It must not be forgotten that when Enoch and Noah walked with God, they lived in the last days of the antediluvian dispensation, when perilous times had come. They were just such times, our Lord himself tells us, as shall terminate the history of the present dispensation (Matt. 24: 37–39; Luke 17: 26, 29); and the last days are even now at hand. But it is blessed to know that at such times and in such days it is the privilege of believers to walk with God, close by his side, in the intimacy of sweet and undisturbed companionship, free from danger. Of course it is most important to know how we are to walk with God above the darkness and the storm.

First, we must walk by faith. It is expressly declared for all true Christians, "we walk by faith, not by sight" (II. Cor. 5: 7). Faith then is not an arbitrary and unreasonable thing, as many suppose; it is an absolute necessity, arising from the very nature of our relations to God. "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" (Amos 3: 3). Impossible. Neither can God and man walk together, except they be agreed; and they can never be agreed except by faith on our part, which brings us into harmony of heart with God's revealed will. Hence it is written, "Without faith it is impossible to please him," (Heb. 11: 6); and no wonder, for if there is no confidence in God's Word, no approval of God's purposes, no delight in God's ways, heaven itself would not be heaven but hell to the unbelieving soul. See Matt. 8: 10; 9: 2, 22, 29; 21: 21, 22; John 3: 14–18; 5: 24; 8: 24.

Second, we must walk in the Spirit. "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye can not [may not] do the things that ye would. . . . If we live in the spirit, let us also walk in the spirit," (Gal. 5: 16–25) There is obviously something more in walking than mere living. A man may be alive and yet asleep, but walking implies wakefulness, activity, progress; and it is well for us to ponder what is meant by walking in the spirit. John 3: 5–8; 4: 14; 7: 38, 39; 14: 16, 17, 26; 15: 26; 16: 7–14; Gal. 6: 8.

Third, we must walk in love. "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour," (Eph. 5: 1, 2). It is only unshaken faith in his infinite love that can cause us to walk in love toward one another, for his is the infinite ocean, and ours but the spray, alas! too often stained with the impurities of earth. This is the way he puts it; for it is not until we read, "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end," that we read, "a new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another," (John 13: 1, 34). John 15: 12, 17; Gal. 5; 14; Col. 3: 14; James 2: 8; I Pet. 5: 8.

Fourth, we must walk in obedience. "This is love, that we walk after his commandments," (II John 6). "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandment, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. . . . He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself so to walk, even as he walked," (I John 2: 4–6). Of course he ought; for if we abide in Christ, and Christ abides in us, the two shall never be distinguished. If he represents us in heaven, we ought to represent him on earth, according to the will of God, whose commandments are not grievous. What are they? "This is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his son Jesus, and love one another as he gave us commandment," (I John 3: 23). Simple and precious commandment! John 14: 21–23; I Cor. 7: 19; Col. 2: 6, 7; I John 5: 1–5.

Fifth, we must walk circumspectly. "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil," (Eph. 5: 15, 16). The word rendered "circumspectly" is elsewhere translated "diligently," and this is the probable meaning here. We can redeem time only by making diligent use of present opportunities, and every five minutes spent in testimony and service for Jesus is time redeemed from the wasted past. He himself is the brightest example of diligence. Mark 1: 20, 21, 28, 29, 35; John 1: 36; 6: 19; 7: 1; 9: 4; 10: 23.

Sixth, we must walk in the light. "Ye were sometime darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of the light," (Eph. 5: 8). It is said that "God is light," before it is said that "God is love," (I John 1: 5; 4: 8); and if we walk with God, we must walk in the light, concealing nothing, but frank, open, sincere, truthful in every thought and word. I Thess. 5: 5, 6; 4: 1; John 1: 4; 8: 12; Matt. 5: 15; I Pet. 2: 9; I John 1: 5–10.

Seventh, we must walk worthy of our vocation. "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called," (Eph. 4: 1). We are "called unto the fellowship of his son Jesus Christ our Lord" (I Cor. 1: 9); we are "called unto liberty" (Gal. 5: 13); we are "called the sons of God" (I John 3: 1); we are "called with an holy calling" (II Tim. 1: 9); we are called with a "heavenly calling" (Heb. 3: 1); we are called "unto his kingdom and glory" (I Thess. 2: 12; I Pet. 5: 10). Oh, how happy and how lofty should the walk of a Christian be in a poor, perishing world like this!—Rev. J. H. Brookes, in the Truth

DO YOU PRAY?

BY REV. ISAAC HYATT.

Away with your vain speculations about prayer and answer my question: Do you pray?

Do you draw near to God each day, renouncing everything you know to be wrong, in the name of Jesus? Do you ask God for wisdom to enable you to select the good and eschew the evil appertaining to this life, as you ask your Sabbath-school teacher, your pastor or any near and dear friend in whose ability you have confidence, to assist you to choose the pearls and cast away the dross that are scattered about your pathway? Do you come to the Lord for help in the discharge of your duties, as the little child looks to a loving mother for assistance?

Do you come to your Heavenly Father for his love to be shed abroad in your heart, his peace to pervade your soul, his pardon to rest upon you in the forgiveness of your sins, and his truth to permeate your entire being in its sanctifying power as the depositor comes for his money to the bank where it is deposited?

Do you heartily thank the Giver of all good for his favors to you, as you thank a friend who has kindly and bountifully entertained you during your tarry at his home? Are your prayers formal or faith-filled? Are your petitions sincere? Are they offered in humility? Do you earnestly put your whole heart into your requests? Do you think the Lord will hear you because you are so good, honest, and upright; or because Jesus Christ is your advocate?

THE TEMPLE OF BAALBEC.

Rev. Henry M. Field, D. D., after his return from an extended tour through Eastern countries, has published a book on India and the Holy Land which is both instructive and entertaining. Dr. Field, in a letter to the Evangelist, of which he is the editor, thus describes the ruins that mark the place where the grandest of ancient cities is believed to have existed:

The ruins of the ancient city of Baalbec, situated on the plain forty-three miles northwest of Damascus, are the wonder of modern architects.

Everything is colossal. The area is larger than that of the temple at Jerusalem. We may begin with the walls, which are half a mile around, and of such height and depth as are rarely attained in the most tremendous fortress. Where from within I climbed to the top, it made me giddy to look over the perilous edge to the depth below; and when from without the walls I looked up at them, they rose high in the air. Some of the stones seem as if they had been reared in place, not by Titans, but by the gods. There are nine stones 30 feet long and 10 feet thick, which is larger than the foundation stones of the temple at Jerusalem, dating from the time of Solomon, or any blocks in the great Pyramid.

But even these are pygmies compared with the three giants of the western wall, 62 feet, 63½ feet, 64 feet long. These are said to be the largest stones ever used in any construction. They weigh hundreds of tons, and instead of being merely hewn out of a quarry which might have been on the site, and left to lie where they were before, they have been lifted 19 feet from the ground, and there embedded in the wall. Never was there such cyclopean architecture. How such masses could have been moved is a problem with modern engineers.

Sir Charles Wilson, whom I met in Jerusalem, is at this moment in Baalbec. Standing in the grounds of the temple, he tells me that in the British Museum there is an ancient tablet which reveals the way such stones were moved. The mechanics were very simple; rollers were put under them, and they were drawn up inclined planes by sheer human muscle—the united strength of great numbers of men. In the rude design on the tablet the whole scene is pictured to the eye.

There are battalions of men, hundreds to a single roller, with the taskmasters standing over them, lash in hand, which was freely applied to make them pull together, and the king sitting on high to give the signal for this putting forth of human strength en masse as if an army were moving to battle. A battle it was in the waste of human life it caused. These temples of Baalbec must have been a whole generation in building, and have consumed the population of a province and the wealth of an empire.—Scientific American.

THE CHILDREN AND THE BIRDS.

O wise little birds, how do ye know
The way to go
Southward and northward, to and fro?
Far up in the ether piped they:
"We but obey
One who calleth us far away.

"He calleth and calleth year by year,
Now there, now here;
Ever he maketh the way appear."

Dear little birds! He calleth me
Who calleth ye;
Would that I might as trusting be!

—Harriet McEwen Kimball.

THE FOUR ORPHANS.

Nellie was studying her verse for the next Sunday. She was quite sure she knew it at last, but she did not understand it very well. It was this: "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up."

"Take me up where?" asked Nellie of grandfather, who was sitting near. "To heaven?"

"Not exactly," said grandpa, taking off his spectacles. "It means God will protect you, just as you might take your little sister up in your arms to keep her from harm."

"But my papa and mamma would not forsake me," said Nellie.

"Not while they lived," said grandfather, "but some little children have no parents to protect them, you know, and God promises to care for them."

Nellie looked soberly out of the window. She felt very sorry for any children who had no father or mother.

"Long, long ago," said grandfather, after a min-

nte's silence, "there lived in France four little children."

Nellie turned round from the window with a smile on her face. Grandpa was going to tell a story, she knew, and she always thought he could tell nicer stories than any one else.

"What were their names?" asked she.

"Henry, William, Mary and Pierre Portal," said grandfather, "and they all four hid in an oven."

"In an oven!" said Nellie, "Why, what a big one it must have been!"

"Yes," said grandfather, "it was a large old oven built separate from the house, but not far from it."

"What were they hiding there for?" asked Harry who had closed his book and was listeniug.

"Because they were afraid of some soldiers," said grandfather. "This was during the reign of that wicked king, Louis the Fourteenth, who was so conceited that he thought he could never do anything wrong. But whether he thought so or not, he was very cruel, especially towards the Huguenots."

"Who were they?" asked Nellie.

"The French Protestants," said grandfather, "a good, industrious people, who only asked leave to worship God in their own way. They were so honest that the French, when they wish to compliment a man, would say he was 'as honest as a Huguenot.' And yet these people had suffered great persecutions under different kings, and under Louis the Fourteenth they still were hunted from one place to another. Many of them secretly made their way to the seacost aud there found English and Dutch trading vessels, whose captains would hide the poor refugees under bales of goods and heaps of coal, and in this way take them from France to England or Holland, where they could be free."

"Well, did the soldiers find the four children?" asked Harry.

"No," said grandfather, "by and by the soldiers went away without finding them, and then Henry, William, Mary and little Pierre stepped out of their hiding-place. But they felt very sorrowful, for their father and mother with one child, had been killed by the soldiers, and the house had been burnt to the ground. So these four orphan children tried to think what they had better do. I have no doubt they asked God to guide them, for the Portals were a pious family. Many of their relatives in the past century of troubled years, had given up their lives rather than their religion."

"What did the children think they had better do?" asked Harry.

"Well," said grandfather, "after talking awhile, they thought they had better start for the seacost and try to get away in some ship as so many Huguenots had done. So the three boys and the girl started on the long, perilous journey west toward the city of Bordeaux, more than a hundred miles away."

"What a dreadfully long walk," said Nellie.

"Yes," said grandfather, "they had to take paths where they would not be seen, too, I suppose, and they were often very tired and hungry. So very much exhausted did they become that when their journey was not yet half done, at the town of Montauban, the youngest boy, little Pierre, fell down, fainting with hunger at the door of a baker's shop. Fortunately Montauban was one of the few towns in France where the people, if not Huguenots themselves, were yet friendly to that persecuted sect. So when the baker, a kind-hearted man, heard the noise at his door, he came out, and, seeing poor little Pierre, picked him up in his arms, carried him into the house and gave him the food he so much needed. The three other children, after seeing their brother well-cared for, thought they had better go on to Bordeaux."

"And leave little Pierre?" asked Nellie. "Why, I think they ought to have stayed with him."

"Well," said grandfather, "the kind baker could not take care of all the children, of course, and as little Pierre was comparatively safe in his care, Henry, William, and Mary, although very sorry to leave him, yet thought it the best thing they could do. So they once more started out on their long journey on foot toward Bordeaux, which they reached at last in safety. Perhaps Harry can tell us where Bordeaux is?"

"On the Garonne river in the south-eastern part of France," said Harry.

"Yes," said grandfather. "Well, having arrived there, the children walked along beside the Garonne, wondering which shipmaster they would dare ask to take three Huguenot children on board and conceal them at his own risk. At last, however, they found a man who was willing to do this. But instead of putting the children under bales or piles of coal, he put them in barrels."

"They must have felt scared," said Nellie.

"Yes," said grandfather, "I suppose they did feel frightened when they found themselves on board the merchant ship, inside those barrels. They each had only the open bunghole of their barrel to breathe through, and they must have felt very cramped and uncomfortable. But it was well for them that they had managed to get into that ship and get away when they did."

"Why?" asked Harry.

"Because," said grandfather, "King Louis the Fourteenth heard that the shipmasters were in the habit of allowing Huguenots to hide in their cargoes, and he was so angry to think that the Huguenots should escape in this way that he ordered that before any ship was allowed to sail from France to any foreign port, the ship's hold should be fumigated with a deadly gas so that all hidden Huguenots might be smothered."

"What a wicked man he was," said Nellie.

"Yes," said grandfather, "these Portal children were among the last of the refugees who escaped before this order was issued. However, the people still found ways to get out of France in spite of King Louis' orders. Well, our barrels set sail in the merchant ship and passed down the Garonne, out into the Bay of Biscay, around through the English Channel and the Straits of Dover to the low lying coast of Holland, where the barrels were safely unloaded, for this peaceful land was out of King Louis' power."

"Did anybody care for the children?" asked Harry.

"Yes,"said grandfather, "they found kind persons who adopted them, and there they grew up. The sister Mary, made her home in Amsterdam, but Henry and William when grown up, went to England with the Prince of Orange. There Henry learned to make paper, and started a paper-mill of his own on a little stream in a town named Laverstoke. He was very enthusiastic about his business and gathered around him all the best French and Dutch workmen he could find, and after a time he made such good paper that the Bank of England said he might supply them with the paper for bank-notes, and ever since, even to the present day, the Bank of England has bought its paper at the same place of the descendants of this Huguenot boy, Henry Portal."

"What became of William," asked Harry.

"He became a minister," said grandfather. "He was the tutor of Prince George, who afterwards became George the Third, King of England."

"Well, what became of that little brother they left behind?" asked Nellie.

"The baker took good care of little Pierre," answered grandfather. "He kept him until he grew to be a man. Pierre always held to his Protestant faith. When he grew up he became a cloth-manufacturer, and some of his descendants came to high offices and were called lords and barons. So you see, Nellie, that although these four children had no father and mother, yet God took good care of them; and I think they must all of them have been sure of the truth of your verse, 'When my father and mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up.'"—N. Y. Observer.

TEMPERANCE.

MISS CLEVELAND'S TEMPERANCE OPINIONS.

The following appeal to girls was written by Elizabeth Cleveland, the present mistress of the White House, and was published in the Youth's Temperance Banner, Feb. 18, 1882:

RESPONSIBILITY OF GIRLS IN TEMPERANCE WORK.

J. G. Holland wrote in Mrs. Hayes's album these words: "Women only can make wine-drinking unfashionable and heal the Nation of this curse."

What did Dr. Holland mean by women only? Is it true that only women can make wine-drinking unfashionable and heal the Nation of this curse? You and I need to know this first, because, if only we women can do this thing, why, it is an awful responsibility upon us—each one of us. And, if somebody else can do it, we, like all the others, would like to give that somebody else the job. Five years ago at Washington Mrs. Hayes became mistress of the White House, and it was for her, and no one else, to say what the social atmosphere should be which surrounded her guests, and how they should be entertained at her house. Well, she did an unheard-of thing. She banished wine from all her entertainments, with just one exception. Secretary Evarts made a fuss. He was mortified. He could not endure to have Lord and Lady English, Count and Countess French, Baron and Baroness German come to the White House dinners and have nothing fit for them to drink—not a drop of poison! It was utterly queer! So Mrs. Hayes made one exception in favor of those great foreign highnesses, and allowed wine upon her table in their presence. But only for once. Her conscience—high-souled woman that she is—smote her for that one little cowardly compromise with wrong. She could better endure to have Secretary Evarts and the Smiths ashamed of her than to be ashamed of herself. So she quietly and forever after prohibited wine from her table, and cheerfully endured the lifted eyebrows and shrugged shoulders of the diplomats, British, French, Russian —all, and the little short-lived hiss of "fashionable" society, until that hiss changed to a cheer, and fashionable society turned around, like the spaniel it is, and trotted on behind its mistress. It became unfashionable to serve wine and to offer wine in fashionable society while Mrs. Hayes was in the White House.

What Mrs. Hayes did in the White House every woman can do in her own home if she will. If the girls who read these words will each of them, all together, use their influence on the side of temperance, they can make temperance fashionable where they are. Will you do it?

Gen. Grant does a manly thing in refusing to drink wine everywhere and in all society. It is only a strong man who can keep his wineglass upside down —in this case right side up, too—while all the grand people around him are sipping champagne and toasting each other in sparkling drinks. No one can tell how "far this little candle sheds its light." But no man can do for a fashion in society what a woman can. It is women only, as Dr. Holland said.

I wish some strong, bright angel stood before you just now while you read, girls, to flash before you, as no words of mine can, the power you possess to help or hinder the cause of temperance, to make you feel your responsibility, because you are girls, in the matter; to shudder at its weight, and to never cease trying to fulfill it! Doubtless you have heard a great deal about the value of your smiles: but do you know the value of your frowns? I wish I could make you feel the value of your frowns and the importance of knowing just what to frown upon. What a man must do by a blow a woman can do by a frown. When the time comes that the young man who now shares his time in your society and the saloon, who jokes about temperance in your presence, and takes a glass socially now and then, is made to feel that these things cannot be if you are to be his companion at party, ride, or church; that good society cannot tolerate these things in its members; in short, that this kind of a man is unfashionable and unpopular—then alcohol will tremble on its throne and the liquor traffic will hide its cancerous face.—Living Issue.

At a recent important convention of temperance men held in Orlando, Fla., a permanent organization was effected. A resolution was adopted demanding of the constitutional convention soon to assemble, that a prohibitory amendment be incorporated into the new constitution. A strong effort is to be made, independently of party, to elect a majority of this convention pledged to prohibition.

Dr. James Edmunds of London, in an address before the British Woman's Temperance Association, spoke of the change in public opinion within the last twenty years in the position of the total abstainer socially. Formerly, if he refused wine at dinner, he was immediately involved in long argument as to his fanaticism; but now he found that the excuse was rather on the side of those who took wine.

The New York East conference of the M. E. church, in recent session at Poughkeepsie, adopted a report of the committe on temperance, which declared that while "favoring all judicious measures promising any fair degree of success in checking intemperance, we believe its complete suppression can be secured only through constitutional prohibition," and urging the ministers to do all possible "through the pulpit, platform and the press," to secure this result.

CEDAR RAPIDS.—An important test case involving the right of a brewer in another State to sell beer by agent in Iowa has been decided at Cedar Rapids. George Wagner, the Rock Island brewer, had 120 cases of bottled beer, thirty-eight quarter barrels, and seventeen barrels of beer seized, and after four days trial, and the most vigorous defense, the jury condemned the beer to destruction under the new laws. The valuation of the beer was $800 dollars. The defense was that the property was destined for Albert Lea, Minnesota, but detained here by severe weather. The prosecution established the fact of an agency here and local sales.

TO CHRISTIAN REFORMERS IN NEW ENGLAND.

A reasonable hope of success in any moral reform must, under God, depend on its continued and earnest advocacy. Moral evils, like noxious weeds, always flourish by being let alone. They are removed only by patient and persistent endeavor.

The present time seems eminently favorable to the prosecution of moral reforms. There is a lull in political agitation. The presidential conflict has passed away and the result has not been a marked change in the condition of our country. In the heat of party strife people do not scan closely the hidden and malign influences that undermine the foundations of the social and political fabric. In such an interval as this they may be induced to see them, and consider what are their duties and responsibilities.

The assassinations and explosions in Europe, and mob violence and murder in America, are outward manifestations of secret societies, while the low state of piety and the prevalence of real or semi-infidel principles are among the influences that, like cholera germs, are both the cause and the result of this prevalence of iniquity. Nor is it strange that together with such a state of things there should be a terrible prevalence of intemperance, that crime of all kinds should abound, and that the terrible unrest of society should be indicated by the constant occurrence of divorces and suicides.

No mere political change can remedy these evils. There needs to be a great spiritual awakening, an arousing of the demands of conscience; a widespread reformation, commencing in the churches and the ministry and going out into every department of society.

To this end there need to be faithful men of God who, like the ancient prophet, shall "Cry aloud and spare not—show my people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins." Isa. 58: 1. Especially do we need to hold up the terribly iniquitous character of Freemasonry and its kindred orders, which, by its influence on the churches and the ministry, has more than any one thing, brought about this demoralization. Surely it is time to work. The necessity is great, and the opportunities are abundant.

It is hoped that Christian reformers will at once take into consideration their opportunities and responsibilities, and will be willing to use the means that God has given them to carry on his work. The undersigned will be ready to respond as far as practicable to all calls for lectures, and it is hoped that other and much more efficient agencies may be raised up.

H. H. HINMAN.

Willimantic, Conn.

THE CHURCHES.

—The International Y. M. C. A. Convention was held at Atlanta, Ga., last week, with a good attendance.

—Rev. John D. Nutting of Cortland, Ohio, recording secretary of the corporate National Christian Association, preached a sermon on "the Gospel and Physical Healing," April 19th. His sermon, which argues against miraculous faith cures, was printed in the Cortland Gazette by special request of many who heard it.

—Gen. O. O. Howard was moderator of the Omaha Congregational Association, which met early in the month at Blair, Neb.

—Rev. Wm. DeLoss Love, formerly of Milwaukee, Wis., has just been installed over the Pearl St. church, Hartford, Coun.

—The Chicago Congregational Ministers' Union lately voted to send its Christian greetings, by Rev. C. A. Bjork of this city, to the Swedish Free Mission Church Convention, which meets next month in Sweden.

—A practical theological seminary has been started in Norway to prepare missionaries to send with their emigrants. For this purpose suitable buildings are being erected in Christiana.

—The Methodist church proposes to raise $1,000,000 for home and foreign missions this year.

—The American Bible Society has one hundred and sixty-five colporteurs engaged in its fourth general supply of Bibles to destitute families in the United States.

—Dr. Todd, of New Haven, threatens to resign from the New Haven Central association of Congregational ministers, because the association has licensed two young preachers who denied the fundamental truth of the Gospel. Other clergymen are said to be in active sympathy with Dr. Todd.

—About 1,000 conversions have been reported in Knoxville, Tenn., including many of its leading citizens, as the result of the recent labors of the noted evangelist the Rev. Sam Jones.

—A Presbyterian minister has just presented Queen Victoria with a small plough made of spears, swords and dirks. Her Majesty accepted the gift.

—The fifty-seventh annual report of the American Seaman's Friend Society shows a disbursement last year of $36,651.90 for missionary work, publications, loan libraries, and general expenses.

—We are glad to learn from the Nonconformist that M. Brisson, the new French Premier, is an evangelical Protestant of marked purity of public and private life, of unflinching integrity, and opposed to making the church an instrument in the hands of the State.

—Though a few years since, glowing prophecies were made by Roman Catholics of the return of England to their church, the proportion of Romanists to the total population declined from 5.09 per cent in 1853 to 4.5 in 1882. Although in London, their numbers may be 150,000, in a population of four millions, their increase is mainly owing to the Irish immigration.

—The general convention for the promotion of holy living, to be held this week in the Park Ave. M. E. church in this city, beginning on Wednesday of this week, is a meeting which has been anxiously expected by many Christians as a means of harmonizing the interests and the labors of the evangelists especially devoted to this branch of Christian effort.

—Rev. U. D. Lathrop, who is visting the spring conferences of the Wesleyan churches in New York and Pennsylvania, arousing an interest in the Theological school at Wheaton, writes us cheeringly: "I could not see as there is any symptoms of falling away from our position on the secret society question, but rather a more united determination to keep clear of all of them. There is a strong feeling among us that a man who has as much grace as he ought will not want to unite with any secret society. This is what I conclude after visiting the spring conferences. I feel that you can safely say that the Wesleyans are not toning down a bit on the reform lines."

—Pastor Seguin and the French Protestant work are having their time of tribulation. They lately began to raise a fund for church building, and were induced to entrust important duties to a man named Mignault. He seems to have betrayed that trust in such a manner that Pastor Seguin and the trustees had to recall his commission and announce to the public that the subscription had been closed. The mission work will be continued with all the means available; but this unfortunate trouble and the publicity given to Mignault's slanders will make the severe tax of the mission work still more difficult. We hope that it may yet flourish and grow strong through the blessing of God.

—The sixty-ninth annual meeting of the American Bible Society was held May 14th. A board of managers was elected and the annual reports read. These showed that the issues during the year of Bibles, Testaments, etc., was 1,548,175, of which 508,719 were circulated in foreign lands. The total issues were 45,440,206. Forty-eight new auxiliaries were recognized. The receipts for the year were $587,914.34, and the expenditures $619,882.58. For the foreign work of the society to be expended during the coming year $172,850 has been appropriated. Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen has been elected president of the society, and William Gammel, LL. D. and the Hon. John Jay its vice presidents. The prayers of the society were asked for the recovery of Mr. Frelinghuysen from his illness.

—The General Conference of the United Brethren church at Fostoria, Ohio, opened with one hundred and twenty-six delegates present, representing seventeen States, two Territories, and the province of Ontario. The secretary's report showed the increase of membership since 1881 to have been 10,861; increase in the number of churches, 212; amount paid as salaries to ministers, $407,515.57; amount of collections for church purposes, $842,470.04.

—In India there are fifty per cent more girls than boys in the mission schools. In one mission district there are one thousand girls under the instruction of religious teachers. This is a wonderful change from the time when it was a disgrace for a woman to know how to read. If this process goes on a few years, it will do much to destroy idolatry in the homes of India; for religiously the home is what the women make it. The missionaries in China and Japan report that when Christian men marry heathen wives the home is heathen and the men are likely to apostatise, but when Christian women marry they make the home Christian. Hence the value "of woman's work for woman."

—There is some agitation in favor of a union between the English and Welsh Presbyterians. Obstacles to such union are found in a difference of language, the congregational element in Welsh Presbyterianism, differences of opinion regarding the necessity of a scholastic training for ministers, and questions regarding the Sustentation Fund. But to many the union appears by no means an impossibility.

—In the Russian-Turkish Baptist Association the church at Soroczin, which began the year with 500 members, reports "a precious blessing from the Week of Prayer, twenty reclaimed, eighty baptized." A new church has been organized at Noworudina, with 143 members. From the Volga river region, in East Russia, the pastor writes that four churches have been formed and fifty-two converts baptized.

—Japanese Christians at Komatsu gathered the stones which were thrown at Rev. Mr. Ise, while he was preaching there in the street two years ago, kneeled down and prayed over them, and then used them as foundation stones for a church building.

—There are twenty or more missionaries of different denominations in the city of Lucknow, India. In the Methodist Sunday-schools the attendance is over 1,700, of whom not 300 are children of Christians. The Wesleyan Sunday-schools have over 1,000 scholars.

THE U. B. GENERAL CONFERENCE.

FOSTORIA, Ohio, May 14, 1885.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR BROTHER:—The General Conference of the United Brethren in Christ convened at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The address of the board of bishops was read by the senior bishop, J. J. Glossbrenner. It is in the main a good address; but the following utterance on secrecy is without parallel in ecclesiastical history. Bishops have often spoken in favor of law, order, and the principles of their church; but never before proposed to subvert the organic law of the church! That portion of the address is as follows:

We need not say to your honorable body that the subject of secret societies has become a most perplexing one in our Zion. This is well known to you all. Also, it is expected of you by the people whom you represent that under the blessing of God you will put this subject to rest and bring peace to the church by wise regulations. To this end we recommend:

First. In that it is admitted that our present constitution has not been as yet submitted to a vote of the whole society, you determine whether the whole subject under consideration is or is not yet in the hands of the General Conference.

"Second. Should you determine that it is in your hands, then transfer the whole subject from the realm of constitutional law to the field of legislative enactment which would be to expunge the whole question from the constitution and bring it into the field of legislative enactment, to be handled as the church, through her representatives, may determine from time to time.

"Third. That you limit the prohibitory feature of your enactment to combinations secret and open, to which the church believes a Christian cannot belong.

"Fourth. Should you decide that this constitutional question is beyond your control and in the hands of the whole society, then submit the above propositions, properly formulated, to a vote of the whole society and let a two-thirds vote of those voting be the authoritative voice of the church on the subject."

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Phillo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Phillo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

OBITUARY.

Died, at Winnebago, Ill., April 7, 1885, in the 88th year of his age, JAMES SMITH. The deceased was a zealous reformer, a constant reader of the Cynosure for many years, a liberal contributor to its work, and generously remembered the cause in his will. He departed in peace, and "rests from his labors and his works do follow him." J. P. S.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—There are 2,525 working lodges of the Knights of Honor in the United States, with a membership of 131,108. The deaths during the past year numbered 1,409, and the assessments for death benefits amounted to $2,709,561.

—The fifty-third convention of the Alpha Delta Phi college secret fraternity assembled Thursday, at Ann Arbor, Mich., Judge T. M. Cooley, of the Michigan Supreme Court, delivering the address of welcome. Touching the relations of public and private morality, Bishop Harris, Rev. David Swing, and Mr. Andrew Shuman, of Chicago, made addresses. In the evening a banquet was enjoyed and the Chapter House was opened.

—The Knights of Labor of Connecticut, in secret session, nominated four men, either of whom will suit them as commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. They will present the names to Gov. Harrison, and ask him to accept this piece of lodge work and give it his official seal!

—The Catholic Knights of America, a Catholic insurance secret society founded by Archbishop Feehan, of Chicago, held its fifth National Supreme Convention last week, in New York.

—D. C. Cregier, Commissioner of Public Works in this city, assisted by "Rev. Dr." H. W. Thomas, installed the officers of Thos. J. Turner Masonic lodge lately.

—The Detroit Evening News said lately: "At an informal meeting of the nobles of the Mystic Shrine, held at the Temple, W. B. Mellish was fraternally congratulated by many friends on his nomination for the 33d degree. A handsome floral offering gave the token of sincerity from the members, and a lively popping of champagne corks followed.

—The same paper says that several prominent politicians are members of the 33d degree; among them are John C. Smith,, Odd-fellow Grand Secretary, late treasurer of Illinois, and now Lieutenant governor; Gen. B. F. Butler and Gen. John A. Logan.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Mr. Gladstone announced in the House of Commons Monday evening, May 11, that an arrangement had been effected between Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary; the Earl of Kimberly, Secretary for India; Baron de Staal, Russian Minister to England; and M. Lessar, special Russian agent in London, in regard to the Afghan frontier. The arrangement was satisfactory to Her Majesty's Government and to the Earl of Dufferin, viceroy of India. It is understood that Russia is to retain the Lessar line in Afghanistan. This is the line claimed by the Russian representative, M. Lessar, and is fifty miles farther south than the line claimed by England. The Russians will not abandon Penjdeh, nor promise that they will not take Herat at their pleasure. The Ameer agrees that England may have a resident representative at Herat, and England claims that all foreign negotiations with the Ameer shall be through the Indian Government. Under the lead of Lord Hamilton the tories bitterly attacked the government; and they attempted to pass a vote that they would grant no supplies till the ministry informed the House of the purpose for which the money is to be applied. This motion was defeated, 290 to 260.

In abandoning the Egyptian campaign England will establish an administration in the province of Dongola and complete the Nile railway as a commercial enterprise. General Wolseley attaches great importance to sending armed boats to Egypt to be used in patroling the Nile. There is no intention of evacuating Suakim until some arrangement can be made for holding it against the hostile Arabs, either by England or some other civilized power.

It is believed that the new Irish crimes act will abolish the right of night search of domicils, and the special laws against newspapers and public meetings. These concessions, together with the principal provisions of the old act, namely, those granting the power of summoning special juries to try crimes within the scope of the act of liberty; the power of changing venue, and the power of inquiring into crimes without a personal accusation, form the basis of a compromise on this question.

Concerning the business of the session Mr. Gladstone said the government intended to deal with the Scotch crofters bill, the Scottish secretary bill, and the Irish crimes act. He said he regretted that during the present session it would be impossible to deal with the local government of Ireland bill, and also the bill relating to the purchase of land in Ireland.

A Hong Kong dispatch states that China is ready to become the ally of England in order to obtain revenge for Russian encroachments on the Manchoorian frontier; that she is prepared to hurl her northern army against the Amooy provinces of Asiatic Russia, and that Japan is favorable to such a movement.

The 7-year-old son of one Lopez, a wealthy resident of Taratan, Mexico, was recently kidnaped, the abductors two days later killing the child and placing the body in the courtyard of the Lopez mansion. A 12-year old sister of the murdered boy fell dead upon seeing the corpse, and the father became a raving maniac.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for "THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST," and a new Portrait of GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

WEBSTER.

In Sheep, Russia and Turkey Bindings.

Get the Standard.

GET Webster—it has 118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings, and a New Biographical Dictionary.

THE Standard in Gov't Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sale 20 to 1 of any other series.

BEST aid to make a Family intelligent. Best help for SCHOLARS, TEACHERS and SCHOOLS.

☞ The vocabulary contains 3000 more words than are found in any other American Dictionary.

The Unabridged is now supplied, at a small additional cost, with DENISON'S

PATENT REFERENCE INDEX.

"The greatest improvement in book-making that has been made in a hundred years."

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.--Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞ Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

IN THE COILS; — OR — The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story "—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction "—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.' "—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound. 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

The Master's Carpet BY F. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 631 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 232 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME HINTS.

A NEGLECTED DISINFECTANT.

When the household of our grandmothers was threatened with infection the common practice was to sprinkle brimstone on a hot shovel or on hot coals on a shovel, and carry the burning result through the house. But now this simple method of disinfecting has gone out of fashion, without any good and sufficient reason. The principal reason is neither good nor sufficient, viz: that nobody can patent it and sell it in twenty-five and fifty cent bottles. On the 18th of September last, M. d'Abadie read a paper at the French Academy on "Marsh Fevers," and stated that in the dangerous regions of African river mouths immunity from such fevers is often secured by sulphur fumigation on the naked body; also that the Sicilian workers in the low ground sulphur mines suffer much less than the surrounding population from intermittent fevers. M. Fouque has shown that Zephyria (on the volcanic island of Milo or Melos. the most westerly of the Cyclades) which had a population of 40,000 when it was the center of the sulphur mining operations, became nearly depopulated by marsh fever when the sulphur mining was moved farther east, and the emanations prevented by a mountain from reaching the town. Other similar cases were statcd.

WHY BOTTLES SHOULD BE LABELED.—The findings of coroners' juries are luckily of more value, as a general rule, than their recommendations. Last Saturday one of them "sat upon" the body of a child who had met with its death from drinking carbolic acid. It seems that the unfortunate infant, whose age was something over two years, was in the habit of finishing off the dregs in the beerbottles, opened for its mother's customers. This in itself, one would have though a sufficient cause of death; but the littte child appears to have one day got hold of a bottle containing, not ginger beer, but carbolic acid. The jury naturally brought in a verdict of accidental death, but added a rider to the effect that the bottles ought to have been properly labeled. Our school boards have done a good deal, but I fear it will be sometime before they get as far as teaching two-year-olds to read.—London Truth.

The great bladderwort, known to botanists as Utricularia Vulgaris, was introduced into carp ponds in this country, including the U. S. Fish Commission ponds in Washington, as it was supposed to be excellent food for carp. But it is now being removed as fast as possible, as it has been discovered to be a fish eating instead of a fish-feeding plant. It floats in the water, its roots being covered with leaves each bearing one or more transparent hollow bladders, with openings at one end which serve as traps to catch young fishes.

A tomato canner of fifteen years experience, has discovered the secret of poisoning cases reported from eating canned tomatoes. He says when the can is opened, and only a portion of the contents removed, the air acts in some way upon the tin and develops the poison. The can should be emptied all at once, and such portion of the contents as is not used should be put into an earthen dish.

Buttermilk is considered one of the best of summer drinks. Those who have a craving for something sour in warm weather will find the lactic acid which buttermilk contains, very grateful to the stomach, and the staying properties of the drink will enable a person to undergo more fatigue than anything else that may be drunk.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 30 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endownient of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'binder, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for easing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the now work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00.

W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscnces.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

FARM GARDENING.

The farmer who continues to raise the same crops that he grew before towns and manufacturing villages sprang up all around him, makes a great mistake. In the older States at least there are but few farms not within an hour's or two hours' ride of a market. It is worth while for farmers in such localities to consider if they can afford to raise field corn, when sweet corn will pay them much better. It is true that sweet corn needs high manuring, but when the ears are off, there will be a heavy crop of the very best fodder. The cars will bring in ready money, just how much will depend upon the market, but safe to say, more than any crop of ripe corn would be worth. It is a mistake to grow late potatoes, to be dug when every one else has potatoes, and prices are low, while early potatoes will bring several times the price of late ones. It is so with all other crops. There are but few garden vegetables that may not be grown as farm crops and it is a mistake to raise produce that will bear transportation from a distance instead of that suited to a near market, and must be disposed of at once. A farmer, on the other hand, would make a mistake, were he to devote his land to a new set of crops all at once. He should determine to grow those things that pay the best, and to gradually work into a more profitable kind of farming. Those who propose to do this will find sweet corn and potatoes excellent crops to begin with. Others will pay better, but these are best to prepare the land for other and more profitable crops. It would have been better had the land been prepared for these last fall, but as this was not done make it ready at once.—American Agriculturist.

THE FARMER'S GARDEN.

Strange as it may seem, farmers deny themselves many luxuries that might be procured if they were to give more attention to the garden. While it may be be said that every farm has a garden yet there are but few farmers who endeavor to grow enough vegetables for their own use, and even then the variety is limited to a few only. No class seems to be more content with the annual routine of service than farmers. Though they may take extra pains for the planting of the garden, they are soon called away by the farm crops, and the weeds and grass take possession and crowd out the vegetables as fast as they appear. Occasionally an attempt will be made to give the garden a hoeing, but it is usually too late, and the labor of so doing is too great to be profitable.

There is no reason why farmers should deny themselves the many good things that come from the garden. They should enjoy all the early vegetables and lay by the late crops for winter. The strawberry, raspberry, gooseberry, grape and blackberry can find locations therein for the farmer's benefit, and the Bartlett pear, Gage plum and Crawford peach should favor him with a better selection of fruit that those that come from chance seedlings.

The value of the products of the garden to the family is much more than the cost of production, to say nothing of the enjoyment to be derived from their use. People who live in cities are compelled to purchase vegetables that are stale and unsuitable for food, and they envy the farmer the advantages he possesses in being able to grow what he pleases. It is a hard lot to live on a farm and subsist on a limited variety only when better could be had, and the farmers' sons realize this fact when they leave the farm and find the indabitants of cities enjoying better food than that grown on the farm; and yet the farmer could live like a prince if he saw fit to provide himself with the things that are within his reach..

We are drawing no vague pictures. Some of the richest agricultural districts in the country are given up so exclusively to cereals and stock that the farmers actually buy vegetables in the cities, as is done in the famous Chester Valley, and other places. There is no necessity for this, for every farmer should endeavor to grow his own.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Decided Benefit.

DR JOHN P. WHEELER, Hudson New York, says: "I have given it with decided benefit in a case of innutrition of the brain, from abuse of alcohol."

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presideuts, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill. Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, givee the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, gripe, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Myeteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Elien Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated, A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1 25.

Sermon on Masonry, By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The count of money in the National Treasury vaults is completed. Not a cent was missing. Even the two-cent piece that could not be found in the cashier's office the other day was found on the floor under a desk.

Judge Gresham has been called to Washington to defend the suit entered against him by the lottery company at New Orleans while he was Postmaster-General.

COUNTRY.

In Brazoria county, Texas, Thursday evening an armed band surrounded forty convicts and their guards and released the prisoners after a fight.

A fire at Cleveland, Friday burned to death an aged woman and a child, while seven other persons were injured by jumping from the windows, one of them fatally. Financial loss $42,000.

An epidemic among horses in the vicinity of Dubuque, Ia., resembling diphtheria, is growing to alarming proportions. It has extended to Grant county and there have been already several deaths.

Near Owatonna, Minn., Thursday night the house of a Norwegian farmer named Henry Lewiston was destroyed by fire and five of his children perished in the flames, while he was severely burned in attempting to save them.

It is reported that twenty-five per cent. of the cattle and sheep in the upper counties of Virginia have died from a mysterious disease.

General Grant, after an average night's rest, took a ride in a street car Friday, and later had a short walk. He did no work on his book during the day.

Spencer Chamberlain was killed and his wife and little son fatally injured by the running away of their team, Friday, at Chagrin Falls, near Cleveland, O.

The astonishing exploit of making 280 miles in twenty-four hours was accomplished by Snowden in the Madison Garden roller-skating contest. He averaged eleven miles an hour, night and day.

Over a card game one Mather and Dave Barnes quarreled at Dodge City, Kan., Saturday night, the result being a general row, in which Barnes was shot dead, and three other men wounded.

In a dispute over cards at Papal's Mills, Ga., Sunday, five negroes were killed. Their murderers are at large and a posse is in purruit.

A bill equalizing the bounties of soldiers, sailors and marines who served in the war of the rebellion was ordered to a third reading in the Michigan House, on Monday. If passed, which at present appears doubtful, it will necessitate an appropriation of about $2,000,000.

The strikers at Eau Claire, Wis., were dispersed Wednesday by armed police and eight of the leaders were imprisoned. The mills are all running and another outbreak is not deemed probable.

The estate of the late Wendell Phillips is found to be worth but 8,362, the appraisers returning a number of securities as of no value.

Most of the business part of the town of Darlington, Ind., was destroyed by fire May 14, the flames having been started by a burglar after he had robbed a jewelry and drug store.

Mrs. Pfaatz, a laborer's wife living near Letitz, Pa., took her five children to a pond, Tuesday, and after kissing them threw them into the water. The screams of the eldest children brought help and three of them were rescued, but the other two and the mother were drowned.

The Supreme Court of Indiana has decided that the law prohibiting the sale of beer or liquor from 11 o'clock at night to 5 in the morning is constitutional and binding.

The town of Somerset, Pa., was shaken from center to circumference by a frightful explosion of nitro-glycerine and dynamite at the Somerset Chemical works, located one mile east of the town. One of the proprietors, W. A. Beach, of New York, was blown to atoms. The nitro-glycerine building, with eight others, was demolished.

A cyclone passed through Brooks county, Kansas, Friday injuring nearly 50 persons, a number being killed, among the latter a Rev. Mr. Grimes with his wife and child. On the same day a waterspout descended upon a ravine near Kearney, Neb., washing a family of emigrants by the name of Scott from their wagon and drowning two of their children.

One of the severest rain storms that ever visited southern Kansas occurred last Friday, flooding Elk and Verdegrass rivers and drowning a great number of cattle. Six persons were drowned on Card Creek, seven miles west of Inde pendence

According to the 117th annual report of the New York Chamber of Commerce the imports of the entire country during 1884 decreased $57,812,806, while the falling off in exports reached $45,809,273. During the same period the coin and bullion import was increased by $7,253,116, and the exports were augmented to the amount of $38,668,554. The report says the present year has opened favorably, that the balance of trade is in our favor, and the excess of exports over imports of merchandise for the first quarter is $48,632,664.

FOREIGN.

The steamer Helvetia of the White Cross Line, enroute from Antwerp to Montreal, was sunk in deep water by ice in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She had a cargo of freight valued at $400,000.

A riot occurred Wednesday afternoon between a mob and the police for the possession of the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square, London. About ten thousand men had assembled in the square to make a demonstration against the government's budget proposals to increase the duty on spirits and beer. The crowd was very unruly. The police intervened to secure silence for the orators, and then a great struggle ensued between the mob and the police for the possession of the monument. The row lasted nearly an hour, and the promoters of the meeting and the police were finally forced to retire, leaving the crowd singing in triumph "Rule Britannia." At 9 o'clock the rioters were still in full possession of Trafalgar Square and Northumberland avenue was also occupied by a mob of many thousands. The police by this time had been largely re-enforced, had charged a number of times upon the mob, and had made several arrests.

Cunningham and Burton are on trial in London for placing dynamite in the Tower of London. The evidence is decidedly against them.

A great battle is expected to be fought soon at Khartoum between El Mahdi and the rival false prophet. The latter has collected an immense force of followers, and they are now advancing to attack the Mahdi.

Negotiations are proceeding with Turkey for the latter's occupation of Suakim and the Soudan, on the following basis: The Porte engages to assist in suppressing the slave trade and in developing external commercial relations. Besides the formal proposals made through Fehmi Pasha, and if the Porte accepts, an English company will obtain the option of securing a concession to construct a railway to Berber, and will receive other trading rights.

The Czar has sent Gen. Komaroff a "sword of honor." The present was accompanied by an autograph letter from the Czar warmly praising Gen. Komaroff's military measures and his prudence and firmness in dealing with the Afgans. A similar honor was conferred upon Gen. Zakrjewski.

[Continued on 13th Page.]

Many hundreds have taken the C[illegible] on the plan of eight copies for [illegible] five cents Each week adds to the number and some become yearly subscribers. Give your neighbors a chance to become acquainted with your paper. Every week brings orders for Webster's Practical Dictionary in connection with the Cynosure. Every one seems pleased with the book, and the opportunity is still open. The Cynosure one year and the Dictionary for two dollar.

One of those fine stipple-style line portraits of Gen. Grant can be seen in the Cynosure office. Some have already taken advantgae of the offer of Cynosure for eight months free. See the offer in this number.

LETTERS

Containing cash for Cynosure received during the week, ending Friday, May 15:

John W. Rose, Hannah C. Smith, Wm. Flemming, Wm. Reed, Mrs. Louisa H. Hull, J. S. Harnden, Geo. M. Champ, S. Heaton, H. H. Robinson, Mrs. E. Talcott, E. Tuttle, D. Kirkpatrick, B. F. Smith, W. L. Bitley, Geo. Barnes, Mrs. M. J. Richards, Rev. J. D. Hillman, J. N. Norris, Mrs. R. E. Sutphen, J. M. Frink, Dan'l Hyde, Rev. W. W. McMillan, Jane A. Post, W. H. Robbins, T. Shaff, Abraham Cox, T. W. Smiley, W. M. Breaden, S. H. Moore, Wm. Sharick.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@88¾
No. 3	88¾	@89
Winter No 2		@98
Corn—No. 2	46¾	48
Oats—No. 2	35⅜	40½
Rye—No. 2		72
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 10
Butter, medium to best	10	@20
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		12
Potatoes per bus	35	45
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 51
Flax	1 30	1 38
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	4 90	@5 75
Common to good	2 40	@4 90
Hogs	3 50	@4 45
Sheep	2 50	@4 40

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	87	@1 03
Spring		98
Corn	53	@55
Oats	40	@48
Mess Pork		12 00
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 75	@5 40
Hogs	3 80	@4 00
Sheep	1 50	@3 50

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

[illegible]VERTISING DEPARTMENT.

[illegible]ur advertising columns are carefully edited [illegible] avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	10 per cent
" " "	50	15 " "
" " "	100	20 " "
" " "	250	25 " "
" " "	500	30 " "
" " "	1000	35 " "
" " "	1500	40 " "
" " "	2500	50 " "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV CHINIQUY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED!

Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER.
Mention the Christian Cynosure. Racine, Wis.

LADY AGENTS can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters. Sample outfit free. Cincinnati Suspender Co., 179 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE PERFECTION FASTENER and COLLAR BUTTON will hold any necktie or scarf in place perfectly. Send 15 two cent stamps for gold plated sample. A. L. GILBERT, Box 133. Milwaukee, Wis.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill, Chicago.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping, as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH.
HAY-FEVER.
CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 36. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1885. WHOLE No. 787.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
The United Brethren Conference..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Letter From Greece..... 1
Week-day Sermon..... 2
The Masonic Calendar.... 2
Ante-natal Infanticide... 2
SELECTED:
The Law of God and the Secret Oath..... 3
THE SERMON.
The Great Need of the Church 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XX.—Concluded. 4
REFORM NEWS:
From the Illinois Agent; From the Kansas Agent 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Masonic Pauperism; Another Shoulder Needed; Judge Righteous Judgment..... 6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Annual Meeting..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES.
Earnest Work Among Ohio Lutherans..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
England and Russia..... 13
HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

The sacrifices for the dead which characterized the heathenism of Greece and Rome are following very naturally in the wake of Decoration day performances. In Arkansas the colored people in long procession of societies and orders marched from the the churches on the 14th of May to strew flowers and hold religious services in the cemeteries. Of course these people were decorating no soldiers' graves, but of dead friends generally; and so far as it was a religious service it was a return to paganism. Such is the tendency of all the Grand Army celebrations this week.

Hon. Frederick Douglass has stumbled across a colored line in the First Presbyterian church at Washington. President Cleveland hears Dr. Byron Sunderland preach there and the crowd follows, until hardly standing room is left. Lately the pew in front of Mr. Cleveland's became vacant, and Mr. Douglas and his wife occupied it one Sabbath. Directly it is reported some of the members protested with the church authorities that such a thing must not be permanent or they would leave. Thus the folly of prejudice betrays itself even in the house of Christian worship, where a man who has shown himself the peer of the best Americans is an unfit companion because he is not as white as the rest.

Along with the lottery prohibition Post Master General Vilas has begun a good work against the cheap novel business. One or two New York firms, which issue cheap novels as a regular daily or weekly publication, and take advantage of the rate allowed to newspapers, to circulate their trash through the country have thus been able to send tons of freight through the mails at a rate of two cents a pound. The decision that such matter is not mailable will amount, it is believed, to a proscription of this class of cheap novel business. The decision is not probably directed at the immoral character of the publications, but as such matter only is issued in this way it indirectly accomplishes a great good.

Judge Gresham, who has just been in Washington to defend himself in suits brought by lottery companies against him as Post Master General, has the satisfaction of knowing that his firmness in fighting the lotteries reduced that business one half. Mr. Vilas, his successor, intends to follow up this good work. He is planning a number of prosecutions to come at the same time before the United States Courts in a number of States. Already the post master at Louisville, Kentucky, has been ordered not to deliver money orders or registered letters addressed to the Traders company of that city, since its conviction of using the mails to advertise a lottery scheme. The political ring in New Orleans, which depends on the Louisiana lottery swindle, with ex-confederates Beauregard and Early, as endorsers, will make a strong fight, but President Cleveland seems inclined to stand by the law, let the consequences be what they may.

Henry Ward Beecher began last Sabbath a series of sermons upon evolution, and from lately reported remarks he seems to be willing to preach the gospel of Darwin rather than of Jesus Christ. Nothing can show more fearfully the sad and awful fall of this once great preacher than his flippant rejection of the Word of God, as reported from a late prayer meeting talk: "I reject for the most part," said he, "the book of Psalms. Now I know that's awful heresy. I suppose that book is read more than anything else in the Bible, unless it be the Gospels. But it doesn't suit my temper. It doesn't suit my habits of mind. When David was in trouble he cried out; I don't. David made piteous appeals to God; I don't appeal to God in that way. All but three or four of the Psalms repel me. I delight in the Gospels. I delight in Paul even more than in St. John. Revelation is useless to me. I'd as soon think of trying to light a candle at the aurora borealis as to get inspiration from Revelation. For economic common sense I read Proverbs a good deal. A man who carries Proverbs around in his pockets has got more brains there than in his head."

A proposition which will strike most members of Congregational churches as most sensible was advanced in the meeting of the Congregational Club of Chicago, at its meeting last week. City evangelization was the topic of the evening, and a prime question was the need of city missionaries. One of the pastors urged the importance of greatly increasing this force; that a hundred men were none too many to send out through the teeming streets of Chicago; and there was a source from whence a supply could be drawn largely unused, namely, the theological seminaries, of which there are three or four in the city and as many in the suburbs. No one who heard Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grattan Guinness describe last fall their Missionary Training School in London, could have failed to think of the wasted forces in these theological seminaries. In their school city mission work was required of all and failure dismissed the student. Why should not such trial of young men, who will soon go out to point men the way to heaven and be the spiritual leaders of the Christian church, be made a test of their fitness for the holy duties of the ministry? All of them are in a sense beneficiaries also. Millions have been invested for them. It would be a small return if a systematic city mission work were carried on by these young men.

The reaction against the policy of aggressive foreign wars in France has come none too soon. The nation had begun to fall under the keen and just suspicion and unfriendly criticism of Christendom. The Republic was following too fast in the steps of of the Republic of 1793 when nearly all Europe rose against its savage assaults. The cost of the war with Germany is not forgotten in France, and it deserves to be remembered as a warning against a repitition of the folly. The pecuniary results of that war have been thus summed up: War indemnity, 5,000,000,000, francs; interest on the same, for two years, 300,000,000 francs; the keep of the German troops, 273,637,000 francs; requisition, 227,581,000 francs; value of objects taken without requisitions, 254,172,000 francs; war contributions levied in Paris, 200,000,000 francs; and so on till the account forms a total of 6,673,811,000 francs (£266,952,440). But this enormous sum is exclusive of pensions to the army, the damage done to material, and the expenses of reorganization, which swell the total to 13,000,000,000 francs (£529,000,000). The average of a day's work in France is one franc and a quarter; and thus it would take one million of men thirty years to work it out.

LETTER FROM GREECE.

ANDROS, Greece, via Syra, April 25, 1885.

DEAR BRO.:—The Lord has been with us and our labors have been blessed; for which mercy we have great reason to be thankful and to take the more courage and press forward and do our duty and let our light shine and the Lord will continue to bless our efforts.

My nephew here was living in Athens for four or more years, when last summer he was taken sick with fever and ague. He could not get well in Athens and came here to Andros for a change of climate. To put him under strict medical treatment, I took him to my house. He heard us every day in our family worship and he was surprised to see that we are not what he had heard people say we are. For some say we are infidels, and some call us "Far Masons," which names are enough to keep the people away from us instead of drawing them toward us. For Far Mason which means Freemason, means a terrible thing to these people. That name they have given me since I was first converted before I went to America. But when this man came into our family and heard the reading of the Bible and our daily prayers, and saw the manner in which we raise our children, and another thing which he had never heard was, that we prayed for our enemies, he decided that the people are very ignorant of our views and of our religion. We have here a man who has persecuted us for more than a year, and our nephew used to hear us pray for him every day that God would bless him and make him a good man and he confessed that he did not see how it was possible for a man to pray good for his enemies. We told him that it is a very hard thing for a nominal Christian pray for his enemies; but not for a Christian who is thoroughly converted to Christ and who understands the Bible. And that when every one of these people come into the knowledge of the truth, they will do the same thing. Another thing which horrified him was to see a little pamphlet which reveals some very curious facts.

The author of the pamphlet says that the four Gospels contain 3,757 verses of which only 994 verses are read; 2,763 verses the people never hear. The book of the Acts of the Apostles and the epistles contain 3,133 verses; 673 verses only are read during the whole year. This is what is omitted of the New Testament. Of the Old Testament, only a few Psalms are read while the rest is omitted entirely. And even what is read in church is read in the ancient tongue which only a very few can understand. This is in the Greek church.

When my nephew saw these facts he thought that he was in great darkness and a new light shone upon him, and as he read the New Testament in the modern language which nearly all can understand, he was very glad that he met us and was ready to embrace the new truth which he read. And his wife also, is of the same mind after she heard all these things. It is about a month since he left us and went to his own country to give the truth also to his friends and countrymen. We gave him a great many tracts, Bibles and New Testaments to sell to his countrymen.

It is a fact, especially with the Greeks, that when a man is converted he wants to go and tell the Gospel to his countrymen. His desire is to go and sell Bibles in the future and thus have an opportunity to talk and press the truth upon others. We ask all our friends to pray for them that God may bless them and keep them in the path of the truth.

In regard to my mother, she had very hard feelings against my views and cursed the American people for changing my good religion to a bad one. Now for more than a year she is an entirely different woman. She clings so much to our family worship that she would not for anything be absent. It has been said that a thousand young trees can be replanted easier and with better success than a single old tree, and the same thing is generally true in the conversion of people; but it is not always the case, for when the Holy Spirit goes into their hearts and they understand the truth they will be converted whether they are young or old.

When we came down here to the sea-shore about five months ago, we spoke to some children to come here on the Sabbath and sing and learn verses from the Bible and I would explain to them the portion of Gospel which is read in the Greek church on the Sabbath. The first Sabbath there came more than forty. The parents were so much pleased with the verses their children learned, especially, the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother, etc., that we hope that gradually they will draw nearer and nearer to us. But you must know that the prejudice of the Greek church against us is very stroug and has obstructed all our efforts; for we are the only ones in this island who maintain Protestant Christianity.

Yesterday, Sunday, was the election day and there was a great crowd. The government party was defeated and another party came in. The present government, which has been the same for the last four years, levied taxes on many things, and the people not being used to being taxed, tried to change the Congressmen so as to do away with taxation. The Secretary of the State who is called Mr. Trekoopes was educated in England and he goes according to the English laws, and because he put such a heavy tax on tobacco, spirits, silks and broadcloths, it seemed to the people too hard and whether the new Congressmen will succeed in putting him out and put one of their own party in his place, we cannot tell. He is the best man to govern Greece at present; but he has done nothing as yet, for religion and the Sabbath. What he will do in the future, we cannot tell.

Bulgaria is preparing to take some states which are yet in the Turkish empire; but Greece wanted them long ago, and this may involve Greece in war with Bulgaria. The cholera last year and the Soudan war brought great misery on Greece, and now if Greece goes to war with Bulgaria, it will be a great calamity for her: one evil upon another.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

A friend once said to me, "For years God hedged in my way, and I fretted and rebelled and murmured, and never thought I was trying the wrong door at the wrong time. I couldn't wait patiently for God to open it; but when I was ready for the opportunity and the opportunity was ready for me, how gently, noiselessly, 'without observation,' the door opened." Now there is a great deal in that, discouraged laborers. The work may be ready for us and we not ready for the work, or vice versa.

Moses, when he went to visit his oppressed brethren, felt his great destiny stirring within him, and wanted to enter on it at once, but God was not ready to have him. "He supposed that his brethren would understand how that God by his hand would deliver them; but they understood not." And he, a prince and a patriot, with all the learning and culture of the age; full of lofty courage and generous ardor and burning enthusiasm, had to pass forty years of exile in the wilderness of Horeb. The work was not ready for him. The people had not yet felt the pain and degradation of their bondage enough to cry mightily unto God. Nor was he ready for the work. He was much too human and earthy to bear meekly with their childish murmurings and rebellion, and so God mercifully closed the door. He was not fitted yet to be the prototype of the Divine Leader and Deliverer.

We are never restrained from work we wish to do without some good reason behind it. God may see that before we can be tools in his spiritual workshop we must go through a process of drilling and sharpening to make us fit for his service. He cares for the work, but he cares more for the worker.

Mrs. F. alluded the other day to the great encouragement which lies in this very fact that God so often restrains us from entering some desired path, or even condemns us to seeming uselessness. We thank him for the open doors; do we think to thank him for the closed ones, which, if they had opened, might have led us over precipices? Is not restraint after all the best proof of love? It implies a Guide, a Teacher, a Father; it implies that in spite of our willfulness, our waywardness, or even our positive sins, we are wearing his yoke. And I pass the thought aloug to members of the Shut In Band, who see the avenues into life's broad fields of active duty opening for others—closed for them. When we think of the spiritual richness of many of these suffering lives; how their sick chambers are filled with the incense of answered prayers, we see that God's restraints sometimes give the largest liberty. He himself opens doors for these saintly sufferers into the unseen world, doors of prayer and communion and inward vision—and like the gates of the new Jerusalem "they stand open night and day." If we could look on every disappointment, every frustration of a cherished plan as a door that God's own hand closes against us, only to open it some time—if not that same door, another one, leading into a larger place, a wider blessing, a more glorious service than we ever dreamed of, it would stop much of our unconscious fretting. For we fret more than we think we do. And just here I want to quote a word from Madame Guyon ou a point of doctrine that is talked about more than it is understood: "Sanctification is the will wholly given to God." Would there be so many closed doors in our way if our will was one with his?

THE MASONIC CALLENDER.

The enormous and false pretensions of Masonry, as well as its studied contempt in its usages of everything distinctly Christian, is seen in its methods of dating.

York Rite Masons date from the year light. A. L., Anno Lucis, and they assume that Masonry is synonomous with light. The year A. D. 1885, is in Masonic language A. L. 5885, four thousand years being added to the Christian Era.

Scottish Rite Masons date from the Creation. A. M., Anno Mundi, the year of the world, is affixed to their documents. They sometimes use the initials A. H., Anno Hebraico, or the Hebrew year. Masons of the Rite of Misraim use the same chronology except that they add four years. Thus 1885 would be A. L. 5889.

Royal Arch Masons commence their era with the second building of the temple 530 years before Christ. They use A. Inv., Anno Inventionis, or the year of the discovery. For 1885 it will be A. Inv. 2415.

Knights Templar claim that their order was founded A. D. 1118, and hence they date from that period. A Knight Templar document for this year should be A. O., (Anno Ordinis, the year of the order) 767, which is found by taking 1118 from the Christian era.

Thus it will be seen that in no instance do they date from the Christian era, and while this may have been intended as a declaration of independence of all sects (including Christianity as one of them), yet it is practically a most positive expression of contempt for Christ, the Saviour of men, and the King of nations.

H. H. H.

ANTE-NATAL INFANTICIDE.

BY REV. L. KELLEY.

A very strong current of opposition has prevailed for many years in not a few localities and families against raising a numerous offspring. American households are fearfully implicated in this unnatural crusade. It is a matter of historic interest that formerly it was honorable to have a house full of boys and girls. But now fashion dictates the number from two to three. The poorer families must supply the ranks depleted by death. The Bible is against this practice. It really seems that modern civilization has become so high-toned that Bible truth is distasteful. Let God's Word talk to these cultured ears. Psa. 127: 3–5: "Lo children are a heritage of the LORD, and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them. They shall not be ashamed, but they shall speak with the enemies in the gate." Psa. 128: 3: "Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thy house; thy children like olive plants round about thy table."

It is undeniably true that coersive means are employed to destroy unborn children. This must be regarded as murder. If the unborn innocents should face their murderesses at the dreadful day of judgment, the number would be as the sand of the sea shore, innumerable. Who can tell the noble sons who should be rulers in this Republic, who never saw the light of day? How many physicians have defiled hands? Joseph, the son of Jacob, the eighth son, became ruler and deliverer of his people. Benjamin, the ninth son, gave us St. Paul the mightiest preacher. Americans have been mighty upon earth. Do you notice that ou the roll of names that rule this uatiou the Puritanic are growing less, and those of forcign accent are increasing? The cause may be the cuttiug off from the family men of renown who ought to have survived the decision of a fashion-worshiping mother. For God's sake let nature be unmolested!

Let us look at some of the results.

1. There are many school districts, especially among our rural population, that are almost destitute of children. I have known teachers to consume a summer term teaching six or seven scholars. The attendance on the public schools in the State of New York decreased three thousand the last year. A minister with whom I am acquainted, denounced child-murder iu the presence of a house full, and the women became so indignant that on the following night but three attended. After some years the same miuister returned to that neighborhood, and a doctor who had been preseut that night congratulated him, saying that the offeuding sermon had done more good than any other that was ever preached there. "I was school trustee then," he said, "and I am now. Then we had forty scholars on the roll, now we have eighty." The secret of such depopulation of children is traceable to an intentional interference with nature's laws.

2. Many well-to-do farmers, as well as others who have no children, are compelled to spend old age without the comfort which the presence and help of offspring afford. They must often depend on hired help that do not agree with their tastes in many particulars. How many households which purposely restrict the number of children are childless because of death, when they need the loving care of children most! That course which once seemed to gratify pride has brought its curse. If women refuse children because they think it is too much trouble, and prevents their vain gratification in social circles, they will find out, when too late, that the loss is irretrievable, and that wealth or pleasure have been gained not only with the price of blood, but of physical ruin, if not eternal damnation.

3. As Americans do not increase fast enough to fill the ranks that death makes, foreiguers inevitably step in and possess the land, control our civil government, change our State constitutions, abolish the free school system, and convert the Christian Sabbath into a day of recreation. Unless a change takes place for the better, and that soon, these things will come to pass. Majorities rule, and we now see the hand-writing on the wall. Rome is not asleep. The coufessional is her power. The priests are single meu, and urge increase. They know votes control the elections, more than intelligence. It will be a day of deep mortification to see a class iu power that will rob by taxation, the rich to fill their coffers. But should such a change occur, let it be known that this fair heritage was sold by women who refuse to be mothers. We hear much of women deprived of their privileges under the government, but the best and dearest rights she possesses she flings to the winds. She wants office and honorable position, but she could do no better work, nor any of more permanent value to this Republic, than to furnish men, as of former days, who would adoru it with worth, ability, and incorruptible statesmanship. Cornelia, the mother of the Gracchi, had twelve children by her husband Caius Gracchus, a renowned Roman. A Roman lady, like those who move in American society, more thoughtful of her toilet than pure womanhood, called on Cornelia, and expreessed her wish to see some of her jewelry. The Roman matron led into her presence the Gracchi, and said, "These are my jewels." Let cultured Christian women learn a lessou from a pagan mother.

It may not be out of place to state that such a course is suicidal to health and beauty. No personal ornamentation can be a substitute for loss of health. It is a fact generally observed that but few beautiful women are seen in public. If the universal testimony of physicians is considered good authority, the child-bearing mother has the advantage as far as preserving health, form and beauty is concerned; while the barren and the purposely childless, or nearly so, is the sufferer.

It is admitted that great responsibilities associate themselves in educating, training, and supporting a numerous family, but blessings from God equally great are promised iu their support. It is far preferable to raise such a family than impair health, indulge pride aud liceutiousness, and incur the terrible retribution of injured innoceuce. I view this sin as the most damning in female society.

I have one more thing to say, that is, many of these nostrums sold by druggists, and labelled to relieve female suffering, and minister to health, contaiu the cup of death. Physicians are uot ignorant of this evil, but refrain from protesting against it as a body. I fear many of them are blood-guilty, and under preteuse of treating for some disorder, actually commit abortion. Unsuspecting husbands pay large doctor bills, made through such means. Of course when progeny is impossible caused by coersive means, the subject gradually declines in health and becomes practically an invalid for life, and finally sinks under a self-inflicted stroke and dies—dies as many of that character do in hopeless despair, under an insulted and inexorable moral law, in which is reflected the presence of a personal God. Oh what a moral revolution might be created, what female suffering avoided, what health promoted, what robust sons and daughters would walk our streets, did the pulpit and press sound the alarm like the thunders of Sinai!

THE LAW OF GOD AND THE SECRET OATH.

To come under an obligation to keep secret that which has not yet been made known, or to obey a code of unknown laws, is at utter variance with that subjection which we owe to the law of God. The law of God is our supreme standard; we are never at liberty to disregard it. We must always obey God rather than man. Acts 4: 19; 5: 29. Now if I bind myself by promise, or otherwise, to keep secret something, which has not yet been made known to me, I may be binding myself, for anything that I know to the contrary, to conceal that which the law of God requires me to reveal. If I bind myself to support the principles of a society of which I have no acquaintance, I may be binding myself to support that, which the law of God imperatively demands me to oppose. The man who binds himself to keep an unknown secret, or to obey a code of unknown laws may be binding himself, for anything that he knows at the time, to do something directly contrary to the requirement of God's holy law. He may be binding himself to do that which necessarily will involve him in sin. Now the question is submitted, has any person a right to do that? Certainly not. No one is at liberty to bind himself to do anything, until he has first settled in his own mind the two questions: Would it be right for me to do it? And if right, does it come within the compass of my ability to do it? But these questions cannot be settled until the thing required is made known. The pledge of secrecy, therefore, in refereuce to an unknown thing is in itself wrong.—Rev. Robert Armstrong in the Christian Instructor.

THE SERMON.

A MIGHTY AWAKENING THE GREAT NEED OF THE CHURCH.

[Selected from a discourse by Dr. T. D. Talmage.]

TEXT Malachi 3: 1: "Behold I will send my messenger and he shall prepare the way before me: And the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in; behold he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts."

I want to show this morning so far as God may help me that the greatest need of the church universal is a mighty awakening. The ox in the pasture field looks around and perhaps comes to the conclusion that all the world is a clover field. So we, standing in the midst of luxuriant religious advantages, might think perhaps that the earth is covered with the knowledge of God; but so far from that, if this platform were the world, so much of it as I now cover with my right foot would represent all that is conquered for Emanuel. Or if this whole tabernacle were the world, then one pew would represent so much of it as the grace of God has already conquered. Oh, there is need of a radical change! Something must be done, and I shall show this morning that the greatest need of the church is a great awakening.

I learned this need in the first place from the coldness in the majority of church members. If a religious society have a thousand members, eight hundred of them are sound asleep. If it have five hundred members four hundred are lethargic. If Christians can rally—that is, the professed Christians—for communion day and succeed in not dropping the wine cup, how many of them are satisfied? If it be a choice betweeu Christ and the world, the world has it. You know it as well as I do. If a religious meeting be on a certain night and on that same there be an extraordinary operatic entertainment, or a social gathering, or a literary club, or a political meeting, or a Freemason society, or an Odd-fellow's association, you know which they go to. God there fairly demonstrating that while such professed Christians pretend to be on his side they are really on the other side; for there is a point blank issue between Christ and the world, and the world has it. You know very well whether you are a professed Christian or not; you know very well that the dividing line between the church and the world to-day is—like the Equator or Arctic or Antarctic circle—an imaginary line, and that there are men and women sworn of God who sit discussing infinitesimal questions: "Shall we dance? shall we play cards? shall we go to the theatre? shall we attend the opera?" while there are five hundred millions of the race going down to darkness unwarned.

Oh, how much dead wood we have in all our churches. The Day of Judgment will make a fearful thinning out among professed Christians. I suppose it will be found on that day that there are hundreds of thousands of men who have their names on the church books, who really made religion a second-rate or third-rate thing; living for themselves, unmindful of God and the salvation of the race, and then tumbling over the embankment where Judas went, and Achan went, and where all those shall go who do not make religion the primordeal thing—the first to the last matter of the soul. Oh, worldly professor of religion, vascillating professor, idle professor, tremble before God to-day. Do you not know that if you die as you are, all the communion tables at which you have ever sat will lift up hands of blood, crying for your condemnation? and your neglected Bible and your prayerless pillow will cry: "Go down! go down! You pretended to have religion, but you had none. Out of the seven days of the week you gave not five hours to Christ. You broke your sacramental oath. Go down! go down!" And the fieriest and mightiest thunderbolt of God's indignation that is ever forged will smite you into darkness. Oh, I would rather be the man in the last day who has never seen a church than you who professed to be so much and to do so much and yet did nothing. You shall perish in the way when God's wrath is kindled but a little. Oh, worldly professor of religion—and there are huudreds of them here to-day. I am aiming at the mark—if you could to-day realize your true coudition before God, you would bite your lip untill the blood came: you would ring your hands until the bones cracked; you would utter a cry that would send this whole audience to their feet with terror. May God wake you up, worldly professor of religion, before you wake up in the barred and flamiug dungeons of a destroyed eternity. When you look abroad aud see lethargy among the professors of religion, almost all the world over, do you not see that there is a need that the bugles, and the cymbals, and the drums, and the trumpets of all earth and heaven call upon the church to wake up all those dormant professors of religion? "Awake, thou that sleepest! Awake, and Christ shall give thee light!"

Still further, I see a uced for a great awakeniug in the fact that those of us who preach the Gospel have so little enthusiasm and zeal compared with what we ought to have. Now you say the gun kicked. I say we who preach the Gospel have so little zeal and euthusiasm for Christ compared with what we ought to have. Oh, it is a tremendous thing to stand before an audience on Sabbath-days, realizing the fact that the majority will believe what you say about God, and the soul, and the great future. Suppose a man asked you the road to a certain place and you carelessly and falsely told him, and afterward through lack of right direction that a man was lost on the mountains, fell over the rocks and lost his life. You could not forgive yourself. You would say: "I wish I had taken more time with that man; I wish I had given him such specific dirctions that he would not have been lost; how sorry I feel about it!" But oh, to misdirect the eternal interests of a large congregation! How cold aud stolid we stand in our pulpits, actually sometimes priding ourselves on our deliberations when we have no right to be cold and ought to be almost frantic with the perils that threaten our hearers. So much so that some of us give no warning at all, and we stand Sabbath after Sabbath talking about human "development," and we pat men on the back, and we please them, and we sing them all down through the rapids to the last plunge. Or as the poet has it:

> "Smooth down the stubborn text to ears polite,
> And snugly keep damnation out of sight."

Oh, my brethren in the ministry—for I see them always in the audience—my brethren in the ministry, we cannot afford to do that way. If you prophesy good things, smooth things to your people, without regard to their character, what chance will there be for you in the day when you meet them at the bar of God? You had better stand clear of them. They will tear you to pieces. They will say: I heard you preach five huudred times, and I admired your philosophic disquisition and your graceful gestures and your nicely-molded sentences, curvilinear and stelliform, and I thought you were the prince of proprieties, but you didn't help me prepare for this day. Cursed be your rhetoric; cursed be your art. I am going down, and I'll take you with me. It is your fault; witness all the hosts of heaven and all the hosts of darkness. It is your fault sir." And the chorus will come up from all worlds: "His fault! his fault!"

Still further: I see a need for a great awakening in the fact that the Kingdom of God is making such slow progress. I simply state a fact when I say that in many places the church is surrendering and the world is conquering. Where there is one man brought into the Kingdom of God through Christian instrumentality there are ten men dragged down by dissipation. Fifty grog shops built to one church established. Literary journals in different parts of the country filled with scum and daudruff and slang, controlled by the very scullions of society, depraving everything they put their hands on. Three hundred and ten newspapers, journals and magazines in New York, and more than two hundred of them depraving to the public taste, if not positively inimical to our holy Christianity. Look abroad and see the surrender, even on the part of those that pretend to be Christian churches, to Spiritualism, Humanitarianism, and all forms of Devilism. If a man stand in his pulpit and say that unless you be born again you will be lost, do not the tight kid gloves of the Christian, diamonds bursting through, go up to their fore heads in humiliation and shame? It is not elegant. A mighty host in the Christian church, positively professing Christianity, do not believe in the Bible, out and out, in and in, from the first word of the first verse of the first chapter of the book of Genesis, dowu to the last word of the last verse of the last chapter of the book of Revelation. Oh, we have magnificent church machinery in this country; we have sixty thousand American ministers, we have costly music, we have great Sunday-schools; and yet I give the fact that while the great cause of God is marching on, there are many regiments falling back and if the army does not come to complete rout—aye, to ghastly Bull Run defeat—it will be because some individual churches hurl themselves to the frout, and ministers of Christ trampling on the favor of this world and sacrificing everythiug, shall snatch up the torn and shattered bauner of Emanuel, aud rush ahead, crying: "On! on! This is no time to run; this is the time to advance."

I see still further need of a great awakening iu the multitudinous going down of unforgiven souls. Since many of you came on the stage of action a whole generation has gone into the gates of eternity. Your opportunity to act upon them is gone. They have disappeared from the churches, from the stores, the shops, the streets, from the homes. You, O Christian man, had an opportunity of meeting them; you did meet them. You talked with them on other subjects. You had an opportunity of saying the saving word, and you did not say that saving word. just think of that! Oh, where is the fountain where, with sleeves rolled up, we may wash our hands from the blood of souls? The only question is, whether as Christian men or women, we can now interrupt the other procession that is marching down and will after awhile, if unarrested by God's grace, fall off. There are going out from our stores hundreds of thousands of clerks; going out from our factories hundreds of thousands of operators; there are going out of our colleges hundreds of thousands of students; there are going out of our fields hundreds of thousands of husbandmen to join the ranks of death. They are fighting their way down. They storm and take every impediment put in their way, and who will throw himself in the way of this stampede of dying men and women—who? crying, "Halt, halt!"

Is it not time for something desperate? Inanimate solicitation will not do. They will not stop for that. You need a momentum gathered by a whole to wrestle with the omnipotent God. Oh, these dying souls! these dying souls! What shall we say to them? What shall we do for them? Teach them before they make the last spring. Put down everything else and run for the rescue. To-morrow may be too late. Now reach over the pew and seize that soul before i flashes out of your sight forever. Their house is on fire and no ladder to the window. Their ship is going down and no life-boat. Oh, men and women of God, awake! awake! Oh, that all rewards aud punishments, all joys and sorrows, and the agonizing and rapturous voeiferations of three worlds would arouse you to-day! O God, flame upou us those overwhelming realities! Kill our stolidity. Knock from under us the couches of ease, consume our indifference, and throw us into the battle. An eternity of work—an eternity of work, to do iu ten years. Aye, perhaps in oue year, perhaps in one month, perhaps in oue day, perhaps iu one second, and this the last. But no one drops down, and so I think God is going to spare us to wake up out of our indolence and realize the truth that the greatest need of the church to-day is a great awakening.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XX.—Concluded.

Martin Treworthy's spiritual intuitious were quick. He had eome with the feeling that he could not even bear the idea of Tom's being touched by the man to whom his present eondition was in so large a degree owing, but when he realized the truth, Peter Snyder's speeeh did not seem a strange or impertinent one. Why should not this poor publiean, if he had truly repented, be allowed to bring forth fruits meet for repentanee? Why should he, as he himself put it, be grudged the ehanee to undo some of his evil work.

Martin Treworthy held out his hand, and the bright drops stood in his eyes.

"The Lord bless you, brother; and may he forgive me for an old Pharisee that I am."

"But," answered Peter Snyder, his eoarse, uncomely features half covered with a straggling, red beard, not very dissimilar to that bestowed by old Venetian painters on his apostolic namesake, irradiated with a smile both humble and sweet, "I said nothing of the kind. I said I didn't blame ye for any feelin' ye might have, and no more I don't. It's only nateral ye should feel so."

"That don't make any differenee," said Martin. "I've found that the best thing to do when the eoat fits is not to get mad about it, or to make believe it don't fit, but to pray the Lord to fill us so full of graee that our souls will grow too big for wearin' on't eomfortable. And now about this poor fellow here; I must take him home as soon as I ean."

"But I ought to tell ye"—Peter Snyder stopped for an instant as if it was a little diffieult to go on—"I've had the doetor to him. I thought it wouldn't do no hurt, and he says—but then doctors don't allus tell right—that his wandering off so, and the fatigue and exposure and everything has only brought the end nearer that wa'n't a great way off anyhow. We've done all we eould, but if there's anybody that ought to be telegraphed to it had better be done right away."

By "we" Peter Snyder meant to inelude his wife. She was a small, pale, broken-down, slatternly woman, with little edueation, but womanly enough to have known times when she was thankful for the three short graves that eovered all her maternal hopes. Her husband had not always been kind to her—quite the reverse—but she had adapted herself to her lot with a resignation as eomplete as it was hopeless; so very complete, in faet, that she did not respond readily to the most earnest and well-direeted efforts on his part to lift her up to the same moral and spiritual elevation he had himself reaehed.

Theoretieally this should not have been. She ought to have risen at onee to the height of her new opportunity, but theories and facts are not always reeoneilable. Will a flower, beaten to the ground by a week of hard rain, lift itself immediately on its stalk when the rain is over, and the sun eomes forth to ereate a new world out of twinkling grassblades and shimmering leaves, and all the myriad of dimpling, flashing, wayside pools? Then why expeet it of a miserable, degraded womanhood, made miserable and degraded by eireumstanees and assoeiations not of her ehoosing. And I boldly put it to the good sisters of the W. C. T. U., if our hearts should not oftener go out in prayer for the wives of our two hundred thousand rumsellers. It is a bitter eup many of these women drink. God only knows how bitter.

Martin Treworthy felt his brain reel. Meehanieally he went to Tom's side and sat down. If he was only sure where Nelson was and could dispateh a telegram! But he did not think of a more subtle telegraphy, an eleetrie wire hidden deep in the mysteries of being, over whieh messages are sometimes strangely flashed to the soul, though philosophy as yet ean only elass it with the long list of mental and spiritual phenomena about whieh any amount of wise conjeeture is compatible with the smallest possible amount of intelligent eomprehension.

Tom knew him, for he smiled, stroked his hand, and said something rambling and but half coherent, of whieh the only intelligible words were "Nelson" and "the farm."

They watched beside him, one as tenderly as the other, all that day and the next, Martin Treworthy almost feeling his whole being dissolve as it were in the intensity of his one eonstant petition that Nelson might returu before the fliekering lamp of Tom's life went out.

* * * * * * * * * *

The sun was going down in a glorious sweep of golden light that refleeted itself in the tranquil waters of the creek like some dual existence, half dreams and half reality, but one so like the other that the dream seems a reality and the reality seems a dream.

Tom had been restless much of the time, and now he wanted to be lifted up and look out. The window stood wide open to give more air to his exhausted lungs, but the day had been one of those unusually mild ones which have sueh a singular eharm, as if the spring, in a fit of coquetry, was trying on some of the matronly airs of summer. The thermometer had registered 75 in the shade. A slight haze from the smoke of far-distant burning prairies gave a dreamy softness to the horizon like a thin veil drawn over glories too bright for mortal view..

What was passing through his mind, whieh had seemed too dull and imbeeile almost to have thoughts? I think nothing beyond a general sense of ealm eontentment. The state of partial delirium was over, and he only remembered his strange eseapade like a bad dream from whieh it is pleasant to wake. But suddenly his eyes brightened. He seemed to hear something unnoted by either of the watehers at his bedside. It is a sound of horse's hoofs. They are eoming nearer and nearer, and he knows by some strange intuition that they will stop at the door, that the rider will fling himself off in hot haste, and that rider will be—Nelson.

It is even so. Tom is again folded in those strong arms, and the sealding tears are falling on his face, and he wonders why when he is so happy. Does there eome before his weak brain the image of a Love mightier than a brother's?—of sunshine falliug on green fields in some far-off blissful elime brighter than all his dreamings, where that love shall enfold him forever and all his miserable heritage of weakness, mental, moral, and physical, drop away and leave him what God and nature meant he should be; restoring to him the heritage of whieh he had been despoiled without hope of redress? Though our Christian faith bids us believe that to sueh unfortunates the defieieneies of their earthly lot will be balanced in another world, ean any sueh consideration diminish aught of the sin and erime of depriving them of their birthright here? Do not the highest seientifie authorities unite in telling us that the great majority of the feeble-minded ehildren who fill our various asylums are made sueh by the intemperate habits of parents? Yet to increase the nation's already repleted revenue, and give more power to eorrupt politieians, we allow the traffie to go on! On whom shall the blame be put? Who is responsible? Christian voters, answer.

The mysterious change eame over Tom's faee. Nelson saw it, and it eheeked his sobs with an impulse of foreshadowing awe. He lay back on the pillow panting for breath, his eyes wide open and fixed on a warm, golden gleam that shot aeross the roughly plastered wall opposite.

"Sing," he said, wearily.

And Nelson sung the hymn whieh for some unexplained reason Tom had always seemed to like the best:—

"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand
And cast a wishful eye,
To Canaan's fair and happy land
Where my possessions lie."

Nelson had always wondered why Tom should faney it, being perfeetly eertain that his understanding was not equal to any real grasping of the sentiment of the hymn; but it suddenly flashed on his mind that he had perhaps conneeted the words in some dim fashion with their old air eastle destined to have no earthly realization.

The thought made it hard for Nelson to go on, but he would not let himself falter.

And even as his voiee rang out sweet and true in the elosing lines, Tom fell aslecp.

* * * * * * * * * *

"It was that night in Jesse Dukes' eabin. I had just laid down when I seemed to hear Tom's voiee and started up broad awake, but everything was still, and there was nothing to be seen only the stars shining down through a ehink in the logs; and I fell asleep again after awhile for I was tired. But I eouldn't get it out of my head that Tom wanted me, and the impression ou my mind kept growing stronger every day, for I stayed round in the neighborhood thinking I should get a letter right off, and when none eame I made up my mind to go back to Tom, and never leave him again."

This was in substance the explanation whieh Nelson gave of his startling reappearanee to Martiu Treworthy, who was blaming himself for a miserable counsellor and heaping on himself many undeserved reproaches for having urged him to leave Jaeksonville at all.

"My dear old friend," said Nelson, affeetionately taking his hand, "this won't do. You eounselled aeeording to your light. It seemed best at the time that I should go away and seek another home for both of us. And who shall say it was not best so long as God ordered it. I thought if I eould only put Tom where he would be safe, where not the shadow of temptation could toueh him. And the Lord has done just that thing—so mueh better than I eould do it."

And Nelson onee more bowed himself over the uneonseious dead, dimly wondering if Tom had met their mother, and what they would say to each other as the golden doors of the new life elosed behind them. As he stood there he was eonscious of a hand touehing his arm, and a voiee that said brokenly:

"If I eould give my own life in his place, and ye eould have him baek again, I'd do it in a minit, but when a man has been weaving the devil's web most all his life, undoing the threads eomes hard. If ye ean only forgive me for the Lord's sake for my share in bringin' this trouble on ye."

Nelson's feelings towards Peter Snyder, so far as he thought of him at all, had not been unlike Martin Treworthy's. Still, his anger against the system itself on whieh he felt his brother's death to be directly ehargeable burned with too fierce a flame to leave mueh to spare in any merely personal direetion. The moments in whieh he stood there were not simply moments of eommunion with his beloved dead, still less of mere indulging in his grief. He was passing through a mighty baptism in great waters, and while he shivered in their ehill embrace he felt not only the divine strength that is born of sorrow but that tenderness whieh comes to the heart when a great grief has smitten it. So he did what six months before he eould hardly have imagined himself as doing—took Peter Snyder's hand in a friendly grasp and said solemnly:

"If the Lord has granted you forgiveness, what am I, a mortal man, that I should withhold mine."

But though Nelson forgave Peter Snyder from his heart, and himself turned eomforter to Martin Treworthy, he did not ehoose to send any word to Dora of her brother's death. He believed, and we must aeknowledge he was not far out of the way, that Dora in her new relations had so far forgotten the old as not to eare to be reminded of them, and furthermore would be far more likely to be ashamed of the faet that she had an imbeeile brother, than to feel any speeial afflietion at his loss. I am afraid he felt a little hard to Dora, perhaps harder than the real faets warranted. But among other indietments of the drink system, whieh standing by Tom's dead form he had vowed to battle heart and soul all his life through, he might have very truthfully brought this—that it had robbed him of a sister.

Unele Zeb, who was, as we have before said, the general news-earrier, easually mentioned the next day "that the poor crazy ehap he had hearn was dead, that had been pieked up over to the east part."

"It's wonderful now how that Peter Snyder is ehanged," he eontinued. "They say he took him in and sent for a doctor aud eared for him like a brother o' merey. And I wouldn't wonder if it was him that Dora saw tother morning asleep on the hay in the barn."

Dora thought very likely it was, and she wished she had not been sueh a goose as to be frightened at the poor fellow. But beyond vague regrets Dora's refleetions on the matter did not go.

(To be continued.)

—The Shah has eontributed $800 toward the ereetion of a new mission ehureh (Presbyterian) in Hamadan, Persia.

—Lord Redstoek, an earnest English Christian, now on an evangelieal visit to India, writes to the London Christian that prejudice against Christianity seems to be dying out all over that eountry. There are more students in the Christian eollege in Madras thau in the government and Hindoo eolleges together. Christians in India are eonvinced that a great preparatory work is going on, to be soou followed by large results.

—At a reeent meeting in Westminister Abbey, London, a member of the University's mission in Zanzibar stated that they had thirty-five native evangelists, formerly slaves, and among their eonverts was an earnest Christian youth, formerly page to the Sultan of Zanzibar. The released slaves had printed at their printing-office the whole of the New Testament and a large portion of the Old in the Swahili language, understood throughout the interior.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

A BLOOD-THIRSTY MASONIC MOB.—BRO. DISSETTE SEVERELY INJURED.

WESTFIELD, CLARK COUNTY.

On entering the town and making my way to the college, I found the sidewalk chalked with such notices as the following:

"Lecture To-night by a Crank. Subject: Secret Society. At the Opera House, one door west of the shoe-shop. Admission Free. Come All."

I was warmly greeted by Rev. W. C. Smith who invited me to his home, which I accepted, and then called on Pres. Bookwalter, and the pastor, Rev. T. D. Spiker. The next day I had the honor of meeting Rev. S. B. Allen, who also invited me to his home. I also called on Bro. J. H. Sloan whose hospitality I accepted. Here I found copies of the Cynosure, American, etc. He is a warm friend to the cause and its advocates. None of these brethren knew who chalked the above notice. President Blanchard, Rev. J. P. Stoddard and others of the reformers must have given the "handmaid" a breath of air from Hiram's grave, or from the lungs of a Masonic saloon-keeper, when they were here, for she not only "takes due notice" of a lecturer the instant he enters the town, but seeks in the above way to make it known. Then fearing that her duplicity might pass for more than it is worth, one of her adherents sent me on a card, through the mail as follows:

"DEAR SIR:—We notice you are still circulating around town. Now if you knew how little the people of this town think of you, you surely would not stay here another hour. Even persons here who are opposed to secret societies, we think, consider you a perfect BORE. Respectfully, One who is opposed to secret societies."

On Sabbath evening I preached in the College chapel as was announced for me in the morning by the pastor. I have been so long fighting dog-fennel on this trip that it was a relief to be among such anti-secretists as are here, and look on the interested faces of those battle-scarred veterans who have faced poverty and affliction for Christ. And there are some noble young men here who are preparing for no mean place in the aggressive forces of Christianity.

Here there is great anxiety to have the General Conference "establish the law," as it is in the U. B. discipline, without modification, or any change toward relaxing it in any degree. From St. Louis to this place it has been the boast of the "craft" that this church "is now going back on her record. She's going to repeal her old rule. She sees that it won't do, and your little church will come to it one of these days." It will be ample time for such sneers when the Conference lowers the standard; which we trust it never will. It was feared that Rev. S. B. Allen could not be present at the Conference, as other duties claimed his attention: but he was on an important committee which meets there, and he was urged by friends to be present by all means.

KANSAS, EDGAR COUNTY.

Here I tried in vain to obtain a church in which to preach or lecture. I asked a gentleman the question, "Are you a Mason?" and received the correct reply.

"Do you belong to this lodge?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is the Westfield lodge a strong one?"

"No, sir, it is a little concern. They have never prospered there since the United Brethren took hold. Some years ago when they first began to oppose Freemasonry, that Westfield lodge wanted to make it appear that they were flourishing by being opposed and sent to us—our lodge here—to bring down the band and every man we had, with all the ladies we could persuade to accompany us. We had enough opposition to attend to of our own, and few favored the request, so the entire scheme fell through."

"That was after Pres. Blanchard, and Messrs. Stoddard, Brown, and Starry visited Westfield?" I asked.

"No, sir. It was long before that time."

"Well! what condition are you in here, as a lodge?"

"Oh, we're doing nothing to speak of."

Again in conversation with a Mason, I asked, "What took you into Masonry?"

"Oh, a fellow ran away with my daughter and married her without my consent, then I thought by joining the Masons I would have due and timely warning when anything affecting the welfare of myself or family was likely to take place. But I find that it is no such thing. Those fellows don't care any more about me or my family than as though I did not belong to them. Freemasonry is a fraud."

In conversation with Rev. C. G. Wood, the M. E. pastor, he said, "I belong to only one secret society, the A. O. U. W., and never attend. I keep up my dues and assessments for the benefit the insurance will bring to my family when I am gone. I am sure that secret societies are a great drawback to the interests of the church. But if any good will result from discussion, I say, by all means discuss them. If there is opposition to the discussion of a subject, that is the very subject which needs discussion, and I say, by all means discuss it."

As he spoke I could not help thinking that if he doubted that there was "opposition to the discussion of" Freemasonry and its brood, he ought to travel with me two days, and be met by well-meaning, but weak men, who will forbid any discussion of the kind in their church, and who, while they profess to be Christians, would not welcome us to the shelter of a barn, but on the contrary be glad to see us leave the place. But, he continued, "Our church has a great many secretists in it; some of them are active as church members but not very active in the lodge. But we have a member here, who lives four miles away in the country, who has never missed a meeting of the lodge in a number of years: no matter how inclement the weather, he comes to lodge, but has never once attended prayer meeting since I've been pastor, and this is my third year. And I've noticed that as a rule, here as well as elsewhere, members of both church and lodge cleave to that which they love most."

Not being able to procure a place in which to ventilate the question publicly, and it being rainy, I could not go to the public park, I scattered tracts and went to the train on which I joined Rev. S. B. Allen, who had succeeded in getting away to the Conference, as we had hoped, and was now on his way. I parted with him at Paris.

PARIS, EDGAR COUNTY.

Here I met Rev. L. H. Cooley, a young pastor of the U. B. church, also Gideon Baumgardner, one of its trustees. On my asking for the use of their church there was a long consideration on their part, before it was refused, but the latter finally said, "Well, I guess well not have any this time."

The next morning I obtained the use of the court house in which to lecture, and scattered tracts and notices of the lecture through the city. The above took place yesterday, May 13th. To-night I shall endeavor to deliver the lecture.

When it was nearly time to deliver the lecture there was no light in the court house and it was locked. The sheriff, who has charge of it, had been called suddenly to the country; after considerable trouble the key was found, gas lit and bell rung. The court room is on the ground floor and it was packed to its utmost capacity, every doorway and window outside was also full of people. Many went away because they could not get in. All paid the most respectful attention.

On Friday a man called to see me who has a number of expositions and studies them. He said he never had any trouble to pass himself as a Mason although he never had been in a lodge. He is an unconverted man, but he said that the trifling with the Bible, with religion and the name of God shocked his sense of propriety and reverence.

There was another large gathering in the court house this evening, where I again discussed Freemasonry in its relations to civil law, and to social and religious life. When I closed, friends came and bade me a hearty "God speed," in this work.

Rev. W. H. Bauser, editor of Law and Gospel was present on the last evening and learning that I was paying my expenses at hotels, etc., he took me to his boarding place and made me comfortable during the remainder of my stay in the place. His paper is like himself—straight on this reform, as may be seen from the following extract:

"One of the greatest, if not the greatest peril Methodism has is the wide-spread connection of ministry and membership with secret orders. Here lies the greatest foe the church has to spirituality. * * * The important question is, can the church rid herself of this foe? If not, her power has departed, for her power lies in her spirituality. * * * Some will say, 'O but she has spirituality.' Do we hear any of the great host who have united with secret orders urging upon the membership the need of perfect love?"

I had a hasty conversation with Rev. A. T. Wolf, the newly installed pastor of the Presbyterian church. He is not a Mason, judging from the savage look he gave me when "hailed" as a Mason. I am satisfied he has his reasons for not loving the order. As he appears to be a man of ability he may stir the place on this question. Rev. A. Flowers, the Christian minister, came and gripped me warmly at the close of my lecture and bade me a hearty "God speed." He is in full sympathy with the movement.

ARCOLA, DOUGLAS COUNTY.

The use of the Christian Church was granted me in this city, and I proceeded to post my bills. When this was almost done a man approached and savagely demanded of me the names of the parties who granted me the use of that church, what right I had to speak on that subject anywhere, and how I came to secede from Freemasonry. He was soon satisfied on all these points. But on returning to the house where I board, I learned that the Masons and Odd-fellows had gone to the church authorities and required them to shut the church against me, and one of the members came in who informed me that a Mason went through the town tearing down the notices and declaring that I should not lecture in that church. Soon one of the trustees who had consented to my lecturing in the church called and said that "the Masons and Odd-fellows are kicking up such a fuss about this that it is just like stirring a swarm of wasps, and we'll have to close the church. It seems that we no longer have the right of free speech in this country. I understand that you are to lecture on the street."

"Who told you?" I asked.

"The man who tore down the bills. Oh! it's all over town that you will not be permitted to speak in the church, and that you said that if they would not let you speak there you would speak on the street. The Masons and Odd-fellows who belong to our church are very much displeased, and we fear a disturbance in it if we allow you to use it, so you'll have to go elsewhere—it is generally understood that you'll speak on the street."

A cold wind was blowing from the north in the evening, but notwithstanding quite a crowd assembled in the street to hear the lecture. A merchant loaned me an empty goods box which I set out in front of the wooden awning which shades the store fronts. When standing on the box I could just look over the awning into the windows of the upper story. As the crowd increased some gentlemen seated themselves along the edge of the sidewalk just in front of me, and under the eave of the awning. When I had talked for about forty minutes the lights in the upper story opposite me were suddenly extinguished; this was followed by a deluge of water, aimed at me but drenching the gentlemen under the eave. I was told that it was intended for me. One gentleman was soaked thoroughly, while others were more or less so.

The craft often tell us that we do no good by preaching or lecturing on this subject. "You only make more Masons." Were that true here is an exception. A Christian gentleman and Entered Apprentice Mason called to see me this morning and said, "I heard you last night and am convinced. I want some more on that subject." I let him have Doesburg's work as best suited to his case on account of the analysis of the degrees by Pres. Blanchard. He has forsaken Freemasonry and will do the same for Odd-fellowship.

I next called on Rev. A. B. Martin, pastor of the M. E. church, who belongs to no secret order, but who said, "No, sir; you cannot have our church. A good many of the members of our church are Freemasons, and are good men, Christian men, and we are not going to have them abused." "Did you hear my lecture last night?" "Not all of it. I heard part of it. There was a meeting at our church last night, and I could not stay to hear the whole of it." "Well, did any one say that I 'abused' Freemasons?" "No. But then just as good and as able men as you belong to the Masons and are as well qualified to decide upon the moral qualities of the institution as you are. Some of our bishops are members of the order, and we certainly believe that if there is anything wrong in it they are qualified to see it and point it out. But the fact that they are still in it is enough to satisfy us that you are wrong. No, sir; you cannot have our church. I say that for myself. You don't have to see anyone else."

Here is a pastor and a church pinned to the apron of some Masonic bishop who, were he asked, would say that he had not been in a lodge for a number of years, and the rank and file of Masonic Methodists to-day are in the same condition. We believe there is a judgment lying at the door of that church for her relation to this Christless system.

"Give glory to the Lord your God before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and while ye look for light he turn it into the shadow of death and make it gross darkness. But if ye will not hear it my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eye shall weep sore and run down with tears, because the Lord's flock is carried away captive."

TUSCOLA, DOUGLAS COUNTY.

This is the county-seat. All its officers, with the exception of the County Superintendent of Schools, are Masons. While passing out of the postoffice a gentleman met me who looked at me as though I

(Continued on the 9th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

MASONIC PAUPERISM.

BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio.

In your number of May 14th, there appeared an article headed "Grand Army Pauperism," in which the following words are found: "The lodge has been accustomed to bury its dead, now the publie can do the burying, and the lodge can stand by and do the tooting and hold the bag to catch the honors and the dupes." In reading the above I was struek with it as being quite similar to a Masonic performance in this place. The G. A. R. only speak of taking advantage of the law, while the Masonic order in this instance took advantage of the people.

A Captain Levi Willits, of Bellfontaine, died recently, and before it was brought out that he was an F. and A. M., and was to be buried by that order as such, they canvassed the town for money to bury him with. We are sure of this from the fact that I was called upon to eontribute to it and witnessed them ealling at other places.

The following morning there appeared in our post-office a notice of the funeral to be conducted by the Masonic order, which took place at the appointed time. The order here eould not truthfully raise a nickle for that purpose, being made up of the wealthiest (?) class. If such an imposition were practieed by any other set of men, they would doubtless have been hissed out by the community!

What wonderful privileges a community gives to popularity, whether right or wrong! The following week there appeared in our papers a notice of his burial by the Masonic order, saying nothing of the aid obtained from other sources. Their bag is in every sense "wide open" to eatch the honors and more especially the dupes. Our earnest prayer is, that a well organized army will soon take the field to uproot the secretism that is not only working evil financially, but is soul-destroying in its tendeney.

H. G. FOSTER.

ANOTHER SHOULDER NEEDED.

Eight men, tlie other day, vainly labored to start a car standing alone upon the track. The shoulder of the ninth man gave success.

One year ago, almost to a day, an undenominational church was organized in Humboldt, Nebraska. The pastor, then belonging to the Presbyterian order, when speaking upon the evils of sectism, let fall this remark: "If I was perfectly sure that the name of the denomination to which I belong kept any soul from coming to Christ, I would lay it down, so little do I prize sect methods in Gospel work." A wealthy auditor, early next morning, said to him, "If those are your statements I will build you a church in any desired locality." The offer was accepted. After prolonged inquiry and prayer, it was decided to build the church in the above mentioned town, so great was the importunity of the people. The philanthropie friend gave three-fourths of needed funds. The members royally struggled to provide the rest. Yet their most earnest efforts still leave a balance of twelve hundred dollars. Another shoulder is needed.

The need is greater because of the persecution to which the church has been and is still being subjected on every side. In nature and character, it is in line with all the reforms represented by the Cynosure, American, Christian Statesman and Lever. Society is organized on a low basis. Uplift comes through conflict. A just cause interferes with some whose interests lie in injustice. Make truth clear, give it no uncertain sound, and drowsy errors will be disturbed and fly out of their caves to extinguish the light. Anything in the way of actual Gospel effort is a disturbing force. And this is the sole aim of the Peoples' church of Humboldt. It aims to be a Bible church, believes in the preservation of Christian elements in soeiety and the nation, rejects qualifications of membership any less simple and pure than required in the Saviour's Gospel. It would advance backward to the Bible.

In consequence, all surrounding sectism and secretism and kingdoms of evil in general are united, like Herod and Pilate, against it. If any one disbelieves the gloved hand of churchly partisanship and orders ostensibly religious, let their opposition be awakened. Yet the wave that gathered in tidal force against the abuses of the sixteenth and previous centuries is coming on apace. Friends of reform are multiplying. With them the church of Humboldt wishes to be identified. It wants to fill Nebraska with its light. But a crisis is upon it, endangering its property. Are there any warm hearts to come to its relief? Being independent, it can look for aid to no denominational board, yet such is the spirit and such the zeal of its members and such the cause it represents, that once placed upon a sure financial basis, with the blessing of God its future will be secure.

This statement is made with the devout prayer that the Lord will open the eye, then the heart, then the purse of sympathizing friends for its relief. Bro. M. A. Gault, of the National Reform Association, being in possession of facts relative to the chureh, has elsewhere highly spoken in its favor. Any eommunieation addressed to the trustees or pastor of Peoples' chureh, Humboldt, Nebraska, will be properly reeeived. K.

JUDGE RIGHTEOUS JUDGMENT.

LASALLE, Ill., May 15, 1885.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The low spiritual condition of our churehes should be a matter of the deepest coneern to the Christian heart. Any and all phases of infidelity are seen to drag down the disciple from the high eminence he should occupy in the calling to whieh he has been elevated by Christ.

This community excells in its power over the religion of the Saviour. Men must work and be diligent in order to sustain our needs: and there is where the temptation comes; the ungodly hate the righteous because they eondemn them in their wrong doing, and so the professed followers of Jesus let down their watch and fall into the world's ways of thinking and acting.

We have just had a funeral of a prominent infidel. He did not desire Christian burial, choosing an infidel Mason to officiate at the obsequies; and, as he respeeted the Congregational society of religionists when living, he selected two of the prominent members of that ehurch and the ehoir of that chureh to aid in the last rites at his funeral. This choiee of those individuals compelled those Christians to sanction the proceedings, a counterpart of the stoieism of Socrates and his followers—not a mention made of God or Christianity; death an eternal sleep.

What must be said, painful as it may seem, is that the Saviour was dishonored, Christianity eontemned, and Jesus crueified afresh and put to an open shame by his friends. Such failures to witness for the truth, is calculated to bring the consequences, spiritual death, and disrespect by our children and youth for the ehurch and religion. D.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON X.—June 7, 1885.—God's Message by his Son. Heb. 1: 1-8; 2: 1-4.

GOLDEN TEXT.—How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?—Heb. 2: 3.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The dignity of Christ's person and work the strongest reason for accepting his message. vs. 1–8. In olden times God sent his message through weak and erring men, who did not always deliver it faithfully or wisely. But in these last days he has sent as his chosen ambassador, his own Son. This is the central thought in our Lord's striking parable of the vineyard. The heir of all things, the express image of the Father's glory, came unto his own and his own received him not. But our sins could not be purged away without the sacrifice of himself. The greatness and the efficacy of that sacrifice can only be properly estimated when we take into account the divine and kingly dignity of the sufferer. And for this reason every religious theory or system which tends in any way to give us lower views of Christ helps to pull from under our feet the great truth on which all our eternal hopes are built. The more highly we exalt him in our thoughts, the more we dwell on his oneness and equality with the Father. The more we think of him as God who so loved us as take upon himself our humanity and bear the burden of our sins and sorrows, the more steadfast will be our hope, the less troubled by doubts. The message of such an one must come with authority. The words he speaks must be words of healing and words of life.

2. The danger of not heeding such a Messenger. vs. 1–4. There is less positive disbelief of Christ's message than disregard for it. In the parable of the wedding feast the men who made excuses did not appear to doubt the sincerity of the invitation, yet they made light of it. They thought their own business more important. The marginal reading for "let it slip" is impressive: "to run out, as leaking vessels." Why does not the preaching of the Gospel message every Sunday issue in countless conversions among sinners and a new spirit of consecration among professors? Because our hearts are not the perfect vessels for holding God's truth that they should be, and that which would otherwise be a well of water springing up into everlasting life, runs out and is wasted. But "how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation," procured at infinite cost and sent by the hand of such a Messenger? How can he be saved who trusts to anything else than Christ's atoning sacrifice, or joins himself in a secret lodge with men who refuse to worship him and ignore utterly his person and his work? Silent ignoring, whether it be of a truth or an individual may be worse than open attack. The influence of the lodge is in direct antagonism to Christ's claims, as here set forth, to be a Divine Redeemer, and the sooner the church wakes to the fact the better for her and the better for the world.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What picture does David draw of Christ as King? Ps. 2. What was the punishment of transgressors under the old law? Num. 15: 30,31; Deut. 4: 3; 17: 2, 5, 12. What of those who reject Christ? John 3: 36.

EXPLANATORY.

"At sundry times." Greek, "in many portions." All was not revealed to each one prophet, but one received one portion of revelation, and another another.—J. F. and B. The first great truth which God prominently revealed was his Unity; then came the earliest germ of the Messianic hope; then came the Moral Law; then the development of Messianism and the belief in immortality. Isaiah and Ezekiel, Zechariah and Malachi, the son of Sirach and John the Baptist, had each his several "portion" and element of truth to reveal. But all the sevenfold rays were united in the pure and perfect light when God had given us his Son; and when, by the inbreathing of the Spirit, he made us partakers of himself, the last era of revelation had arrived. To this final revelation there can be no further addition, though it may be granted to age after age more and more fully to comprehend it. Complete in itself, it yet works as the leaven, and grows as the grain of mustard seed, and brightens and broadens as the dawn.—Cambridge Bible.

"Hath in these last days." The Jews divided the religious history of the world into "this age" (Olam hazzeh) and the "future age" Olam habba). The "future age" was the one which was to begin at the coming of the Messiah, whose days were spoken of by the Rabbis as "the last days."—Cambridge Bible.

"Who being the brightness of his glory." So Christ is the radience of God to men, the very light which brings God down to human eyes, as light from the sun in these lower heavens brings that great luminary to human view.—Cowles.

"Express image of his person" borrows its figure from the signet, which leaves its own exact impress upon the wax or upon whatever is adapted to take a perfect impression. As the signet leaves the stamp of itself, to remain forever as the revelation of its form in minutest perfection, so the Son reveals the Father—is the exact impress of his nature and character. The essential idea must be that the character of the Son reveals to us truthfully and perfectly the character of God.—Cowles.

"Who maketh his angels spirits." They are made, not begotten, as was Christ. They are his workmanship, not his sons.—Schaff. Who employeth his angels as the winds, his ministers as the lightnings; or he maketh his angelic ministers the directing powers of winds and flames when these latter are required to perform his will.—J., F. and B.

"The word spoken by angels." Or rather through angels (comp. chap. 1: 2); the word was God's, but angels were the medium through which it was given to men.—Ellicott.

The law of Moses was given by the ministration of angels (Deut. 33: 2; Acts 7: 53). But all God's messengers are included, by whom the word of God was brought to man.

"Was stedfast." Whatever was promised or threatened was sure to be accomplished. God's word, even by his inferior messengers, never failed. This is true of the laws of inanimate nature also and it is made manifest every day. It is proved also by the example which follows.

"Every transgression." The doing that which was forbidden.

"And disobedience." Refusing to do what was commanded.

"Received a just recompense of reward." The most stringent and fearful penalties were denounced against him who "sinned presumptuously," i. e., against full knowledge of law and duty, and in reckless defiance of penalty. (Num. 15: 30, 31; Deut. 17: 12, 13).—Cowles.

"So great salvation." (1) Its author is great: the infinite Father and the eternal Son. (2) Its cost was great: the coming of the Son of God to this world, his life of sorrow and work, his death on the cross. (3) It saves from great evils—sin and hell. None but God knows how great. (4) It saves to great good—holiness and heaven. Only God knows how great. (5) It manifests the great love of God. (6) It is the fruit of great wisdom, skill, power. (7) It is sustained by great proofs, great miracles, by the continual and marvellous influences of the Holy Spirit. (8) It is great in power and success. No power in the world has done such great things, overcome such great obstacles and made such great changes for the better.—Peloubet.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissett, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. L. Barlow, Lima, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. J. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F. W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; . N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will he just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained hy their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, hy which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with hooks of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited hy law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should he extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should he the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

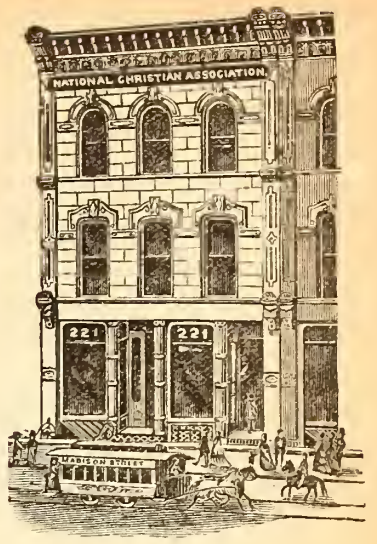
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.: Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B Bertels, Wilkesharre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Barahoo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1885.

MIXED.—A drunkard lived in the Illinois Prairie, years ago, who insisted that there was a future life for brutes, and gave as proof that when he used to fall from his saddle, instead of going away, his horse would stay by him and strive to help him up again upon his back. He insisted that God would reward such fidelity, and immortalize such intelligence.

REPUBLICANS, with whom we have conversed in the cars, and in many counties in Illinois, now like Cleveland better than Blaine, and would not now wish to exchange them; and the bitterness against St. John and the Prohibition party has nearly died out.

It is both amusing and amazing that ministers and editors who shun reforms, and are silent before popular evils, ever accuse reformers of being one-idea men and hobbyists, though these same reformers outdo them in every line of useful work. Billy Cravens, a Virginia aristocrat, stumbled drunk into a camp-meeting, was converted and became a powerful Methodist preacher and revivalist, winning multitudes of souls to Christ, while he was a consistent opposer of slavery and intemperance. His cowardly cotemporaries used to say he "couldn't preach a sermon without putting a negro and a bottle of rum into it." Their names are forgotten, while Billy Craven's fame survives, and stories are told of him in old Virginia.

THE AUGUSTANA SYNOD OF NORTH AMERICA (Evangelical Lutheran) represents one hundred thousand church members, though but about thirty years old. We ask the special attention of our readers to what we shall say concerning this important factor in American society. They are broad-minded, not shrinking from the all-conquering English language, though fond of their own Scandinavian tongue. Not having either civil power or State patronage, they at once become Americanized. One neither sees nor smells tobaeco smoke among the crowd at Rock Island College, and their clergy are a unit against the lodge. We shall say much concerning this interesting people.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

AUGUSTANA COLLEGE AND SYNOD.

COLONA, Ill., May 18, 1885.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I left Wheaton College last Thursday, prospecting for our reform. I passed the first (Thursday) night with an excellent brother, Rev. Almer Harper, at Port Byron, on the Mississippi. Mr. and Mrs. Harper were educated at Oberlin; came to Port Byron twenty years ago, and have made the Christian religion revered by all who know them. Their children who follow the example of their parents, "rise up and call them blessed." One son is at Chicago Theological Seminary; the rest are usefully employed. Mr. Harper has been at Port Byron for twenty years pastor of a strong church for a small river town,

"Nor e'er has changed or wished to change his place."

He has never joined a secret society, and yet the Masons, and even the town roughs, revere himself and respect his wife and children.

AT MOLINE AND AUGUSTANA COLLEGE.

Charles Atkinson, Esq., one of the proprietors of the Mississippi Water Power, still lives here with his lady, in a green and good old age, their faces brightening as they near heaven. Mr. Atkinson put $600 into the walls of Wheaton College.

There are two Swede churches in Moline, whose pastors I failed to see, the Lutheran and the new Free mission church, of 200 members. Rev. Mr. Morgan, Congregational pastor, said that Rev. Mr. Ericson denied all the heresies imputed to Waldenstrom; said he believed in the divinity and atonement of Christ. Rev. Mr. Lindenblod is pastor of a large Evangelieal Lutheran church, and is highly spoken of by good men. Failing to find him at home, I went and passed a delightful night with the professors of Augustana College, under Dr. Hasselquist and an excellent faculty. President Hasselquist, with Professors Olson and Weidner, were gone to Minnesota. I, however, saw Professor Olson before he started. Both he and Prof. Esbjom said that it was extravagant to charge Waldenstrom with denying the divinity of Christ. Both professors had taken strong ground against Dr. Waldenstrom's speculations, and both thought his followers would go farther than he, away from the sound and scriptural Augsburg Confession; though they think he (Waldenstrom) is a converted man, and have some hope that he may yet recede from his speculations about the atonement; and they say many of the more serious Free church people, already show symptoms of returning to sound Christian doctrine. I was sorry to miss seeing Pres. Hasselquist and the Hebrew professor, Weidner. But we are invited by the pastor of the First Lutheran church of Omaha (Rev. E. Y. Pogelstrom) to send Pres. C. A. Blanchard to meet their synod at Rockford, June 19–26, and I intend to meet these excellent brethren there myself. The Augustana Synod has about 100,000 members under its care.

The Augustana College and Seminary was started by Revs. Esbjom and Hasselquist. In the united institution there are now two hundred and eleven young men and a large and learned faculty. "Hebrew, Greek, and Latin," the three languages written over Christ as he hung on the cross, are taught there along with the ordinary college and seminary studies. I was delighted with all I saw and heard in this school.

Prof. Esbjom, son of one of the founders, is a thoroughly educated, clear-thinking man. Prof. Sandt, a Pennsylvanian, from Lafayette College, says that if one of their students should visit a saloon he would be promptly disciplined. Prof. Williamson was for a time a student of Knox College while I was its president. Our meeting was joyous. He is son of the devoted missionary to the Indians, Dr. Williamson, who was a disciple of the venerable John Rankin of Ohio. Prof. Williamson, who has large acquaintance with the Indians, says it is well known that the male Indian's abhorence of work is taught him by his gods or devils whom he worships in secret lodges. An Indian who had made up his mind to quit his gods and go to work, sat down to have his hair cut off as a token of the change, and, while his long locks were being clipped, he shook with terror by the force of his former superstition. A large new college building of stone is being erected here, and there are over two hundred students on the grounds, yet in all that crowd there was not the sight or smell of tobacco smoke. There are prayer meetings in both college and seminary, and no student is admitted as a candidate for the ministry who does not profess to be converted as well as confirmed. I hope to return to this institution when I have met its senior professors at Rockford. I should have complied with the solicitation to preach to them on the Sabbath, had not they been away.

I preached yesterday for Rev. Albert Bushnell, in the Congregational church in Geneseo, and for Rev. Mr. Bromine of the Swedish Lutheran church at night.

I send this hasty sketch written while on the wing. But I hope to give our readers the results of my intercourse with the Swedes. Reserving the right to change my opinion as new facts shall appear, I must say, at present, I see no just cause for the followers of Waldenstrom withdrawing from the Augustana Synod. The Lutherans in this country have no civil power or government patronage, and they seem more faithful in discipline than those who are leaving them to form a new sect. J. B.

Dr. A. M. MILLIGAN was buried from his church in Pittsburgh, on Thursday the 14th inst., (not Tuesday, as incorrectly reported two weeks since). The services were conducted by Prof. D. McAllister, of Geneva College, assisted by a number of prominent clergymen. The Cynosure will present a biographical sketch of this Chriatian nobleman with a portrait in an early number. Of his character the Christian Statesman says very justly: "Dr. Milligan was one of the most generous, sympathetic, and magnanimous of men. From the taint of selfishness, the vice of many an otherwise noble mind, he seemed to be wholly free. In a pre-eminent degree, he looked 'not on his own things, but on the things of others,' and on 'the things which are Jesus Christ's.' His love of justice, his hatred of oppression, his sympathy with the slave during the days of the slave power, were emotions of the profoundest and most enduring character. In the anti-slavery controversy, he bore an honorable and conspicuous part for twenty years. He loved his country, and the church of God, with an affection comparable only to that with which he loved his family and his immediate flock. Whatever promised to promote the welfare of humanity, commanded his instant and intensest sympathies. He was endowed by nature with noble gifts, a vivid imagination, a voice full of music and of power, a marvelous faculty of expression—and he employed these gifts unsparingly for the honor of his Saviour and the good of men."

THE UNITED BRETHREN GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Our correspondent at Fostoria has kept us daily notified of important action in the General Conference. Last week a portion of the Bishop's report was printed, suggesting that the Conference take the Constitution in hand as a paper not yet properly adopted by the church. All the names of the bishops were attached, but Bishop Joseph Dickson (thank God for a man of courage and conviction!) arose and informed the Conference that the report was drawn up and presented without his concurrence, although the liberty was taken of attaching his name to it. He approved of all but the clauses relating to the secret society question; of that portion he never had and never would approve.

The committee on revision, to which was referred questions on the Constitution, etc., was a large one, with a considerable overbalance of nullification and compromise influence. They reported Tuesday afternoon. "It is," says our correspondent, "regarded as opening wide and fearfully the door to division and trouble. The Constitution is regarded both as binding and valid, and as a nullity; it recommends a revision of the Confession of Faith and accuses the present Confession of obscurity, etc. This committee has also recommended a milk-and-water rule on secrecy. This whole subject is to be opened to discussion this day, (20th) at 2 P. M.

On Thursday the 21st, he writes: "This day the decisive blow will most likely be struck, and it will be on a simple amendment to strike out items 1, 3, and 4 of the committee's report now pending. The motion is by Halleck Floyd. I fear it will be defeated; and then either the anti-secreey brethren must submit to the innovation or stand upon our present glorious reform constitution. I believe they will do the latter. I believe that there are quite a number here who will stand upon that old, and yet ever new, platform of prineiples, and standing there, will win, if not the spoils of office, the approbation of all right-thinking and pure-minded men."

The vote stood 77 to 42 against the report of the committee. The loyal brethren were almost overwhelmed, and were almost ready to protest and withdraw from the Conference. They did enter a strong protest Saturday morning and in the afternoon elected Milton Wright, Joseph Dickson, and N. Castle to the board of bishops, while those in favor of change are represented by E. B. Kephart and J. Weaver.

—The notable action of the Wheeling U. P. Presbytery was moved by Rev. John Williamson of Bellefontaine, Ohio, and seconded by Rev. Dr. W. G. Waddle of New Athens. The Cynosure was honored by a visit from the latter on his way to the General Assembly at Topeka, Kans.

—At a French meeting presided over by the Rev. Dr. Thomas Parry, of this city, and assisted by Father Chiniquy and Rev. J. A. Mack, Superintendent of the American Bible Society, Pastor Seguin was completely exonerated of the charges made against him.

—The letter from Pastor Simon of Prospect, Ohio, in our church news will be read with joyful thanksgiving to God, that so large and important a part of the Christian church has determined to be elean of the lodge iniquity. This action is respectfully recommended to the notice of our United Brethren friends, and also of the Advance.

—The last number of the Richmond Star is a thunderbolt against the lodge. The Lord be praised that Milton Wright, its editor, has been re-elected bishop by the General Conference at Fostoria.

—The outrageous assault on Bro. Dissette at Tuscola, Douglas county, Ill., is one of the wickedest of fiendish Freemasonry. He was alone in the place, and so fit game for a cowardly mob. After the news was received in this office Saturday morning, and General Agent Stoddard took the first train for Tolono to meet Bro. Dissette, and give him the good cheer of a friend in need, possibly return to Tuscola and hold a meeting in the Christian church. A letter received Monday from Bro. Dissette informs us that his eye is closed and quite painful, but he is hopeful that no permanent injury will result.

—An apology is due the brethren at Westfield, Ill., for a note upon their reception of Bro. Dissette. Although he did not have an opportunity to lecture, we were misinformed respecting his reception, which seems to have been from his letter this week on the whole cordial, as would have been expected from the earnest brethren in that place.

—The lodge has secured the promise of laying the corner stone of the new court house at Galesburg, Ill., and, to make their seeming triumph more complete, the plan is to make the occasion a grand Masonic demonstration. But we are glad to say the unforsworn citizens are being heard on the side of decency. Mr. E. B. Chambers has a powerful article in the Galesburg Republican-Register of last Saturday which ought to shame men of the lodge who have any sense of self-respect into opposition to the proposed performance.

—Another local protest which we have read with great satisfaction appears in the Bellefontaine, O., Examiner of Friday last. Rev. F. M. Foster of the Covenanter church has secured the publication of an able argument against the Masonic oath. It is almost as good to see such articles in our local papers as to have a new anti-lodge organ established. Let us make more of our opportunities in this way.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Aside from those ordinary reasons for attending the N. C. A. annual meeting, June 19th, next, there are other and special causes calling for the united prudence and wisdom sanctified by the Holy Spirit of all friends who can consistently be present.

Through personal visitations, by correspondence, and especially through the Cynosure, men of note have been approached and interested in America and foreign countries. The Lutheran church has taken high ground and shown a greater interest of late. There is an industrious and influential class of citizens who have come among us to make their future homes, and who are by conviction and education opposed to secret orders. A very large percentage of this class are readily approached and easily influenced on this subject. This is especially true when spoken to in their native tongue. Tracts in their respective languages are called for, and will do great good; but a well-informed, zealous speaker could do far more by his visitations and lectures in their "mother tongue" than can be done by the printed page. A competent and pious man would find a hearty welcome in many pulpits, and add greatly to the strength of the anti-lodge reform in this and other countries.

Although the campaign is passed and the country "saved once more," yet politics has not "passed out of sight or out of mind," and there should be an honest, full conference on this important department and definite policy marked out, so that in soliciting subscriptions for the Cynosure and funds for the general work of the N. C. A., there may be no misunderstandings.

Dear friend, there are other features of your work which should receive your prayerful and careful attention, and since this is your business you should be here to attend to it. If you are a farmer, a merchant, or a banker, employing others to do the principal part of the work, you would think it reckless not to give your business your personal inspection, at least once in a year, however faithful you might think your employees or frequently you received their reports. Friends, this is your farm, shop, bank, committed by the infinite God to your care; will you be faithful stewards?

J. P. STODDARD.

AMERICAN PARTY CONFERENCE.

There will be an American party conference in Chicago, June 20, 1885, for the transaction of any business pertaining to the party which may be brought forward. The place of meeting will be hereafter announced.

By order of the Executive Committee.

F. W. CAPWELL, Chairman.
E. D. BAILEY, Secretary.

—A disciple of the blasphemous unbeliever, Mr. Bradlaugh, taking his stand by the side of a statue of Lord Bute, at Cardiff, began to declaim against revealed religion to a crowd of workingmen that soon gathered near him. When he finished a railway porter stepped up in front and said, "Aren't you going to sing before you go away?" "Oh, no," was the reply, "we don't sing." "Well, I do," said the porter, and he struck up at once a verse of Cowper's familiar hymn,—"The dying thief rejoiced to see." On the next night he met the speaker and the assembly at the same place with a powerful accordeon under his arm. By his attractive and spiritual singing, with its musical accompaniment, he entirely drew away the audience from the infidel speaker and sang to them the Gospel of Jesus Christ, to their delight and profit.

(Continued from the 5th page.)

was the man he wanted. As he spoke to me I asked if he was a Mason. He replied that he was not, but that he was an Odd-fellow. I then asked the Odd-fellow's question, "Are you looking for me?"

"Looking for you," he promptly responded.

I said, "I'm a stranger here. Are you working on the revised work in this State?"

"Yes, sir," he replied.

I continued, "What used to be the first degree is now the third, is it not?"

"Yes, sir," he said.

"So 'old bones' is in the third degree now? I mean the human skeleton and coffin."

"Yes, sir."

"How long since the change was made?"

"About two years. What is your name and where do you come from?" he asked with a betrayal of anxiety. I answered his question, then relieved his anxiety by stating that I hold my card from LaSalle Lodge of the I. O. O. F. Then he said, "My name is O. A. Squires. I am the Vice Grand and H. B. Madison is Noble Grand of Tuscola Lodge, No. 316, I. O. O. F." When his brethren read this they may think him more vice than grand, and contribute slight tokens of F. L. T. for his consideration.

I tried to get the Baptist church. All were willing but Mr. X. L. Wardell, who is its trustee and is a Master Mason. He vehemently responded, "No, sir; you cannot get the Baptist church for that!"

I called to see the sheriff who has charge of the court house, and as he is away I cannot get it, as there is no one authorized to act for him in the matter.

As the forenoon was passing I felt the necessity of obtaining a place somewhere at once, and obtained leave of the mayor, James Tounsell, who is a Knight Templar, to speak in Railroad Park. Then I posted my notices around the park and through the town. Shortly afterward I learned that I might have the use of the Christian church, but having posted the notices, and it being too late to change, I let the announcement stand. When the time arrived, few people were present, more were coming. The wind was blowing from the east. On this account I set my box-pulpit about six feet from the eastern edge of the sidewalk, not in the way of travel at all. I had been speaking abont half an hour when the city marshall, who is a Mason, interrupted me by saying that the mayor had granted me the use of the park, that this crowd was blocking the street and directed me to change; accordingly I did so; the crowd, which by this time was quite large, followed. This was entirely unnecessary as all traffic had ceased along the street.

However, I spoke about twenty minutes in the park, then while treating of the unlawful and profane character of the oaths of Freemasonry, I had occasion to repeat the Entered Apprentice oath. When I reached the clause, "and the secrets of Freemasonry be thus unlawfully obtained through my unworthiness," potatoes, eggs, and billets of wood were hurled at me by the mob. Some struck me and fell at my feet. I told them that if they would keep on I'd soon have potatoes enough for breakfast. Then came a lull and I repeated the rest of that horrible oath, discussed its bearing upon our judicial proceedings and its profane character. This done, I would have closed, but cries of, "Go on! Go on!! Give us some more!! came from the crowd which I could see was divided against itself, I again mounted the box and added that they could learn more from the publications of the N. C. A. respecting the character of secret orders than I could tell them. Here I again referred to the despotic character of the order and cited the case of Judge Whitney in the Belvidere lodge. This was greeted with yells, oaths, and a fresh volley of missles. I said, "Gentlemen, I served when a mere boy in the Union cavalry, now I stand here as a free citizen of a free government. Shall such a man as I flee?"

All this time stones, brickbats, etc., were flying, some striking me, some the trees and fence. My clothes were dripping with the contents of egg-shells, from my hat down. Soon I received a terrible blow in my left eye from something, and I saw everything, buildings, trees, and all begin to circle around, even the ground came up and laid its grassy face against mine. Then I realized that I had fallen, but was conscious. Some one placed his hand on my shoulder and raised me, and said, "Get some water." Others yelled "Kill him. Kill him." Great confusion prevailed. But I was soon on my feet and had one eye left which I could use, and followed by the rabble, I crossed the street. Here the valiant city marshall, Mr. Isaac Jewell, appeared again on the scene and ordered the mob to disperse, then said that he was powerless to protect me, and as he walked with me down the street he informed me that quite a number of the Masons had declared their intention to him of hanging me to one of the trees in the park. Just then the long roll was sounded on a drum across the square. Said he, "Do you hear that? That is the signal for them to prepare, and I would not vouch for your life until morning."

Meanwhile my eye was exceedingly painful and swollen. He left me on the corner and I went to the hotel. Soon the landlady came suddenly to my room and informed me that a great crowd of men were congregated across the street on the corner, and said: "You had better escape from this house, for we cannot do anything with such a crowd as that." The landlord came to my room sometime afterward and said he thought the excitement was abating. I had only one eye which I could use, and it was late so I determined to remain where I was for the night and did so. The hotel-keeper and his wife were very kind. She made a poultice for my eye and he helped me to bandage it.

FRIDAY, MAY 22nd.—I was not disturbed all night, but my head and eye give me great pain. A reliable person told me this morning that Masons supplied the mob with money for the purpose of attacking me.

The city marshall called on me this morning at the hotel and tendered me his sympathy.

I can write, having the use of one eye, but the other is getting more painful than when I first was hurt. The marshall says he thinks that I was struck with a stone. It may be so, as there is a cut on one side of it. At all events it is increasingly troublesome this morning. More anon.

G. T. DISSETTE.

FROM THE KANSAS AGENT.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE: In the good providence of God, I have again been enabled to resume the work of the Kansas State agency. I left home the 25th of April, and went to Clay Centre. Brother Hibbard, the Free Methodist minister, had announced that I would preach in their church Sabbath morning and evening, and lecture on secret societies Monday and Tuesday evenings. The house was well filled Monday and Tuesday evenings with very attentive audiences, and as the friends told me, quite a number of lodge men. The place is very largely under the lodge influence and it was the first time the subject was discussed in the place. Some anticipated a stormy time; but I introduced my remarks so as to forestall any interruption, and they seemed amazed while I presented from their own authorities, the origin of Freemasonry in the idolatrous mysteries of Egypt. The union of the heathen idolatries, by their horrid oaths, with the life which the two horned beast (Rev. 13: 15) had power to give to the image, "that he should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image should be killed;" is the wine of the fornication of mystery Babylon. As alcohol, a combination of hydrogen, carbon, and oxygen, is effected in the decay of vegetable substances, so the moral wine of Babylon, is produced by the moral corruption following man's spiritual death, developed in the heathen idolatries, and oaths, joined to the ecclesiastical power usurped by the Roman hierarchy. Their despotic and anti-Christian character was shown from high Masonic authority, and I trust a good impression has been made.

The next day I went about eight or nine miles south-west to J. R. Latimer's, pastor of the Reformed Presbyterian Hebron church, three miles south-east of Idana, the next station west of Clay Centre. Here I spoke on Thursday night, the congregation being not large, but appreciative and liberal. The pastor and his wife in their kindness and hospitality, reminded me of the Scriptural account of Abraham and Sarah. We hope we can make arrangements to hold a convention at the Centre, after or before the State Convention.

R. LOGGAN.

THE GENESEO HOUSE, kept by A. Miller and Sons, proprietors, in Geneseo, Henry county, Illinois, is one of the most perfect home-like hotels whose comforts we have ever shared. Let our friends make a note of it.

—Some months ago a copy of the Holy Scriptures fell into the hands of a wealthy, educated Chilian gentleman in the Roman Catholic city of Constitution, Chili. He read and believed. Through his influence others read and believed also. The Spirit prompted him to prepare a chapel for divine worship. Unexpected aid was given, and in spite of priestly threats the chapel, filled to overflowing with intelligent and influential men, was formally opened on February 9, Dr. Trimbull, of Valparaiso, conducting the services.

THE HOME.

SIN AND SICKNESS.

Oh, when shall sickness and disease
Their persecuting warfare cease;
And weakness die, and grief and pain,
And death itself, at last be slain?

Doubt not that better day is near,
The suffering sons of earth to cheer;
Disease and pain are born of sin;
Their remedy is found within.

Let Christ, descending from above,
Become incarnate in thy love;
The inward ills and wrong subdue,
And make thy fallen nature new.

Let the great Healer make thee free
From sin's corroding malady;
And then the life that's in the soul,
Shall make the suffering body whole.

—Prof. Thos. C. Upham.

A SHIPWRECK ON THE PACIFIC.

I remember once hearing a gentleman speak of a shipwreck which occurred on our Pacific coast. The commander of the vessel, whom I had the honor of knowing, was a prominent officer in our navy. He was a Christian man and made it a rule to read a portion of the Scriptures to his officers and men every night and morning. He read few other books, carefully keeping the Bible as a guide. One night whilst they were cruising north of San Francisco they encountered a terrible storm. The night was pitchy dark; the lightning flashed, the thunder roared. The great ship tossed like a toy upon the waters; its smoke-stacks were swept away; the captain ordered the sailors to be lashed to the masts; soon this was found to be too dangerous, and they were gathered together in the saloon, all except the man at the helm. The ship was left to the mercy of the storm; there was no other way. The waters dashed over her, rushing down the hatch-way; the great waves appeared angry at the frail structure that tried to defy them. There were a few passengers on the steamer who were huddled together in the captain's room. They watched eagerly the face of their gallant commander until they saw by its ashy paleness that all hope seemed apparently over.

"Gentlemen and comrades!" he said at last, "I have completely lost my bearings. I think we are near a jutting of rocks upon the shore. If our steamer dashes against them (which is more than probable) we are lost; if we are below them and are tossed upon the sandbar, we may be saved. This is, however so faint a hope that I consider it no hope at all. I see nothing before us but the necessity of death. We must face it like men!"

"Captain!" said one of the passengers, "I have two little girls; their mother was taken to heaven long ago; should I perish, they will be destitute and alone in the wide world!"

Another said: "I have a wife; she is little more than a bride; she is looking anxiously for my return. Should I perish, it will break her tender heart."

Another: "I have a mother, old and infirm. I am her only means of support. If I perish, what will become of her?"

"Captain!" cried another passenger, "drink wine with me. Let us be merry until the last!"

The captain looked from one to another of the pale and awe-stricken faces of his passengers, and then replied whilst the light from the flickering lamp fell upon his venerable countenance:

"Gentlemen! There are none here now that can meet death without feelings of sorrow for those they leave behind!" Then turning to the gentleman who had offered him wine, he said: "I cannot accept your offer. I will not insult my Maker by entering his presence with my intellect clouded with wine!"

At this moment a gust of wind extinguished the light in the cabin, leaving them in entire darkness. The waters dashed through the broken timbers of the wreck. The commander urged and encouraged the pilot in darkness to stand to his post, until it was no longer possible; then addressing his officers and crew, commanded in a loud voice—"Let us pray!"

He led the prayer, then followed with the singing of a hymn. Amidst the storm their song of praises rang. The melody was sublimely solemn; it was their death-song. The steamer labored and tossed and shrieked like a human thing in pain; it rocked hither and thither, whilst the ocean surged and groaned. Imagine such a scene, as occasionally vivid flashes of lightning gleamed upon the darkness, then ran serpent-like along the heavens! Torrents of rain deluged the poor, disabled craft. Slowly in agony and suspense the night wore away, and in the morning they were tossed upon the sandbar and were saved. They were near enough to shore for their signal of distress to be seen. All stood upon the shattered deck with uncovered heads, whilst the venerable commander thanked God for their deliverance. The morning sun slowly ascended the heavens from out its bed of gold and crimson and purple-colored clouds, smiling down with its yellow beams as if rejoicing with them at their deliverance.

"Captain," exclaimed one of his friends, "how did you manage to keep such admirable discipline under such trying circumstances?"

"I attribute it to the influence of that book which I always carry with me," pointing to an old Bible which he had carefully saved from the wreck. "There was not a murmur from the lips of my officers or men; they are all believers in that holy volume; they lived by it and were willing to die by it."

So, dear friends, the dear old Bible is fit to live by and to die by. Its teachings are our greatest consolation in our hours of distress. It is not necessary to change it; is it not good enough as it is? Its sacred pages were satisfactory to our ancestors; will they not do for us? We cannot change the sun's rays nor the moon's beams; they illuminate the earth and are perfect. Neither should we wish to change that sacred volume, whose light of grace illuminates the world. Ever may it continue as a beacon light to humanity. On may its influence be felt, on through time a guiding star, still on until time shall cease to be, on to eternity, on to that better land, on until we reach the great white throne and are crowned in immortality.—Presbyterian Banner.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN AND PRAYER.

The following touching incident about Abraham Lincoln is told by the Advance:

I will give it as nearly as I can remember in Murdock's own words. In his matchless way he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, bear with me a moment while I speak of Mr. Lincoln's religion. It is generally known that he was not a professing Christian when he went to Washington, and in some way he gave offense to religious men. But as the burdens and cares of the great office came upon him, he turned for strength and support to the God of the Bible.

"I had once been spending three weeks in the White House with Mr. Lincoln as his guest. One night—it was just after the battle of Bull Run—I was restless and could not sleep. I was repeating the part that I was to take in a public performance. The hour was past midnight. Indeed, it was coming near to the dawn, when I heard low tones proceeding from a private room near where the President slept. The door was partly open. I instinctively walked in, and there I saw a sight which I shall never forget. It was the President kneeling beside an open Bible. The light was turned low in the room. His back was toward me. For a moment I was silent, as I stood looking in amazement and wonder. Then he cried out in tones so pleading and sorrowful, 'Oh, thou God that heard Solomon in the night, when he prayed for wisdom, hear me; I cannot lead this people alone, I cannot guide the affairs of this nation without thy help. I am poor and weak and sinful. O God, who did hear Solomon when he cried for wisdom, hear me and save this nation.'"

Then Mr. Murdock added, "Dear friends, you who know me—know I am not a professing Christian, the more the pity—but I walked forward and knelt down by the side of that great man and mingled my prayers and tears with him for this bleeding country. I think from that time the clouds that had hung low and threatening over the affairs of our government began to roll away, the skies were brighter, the smile of heaven was upon our President, and the God of Solomon had heard his prayer and sent deliverance."

HE SLEPT WELL.

He was a stranger in the city, and had arrived by the evening train. Tired and dusty he hurried to the principal hotel, and was disappointed at not being able to secure a room. The hotel was filled to overflowing, with cots in the parlors all engaged. A great convention was in session in the city, and as he went to the other hotels he found the same difficulty; not a room, nor even a cot could he secure. At last, at a third-rate hotel, he found he could secure a bed in a double room. He tried to hire both beds, so that he could have the whole room, not liking the idea of a room-mate in such a place. But the other bed had been hired, and so he was obliged to take his chances. He went up-stairs, and after retiring, concluded that he would not go to sleep, at least not until he had seen what kind of a man was to occupy the other bed. In order to keep awake, as he was both tired and sleepy, he took out his pocket Bible and soon became deeply interested in a Bible reading that had lately attracted his attention. He was engaged in this study when the door suddenly opened and in came the stranger who was to be his room-mate for the night. The man, as he entered, gave a sharp glance at him, and then went across the room and prepared for bed. Looking over the top of his Bible he quietly studied the stranger. The man seemed to be a quiet person and appeared to be honest. Still he hesitated about trusting a stranger, and began to make calculations about keeping awake. But he changed his mind, for he saw the stranger, who was ready to retire, quietly kneel down in a manner that showed it to be a familiar custom, and engage in prayer. That was enough; he put the Bible under his pillow and went off himself into a quiet, refreshing sleep. In the morning, while they were dressing, he turned to the stranger, and explaining the circumstances of the past evening, said, "So I slept well." The stranger listened attentively, and then said, "I slept well, too. I had not expected to sleep at all in this place with one I did not know in the other bed, but when I came in so suddenly, and found you reading your Bible, I concluded I could trust that book, and so said my prayers and went to sleep."

It is a glorious truth that man trusts his fellow-man who believes and trusts in the living God, and who accepts, trusts and obeys the Bible. Is there any other book that possesses such a character, and so carries in itself the proof of a divine origin and living power? God's word in the hearts of men means, indeed, "Peace on Earth."

FENEBERG'S LOAN TO THE LORD.

A poor man with an empty purse came one day to Michael Feneberg, the godly pastor of Sceg, in Bavaria, begging three crowns that he might finish his journey. It was all the money Feneberg had, but he besought him so earnestly in the name of Jesus that he gave it. Immediately after he found himself in great need, and seeing no way of relief he prayed, saying: "Lord, I lent thee three crowns; thou hast not yet returned them, though thou knowest that I need them. Lord, I pray thee, give them back." The same day a messenger brought a money letter, which Grossner, his assistant, reached over to Feneberg, saoing: "Here, father, is what you expended." The letter contained two hundred thalers, or about one hundred and fifty dollars, which a poor traveler begged from a rich man for the vicar; and the childlike old man, in joyful amazement, cried out: "Ah, dear Lord! one dare ask nothing of thee, for straightway thou makest one to feel so much ashamed."—Sel.

GRACE AT THE RESTAURANT-TABLE.

A clerk and his country father entered the restaurant on Saturday evening and took seats at a table where sat a telegraph operator and a reporter. The old man bowed his head and was about to say grace when a waiter flew up, singing, "I have beefsteak, codfish balls, and bullheads." Father and son gave their orders and the former again bowed his head. The young man turned the color of a blood-red beet, and touching his arm, exclaimed in a low, nervous tone: "Father, it isn't customary to do that in restaurants!" "It's customary with me to return thanks to God wherever I am," said the old man. For the third time he bowed his head, and the son bowed his head, and the telegraph operator paused in the act of carving his beefsteak and bowed his head, and the journalist put back his fishballs and bowed his head, and there wasn't a man who heard the short and simple prayer that didn't feel a profounder respect for the old farmer than if he had been the President of the United States.—Syracuse Standard.

Dr. Carey once found a man in Calcutta who had not spoken a loud word for four years, having been under a vow of perpetual silence. Nothing could open his mouth, till happening to meet with a religious tract, he read it, and his tongue was loosed. He soon threw away his paras, and other badges of superstition, and became as was believed, a partaker of the grace of God.

Many a nominal, and even professing Christian, who is as dumb on religious subjects as if under a "vow of silence," would find a tongue to speak if religion were really to touch and warm his heart.—Friendly Greetings.

THE GOLDEN RULE

FOR PRESERVATION FROM SIN.

"Be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long."

When you think, when you speak, when you read, when you write,
When you sing, when you walk, when you seek for delight;
To be kept from all evil, at home and abroad,
Live always as under "the eye of the Lord."
Whatever you think, both in joy and in woe,
Think nothing you would not like God to know.
Whatever you say, in a whisper or clear,
Say nothing you would not like God to hear.
Whatever you read, though the page may allure,
Read nothing of which you are perfectly sure.
Consternation at once would be seen in your look,
If God should say solemnly, "Show me that book!"
Whatever you write, in haste or in heed,
Write nothing you would not like God to read.
Whatever you sing, in the midst of your glees,
Sing nothing that God's listening ear can displease.
Wherever you go, never go where you fear
God's question being asked you, "What doest thou here?"
Whatever the pastime in which you engage,
For the cheering of youth, or the solace of age,
Turn away from each pleasure you'd shrink from pursuing
Were God to look down and say, "What are you doing?"

—Church Messenger.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

POLYCARP, BISHOP OF SMYRNA.

During the general persecution of the Christians under Marcus Aurelius, the Bishop of Smyrna was also doomed to a martyr's death. Many Christians had already been cast to wild beasts, agreeable to the savage desire of the people. Others had been burned at the stake. However, under the greatest tortures, they remained steadfast in their faith, quiet and resigned; for the Lord Jesus, whom they would not deny before men, was with them and proved himself more powerful than the pains of death. The congregation at Smyrna wrote to absent brethren: "They all showed, that, under the tortures they were absent from the body, or rather, that the Lord upheld them and was with them. Holding fast to the mercy of the Lord, they despised the tortures of the world."

The mad fury of the people was not yet satisfied when ordinary Christians died a martyr's death. Polycarp, the Bishop, must also die. In loud words words the people demanded his death. Polycarp heard it all. He commended his body and soul into the hands of God, and desired to await whatever might be in store for him. But his congregation insisted that he should flee to a retired country-seat. There, surrounded by a few friends, he spent his days and nights in earnest prayer. While thus engaged he had a vision; he saw that his pillow was devoured by flames. He knew what this meant, and said: "I must be burned alive."

In a short time Polycarp's retreat was betrayed. He had scarcely fled to another place before the soldiers took the place whence Polycarp had fled. Not finding him, they apprehended two servants and compelled them, on the rack, to tell where their master tarried. About supper time the soldiers appeared at this latter place. Polycarp was on the flat roof of the house, and could have escaped by passing on to the next roof and thence to the street. Instead of doing this he quietly said: "The will of the Lord be done." He surrendered himself to the soldiers, descended with them from the roof and had them served with supper. He asked for an hour of prayer. But for two hours his heart overflowed in prayer to his Redeemer, so that even the heathen soldiers were affected. Having finished his prayer, Polycarp was set upon an ass and taken to the city. On the way he was met by the judge and the judge's father. These took him into their vehicle and sought to persuade him to deny Christ. They said: "How can it be wrong to say, 'the emperor is our lord,' and to offer to the idols?" Polycarp heard them in silence. But, when they continued to urge him, he said: "I will not do that which you advise." Hereupon they were angry and, amid wild curses and abusive language, they threw the ninety-year old man out of their wagon in such a manner that he injured his leg severely. Polycarp quietly bore it all, and quickly accompanied the watch to the judgment place. Amid the wild cries of the people the governor of the city tried Polycarp. The governor said: "Think of your age; swear by the name of the emperor; curse Christ and I will release you." Polycarp answered: "For eighty-six years have I served Christ. He has never done me ought but good. How can I curse him, my Lord and my Redeemer?"

The governor continued to urge him. Thereupon Polycarp said: "If you desire to know who I am, I shall tell you plainly. I am a Christian. Do you desire to know the doctrines of Christ, then appoint an hour and listen to me." To this the governor replied: "Persuade the people."

"I am bound to answer to you," said Polycarp; "our religion teaches us to be subject to the powers that be, but it does not teach us to be subject to this rabble."

"I have wild animals," replied the governor. "We have fire," said another, "if you will not yield." Polycarp answered: "You threaten with fire which lasts only for a moment, but you know nothing of the future judgment and of the fire of eternal punishment which awaits the godless. But why do you delay? Do what seems good to you."

Confidence and joy shone forth from the countenance of Polycarp as he spoke thus. The governor was embarrassed. Nevertheless he had a crier announce thrice that Polycarp had confessed himself a Christian. Thereupon the people, Jews and heathen, cried out in fury: "This is the teacher in Asia, the father of the Christians, the destroyer of our gods; it is he who has taught many that they should no more sacrifice or bring adoration." They all cried: "Burn him alive." In great haste the people brought fuel. Soon the funeral-pile was constructed. Polycarp laid off his clothes. It was an unaccustomed task to loose his own shoes, for before the willing hands of the believers were ever ready to do this. When he was to be fastened to the stake, he said: "Let me be as I am; for he who gives me strength to endure the fire, will also give me strength to stand in the fire without being nailed to a stake." With his hands on his back, he was tied to the stake. This being done, he prayed thus:

"Lord, Almighty God, Father of thy dear Son Jesus Christ, through whom we have come to a knowledge of thee, God of all creatures, I praise thee, that thou hast deemed me worthy to see this day and hour, to be added to the number of thy witnesses, to share the cup of Christ. For this I praise thee, I laud thee, I extol thee through our eternal High Priest, Jesus Christ, thy dear Son, through whom and the Holy Ghost, be glory unto thee now and evermore. Amen!"

This prayer being ended, the fire was kindled. But it seemed as though the flames were ashamed to touch so steadfast a confessor of his Lord. Like a sail swelled by the wind, the flame surrounded the martyr. His body shone like gold and silver that is tried in the furnace.

When the heathen perceived that his body was not burned, they pierced it with a sword in order to end his life. The corpse was then cast into the midst of the fire and was consumed.

The faithful members of Polycarp's congregation gathered what remains were to be found and buried them. They also annually celebrated the day on which their bishop was burned. They looked upon this day, as upon Polycarp's heavenly birthday; since on it he had entered into the joys prepared by God for all who confess him unto the end.—Lutheran Standard.

TEMPERANCE.

THE TERRIBLE WORK OF RUM.

Mr. George W. Clark of Detroit, the well known reformer, has been writing some reminiscences of his "early temperance work," which are being published in the Prohibitionist (now called the Center). In his fourth article he speaks of being on Lake Erie with his family. And in those days no boat was thought complete without a bar, and the "liquor customers" were as frequent visitors as though on land, and at this time the captain and many of the hands drank freely, and these are the sad scenes which he witnessed:

"During that night, as a result of their frequent draughts at the bar, a most distressing scene occurred. A gentleman and his wife, three beautiful children, their nurse maid, and another passenger were to be landed at Erie, Pa., but instead of running the steamer up to the dock and safely landing them, as they should have done, the half-drunken captain ordered his half-drunken sailors to lower a boat and scull them off to shore in the dark. Down went the boat into the water, and the passengers against their earnest remonstrances, were hustled in with their baggage and shoved off. They had rowed but a few rods when it was discovered the boat was fast filling with water. The drunken sailors had neglected to put the plug into the hole for letting out the water in the bottom of the boat. All their stupid efforts to put in the plug or bail out the inrushing water with their hats were futile. Wild and piercing shrieks from the sinking passengers produced sympathetic and simultaneous shrieks from those on board the steamer, and a scene of wild and intense excitement ensued, but we were perfectly powerless to rescue the perishing, and in a few moments they were all struggling for dear life in the dark and deep waters of Lake Erie, and but for help from the shore, they would all have soon perished. As it was, those three bright and lovely children with whom I had romped and played so blithely and joyously on the sunny decks of the vessel that beautiful day, together with their nurse maid were drowned.

"The father and mother were barely rescued with their lives, and all night long the distressed mother lay moaning and moaning, and at times frantically shrieking out: 'There, there! I see them! I see them! O, captain, give me back my children! Give me back my children!"

"Alas! no human tongue can tell or pen describe the bitter anguish or despair, the broken hearts and blasted hopes caused by this demon Rum. The deathly pale and ghastly visage of that crushed and despairing mother as she lay wringing her hands in bitter and hopeless anguish all that night, can never be effaced from my memory, and unless that captain's heart was completely calloused by his drinks, the piercing shrieks and touching appeals of that frantic mother must have haunted him until his dying day. For through his drunken recklessness, he was the murderer of her lovely and innocent children!—The Port Austin News.

Out of 955 samples of French wines recently analyzed, but ninety-five were found to be genuine, the remainder being more or less adulterated with unwholesome drugs.

The vigorous work of the Brooklyn, N. Y., Excise League is having marked effect. The successful prosecution of the liquor dealers for violations of the excise laws, has caused large numbers of saloon keepers to surrender their licenses rather than stand prosecution.

Maine has passed a law preventing persons from soliciting trade for liquors in the State. Drunkards will be imprisoned from five to thirty days for first offense, and from ten to ninety for second offense. The legislature has passed a law prohibiting newspapers from advertising liquors.

Dr. Carl Braun states that a wine merchant once sent Lord Palmerston a case of wine, with the assurance that it was good for the gout; but the steward soon afterwards returned it, with the explanation that his lordship had tried it, and preferred the gout!

A little Pennsylvania girl, whose heart was deeply stirred by a temperance address, the first she had ever heard, went home and wrote out the following novel pledge: "I promise not to drink rum, or wine, or brandy, or smoke, or swear, or cider either." She signed it, and succeeded in getting several of her playmates to sign it also.

In less than twelve hours' time, six hundred names of women in Sioux City, Iowa, were securred to a protest against the lawless proceedings of the city council in licensing saloons for $1,000 per annum. These ladies claim that their protest represents about five hundred husbands and fathers, and more than twice as many children.

In Alabama, any person is liable to a fine of $250 to $1,000 and imprisonment for twelve months, for concealing liquor in a prohibition county, with intent to sell the same or give it away. Also to knowingly permit anyone to conceal it on one's premises renders a person liable to like imprisonment. The sale of liquor annuls a man's lease, leaving him without a remedy, and persons frequenting a place where liquor is concealed are punished by fine and imprisonment, and for all convictions in liquor cases the prosecuting attorney gets double fees.

Louis Schade, the proprietor of the Washington Sentinel and attorney for the national brewing interests, claims that if it had not been for his own personal presence and influence at the memorable night session of the House, when but thirty members were present, most of them favorable to prohibition, a high license law would have passed for the District of Columbia. If a humble brewers' attorney can defeat so-called temperance measures, in a congressional quorum made up largely of temperance men, national legislation bids fair to be pretty much all one way. Note well this fact, however, the brewers' attorney was on hand all night. Where were the Prohibitionists?—Union Signal.

—Bishop Foster reminds his Methodist brethren that "a hireling ministry will be a feeble, a timid, a truckling, a time-serving ministry, without faith, endurance and holy power."

THE CHURCHES.

EARNEST WORK AMONG OHIO LUTHERANS.

EDITORS CYNOSURE: The English district of the Evangelical Lutheran Joint Synod of Ohio has just closed a very interesting and important convention, which was opened May 13, in the church at Prospect, O., of which the writer is pastor, and closed Tuesday, May 19th.

To the readers of the Cynosure it will be interesting news to learn the proceedings respecting secret orders. One year ago the subject was presented to Synod by the writer in three theses. The readers of your journal were at that time informed respecting the discussion inasmuch as the full report as published in the Lutheran Standard was given. The result of our deliberations was so cheering this year that we cannot wait for you to copy from another paper next week, but hasten to communicate the intelligence directly from headquarters.

Two theses were adopted a year ago, and as the third thesis may not be understood without a knowledge of the two which preceed and upon which the third is based, we shall give them in full.

SUBJECT: What is the relation which Christian Congregations should sustain to members of secret orders, such as Freemasons, Odd-fellows and the like?

THESIS I.

Secret Orders, whether designedly or undesignedly, are at enmity with Christ and his church.

(a) The religion of secret orders excludes Christ.

(b) Secret orders in their nature and tendency, would supplant the Christian church.

THESIS II.

By membership in secret orders the individual confesses a Christless religion, and places himself in opposition to the work of the Christian church.

Thesis III, as adopted at the late convention of synod by a unanimous and hearty vote, reads as follows:

A Christian congregation must therefore, not sustain a fraternal relation to members of secret orders, but,

(a) Those members of the orders making application for membership, must be required to renounce all connection with the order.

(b) Those already in the congregation shall be taken into discipline; that is, they shall be earnestly and repeatedly instructed and admonished; if this prove fruitless, they must be suspended from the holy communion, and if still persisting in their course be finally expelled from the congregation.

This conclusion was not reached hastily or without abundant reasons. The members of Synod were determined not to vote for a position which they could not defend, hence the delay in adopting a position so decided.

The adoption of this thesis means earnest work in the congregations as is evident from the resolution adopted, according to which every pastor is required to report at the next meeting of Synod respecting what has been done against secret orders in the respective congregations. Moreover, there are four visitors in the Synod whose duty it will be to visit the congregations in connection with Synod, and among other things, inquire into the relation the congregation sustains to secret orders.

It was reported to this district that one other district of the Joint Synod of Ohio had taken the same position on this vexed question. Other districts are also requested to take the same position. The two districts which have now taken what is termed advanced grounds, represent about 20,000 church members. The whole Joint Synod is likely before long to take the same position as a body. Joint Synod represents more than 60,000 souls.

More than thirty years have the members of this Synod been troubled with this question. Earnest work has also been done, only that the practical working in the congregations against the foe did not always harmonize. In the year 1857 Joint Synod adopted the following resolution:

"RESOLVED, that we consider as unchurchly all societies outside the church, but especially those called secret societies, so soon as they set up as their object those things which necessarily and according to the Word of God, belong to the church, inasmuch as the church does not only make them unnecessary, but they are also calculated to encourage indifference towards the kingdom of Christ, yea, often entire estrangement from Christianity."

The English district, concerning whose proceedings we have been writing, adopted the following resolutions in the year 1873 whilst in session in the same church in which we met this year:

"Inasmuch as the position of the English District, in accordance with Joint Synod's resolutions and our symbols, is adverse to secret societyism, but some of our congregations are not yet entirely rid of this evil, and it is possible that such secret societyists might be elected delegates to our synodical conventions, and by our receiving them, seemingly find countenance, or at least tolcration, as such in our midst, therefore, to be conscientiously consistent, and seriously in earnest with our testimonies against such orders, be it hereby resolved:

1. That no member of any secret order whatever shall be admitted as delegate from any of our pastoral charges to voice or vote in this Synod.

2. That our congregations containing such element be herewith earnestly admonished to take a similar step in further discountenancing the evil in their midst by not electing such members to any office whatever in their churches.

3. That our pastors are of course expected to look after this matter, and at the same time reminded that the resolutions of Joint Synod mean action in this regard."

But we will stop at this and simply inform the readers of the Cynosure that the writer has been appointed by this Synod to publish in tract form the history of the secret society trouble, particularly in our Synod. We have steadily advanced, taking one citadel after another, and are now in a situation in which we can defy the whole host of darkness, including every secret institution, and as we march to battle we shall sing with Luther:

"Though devils all the world should fill,
All watching to devour us,
We tremble not, we fear no ill,
They cannot overpower us.
This world's prince may still
Scowl fierce as he will,
He can harm us none,
For he is judged—undone:
One little word o'erthrows him."

Most respectfully, D. SIMON.

—The Bible Institute was organized here last week, Monday evening, in the Y. M. C. A. building. Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D. D., of the United Presbyterian Seminary, Xenia, Ohio, has charge of the institution. He informs us that the morning class during the first week has reached 50 or 60, and in the evening some 115 are present. This is an indication of remarkable success. The course of instruction will include Christian doctrine, Biblical exegesis, elementary church history, and practical work. This institute is expected to continue from four to six weeks, and it is desired that as many of the Bible subjects may be covered as possible in the time.

—The revival services conducted by Pres. C. A. Blanchard at the Reunion Presbytrian church in this city were continued during last week, having been somewhat interrupted by his absence the week before at the funeral of Dr. Milligan at Pittsburg. There were a number of conversions and the members of the church were much revived in spiritual life. On Sabbath last Pres. B. preached in Dowagiac, Mich.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church began its session last Thursday morning in the First Presbyterian church, Cincinnati. Rev. George P. Hayes, of Denver, Col., the retiring moderator, preached the opening sermon, after which the General Assembly was formally constituted by a prayer. Dr. E. R. Cravens, of Newark, N. J., was elected moderator.

—The committee from the Baptist churches of this city, appointed to confer with the trustees of the Chicago University about the unfortunate condition of that institution, have resolved to assist if the debt on the institution is to be raised. If the trustees dissolve, they will go on to establish another institution.

—Two hundred conversions are reported at Corsicana, Texas, as the result of the union meeting conducted by the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Cumberland Presbyterian churches.

—Chicago has 45 Lutheran congregations with 23,123 members. The Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists and Episcopalians have 73 congregations, but only 23,427 members.

—The conversions among the Telugus since the great awakening in 1877–'78, have averaged more than 2,000 a year, the number of church members now being nearly 25,000, gathered into thirty-four churches.

—Four hundred and fifty-six new members have been added to the membership of the First Baptist church of Chicago, during the past three years, under the pastorate of Rev. C. S. Henson. The church is now entirely free from debt.

—The number of Methodist churches in the United States is now 19,065, an increase of 324 during the last year. The number of lay members in full connection with the Methodist church, not counting the 182,000 on probation, is 1,604,402, an increase of 4,992 during the last year.

—In compliance with the request of the students of Yale College, D. L. Moody began a series of meetings at Batelle chapel, May 1st. The evening services were attended principally by the students, the professors of the college with their wives and daughters.

—The University of New Mexico has for one of its departments an Indian Industrial School. The American Missionary Association has voted it an annual appropriation of $3,000 for the support of teachers. Congress has voted $25,000 for the erection of buildings. Considerable amounts have been iven by private persons.

—A few days ago in New York, the Rev. Allen Wriehl, a Choctaw Indian, was elected president of the alumni of the Union Theological Seminary.

—Princeton Theological Seminary graduated this year 35 students, more than a fourth of whom have given themselves to foreign mission work. In the seventy-five years of its history the institution has sent out 3,500 alumni, of whom 216 came together at the annual dinner. Forty-eight alumni died during the past year. Their average age was seventy-one and a half years.

—A colored Baptist church in Terrell county, Ga., has 1,200 members, and one in Lee county has between 3,000 and 4,000.

—The Tenth General Council of the Reformed Episcopal church will meet at Peoria, Ill., on the last Wednesday in May.

—The American Bible Society has one hundred and sixty-five colporteurs engaged in its fourth general supply of Bibles to destitute families in the United States.

—The seventy-fifth anniversary of the A. B. C. F. M. will be held in Boston, Oct. 13–16. This will be the seventh time the organization has held its annual meeting in Boston. It is believed that 6,000 friends of missions will be present.

—The report of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., at Atlanta, Ga., showed that 850 associations have 112,000 members and $4,300,000 of property.

—The church of Scotland Disestablishment bill now before Parliament, proposes to disestablish the church of Scotland on the 1st of January, 1887, transferring the church property to commissioners, requiring a rent for the continued occupancy of the church edifices, granting to ministers certain annuities with a continued occupation of manses, and applying the surplus funds of the church to primary secular education, and such other purposes as may be decided upon.

—The American Tract Society has just held its fortieth anniversary in this city. The work of the past year is indicated by the following figures: Donations and legacies, $97,019; sales, $241,969; rents, $14,829; a total of $353,818, which, with balance in the treasury April 1st, 1884, makes a total of $357,-205. There has been expended in manufacturing and issuing publications, $217,093; colportage and colporteur agencies and depositories, $64,912; foreign cash appropriations, $5,875; services and expenses of district secretaries, $16,327; interest and taxes, $9,749; a reduction of mortgage on the society's premises, $5,000; other expenditures, $33,184, making a total of $352,141, and leaving a balance in the treasury of $5,063. Judge William Strong, of Washington, was re-elected President.

—There are in New England 1,481 Congregational churches, and these have admitted since January 1st, so far as reported, 2,312 new members. The churches outside of New England number 2,611, to which have been added 10,040, or a little over four-fifths of the additions reported for the whole country.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The Inter Ocean has lately (May 15 and 25) published the following brief items on the difference between these nations, which throw much light upon the noble stand of Gladstone against war:

"The Anglo-Russian agreement looking to a settlement of the Afghan boundary troubles involves, it is now stated, the abolition of the neutral zone and the fixing of a permanent boundary. This has been the Gladstone theory of settlement for a good many years, and as the Russians are quoted now as favoring the same project, there ought to be smooth sailing toward a settlement. Even Sir Henry Rawlinson says in a recent article: 'No one questions that Russia is entitled to great credit for the civilizing influence that has attended her progress, for the large benefits she has conferred upon humanity in her career of conquest through Central Asia. By crushing the Turcoman raiders, indeed, and by abolishing the slave markets of Khiva and Bokhara, she has restored peace and prosperity to districts which were growing in misery, and has earned the gratitude of thousands of terror-stricken families. Whatever may happen in the future, she has gained imperishable glory in the past in her victories of peace along the desolate frontier of Khorassan.' A nation of whom a Russophobist can write like that ought to be a better neighbor than wild and treacherous tribes."

"The net result of the negotiations in regard to the northern boundary of Afghanistan is to add a strip of fertile territory hitherto unpeopled and ungoverned, to the domain of the Ameer, and enable him to make an almost impregnable frontier. After all the uproar it is now being admitted by London journals at first inclined to alarmist views that Russia has deported herself in a really moderate and reasonable manner and has all along stood upon a policy that was just but pacificatory. The Russians propose to retire from the Zulfikar pass, and with that exception, which is a friendly concession, the boundary is identical with the frontier defined by M. Lessar.

Those who incline to regard this as a Russian advantage are reminded of the fact that though this line is far to the south of that shown as the nominal frontier of Afghanistan on inaccurate English maps, it is far to the north of the territory actually governed by Dost Mahommed, Shere Ali, and Abdur Rahman. The Pall Mall Gazette, which has all along been acting in a pacific and conciliatory spirit, now declares there never was any danger to peace 'except the sword rattling in which we have so incomprehensibly thought fit to indulge. Fortunately, in spite of all the "bullying clack" of our newspapers, the Russian government possessed sufficient common sense to stick to its original policy undisturbed by the insults and the menaces heaped upon it from day to day.'"

A "Made" Atmosphere for Consumptives, Asthma and Catarrh Sufferers.

The Pillow-Inhaler is an invention for making a curative atmosphere for Catarrh and Asthmatic sufferers and Consumptives, in their room at night, so that they get more of that kind of benefit than by a trip to Colorado, Southern California or Florida. It cures in a remarkable manner cases heretofore given up. Unless the lungs are so far gone that they cannot take in enough oxygen for the system it will cure. Extreme cases have yielded to it. The testimony to the results of this invention is beyond question. The whole secret of its success is this: If inhalation for a few minutes a day will relieve, and somctimes cure, Catarrh, Asthma, Consumption, etc. (which experience has proved beyond all doubt), inhaling continuously for eight hours out of the twenty-four will reach cases which have to be abandoned by other means.

No matter how far gone you are with Catarrh, or how much you have suffered with Asthma, or whether you are a victim of incipient Consumption, do not despair until you have read an account of the doings and the results of the Pillow-Inhaler and seen absolute proof of its wonderful healing power. It is endorsed by users all over the United States.

If you are a sufferer, call and see the Pillow-Inhaler at the Chicago Branch office of the Pillow-Inhaler Co., Room 12, Central Music Hall, State and Randolph streets, or scnd for pamphlet and testimonials. If you live nearer the main office, 1520 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, write there for a pamphlet or call at that office and examine the Pillow-Inhaler.—Adv.

WHETHER CHOLERA

Is coming or not every houscholder should know that cleanlincss and disinfeetion are the greatest preventives. The prineipal and surest faetor for this purpose is a perfect cleansing, bleaching and purifying soap, making elothes beautifully white and sweet. It should be exelusively used in all departments of a household. DREYDOPPEL'S SOAP is sold in full pound bars only by all wholesale groccrs and firstclass retailers.

DREYDOPPEL'S BORAX SOAP,

SKIN DISEASES,

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Sores, Pimples, and all Itching Skin Eruptions, are surely eured and prevented by the exclusive use of BEESON'S AROMATIC ALUM SULPHUR SOAP, an exquisite beautifier of the eomplexion and toilet requisite. 25 eents, by druggists or sent by mail.

Address WM. DREYDOPPEL, manufaeturer, 208 North Front Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dreydoppel's Disinfecting Powder, 15 cts. a large box.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH.
HAY-FEVER.
CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST," and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperanee.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Priee in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In eloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In eloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper eovers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	.....	10 per cent
" " "	50	.....	15 " "
" " "	100	.....	20 " "
" " "	250	.....	25 " "
" " "	500	.....	30 " "
" " "	1000	.....	35 " "
" " "	1500	.....	40 " "
" " "	2500	.....	50 " "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Eaeh number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Leeture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY; OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennaeherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST TO THE TEUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS EEFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A eondensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authentieity and aeeuraey of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who scnds to the offiee $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

The Master's Carpet.

BY

Fl. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 631 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the prineiples on whieh the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should proeure and earefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 420 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

HOME AND HEALTH.

AGENTS OF DEATH

WHICH THRIVE IN KITCHEN, PANTRY AND CELLAR.

The first essential to a wholesome preparation of food is a clean, sunny and well-aired kitchen. The latter condition depends on the means at hand of ventilation. All kitchens should have at least two windows, and these on opposite sides of the room. The sash should be lowered and raised by means of pulleys so that without any trouble they may be lifted or drawn down from the top at a moment's notice. Without the proper means of ventilation, and the use of them, the imprisoned odors of the kitchen will penetrate and pollute the air of the whole house. Among the worst of these is grease spilled on the stove, and left to burn off, instead of being wiped off immediately; egg-shells, and even bad eggs, thrown by careless cooks into the ash-pan underneath the fire, instead of into the fire; cooking onions, beans, turnips and cabbage, all combine to send their reeking odors through the house, to be absorbed by carpets, bedding, curtains and clothing. Every housekeeper is aware of the vile odor which is given off by certain vegetables while cooking. Effort should be made, particularly during the first stages of their boiling, to keep the kitchen well aired; otherwise one may go into the spare chamber or parlor if it has not happened to be open, and inhale the stale oder of a dinner prepared three days before.

"It is a fact too little understood," says an authority on the subject, "that water and other liquids, and even semi-fluid substanees, as stewed fruits, juicy vegetables, etc., have the power of absorbing foul gasses from an impure atmosphere to such an extent as to render them half poisonous, from which it follows that disagreeable odors escaping from filthy dish-cloths, burning grease, musty old carpets, pans of stale garbage, foul drain pipes, etc., etc., are not only breathed by the inmates of the house, but they are actually eaten!"

Vessels containing refuse should not stand in the kitchen. A great assistance to the proper disposition of waste matter is a perforated pan or colonder kept in the sink, into which peelings of all kinds, egg-shells and tea and coffee grounds may be emptied and allowed to drain, and then burned after each meal. If other disposition of the garbage must be made there should be kept two buckets, using them alternately and cleansing with a strong alkali each one as it is emptied.

The water in which vegetables of a strong odor have been boiled should not be emptied into the kitchen sink. If there are stationary washstands in the house, and the plumbing is not perfect, the odor will ascend through the pipes to the very upper stories. Wherever there is an outlet, there it will rush and even a flushing of the basins fails to remove the odor.

There is nothing so deleterious to the good health of a household as imperfect drainage. With this disastrous foe to contend with, one may as well toss hygenic rules to the winds. The drain pipes in most modern built houses, which are intended to carry away foul matter, generally perform a double office, conducting back into our dwellings more poisonous materials in the form of gases than they carry out. There is a beautiful residence in one of our suburbs, with fine grounds and rare shrubbery. An underground drain leads from the house, which stands on an eminence, to the street gutter. This conveys slops from the kitchen, laundry and wash stands into the gutter, where they stand from week to week, turning green even to the very mouth of the pipe. The intolerable stench can be detected half a square away. The prevailing winds carry it directly into the mansion. The doctor's carriage often stands at the gateway, for diphtheria is a frequent guest there.

Another enemy to that perfection of health and strength which all women desire and so few possess, is to be found in basement kitchens. They abound in dampness, and as a result in mould, that arch enemy to healthful surroundings. It forces its insidious way into closet and pantry; marks with disease-breeding germ the jellies, the fruits, the vegetables, the bread, and fringes the pumpkin pie. It lines the carpet on the floor and creeps up the wall, defacing paint and paper. We get sick, we have sore throat, we have headaches, rheumatism, our strength fails us, and we never seem to see that back of it all is the damp, illy-ventilated house.

Another important requirement is a perfectly clean, pure cellar in which to keep the every day supplies. It should extend under every foot of the house, and have every facility for thorough ventilation and drainage. Without this it is an unfit place for storing food of any kind, especially milk and meats which are absorbents. It must also be kept free of all decaying matter, as vegetables, fruits, etc., and of everything that will hold dampness and mold.—Cin. Enq.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Invaluable as a Tonic.

Dr. J. L. PRATT, Greenfield, Ill., says: "It is all that it claims to be—invaluable as a tonic in any case where an acid tonic is indicated."

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation.—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lernd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The followiug exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 310,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00. W. I. PHILLIPS.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 6 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

MANURE FOR POTATOES.

Whether it will or will not pay to use nitrate of soda or salts of ammonia on potatoes, in connection with other fertilizers, depends on the price we get for the crop. In ordinary seasons, if the crop sells on the farm in the autumn for 50 cents per bushel, we could use artificial manures containing nitrogen with considerable profit. As a rule, however, our large potato-growers will look to the soil and home-made manure for nitrogen. They will use what barnyard manure they can spare, and turn under grass or clover sod. They will plant on well-drained alluvial land that is rich in organic matter. In such circumstances many of our readers will be thankful for any information as to how they can profitably increase the yield. Many have obtained good results in the use of plaster, hen manure, and ashes, and we have found plaster alone sometimes remarkably bedeficial.

A large crop of potatoes cannot be produced unless the soil has a supply of nitrogen, phosphates and potash, in an available condition. Available nitrogen, however, is a costly article and it is good policy to use up all that the soil annually affords. This we can do by seeing that the growth of the plants is never checked for want of a supply of phosphates and potash. We are now getting in this country superphosphates at reasonable prices, and farmers can use them with profit on such crops as usually command good prices.—American Agriculturist.

HOW TO MANURE POTATOES.

While the manure for this crop, especially if it be from the stable, is usually plowed in, some farmers put it in the hill or the drill, and even in direct contact with the seed, sometimes above the sets and sometimes under them; others put a forkful on the surface after covering the sets. Few, if any, careful experiments seem to have been made for the purpose of learning which way is the best. The report of one such test comes from the agricultural college at Downton, Eng. The fertilizer, a mixture of nitrate, superphosphate and potash salts, was applied at the rate of 811 lbs. per acre, and in four ways: First, under the sets, and covered with soil; second, mixed with the soil on which the set was laid; third, sown on the surface of the covered hill; fourth, same as the first, except that the manure was slightly stirred in with a fork; the remainder of the field was treated like plot three. The crops, estimated for the acre, were: First plot, 6 tons; second plot, 7 tons 6 cwt.; third plot 11 tons 2 cwt.; fourth plot, 13 tons 5 cwt.; the rest of the field, 11 tons, or very nearly the same as plot three.

Althought this is but a single experiment, without any repetitons even on the same field, except that of the simple top-dressing received by plot three and the rest of the field, and without any unmanured plots, yet the results are striking enough and agree well enough, so far as reported, to give encouragement that more useful knowledge may be gained by further experiment.

Another experiment was made to test the effect of a larger quantity of the fertilizer, and in more than one dressing.

The smallest quantity applied was that used in the experiments just described Another plot received a dressing of equal amount as soon as the plants were well up, and the third plot another like dressing later in the season. The last plot was, therefore. manured at the rate of over 2,400 pounds per acre. The manure was applied in all cases in the same manner as on plot four in the other set of experiments.

The result was not encouraging either for the mode of application, or such excessive use of manure; for the second plot, with twice as much manure as the first, gave only 300 pounds more, and the third plot, with three times as much manure, gave only 900 pounds more of potatoes than the first, whose yield was nine tons. Mr. Lawes showed, long ago, that there is a limit beyond which it is not profitable to go in high farming, or a certain limit beyond which it is not profitable to go in liberality of manuring the crop. The above results furnish a good illustration of his argument; even 800 pounds of commercial fertilizer per acre is a liberal dressing as measured by our American practice; perhaps a smaller application, though giving a smaller crop, might have been more profitable.—Dr. G. C. Caldwell in N. Y Tribune.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. On the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each: per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3 25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keyatone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen. $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockmau. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 30 cents each; per dozen $2 70

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland writes Gov. Pierce of Dakota, that he regrets the necessity of enforcing the order vacating the Winnebago reservation, and the Governor asks the settlers, as a favor, to quit the reservation peaceably.

The census of Washington, which has been in progress for sometime under direction of the local authorities, is about completed and shows a population of 204,500.

The State Department building has been tastefully draped with the emblems of mourning, and business at the department was suspended in respect to the late ex-Secretary Frelinghuysen.

COUNTRY.

Near Detroit, Thursday afternoon, Elijah Smith and wife, an aged couple, were killed at a railroad crossing, the man's body being thrown into a field sixty feet away.

During the year ending May 1 there were distributed in the United States 78,245,612 pounds of tea, 80 per cent of which went through the port of New York. Not one pound came to New York on a ship flying the American flag.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company has begun suit to foreclose a mortgage or $10,000,000 held on the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph Company. The trust company alleges that the telegraph company is insolvent and that nothing can save it.

In the Rosenzweig suit for $100,000 damages against the Lake Shore railroad, a bailiff reported to the court at Erie, on Monday, that the conductors on Lake Shore trains, for whom summonses were issued, did not now come into Pennsylvania at all, trains being run through the State without conductors.

Judges Harlan and Gresham were unable to agree Thursday, in Chicago, on the points submitted to them in the Mackin-Gallagher fraudulent ballot case, and the U. S. Supreme Court will have to decide.

By nearly a party vote—Republicans voting no and Democrats aye—the use of Representative Hall at Springfield, Ill., was refused ex-Governor St. John for a lecture.

The first car-load of California cherries ever sent East was shipped from San Francisco last week.

Mrs. Margaret M. Cooley, of Mitchell, Dak., and Mrs. Rebecca Maroat, of Baraboo, Wis., sisters, and both appearing with babes in their arms, were sentenced at Madison, Wednesday to two years each in the penitentiary for perjury.

E. Odlum, a swimming teacher, aged 33 years, jumped from the Brooklyn bridge Tuesday, 135 feet to the river beneath, striking the water on his side, instead of feet first as he intended. Paul Boynton, who, with others, was in a tug to witness the event, jumped overboard and secured the injured man, who spoke but a few words before he expired. It had been his ambition to attempt the exploit of jumping from the bridge.

Henry Bergh, the humanitarian, wants a law passed making it a felony for young people to get married before the age of 25, and he would have clergymen scourged who marry young people with no visible means of support.

The sentry at the bow of H. M. ship Garnet, to which Paul Boynton attached a dummy torpedo while she lay in New York Harbor, has been sentenced to forty-five days' imprisonment, and Lieut. Gardiner, who permitted Boynton and his companions to escape, is under arrest.

Fire at Cincinnati in a building occupied as a printing office, dyeing works, and plating establishment, spread so rapidly as to cut off the escape of several employes. Three girls and two men were killed by jumping from windows, and in the burned building were found ten other corpses of girls. Telegraph and telephone wires prevented the firemen from raising ladders to aid in the escape of the victims. A young man and three girls were injured, two of them fatally.

A man terribly mangled and in a dying condition was found in a freight car at Joliet, Ill., Wednesday. He turned out to be a workingman who had worked in the quarries, named Pezderkas, an Austrian. His lips and nose were cut off, also his tongue, which was hanging by thin shreds of flesh. The skull was fractured. The man was a horrible sight, and was yet alive, though he cannot live. It is supposed to be the work of strikers

The scaffolding on the new postoffice at Baltimore was blown down by the wind Wednesday, one workman being killed and six others fatally wounded.

By an explosion in a gasometer at St. Louis early Wednesday morning, two men were killed and one fatally injured, the head of one of the victims being torn from his body.

A mysterious disease has broken out at Paris Roads, a small town eighteen miles from Pittsburg, Pa. All cases prove fatal, and thus far eight persons have succumbed, while eight others are stricken with the malady.

Four robbers were caught in a store at Burton, Ohio, Wednesday night, and in the ensuing fight one of the burglers was killed, a citizen fatally wounded, and another slightly hurt. The robbers escaped, carrying off $2,000.

In a quarrel at New Straitsville, Ohio, Thursday, Albert Guest shot Marshal Henry Auer fatally, and mortally wounded a boy. A mob broke into the prison at night, took Guest out, hanged him, and riddled his body with bullets.

A mob invaded a church at Sacramento, Cal., Tuesday night, where the Salvation Army were holding services, wrecked the structure, and drove the Salvationists into the street, many of the members, male and female, being severely injured.

FOREIGN.

Two points of dispute in the negotiations between England and Russia on the Afghan question, are Russia's demand for the Zulfikar Pass, and that a Russian agent shall reside at Cabul. A third subject of present discussion is the fortification of Herat by the English. The Ameer objects to the first of the above-named points, England to the second, and Russia to the third.

The dynamiters, Cunningham and Burton, sentenced yesterday to penal servitude for life, asserted their innocence to the last.

Ten per cent of the British troops remaining at Suakim, on the Red Sea, are ill. An armored train patrols the Suakim-Berber Railway every night as far as Otao. The hostile Arabs are very active as marauders. Once they succeeded in obstructing the tracks with heaps of earth and brushwood after the patrol train had passed, but the train on its return easily pushed through the obstruction.

The British evacuation of the Soudan commenced Thursday. Merchants and civilians are leaving, fearing to remain after the departure of the troops. The thermometer in the region now averages 114 in the shade.

The bark Brilliant brought to Quebec Thursday night the crews of the bark Bayard and the steamer Mary Louise, which vessels had been crushed by ice on the Newfoundland banks. The crew of the Bayard were on a berg three days and nights and suffered great hardships, and had barely been rescued by the Mary Louise when that craft was crushed, both crews then taking to boats, and being finally picked up by the Brilliant.

LETTERS

Containing cash received during the week ending Friday, May 23:

A. Small, C. D. Rockwell, Wm. McBride, D. McDonald, I. A. C. Rose, John Ball, W. D. Anderson, Phil. Beck, E. Dresser, J W. Rogers, P. P. Chapman, S. Shroyer, Jas. R. Sharp, A. W. Foss, Rev. J. Rice, J. H. King, R. Drinkwater, F. Alexander, Mrs. M. A. Dodge, Mary Phillips, J. P. Lytle, C. Clark, E Harrison, A. C. Newell, A. Jackson, E. F. Warring, Wm. Evans, J. G. Humphries, Mrs. E. Stone, N. Oakes, H. Minton, H. C. Joiner, E. C. Schumacher, Rev. J. A. Pollock, G. S. Robinson, Mrs. M. Minx, John A. Burnett, Wm. Dunton, Mrs. J. W. Moore, J. W. Rogers, W. S Marston, J. H. King, W. Taylor, A. H. Springstein, I. F. Short, J. F. Williams, E. A, Dudley, H. Young.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@88½
No. 3		@84
Winter No 2		@96
Corn—No. 2		48
Oats—No. 2		33½
Rye—No. 2		71
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 05
Butter, medium to best	10	@20
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		12
Potatoes per bus	35	45
Seeds—Timothy	1 53	@1 62
Flax	1 30	1 38
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra		@5 15
Common to good	2 40	@5 00
Hogs	3 40	@4 30
Sheep	2 50	@3 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	87	@1 10
Spring		96
Corn	53	@55
Oats	40	@47
Mess Pork		12 00
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 80	@5 40
Hogs	3 80	@4 25
Sheep	2 00	@3 30

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford a more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"In an incid[illegible] the story tells much about the manner [illegible]cting lodges and much about the spirit an[illegible]s of Masonry. The story covers the period [illegible]duction and murdering of William Mo[illegible]e strategic position from which the author [illegible]t a charm in the book, while it gives a good [illegible]ity to show the workings of the order. We [illegible]he people would read it."—Telescope.

"One of the most fascinating narratives we ever [illegible] and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV CHINIQUY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED!

Rider's Improved Pillow-Sham Holder. Agents have grand success. Housekeepers will have from 1 to 5. Send for circulars and see what it is any way. E. W. RIDER.
Mention the Christian Cynosure. Racine, Wis.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St. N. Y.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.
DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. MME. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.
All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 37. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1885. WHOLE No. 788.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The United Brethren at Fostoria..... 8
To American Congregationalists..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
An Australian's View of Freemasonry..... 1
Marion (Poetry)..... 2
What is Schism?..... 2
SELECTED:
The Masonic Penalty..... 3
The Three Ruffians of Sun-worship..... 3
Christianity a Force in Society..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XXI. and XXII. 4
NEW ENGLAND LETTER:
The Grand Army of the Republic..... 5
REFORM NEWS:
From the General Agent.. 5
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
LITERATURE..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Rockford Scandinavian Church; Michigan Holiness School; Ritualism; The Law of the Kingdom; An Englishman's Views; Pith and Point..... 5,6
Commencement at Wheaton 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES:
Presbyterians in Cincinnati; The U. B. General Conference; The Holiness Convention..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
FARM NOTES..... 13
SECRET EMPIRE..... 14
HOME AND HEALTH..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

Intoxicating liquor is responsible for the latest Indian outbreak in New Mexico. Daily reports of savage murder and rapine have come in from various points of the Territory and the Indian Bureau correspondence sent to Washington attributes the horrible work to a kind of whisky which the Apaches manufactured in large quantities; and knowing the business was prohibited and fearing punishment, they resolved to complete their incipient rebellion with a whole one, and so took the war-path. The government would save money by supporting a temperance society an every reservation.

The report from the Internal Revenue office at Washington for the ten months ending with April must give some encouragement to temperance workers. During the same time a year ago the revenue from spiritous liquors was nearly seven million dollars ($6,978,395) more than during the period just closed. The tobacco revenue increased this year $67,637, or about three per cent; and that from fermented liquors, $165,935. If we interpret these figures aright, they indicate a great falling off in the liquor business. Various causes may have operated to reduce the revenue, but as the tax is collected only on liquors withdrawn from bonded warehouses for consumption, the figures show that temperance agitation is not without its effect.

During the great railroad strikes of 1877, Joseph Cook argued with great power that one obvious lesson of the strike was that there should be a discrimination in wages in favor of the man with wife and children. A striking proof of the justness of Mr. Cook's appeal is found in the late fatal strike among the quarrymen at Lemont and Joliet, near Chicago. The proprietors in a statement to the public say: "No one disputes the right of every laborer to stop work when he chooses, that is to strike. The evil complained of at Joliet is that the mass or laborers, men with families and homes, wished to work, but that a few unmarried men, who had only been here a short time and who had no property or ties to hold them here or to bind them to good order, not only stopped working themselves, but by force, violence, and threats of murder and crime drove out the men who were working and who wanted to work, pounding them and maltreating them whenever that was needed to compel obedience." There is no fact more obvious than that employers should, as a matter of self-protection, encourage those men who act as a conserving force in their business. Better wages for such men are due for humanitarian reasons also, and would encourage single men to seek to be wed and anchor them to a steady life. For "he that hath a wife and children hath given hostages to fortune."

The final but equivocal success of General Logan, in securing a re-election from Illinois, is interpreted by his followers in every quarter as a long step toward the Presidential nomination in 1888; and their frequent and open advocacy of their favorite is arousing some question as to the disposition of Mr. Blaine, who is in every respect Logan's superior as a public man. But this agitation means infinitely more to the American people. It means that the secret empire of the lodge is becoming more confident of its power in American politics, and will not hesitate to choose the highest place for one of its pampered darlings. As the idol of the Grand Army and a Freemason of the 32nd degree (Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret) Logan can command the votes of a million men who have sworn their manhood away to one sort of a lodge or another; and surrounded by this phalanx, his demand for the Presidential chair will be almost imperious. Now that the enemy has shown his hand, it is time that Americans of every political complexion should be uniting their forces and concentrating their efforts. There are men who have been named for high offices in the Republic who are free from lodge entanglements, and whose feet have never been tripped by the snare of the liquor power,—men whom honest men and the Christian church have delighted, and still delight, to honor. Some such name must soon be brought to the front, for already the enmies of American principles are drawing up their line of battle.

The sentence of an Idaho court pronounced upon seven Mormons the other day shows that the vigorous efforts of the United States officers in Utah have a contagious influence. But imprisonment and fine for the crime of polygamy does not yet deter the missionaries of this villainy from gaining ignorant converts in Europe, a large company of whom debarked at New York the other day. Another report of singular nature just comes from New York. John W. Young, a son of Brigham, is said to be in that city negotiating the sale of all the personal property of Mormondom to a syndicate of capitalists. The prosecutions have driven the Mormons to consider the desperate step of immigrating in a body to Mexico. Young does not meet much encouragement with his part of the business and should the exodus take place the Mexicans would be found more terrible neighbors than the Americans who have so long been criminally indifferent toward this infamy. The failure of the Mormon commission which visited President Cleveland a few weeks ago, to get any word of encouragement may have helped their determination to this desperate move. It is at least certain that the Mormon hierarchy expected a different turn of affairs with the return of the Democrats to power. Having always voted with that party they hoped for the admission of Utah as a State, when under the shield of State rights they could defy the government and popular execration would affect them as little as water a duck.

As time passes a more reasonable sentiment possesses the English mind on the Afghan trouble, and the honor due Mr. Gladstone is beginning to be paid him. The London Daily News on Saturday, spoke thus highly of the premier in an editorial: "Mr. Gladstone has crowned his illustrious career by again rendering the country signal service. We must not forget, now that peace is secured, how near we came to a was such as this generation has not seen. Neither mere obstinacy nor skill in diplomacy could have averted it. The task required a combination of the highest qualities which go to make up the complex gift of statesmanship."

But it is not yet certain that peace is secured. The "eternal vigilance" which is the price of liberty, is sometimes the only guaranty of peace. While the kaleidoscope of British poletics has again turned toward Ireland, yet back of the shifting scene is still the stern and bloody visage of a Russian war. The "crimes act" which the lodge desperadoes of Dublin inflicted upon Ireland, has long enough repressed that miserable people and Mr. Gladstone is willing to remit it. There is almost an irreconcilable division in his cabinet on this question just when division would be fatal. A compromise bill limited to one year is now expected, which will hold the Liberal party together, and not drive the radical wing into a union with the Tories. A serious division would put the latter in power and the pending election would be pretty sure to be followed by a Russian war. In fact, the coming year in England may make more history than any decade in the century. But we are instructed to pray for rulers and men in authority, and there is a power mightier than the Tory party or the Russian Czar.

The sunrise of freedom is lighting up the shores of the great South American empire of Brazil and the shackles are being struck from a million and a half of slaves. Emancipation has been a gradual process in Brazil. Since the law of 1853 forbidding the importation of any more slaves more than a million persons have obtained their freedom. Since 1871 the progress of emancipation has been rapid, the law adopted that year providing that all children born of slave parents should be free, as well as all slaves belonging to the State. The same law set apart an emancipation fund to ransom the slaves of private persons, many of the slaveholders assisting materially in the work. The new ministry of Brazil has just adopted a measure for the final blow, the extinction of the slave system. A general registry of slaves will be made, with a declaration of their value. Slaveholders will be indemnified by 5 per cent policies to the amount of one-half the accredited value of the slave and a service of five years pays the remainder. While Russia seems to surpass all other nations in the modern history of emancipation, both Russia and Brazil, though regarded as socially and morally much behind the United States, put us to the blush, for we suffer much in the contrasting of our way to universal freedom with theirs.

AN AUSTRALIAN'S VIEW OF FREEMASONRY.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Since you esteemed my few remarks on Melbourne Freemasonry worthy a place in your columns of Nov. 20, 1884, and as I am now at leisure to give a few more that have occurred to me since, I pen them for the good of all; and if you think them also worthy of insertion in your enlightening paper, I send them for that purpose.

From what I have seen of Freemasonry, there is little or nothing in it to constrain a bad man to be a good one, or to make a good one better; while there is a deal in it to make a bad man worse, on account of the protection he expects to get from brethren of the order, and which I have no doubt is often expected to screen from justice when the culprit is discovered. You will have seen in the book Worse than Murder which I sent to you, that many men have been punished very lightly for having committed very great crimes, which looks as if justice had been shunted to favor Freemasons; while others have been inordinately sentenced for comparatively small offenses. And complaints have been made of accused persons making Masonic signs in court. I have no doubt that such are often the case where Freemasonry flourishes in quantity irrespective of quality.

A church, an order, or a society is not to be condemned because a few bad men have got in and abused the privileges bestowed upon them, and brought a bad repute. All institutions are apt to be abused, but when any institution has become so corrupt that the majority of its members burke justice, truth and right, it is high time that institution ceased to exist. From what I have experienced from "brother" Masons, I may believe that eternal justice cannot permit Freemasonry to last very much longer, if the practices of Freemasons throughout the world are no better than what I have found at Melbourne. To think to burke justice truth and right effectually is as silly as chickens that put their heads in a corner when they are chased.

When the order was established (or supposed to have been) women were held of little account in life, which was altogether different from the present times, hence they were not admitted, and the custom has been continued. But as woman now has a place in society (in Christian lands at least) it often occurred to me while attending Masonic meetings that if Freemasonry was so good for men, it should be much better with the admission of women, and equally good for them. It seemed an unnatural state of affairs that men alone should meet in lodge and at refreshment table, when if mothers, wives, widows, sisters and daughters of Masons were present there would be far more peace and harmony and purity, under their restraining influence and intuitive sense of right and who would thus prevent the existence of "rowdy lodges." It seemed as if Masonry needed modifying so as to make it conform to the respect given to woman in Christian lands, instead of to her degradation under Eastern barbarism. But it is too late now for respectable women to join the order, as so many men have been admitted with whom no respectable men would care to associate, or even to meet in lodge, let alone women.

I am of the opinion that Freemasonry has served its purposes; that it is out of date, obsolete, in these times of general knowledge, education and comparative civilization, that there is no need for it now, and that what there is of it is chiefly degenerated into "caw me," "caw thee," and guzzling clubs. And any man with a mind of his own, even if he has not the society of loved wife or child, can pass his time to far more profit and pleasure in his own home than in reiterating the routine of lodge formulas. From all I can see of Freemasonry, it is plain to me that it will become so low that no one with any respect for himself will care to be known as a member of the order, and it will ultimately burst up or crumble away under the preponderance of its own disreputability.

The other day there was a Masonic "show" to lay the foundation stone of the first Masonic hall to be built in Melbourne, and the brethren walked only two abreast, which made the procession a long one. They should have gone in single file like Chinamen on a tramp, then it would have been twice as long! As it was, I observed that the vast majority were "young Masons," and noticed an absence of "old Masons" possessing any position in life worthy of preserving. It seemed to me as if they were ashamed to be seen with such a holy order, so kept aloof from making a public acknowledgement of the craft. The richest man in Victoria (a not over-educated gentleman) has been caught by the representatives of Hiram and made Grand Master of the English, Irish and Scottish constitutions, each of which were formerly under a Provincial Grand of its own. In reply to the toast after laying the stone he said, "there was not a day of his life but what he was reminded of the good feelings of the Masons toward him," the truth of which was far more likely that he was reminded constantly of the good feelings of the Masons for his money. But as he was said to have "softening of the brain" such a mistake on his part was excusable. There is no doubt that the members of the craft will take great care of him,—or of his money. I have no hope that he will make Victorian Freemasonry worthy of a Christian land. Yours truly, C. F. ROBERTS.

Melbourne, Australia, March 31, 1885.

All martyrdoms are said to have looked but meanly when they were suffered. For stripping and bonds are ever shameful and the elect are stripped and bound, "when we see him there is no beauty that we should desire him." But though cast out they yet are blessed, some eyes discerning that the Lord himself is with them, if brethren are not, while within is the peace of God, for none can rob the true soul of that inward satisfaction which the truth itself ministers. This is the appointed way. The high road of the Holy Cross; suffering first and then a kingdom; to be wronged, misrepresented, punished, cast out; and then to have every secret wrong redressed and every deed of truth and love manifested,—this is yet the royal way, the end of which is assured even from its beginning—Jukes.

MARION.

BY ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

His camp, it is the deep green wood,
Behind a natural foss;
His tent, it is the starry dome,
His couch a bed of moss;
His troopers lie at graceful ease,
Beneath the misty moon,
Or watch the silent shadows fall
Across the deep lagoon.

The smouldering camp-fire flickers low,
And sheds a feeble light,
To where the weary picket guards
The bivouac of the night;
While Marion dreams of fierce attack
Of shot and crash of steel,
And sees before his dauntless band
The hated Tories reel.

But sudden through the green-wood sounds
The gallop of a steed,
And dashes in a trusty scout
With eager, headlong speed;
Springs to the earth with fiery bound,
And lets the troopers know,
The Red Coats and the Tories be
Upon the stream below.

As when to some beleagured host
The tardy succor comes,
With loaded wains for starving men
And roll of martial drums;
As then the famished multitude,
Spring up with eager joy,
And like a swollen river, rush
To meet the glad convoy.

Thus up sprang Marion and his men,
Beneath the green-wood tree,
And hold and sudden purpose fired
The hands of liberty.
By glare of torches gleaming red,
The eager squadrons meet;
Then echoes down the broad highway
The thunder of their feet.

Oh! calmly past the Tory camp
The placid river steals,
And far the watchfires ruddy glow
Its shining breast reveals;
The sleepy guard in peace secure,
Dull and incautious seems,
And all but hungry chargers, doze
Within the land of dreams.

But hark! the drowsy patrol hears
The heat of rushing hoofs,
Swift falling like the winter's hail
Upon the city's roofs.
From east and west and north they come—
Ah, how the patrols shiver!—
That rush is heard on every side,
Except where rolls the river.

Then comes the picket's challenge loud,
His volley rings aright;
No answer hut the rush of hoofs,
Like ghost steeds through the night.
And scarce the Tories are awake
From their uneasy dreams,
When flashing in the misty light,
Bold Marion's saber gleams.

In vain the Red Coats stand to arms,
And up the Tories spring,
And bring each rusty firelock down
To battle for their king.
The fiery bands of freedom reaped
That rich red harvest soon,
And sent their shouts of triumph forth
Beneath the trusty moon.

Oh! grand in those old battle days,
The soul of freedom rose,
And triumphed over woe and want,
As well as martial foes;
The swamp by day, the ride at night,
The toil without reward—
To freedom in her natal hour
God gave a holy guard.

But now are few to speak for truth,
Without the meed of gold;
And what was once reward of worth,
Is in the market sold.
The rich man in the purple rides,
The poor man bears the load,
And suffering, from ten thousand tongues
Cries to the living God.

—Be content to wade through the waters betwixt you and glory with him, holding his hand fast, for he knoweth all the fords.—Rutherford.

WHAT IS SCHISM?

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

"That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another." 1 Cor. 12: 25. It is evident that the body here spoken of is the body of Christ, and that any schism or rending of this body is condemned.

What is this sin of schism?

1. It is not separation from unbelievers in Christ. This is distinctly commanded (2 Cor. 6: 14–18) and ought to be far more complete than it is. Christians were once called "the sect of the Nazarenes." It should be their glory to be so in fact.

2. It does not consist in the separation of Christians into separate households. The family is of Divine appointment. Communism, however it may have been tolerated for a time, was not commanded, and is not essential to unity in Christ.

3. Local division is not schism. The local churches of Asia Minor and Syria were widely separated, but there was no schism.

4. The exclusion (after due labor) of offenders and false brethren is not this iniquity, for such division is expressly commanded. (Matt. 18: 15 18; 1 Cor. 6: 5).

5. It does not consist in a withdrawal from an apostate church. This is specially commanded. (Rev. 18: 4–5). Even though some of God's people may not have heard the command, "Come out of her, my people," yet it is our duty to do so, and it implies no schism on our part. The responsibility rests on those who remain in such an apostate body.

6. It does not consist in withdrawing from a sect. If organizing sects is right, then it may be right to divide a sect and make another, but if the organization of a sect is wrong, then it cannot be wrong to cease, in such a case, to be a partaker. Surely the Corinthians who had become Paulites and Cephasites were not bound to always continue in their forbidden conduct.

7. Organization among Christians is not of necessity schismatic. The primitive churches had some organization. They had elders, deacons, and pastors, and had well-defined principles of church government; and yet this no more implied schism in the whole body than the organization of a school district implies a separation from the State. Organization is one of the essentials to united effort and is never to be confounded with the sin of sect-making.

But, positively, the sin of schism does consist in dividing the true and living members of the body of Christ.

This was done, first, by becoming the followers of men rather than Christ. This was the sin of the Corinthian Christians, which is condemned by the apostle. (1 Cor. 1: 10–13). Paul, Apollos and Peter were distinguished teachers. The Corinthians chose them for party leaders, and while they all acknowledged Christ, they also became Paulites, Cephasites, and Apollosites. A few did not join a sect, but said they were "of Christ." It is difficult to see how there is any difference in principle between these and modern divisions. Calvinists, Wesleyans, and Lutherans are each the followers of a great teacher. Each respects the others as Christians, but holds he has a more excellent way.

Difference in office and gifts was made a basis of schism. This was specially referred to in the passage in 1 Cor. 12: 25. The object of the Apostle was to show that though all the members have not the same office, nor the same gifts, yet all are of the same body, and hence there should be no schism (rending) of the body. This form of division is seen in the arrogance of the priestly office in which, because of their position or gifts some assume to have more power than their brethren.

Divisions on account of creeds is another reason. The sacred Scriptures are the creed of the church, and are declared to be "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work." 2 Tim. 3: 16–17. The adoption of any other creed and making it the basis of a sect is spoken of as the sin of heresy. Thus Paul in his letter to Titus says, "A man that is a heretic (margin, divider or schismatic) after the first and second admonition reject; knowing that he that is such is subverted and sinneth, being condemned of himself." Titus 3: 10. Albert Barnes says, "That the true notion of this word (hairesis, heresy) is that of one who is the promoter of a sect or party. Such a man according to Scripture usage is a heretic." (Barnes' notes on Titus 3). This class of heretics are referred to by Paul who directed the church in Rome to "Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them." (Rom. 16: 17).

These were makers of sects, and are elsewhere classed with gross offenders.

By making other terms of fellowship than those prescribed by the Head of the church. The fellowship of all Christians is with Christ and in Christ. To exclude from our fellowship any who are in fellowship with him is to assume that we are greater than our Lord. This would be regarded as exceedingly strange, if custom did not make it familiar. The theory that there is a distinction betwcen Christian and church fellowship, and that we may accord the former while we deny the latter, is one of those modern assumptions that finds no warrant in the sacred Scriptures. Slowly, but surely, the entire Christiau world are learning the lesson which the Lord taught Peter, "What God hath cleansed call not thou common."

THE MASONIC PENALTY.

An article on "Masonic Oaths" by Rev. F. M. Foster appeared in the Examiner of Bellefontaine, O., May 22nd. The following portion is an able argument against the whole system on account of the savage penalties imposed:

"The oath with its penalty indicates that this band of men claims to have the power of life and death. Yet they represent no government, no authority, no law. We ask who has commissioned them to kill and to save alive? It is unnecessary to state to Christians that that kind of an association, when it takes life, is committing murder. There is not a judge in the United States but that would call such deed by such name. And more, there is not a judge but that would pronounce every man in the organization, if it should execute the above penalty, equally guilty. When Lord Cavendish and Burke were murdered in Ireland in the recent past, the government of Britain did not stop with the three who did the deed; but the whole secret society, as far as apprehended, were hanged. Eleven were put to death. If one of the forty Jews that "bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul," had succeeded in taking Paul's life, the thirty-nine would have been guilty in the same degree. If a Mason in England, Francc, Sweden, executes the penalty upon his fellow who has seen fit to reveal, every Mason in the whole organization becomes in the same manner guilty.

"It may be objected by the Mason that when he received or administered the oath with its death penalty, he had no intention that it be carried out. If this were possible, it would be, 1st—trifliug with a most solemn act of worship. The oath is calling upon God to witness the honesty of intention and determination to be faithful to obligation. But, 2d—the language used does not admit of such construction. Here is the languagc: "A firm and steadfast resolution to perform the same, without any hesitation, mental reservation, or secret evasion of mind whatever." This annihilates all reserved theories of escape from responsibility. If Masonry ever executed the penalty to the Master Mason degree the accountability widens out to the most distant member. To impose that oath and penalty presumes the right to execute. If it is executed the whole organization becomes answerable at the bar of God. More still—whatever there is of wickedness in members and whose deeds the order succeeds in hiding; as well as the guilt of those who, when arraigned, succeed through the influence of Masonry, in getting acquitted, all this comes home to every member of the organization and is laid, not at a rate per cent, but in full measure, at his door.

"There is somethiug strange in Christians standing in a lodge of such mixed characters yoking with them their responsibility. We are at a loss for a theory upon which they attempt justification."

THE THREE RUFFIANS OF SUN-WORSHIP.

The demonstration of the identity of the ancient pagan sun-worship with Freemasonry has been rendered sufficiently clear, especially in the works of Mr. E. Ronayne, but further evidence, especially when drawn from undoubted Masonic sources, is always valuable in confirmation of the truth. The Freemason, a small weekly (and weakly) sheet of Detroit, has an editorial on the "death of the sun," which, though betraying gross ignorance, yet shows no less emphatically the similar origin and character of Freemasonry and the old pagan systems:

"The priests in the nations of antiquity ruled the souls of the masses by their superior knowledge of astronomy.

"The facts of astronomy were most carefully hidden from the common people, and the priesthood only communicated them to each other, veiled in allegorical fables, disclosing the key to him only after taking the highest degrees of the mysteries, and given proofs of his fidelity and zeal.

"The sun was personified under many names, but one great feature, most prolific of fables, was his great decline in light and heat during winter and his renewal in glory and power at the vernal equinox and summer solstice.

"These annual events gave rise to the fable that the sun was born and slain each year. According to the beautiful poetic allegory of the ancients, the sun is said to be slain by the three autumnal months, September, October and November, assaulting him in successiou, whom he encounters in his passage around the zodiac toward the winter solstice, or 'southern gate of the zodiac' so called because at that point the sun has reached his lowest declination.

"Glowing with light and heat the summer sun reaches the autumnal equinox September 21st, steadily declining in light and heat, but passes the assault of September without serious harm; escaping from September, the assault of October is far more serious, and leaving that month he is deprived of the greater part of his power and shorn of more than half of his glory. Proceeding on his journey toward the southern tropic, escaping the assault of October, he encouuters November, more deadly far, who gives the 'fatal blow,' and on the 23rd of December he lies dead at the winter solstice, having reached his lowest declination, the shortest day of the year."

CHRISTIANITY AS A FORCE IN SOCIETY.

When Hon. Chauncey M. Depew voices the opposition to free thought, let it be understood that he speaks the sentiment of many lawyers—many of the most successful lawyers. Let it be understood that his reputation as a lawyer stands higher than that of Robert G. Ingersoll; that he is as well known in the East as Ingersoll is in the West; that he can command a larger and more cultured audience than the antagonist of Christianity.

Not long since, at a meeting of the Nineteenth Century Club, in New York, being called upon to answer a paper on Society by Julian Hawthorne, Mr. Depew said:

"Mr. Hawthorne's case, stripped of its brilliant illustrations and attractive presentation, is simply this: Man is depraved by nature. He is prone to crime against others and vice against himself. The church and society keep him in order by a system of punishments and rewards. To escape the one and receive the other he suppresses his natural inclinations, and lives and dies a hypocrite. The church, therefore, having totally failed to produce men and women who are good from right motives, science and free thought are developing a nobler manhood and womanhood from within, and their creations, actuated by neither sordid fear nor hope, will regenerate mankind.

"Starting, as the author does, from Calvin's premises, in which I agree with him, he reaches conclusion which all history and experience refute. The one society which presented the ideal of science and free thought was the Athenian at its best. But while the highest intellectual activity, speculation and research existed among the few, woman, until she unsexed herself, like Aspasia, had no part or recognition, and the masses were neglected brutes or slaves. In the decay of the Roman Empire the old heathen faiths had broken down, Christianity was not yet understood, and there was emancipation from both faith and superstition, and the result was that for ages the world was peopled by wild beasts, and the only existence of right was the sufferance it received from might. Liberty, learning, and proper living thrived and spread only where the church best and most vigorously believed and disseminated the teaching of the New Testament. Look at England of 150 years ago. Death was the punishment for nearly every offence. To attend public executious was one of the recreations of the fashionable. To torture men and women in the stocks was popular amusement. The prisons were hells of frightful crimes and hopeless sufferings. For a gentleman to beat his wife was regarded as a very proper thing to do. Now the prisons are reformed, and reformation the object of confinement. The wounded, the sick, the helpless, the insane, the aged, and the orphans are nursed, tenderly cared for, cured, and befriended in numberless hospitals, homes, and asylums. Every one of these grand charities have sprung directly from the church as it is, both here and in England. The disciples of science and free thought, in the absorbing effort to find what they term their liberty, have never had time or thought for the relief or elevation of their fellow-men. A grand work is done daily by self-sacrificing and modest people (who seek no other reward than their consciences) among the poor in the tenement houses, the missions, and industrial schools. Women of the most delicate nurture and luxurious surroundings brave everything in their labors. They are invariably the disciples of the churches, no free-thinkers are to be found among them. Last summer, in London, I attended Sunday morning service at Westminster Abbey. The grandeur of the temple, the glory of its associations, the splendid liturgy and ceremonial of the Episcopal church formed fit and lofty accompaniments for a sermon from Canon Farrar, which in thought and diction could worthily stand beside the best classics in our language. The next Sunday I sat upon the wooden benches in the plain meeting-house of Mr. Spurgeon and listened to his homely but most powerful eloquence. No more striking contrast within the Christian community was possible. And yet I found that in like measure, but each in its own way, the old cathedral and the Baptist assembly were centres from which radiated to every part of London every form of Christian education and charity. London has many scientific and sociological associations of world-wide fame, but the poor, the needy, the helpless, and the lost of the great city know them not. A better society never has and never will exist than that in New England, for its first one hundred and fifty years, and its whole life was dominated by the family Bible. You are all familiar with the care and growth of children. Fear and rewards have always been the elements of their education. From the first dawnings of intelligence they are taught that they will be punished if they do wrong, and benefited if they do right, both here and hereafter. If this system was abandoned, and an effort made to find some higher nature, which would assert itself in a beautiful and reverent life, the boy would break the windows, smash the looking-glasses, maul his younger brothers and sisters, cut up your best picture, and finally cut your throat. The old-fashioned way of arousing fears and inspiring hopes does not make these children hypocrites. A conscience is gradually aroused within them. By its teachings they act, because it is more gratifying in every sense to rightly live, and these boys and girls, instead of becoming broken or mean-spirited, are full of sensitive honor and pure aspirations. I confess I do not understand these evangels of free thought. They use a language of strange terms and beautiful generalities which convey no meaning to me. It is probably because my mind and education are both deficient. Here and elsewhere I have listened with the most earnest attentiou, but when they have tumbled down my church and buried my Bible and destroyed all the foundations of faith, they offer in return only phrases, collocations of words and terminologies as mixed as chaos and as vague as space."—Christian Nation.

All the good that President Cleveland may accomplish during his administration cannot compensate for the outrage he seems determined to perpetrate upon the six thousand settlers on the Winneba go reservation in Dakota, in compelling them to leave the homes they have been building and the farms they have been cultivating for the past three or four months. Most of them spent all they had in the world to secure these homes; they went there in good faith, with the approval of the government and in violation of nobody's rights except perhaps of a few predatory Indians. This reservation is a fertile and for years uuoccupied tract about the size of two ordinary counties, lying east of the Missouri between the towns of Blunt and Chamberlain. It is surrouuded by thrifty settlements and the people going into the country have looked with longiug eyes upon its rich creek bottoms studded with timber and abounding in rich grasses. President Arthur and Secretary Teller did not declare it open to settlement without due consideration and good legal advice. It shows great lack of courtesy in the present administration to annul the act of their predecessors, where a mere technical question was involved and nobody's life, liberty or happiness interfered with. But iu his determiuation to put these settlers off the land by force of arms, President Cleveland is doiug them irreparable injury and benefiting no one. It is an act worthy of a despot, and one for which the injured people will be entitled to recover heavy damages. In that case the general public will be made to suffer for this senseless order. No adequate motive can be seen unless it is to strike a blow at the prosperity of Dakota which must soon come into the Union as a great State.—Am. Building Ass'n. News.

Satan selects his disciples when they are idle, but Christ chose his while they were busy at work, either mending their nets or casting them into the sea.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XXI.

MARTHA AND NELSON.

The motive which had led Nelson to leave Jacksonville no longer existed. The recent labor troubles had driven off many of the old hands, and new ones had been taken on, so that there was practically an almost entire change of the working force. The men for the present had enough of cut-throat organizations, and it was not likely that the Order of the Red Mark would meet with a speedy resurrection.

Martha, seated at her work-table with Nelson at her side, felt almost as if the past few weeks had been an ugly dream. Only in her visions of their future home there would ever be one form missing; unless, indeed, he came as a gentle ghost whose impalpable hands should drop unseen benisons, sweetening their united lives as with perfumes of Paradise.

Nelson took up Martha's scissors and began to toy with them in rather absent fashion. He had some news to tell her. At last it came abruptly.

"Matthew Densler has offered me the foreman's place at the works, and I have accepted it."

Martha did not speak at once; her emotions at the announcement were somewhat divided. She kept on with her work but her hands trembled, for Martha had her weaknesses like other women where those she loved were concerned, and the terrible scenes of the riot were still vivid in her mind.

"I left Jacksonville," continued Nelson, with perhaps an intuitive perception of what she was thinking, "because it was more to my taste to decamp quietly for a season than to be forced to go about with a concealed dirk or revolver ready to use on my fellow-man. But as you well know, my chief thought was Tom—to get him out of the neighborhood of the saloons, and rid myself of the constant worrying fear that when he got well—I never thought there could be any other ending"—and Nelson caught his breath with a half sob—"his slumbering appetite for drink would again be awakened, and I should have a repetition of all the old misery and trouble. I remember so well how I felt the first time Tom came home to me intoxicated, and I realized the terrible truth—that there was a double curse on him. And yet it wasn't his fault, poor boy, that wretches in the semblance of men should decoy him into saloons and make him drunk for their amusement."

"Nelson," said Martha, earnestly, "try to look away from human wickedness and cruelty to the dear Lord's compassion in thus taking Tom to himself, and so mercifully restraining his appetite all through those long months of his illness, that you only remember what a sweet, loving, gentle soul he was."

"I do try to, but my heart aches so to see him back in his old place; and then the thought that I shall never minister to his comfort again, never tell him stories or sing him songs, comes surging over me like a great black wave, and leaves me feeling so sore and empty. I know it is selfish; that I ought to be glad he is safe, but it is hard."

"God knows it is," said Martha, with a sympathetic tremble in her voice.

"Most people would wonder I felt so," said Nelson bitterly. "They would say I was only rid of a burden. Little they know about it."

"Average human nature is coarse-grained," said Martha, soothingly. "We must make some allowances. You know I don't feel in that way, nor does Martin Treworthy. Dear old man! I believe you are just like a son to him."

"I dare say I shall feel differently when I get more used to not having Tom to think of and care for. But it is like ravelling out a part of my life, and I really think it is better for me, all things considered, that I should come back and take my old place at the works. I have always hated the noise and heat and grime of the shop, and naturally I have a great love for the soil, and for all the sights and sounds connected with a farm, but just now I couldn't bear them. Densler is really more just than the average of the manufacturers, and I am hoping that since his late experience he will see the reasonableness of adopting a more liberal and conciliatory policy with his workmen. And there is another thing. I don't want to forego taking a freeman's part in the next election. I think we shall have an exciting time, when every righteous vote will be needed. Martha, the prophets of our day may cry, 'peace, peace!' but there can be no peace till these great questions that are pressing to the front and clamoring for an answer are settled. And it is American working men, not millionaires, nor the scum and riffraff cast by the old world on our shores who have got to settle them. By God's grace I will be one to stand at my post and fire my ballot whenever and wherever I see a wrong to hit."

Martha dropped her work, and her eyes were full of those unshed tears that only rise in moments of solemn gladness.

"Oh, Nelson, I will help you to be strong and true! You shall never falter because I am weak. We will work together, pray together for the good time coming when Christ shall reign over our nation—and everywhere."

And was it strange that Nelson, looking into her glowing, earnest face, should feel himself elevated to the height of prophecy, though it only took the form of a familiar Scriptural quotation, at which Martha smiled and blushed, but seemed in no wise offended.

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her so that he hath no need of spoil. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life."

CHAPTER XXII.

UNCLE ZEB TRIES A MASONIC EXPERIMENT AND MEETS WITH UNLOOKED-FOR SUCCESS.

The current of our story bears us once more to Fairfield. It is a summer day, the exact counterpart of the one on which we made our first visit to Israel Deming's farm a year ago. Nothing has altered; that is to say, there is the same aspect of careful thrift, the same abundance of creature comforts. There is only the hidden, impalpable change which goes on in all our human lives as unconsciously as the change of particles in our physical frames.

Dora has felt in the last few months the dim and hitherto unknown stirrings of her undeveloped woman's nature, and begun to vaguely realize that her free and happy estate of girlhood cannot last forever. All very salutary knowledge so far as it goes, but in Dora's case it has only gone far enough to produce a misty glamour in which neither the present nor the future assume exactly their right proportions.

Uncle Zeb and Mr. Deming are discussing matters and things with their usual freedom and familiarity, the topic of their conversation being a recent sermon preached by Elder Wood from the text, "In secret have I said nothing." Fairfield was not used to anti-secret sermons, or indeed reform sermons of any kind, and if it excited anger and hard speeches in many quarters, it gave at least a new theme for general discussion, and considered in this light was quite a God-send to Uncle Zeb, who sometimes found his stock subjects of gossip worn very threadbare.

Probably one of the very best ways of finding out the various points of view from which anything is regarded in the community at large is to hear the matter freely talked over in the domestic privacy of an average household; and for this reason we will join unseen the group in the back porch precisely at the moment that Uncle Zeb is delivering himself as follows:

"I like a preacher that'll keep folks awake, and that's one reason why I'm allus on hand when I hear Elder Wood is goin' to preach. He's got a master way of kinder takin' up things and flashing Gospel truth onto 'em till they look as different as night and morning. Naterally a man don't like to change his mind arter he's got it once made up, but then that don't alter right and wrong. Whatever a minister thinks he ought to say without fear or favor, let it hit as it will. That's my doctrine."

"Why, Uncle Zeb; I thought you was a good Mason," said Mr. Deming, half jocularly.

There was the slightest perceptible shrug of Uncle Zeb's shoulders as if this might be a doubtful point.

"Maybe I am and maybe I ain't. Anyhow I know too much to give myself away as some on 'em are doing. It's real redikerlous—all this talk about rotten-egging the Elder and riding him on a rail, jest for standing up and speaking what he thinks is the truth, as if this wa'n't a free country where every man has got a right to free speech. That's what I stickle for. I stand by the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence."

And Uncle Zeb ended with a rather triumphant inflection of his voice as if conscious that he was holding a position at once patriotic and unassailable. In truth Uncle Zeb's Masonry sat as loosely on him as the liberal theology of the present day on some of its supporters; but this latitudinarianism of opinion was naturally and easily accounted for by the fact that though he had once joined the order and paid dues, nobody knew when, he had long ceased to be numbered with the membership of any particular lodge.

"I shouldn't have minded so much his hitting Masonry," said Mr. Deming; "but it seemed to me that when he included the grange, as though that wa'n't much better, it was going a little too far."

"So, ho!" chuckled Uncle Zeb. "Mustn't throw stones at your winders it seems. Might hit that machine inside and put some of the gearing out of kilter."

Mr. Deming mentally winced, but he remembered that for Uncle Zeb to have his joke was as fixed as any fact in nature, and he would not have cared were it not for the consciousness that he had indeed "given himself away" much more freely than he meant. A year ago he would have indorsed every word of Elder Wood's sermon, but joining the grange had converted this honest American farmer into a tacit apologist for the whole secret system. It is indeed remarkable how a very small admixture of error in our mental lens will make us color blind.

Dora sat in unusual silence. To her the sermon would have been an agreeable variety for its novel subject, if for nothing else, had the preacher's attacks been confined entirely to Masonry, against which she entertained a truly feminine prejudice; but Elder Wood, while he looked upon the latter as the old mother serpent, saw no reason why he should not bring down his club of spiritual truth and logic with stunning force on the smallest member of the family that happened to wriggle across his path. So the grange, with other minor orders, received special mention as a system plainly emanating from Masonry, with the same Christless ritual, the same sham benevolence and morality, and the same offer of final salvation; to all of which Dora listened without feeling any particular force in the argument.

There is nothing in the world more impervious to religious truth than that shell of complacency in which a young and careless soul wraps itself. When secure in youth and health and beauty it feels no need of anything higher, or deeper, or more satisfying; but repels every offer, every promise, every appeal by saying as did the old Laodicean church, "I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing." But when the Elder referred to the paganism of the grange, and asked how many Christian women would willingly personate its three presiding heathen goddesses, Ceres, Pomona, and Flora, after knowing the characters which they severally bore, Dora began to feel a new interest, for had she not been chosen to enact the part of Flora? and did she not at their last meeting wear roses in her dark hair, and roses at her bosom and belt, and look as bewitching and sweet as if she had been a veritable rose herself? And it came with a sudden shock to her self-satisfaction to know that she was personating one of the vile and shameless women of antiquity, whose hand she would on no account have touched had she been a character of the present day.

Poor Dora! She was vain and foolish, yet pure of heart and intention, and she shrank from the very thought of any connection with impurity and shame as from the touch of red-hot iron. She felt perversely inclined to be angry with the white-haired old minister for telling these homely truths. Why couldn't he have kept silent on that particular point? for she felt certain that she could never again act the part of Flora in the grange without a scathing remembrance that would make her cheeks burn.

(To be continued.)

REV. DR. PARRY AND PASTOR SEGUIN.

483 W. ADAMS ST., CHICAGO, Ill., }
May 27th, 1885. }

To whom it may concern:—I hereby certify that all the things spoken by the enemies of Rev. Mr. Seguin against his character that not a shadow of a trustworthy evidence is brought forward to sustain any charge. Indeed, Mr. Seguin is worthy, but has suffered by the want of cordial reception which his work ought to have. Those of us who have examined into this matter are convinced that we ought to sustain Bro. Seguin and give him something to live on instead of standing by and letting him struggle against such odds. THOS. PARRY,

Pastor Jefferson Park Presbyterian church, Chicago.

—Mr. Moody has associated with him in his evangelistic labors Mr. D. B. Towner, late choirister of Union chapel, Covington, Ky. The engagement is for five years. The prayer of many will be that their united labors may be crowned with the richest spiritual results.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

[Note.—This letter was received last week, and would have appeared had not the forms been nearly ready to print.—Ed.]

Next Sabbath, May 24th, is called Memorial day, and the G. A. R. have requested the Christian ministry to preach on the memories of the late war and of course in praise of the G. A. R. Three of the pastors of this city have consented to do so, and one of the churches is to be open next Wednesday for a meeting preparatory to a floral service.

This is greatly to be deplored for these reasons:

1. It tends to promote the spirit and love of war, and especially to take away that just abhorrence with which all war should be regarded. All war is contrary to Christian principle. In the language of Robert Hall, "war reverses all the rules of morality. It is nothing less than a temporary repeal of the principles of virtue." Lord Brougham said: "I abominate war as unchristian, I hold it to be the greatest of human crimes. I deem it to induce all others—violence, blood, rapine, fraud, everything which can deform the character and debase the name of man." If such is war, if its practical effect is to demoralize society and put back the cause of Christian morals, as was abundantly proved by the wars both of the Revolution and the Rebellion, how can Christian ministers seek to give it honor? What though the wars of the Revolution and the Rebellion did result in good, so did the betrayal and crucifixion of Christ, but it would be strange indeed were we therefore to sing praises to Pontius Pilate and his soldiers.

2. To perpetuate the memories of the late war is to promote and perpetuate sectional strife. For the last twenty years of peace the war spirit has rankled in the hearts of men, especially in the South. The spirit of concord and harmony that ought to actuate and unite us has not only been suppressed, but the growth and progress in material prosperity has been greatly hindered. Questions of incalculable importance have been kept in abeyance. The cause of temperance and general education has been greatly hindered and thousands of murderers have been committed because of the animosities growing out of the war.

3. The Grand Army of the Republic is a secret military order, and as such is entirely out of place in a peaceful and free republic.

All secret orders are not only uncalled for, but they are to-day one of the greatest obstacles to good government. This has been especially true of secret military orders. History proves that, however patriotic may have been their originators, or however beneficial for the time being, may have been their results, they have always, sooner or later, become the instruments of despotism, and practical conspiracies against the public good. We have at least two notable illustrations: the Knights Templars of the 12th to the 14th century, and the Jesuites of a later period. Both of these orders were intensely religious. The Knights Templars took solemn vows of poverty, chastity, and perfect obedience to the order. For a time they were immensely popular, but they became a terror to the nations of Europe and were suppressed by the severest enactments. Jesuitism has owed its malign and terrible power to its profound secrecy and strict military discipline. Its founder was doubtless a man of earnest religious character. His object was manifestly benificent. The obligations imposed were presumed to be of the most exalted character. The order has included many noble men and it has done a vast amount of true practical benevolence, as well to those without as within its membership. In this respect it has not been surpassed by any of the so-called benevolent orders. Yet, while all this and more might be said in its praise, it has been a practical conspiracy against every government, the bane of public morals and Christian civilization, and a synonym of all that is mean and devilish.

It remains to be seen whether we can take up the effete institutions of the dark ages and safely foster them. It remains to be seen whether the Christian ministry will be able to make something more and better of a secret Grand Army, than they did of the Knights Templars, or the Jesuits. Surely their power to influence and control was far greater in the two former than in the last. What assurance have we that this G. A. R. will not be used for conspiracy and usurpation? Is it their oath of fidelity to our Constitution and laws? Every leader in the late rebellion had taken such an oath but it availed nothing. Conflicting oaths make all oath-taking absurd. The security of the nation is in the universal responsibility to the moral sense of mankind. When by any secret combination this is removed public security is greatly endangered.

H. H. Hinman.

Reform News.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

Tolono, Ill., May 25, 1885.

This is a pleasant town of some twelve hundred inhabitants. Until recently it has been a prohibition town, but license carried at the last election. Saturday night the "roughs" celebrated, and the town was a perfect pandemonium. The Leonard House, where I am stopping, is strictly temperance and kept by Capt. J. H. Sands, a veteran and a gentleman. The Sabbath services were given up to a memorial meeting in the Baptist house, where the G. A. R's. were addressed by one of their number, Rev. Morewood, pastor of the Baptist church, who carried a gun through the war. He has not been long in the ministry, and if his effort may be taken as a sample he is neither a close thinker nor brilliant speaker. His theme was "good works," and I thought the man was greatly embarssed by his effort to avoid allusions to what would "be offensive to some of his conscientious brethren."

At the hotel I met the Master, Senior Warden and other members of the lodge, both Jew and Gentile. I spoke to them with the utmost freedom and they were especially interested to learn about the system and degrees below and beyond the descent they had already made into the cavern of mystery. Their treatment was entirely respectful and although the Masons would neither deny nor affirm, the young men who listened accepted their refusal as positive proof of the truth of what I stated. I gave tracts and copies of the Cynosure to many and all were read, and "Selling Dead Horses" was the occasion of some remarks not complementary to a "benevolent" order doing business on that principle.

While in the Bible class at the M. E. church Sabbath morning I noticed a man with a bandage about his head covering his left eye. I enquired who he was and learned that he was a stranger in town. I saw the same man at the memorial services and handed him my card as we were retiring. It proved as I had suspected, to be our good brother Geo. T. Dissette, whose name is familiar and whose work is becoming well known to our readers. This was our first meeting and my previous favorable impressions were strengthened by personal acquaintance. He evidently has the courage of his convictions, and with an impulsive nature may possibly seem at times reckless of personal consequences in the face of strong opposition, but "his aim is true and his shots tell." From him I learned facts additional to those already forwarded for publication, and am convinced that the sly craft have so covered their tracks that it would be very difficult, if not impossible, to make anyone responsible for the gross outrage committed at Tuscola. As is generally the case, the civil administration is in the hands of lodge men. Mayor Townsell, I am informed, is a Knight Templar; Isaac Jewell, the Marshal, is of the same craft, and the community so dominated by lodge power that the very few known to be friendly would hesitate to encounter the opposition. Bro. Dissette is unable to absolutely identify those who made the attack, and as the marshall gave warning in advance, and tendered his services and accompanied Bro. Dissette from the park to his hotel and professedly held the howling mob in check, there is no ground on which to sustain an action against the town for damages.

CHAMPAIGN.

I responded at the above point to the request of a "brother" and entering an office found myself in the company of four Masons, one of whom was a Past Master of the lodge and a teacher in the craft. We had no controversy respecting the ceremonies of the order, which were tacitly admitted, but directed our attention to the more important features of the system. I was surprised to find how little attention these men had given to real Masonry, and was gratified at their apparent candor and willingness to hear the truth. After an hour or more spent in close conference, we parted in friendship, wiser and I believe better informed on Masonry than when we met. I gave each tracts and a copy of the Christian Cynosure, and told them I should be glad to accept their invitation to lecture when circumstances would permit. They gave me assurance of protection and a respectful hearing. The mob at Tuscola has awakened quite an interest, and was reported at Tolono by telegraph, I was informed, very soon after it occurred. Bro. Dissette is still suffering from his injuries, but hopes to resume work in a few days and will probably speak before leaving the place.

J. P. Stoddard.

—A remarkable revival of religion has lately been enjoyed by the churches of Princeton, Ind., under the leadership of D. C. Williams, a layman of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, of Lebanon, Tenn. Over three hundred made profession of faith, and nearly one hundred and fifty reconsecrations resulted from about two weeks' effort. The members of the various churches worked cordially and unselfishly together, and accessions so far stand—to the Methodists, 50; Presbyterians, 18; United Presbyterians, 32; Cumberland Presbyterians, 83; and the ingathering has not yet ended.

Correspondence.

THE ROCKFORD SCANDIANAVIAN CHURCH.

Not long since the Cynosure made mention of the fact that a Scandinavian church in Rockford, Ill., was about to unite with the Association of Congregational churches. It so was ordered that while reading the note two gentlemen were sitting near the writer, one of them a resident of Rockford and the other a minister well acquainted there. The item above named being the topic of conversation, these gentlemen said that in Rockford the Lutheran church is very powerful, having more than one thousand members and a building capable of seating thousands. They also said that this Free Evangelical church about to join the Congregational Association was organized by members who left the Lutheran body because the pastor in Rockford was opposed actively to secret societies.

One of these gentlemen said that the members of the new church were infidels, Odd-fellows and Freemasons. The other said that he did not think any one could say that five of its members were ever converted. The gentlemen making these statements were strangers and the writer cannot at all vouch for their statements, but unless they were very greatly in error, Rockford Association should be extremely careful in reference to the matter. Secret societies are part and parcel of the Paganism that has desolated the fairest portions of the earth. No Christian communion can prosper unless it rejects them and any attempt to combine with them is the old mistake of making a covenant with death.

It is the boast of Congregationalism that it does not attempt to interfere with the liberty of the local church. Holding firmly to this cardinal principle, the only security is to be careful as to the churches which hold membership in its associations. There is now, or was recently, in the State Association a a church whose pastor teaches that the Bible is not inspired; that prayer does not influence God; that Jesus Christ was born as all men are; and that if he died for anybody's sins he died for his own. The temporay membership of such churches is one of the evils possible under the free system of the Puritan churches, but such instances should not multiply.

Com.

MICHIGAN HOLINESS SCHOOL.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

Last fall we had the work of a holiness school in Michigan laid upon us of the Lord. We had not money, furniture, provisions, or any of the necessary things for teaching; and yet we felt that God would have us take poor students, that had nothing with which to pay their way. The Lord sent us poor pupils, and sent us furniture, bedding, provisions, clothes, and money for rent and fuel. We have had in all, twenty-one different pupils from abroad, eight day pupils from the city, and some music and night-school pupils. Over forty different young persons having received instruction. The school is undenominational, and all needed reforms are taught, as well as holiness of heart and life. No one can attend the school, and attend any secret societies. No pupil is allowed to use intoxicating liquors, tobacco in any form, and none boarding with us, are allowed to use tea or coffee. No jewelry, or trimmed apparel is allowed to be worn in school by any; and the girls boarding with us are not allowed to wear corsets, or bang or frizz their hair; but dress plainly not only in school, but on the street, in church, and everywhere, while they stay in the school. The students are not allowed to attend theaters, circuses, horse races, rinks, or any of the popular amusements. Under such rules, all keep happy and healthy. We expect to open school again in the same place the first day of next September.

Lura A. Mains.

RITUALISM.

Chicago, May 29.

Editor Cynosure:—There is not much difference between the Roman Catholics and the extremists of the High church party of Episcopacy. Ritualism holds sway in both. The revulsion against the superstitious ritualism of Rome, and of Paganism, whether in the secret chambers, or in heathen lands, has gone to the other extreme in some cases, and east the shadows of suspicion and distrust upon the divine rights or ordinances which the Redeemer of men has mercifully bequeathed to strengthen his people in the good fight of faith. The power of "Jesus and the resurrection" has been sadly impaired by the rituals of men, and will be greatly strengthened wherever the ordinances onee delivered to the saints shall be again observed, "as it is written." The Jewish ritual having ended in Christ, many seem to think that none now exist, as if the Lord had never said, "This do in remembranee of me." Eat the bread; drink of the cup, all ye that believe and are baptized into the name of the Fathther, the Son and the Holy Spifit.

Why would not the above statement be a good "beginning" for trying your own suggestion of "turning to the New Testament to enquire into the practice of the early church," "instead of stopping short at the innovations of ritualism?" Your position seems to me unassailable, viz., that the practice of the early church, as approved by the New Testament writers of course, should be the true standard for Christian Union. Your short artiele under the portrait of Gerrit Smith recognizes this, and no other standard of Union ean be successful in Protestant Christendom. But as the ereed systems hide the personal Christ they too must be laid aside, as Prof. Robinson said. T. H.

THE LAW OF THE KINGDOM.

OAKDALE, Wis.

"Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God."

Paul speaks of those who are weak in the faith, and he tells us to lift up the hands that hang down and strengthen the feeble knees. Let us remember that when a soul is in a backslidden state, the best way to approach them is by love. One harsh word from one they have trusted may drive them out of reach. What cannot be accomplished by love can never be accomplished. When we approach one to tell them of their faults, let us do it in love. When we preach the Gospel, let us show our congregations that we love them; though we thunder forth the law let us do it with the spirit of love. Oh, how much the churches need a real baptism of love! This is one of the greatest subjects we can find in the Bible. Charity covers a multitude of sins that it forgives and forgets. There is a vast difference between human and Divine love. One is changeable, the other is not. Jesus loves us just the same when we are sinners as when we are not, but he loves to have us do his will. There is no length or breadth to the love of God; it is boundless. See the look of love Jesus gave Peter. When we see a brother or sister fall, let us not publish it to the world, but lend a helping hand, remembering they have a soul to save and there is a hell to shun, and just one kind word from those they love might save them from black despair. There may be a loving mother praying and weeping for them. Divine love is never changeable. We may grieve dear friends and they never forgive us, but the "Man of Sorrows" is ready and willing at all times to forgive and forget our sins and unfaithfulness. He does not want us to keep on sinning. "If ye love me keep my commandments." "He that loveth not knoweth not God." The Christian that has the love of God perfected in his heart never retaliates, never shows any spirit of harshness, and is always loving. When one brother or sister proves untrue, instead of hatred and malice there is love for them and sorrow for their sin. "Therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law." From a lover of the right, (Rev.) L. A. PLANT.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S VIEWS.

CORSICANA, Texas.

Your paper exactly coincides with my views. I read it with great benefit to myself, and I trust also to those to whom I hand it when I am through. From it I learn things that startle me, for until recently I never gave Freemasonry a thought, for I am an Englishman, and in England no hand has ever been raised to stay the progress of this work of the devil. Now I never lose an opportunity to use my influence against it, and I find that when aroused there is no demon like this national curse. You may preach against all other public sins and it will not raise the evil nature of men as this one idol of their heart, which when uprooted will be a great stumbling block removed which is hindering the work of the Lord, as well as the proper working of any government, or the impartial administration of law. I long for the time when this heathenish allianee of men professing to be followers of Christ and avowed infidels shall be torn asunder, root and branch. Let us then each one stand together and preach and teach as we never did before in the faee of all opposition, and do the Master's work whatever it may cost. I am with you heart and soul and bid you God speed. Yours, sanctified by the blood. JAS. D. MINIFIE.

PITH AND POINT.

A PASTOR'S EXPERIENCE.

I have no connection with any society but the church (the Antioch Baptist church of which I am pastor in charge) and for years I have taken a bold stand against all secret societies, under the most serious difficulties. Before I became pastor here, they came very near running the church. My experience is that secret societies are as an eating cancer to the church. Whenever a member of the church joins a secret society he becomes inactive and lifeless as a Christian.—L. ALLEN, Shreveport, La.

GOOD CHEER FOR THE EDITOR.

I am both pleased and benefited by the weekly visits of the Christian Cynosure. I have read it more or less for the last ten years, and my conversion dates back that length of time. I firmly believe it is one of the best papers published to put into the hands of a young convert. The principles of righteousness as taught in its columns saved me from being caught in the lodge snare (Freemasonry) that proves the eternal ruin of many young men. I pray the Lord to give it the wings of the morning. It is a rich feast for the soul, such as gives one strength to be as unbending as the rocks of Gibraltar in his integrity to the truth as it is in Jesus. May the Lord abundantly bless you in your labors.—J. J. HAVILAND, Elkton, Md.

THE CHURCH CONGRESS AND LODGERY.

It would be too much to expect that a gathering from the different denominations for the purpose of preparing the way for general union could take place without the probable presence also of representatives of the practices to be laid aside or even to he condemned as absolutely unscriptural. Satan appeared among the sons of God and his agents are ready to serve him as "angels of light." Hence we doubt not that lodgery will try to be regarded as a friend of Christian union instead of its subtle antagonist and competitor. We merely suggest a word of caution for the future meetings of the Christian congress, that the works of darkness of the secret orders be also considered when it shall begin to adopt the New Testament church as the one unexceptionable pattern to follow, and also to avoid the dangers of the churches represented by the seven of Asia. T.

COULD NOT SERVE CHRIST AND THE LODGE.

When I grew up to manhood where I lived it was held that to be a Mason was the first act of a gentleman; so I joined them, and in due time was made a Master Mason. But very soon I was called of the Lord to work in his vineyard, and soon found out I could not serve God and Mammon. I chose to serve God, so I quit the lodge twenty-three years ago. No Christian can conscientiously belong to a secret order.—S. V. MCGINNIS, Hagler, Ala.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON XI.—June 14, 1885.—The Priesthood of Christ. Heb. 9: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. Heb. 7: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The old Hebrew ritual pointed to one central fact—a coming Christ. vs. 1–5. The multitudes who crowded the temple courts on the great fast days may have had very little intelligent comprehension of the office or work of their future Redeemer; but the most ignorant must have felt the inadequacy in themselves of these constant sacrifices, to purge away guilt. Still, as shadows and symbols they pointed the masses of the Jewish people as nothing else could have done to the one Divine Sacrifice that was to be offered on Calvary. The tendency of rites and ceremonies in these latter times is only to obscure. "The true Light now shineth." When we have the reality the type is unnecessary and even meaningless. But the human mind seems naturally disposed to turn back to ritualism, to forms, to a kind of refined Judaism. All through his ministry Paul had to combat this tendency, and he would find equal occasion to combat it were he living now. It is this which causes Protestant Christians to corrupt the simplicity of their Puritan worship with papal observances; and which gives to the rights of secretism, which are all like those of ancient Judaism symbolic, such power to draw away men from the true faith. There is this great difference however. The Mosaic rites, however corrupted by human traditions, all pointed to Christ, and even in the papal church it is possible for a soul to find Jesus as evidenced by the numbers of holy men and women who have lived and died in that communion. But Masonic symbols point the soul away from Christ, never toward him, and thus make it impossible to find salvation within its pale.

2. Christ the one High Priest for sinful men. vs. 6–12. The radical defect in the Hebrew sacrifices was this. They could not make the comers thercunto perfect. They would still have consciousness of sin and need a continual renewal of the offerings. But Christ's sacrifice of himself was once for all. It follows first, that it is a complete offering, freeing us from the power of sin forever; and secondly, that any assumption of the priestly title by men is a misleading error, its Masonic use especially, being as soon bestowed on a man of sceptical views and immoral life as any, is terribly blasphemous. The concluding thought of our lesson is that Christ has entered with his own blood not into any earthly tabernacle but into the very presence of the Father. What infinite encouragement for us! Said a celebrated lay preacher: "People talk of a soul gone into eternity; we are in eternity now." Do we realize the finished character of Christ's work? If we once truly accept the sacrifice he offers, our salvation is complete and could not be more entirely so were we in heaven instead of on earth.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Was the inadequacy of the Mosaic ritual in itself felt by devout Israelites? Mic. 6: 6–8. What are Masonic titles? Job 32: 21 l. c. Is the bestowing or wearing of such titles fraught with eternal danger? v. 22 l. c.

The object of the epistle to the Hebrews was to show Israelites that the kingdom of God, as revealed by Jesus Christ, was not in opposition to the theocratic law of the Old Testament, but a carrying out of that revelation to its completion and perfection. That Old Testament revelation provided for and predicted the coming of this new revelation, and required Israel to accept it when it should come. The New is better than the Old. "Better" is the key-word of the epistle. The original word occurs thirteen times in this epistle and six times in all the rest of the New Testament. And the proofs of the superiority of the new are taken from the old revelation, showing that the law and prophets required Israel to receive Christ and the Gospel. Thus: 1. Christ's superiority as the medium of revelation to the angels, through whose ministry the law had been delivered, is shown in chap. 1: 1–2; 18. 2. His superiority to Moses, the typical mediator of that covenant, is shown in chap. 3. 3. His superiority to Joshua as one giving rest to God's people is shown in chap. 4. 4. His superiority to the Aaronic high priest in all priestly qualifications and services, is the theme of chaps. 5: 1–10: 18. One point of the superiority of Christ's high priesthood over the Aaronic, was the superiority of the covenant which he administered. The Aaronic priest ministered in a covenant in which spiritual and heavenly things were represented by material earthly things; Christ, in a covenant in which the spiritual and heavenly things themselves were performed. As it is the superiority of the priest and of the sacrifice that makes the superiority of the covenant, the theme of these verses may be called the Priesthood of Christ.

1. Study thoroughly the tabernacle worship of the Jews and the clear truths it taught with regard to approach to God.

Going into that Holy of Holies, we pass: first, the altar of burnt offering, atonement; next, the laver—purification and regeneration. These are in the court.

Then in the Holy Place note: on the left the candlestick—illumination needed through the Spirit; then to the right the shew bread—communion, fresh food for the soul; the altar of incense next—intercession needed as we pass within the veil.

Then in the Holy of Holies: the ark of the covenant, with its mercy seat, cherubim, and supernatural light—man in the presence of God, meeting him at a blood-sprinkled mercy seat.

If the Jew understood his symbolical worship, he must have seen God's way very clearly, through that tabernacle worship.

2. Then notice our clearer, better way.

Christ, our great high priest, ever living to make intercession.

His own blood, shed once for all, the constant and everlasting atonement.

Christ entered, once for all, into heaven itself, so throwing open to us the new and living way.

A blood-sprinkled mercy seat always accessible. Nothing to wait for; by night and by day we may come along that living way and cast ourselves at his feet for mercy.

3. The completeness of our salvation. It is salvation to the uttermost as the golden text has it. There was something consciously unsatisfying about the formalism of olden time. We have something so full, so complete, that there is satisfaction in it. It would be well to notice a little of Bible testimony to the fullness of our present salvation: "Filled with the Holy Ghost," "Filled unto all the fullness of God," "Grace upon grace," "Joy shall be full," "Life abundantly," blessed according to "the riches of his glory," "the riches of his grace, etc. See Eph. 3: 14–19.—U. P. Bible Teacher.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.
H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissette, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.
PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.
NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.
1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.
1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.
1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cr well, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

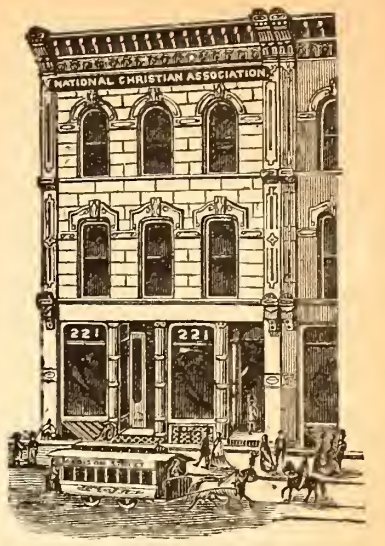
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Asociton" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITRES, Andros, Greece.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D
SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie: Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1885.

Next week we hope to give our readers a letter from Rev. S. M. Hiel, of Wahoo, Nebraska, giving a larger account of the Scandinavian Christians than we have before had. Of course he writes from a Lutheran standpoint, but he writes with candor and ability.

Brother Schoenberger speaks of the Cynosure as "toadying" to Popery. The doctrine of the Cynosur is, and has steadily been, that the secret lodge system, which begirts our globe like a "poisoned shirt of Nessus," is but the image of the Popish beast. But "the Holy Catholic church" existed five centuries before Popery was born. We hope our zealous brother will not slander us.

"Of all reformers with whom earth is cursed,
Those who reform reformers are the worst."

THE Messiah's Advocate, Oakland, California, treats the Cynosure with much urbanity after giving some of our sentiments to its readers. The editor thinks when we have tried in vain awhile to dislodge the lodge, that we shall be convinced that our world "has pitched toward Sodom;" and despair of it as Mr. Moody does. Our world is indeed pitched toward Sodom. So slavery pitched our country toward Sodom; and He who converted a pro-slavery into an anti-slavery nation, can as rapidly convert a world of sinners into a world of saints.

"Six thousand years of sorrow have well nigh
Fulfilled their tardy and disastrous course
Over a sinful world: and what remains
Is merely as the working of the sea before a calm
Which rocks itself to rest. —Cowper.

THE UNITED BRETHREN AT FOSTORIA.

"The long agony is over." For there is no agony like strife among brethren; and the United Brethren General Conference for the present at least, is taken off the rack. If the reformers are wise the rack need never be applied again.

The object of the hypocritical brethren, who "fellowship the unfruitful works of darkness," and hide their iniquity by cavilling about a law which they have heretofore declared they never mean to execute, was secured when they moved and carried a vote to appoint a commission of twenty-seven, to submit to the people an amended constitution. The reformers went into the ring with the disadvantage of sun and wind in their faces. For there is always a strong disposition to amend a constitution; and a huge committee is a bait to aspiring minds. So the commission was carried against a manful struggle by a vote of 77 to 42. The reformers were terribly cast down. We think needlessly so. That commission will lead to an interminable discussion, and there is nothing devils dread like discussion. An editor misrepresented his brother, and when asked to correct the misrepresentation, answered, "I shall practice silence and patience." This is all the devils ask; simply to be "let alone."

A supplementary report amended the law against secrecy, by giving a long definition of a secret society and throwing on a Brethren minister the double burden of explaining and enforcing a long, wordy law to meet a short, plain case. The old law both on slavery and secret societies was made by honest men. It provided that if a brother became a slaveholder, or a Freemason, Odd-fellow, or any species under that genus, he thereby separated himself from the church. That law carried the Brethren church through the slavery struggle whole, while Methodists and Baptists split, and Presbyterians were divided into four sects; Old School, New School, Free Church, and Church South. The difference was: the Brethren separated slaveholders by discipline; while the Presbyterians denounced slavery in words and protected it in practice, that is, were dishonest, and so suffered terribly. But one thing followed their tortuous course—discussion.

We have not the new law as amended by Mills, of the Ohio Central Conference. But unless his amendment emasculates it entirely, every honest, faithful pastor can put and keep secretists out of his church; and a dishonest pastor would not put them out under any law.

When a lecturer against slavery in Pennsylvania just fifty years ago, the writer saw United Brethren for the first time and has loved them and belonged to them ever since. A word of exhortation, therefore, may be pardoned. It is a wise and joyous fact that the reformers did not leave the Conference. Nothing would have pleased the hypocrites better. The term hypocrites is used as Christ did, to designate men who put their church revenues above goodness, truth, and right. If now the reformers shall have done with discussing human laws, which though good are still human, and human consciences will not respond to them, and betake themselves to prayer and testimony; if they will copy the example of the United Presbyterian presbytery of Wheeling, who ask a manager of the anti-secrecy reform, and provide for anti-secret conventions in every presbytery yearly till the lodge falls, the result will be the certain destruction of the lodge and the salvation of the U. B. church. There are one hundred thousand Lutheran Swedes in this country whose pastors exclude every member who joins a lodge after loving labor has failed. Cannot the venerable Dr. Davis, and Bishop Milton Wright devise some plan to send ex-President Allen, or some one like him, to see these true-hearted and honest Swedes who all speak English? Cannot some German-speaking brother be sent to the German United Evangelical College at Elmhurst, Illinois, and another messenger to the United Presbyterian, Wesleyan, and Free Methodist, Dunker and Quaker headquarters, with such Congregationalists and Presbyterians as will fall in and so fuse together by prayer and love a mass of religious mind in this country as never met before? Dr. Howard Crosby, of New York and men like him would attend such a convention, properly called. All could agree on the text, "In secret have I said nothing;" and to excommunicate all who scorn and trample on Christ's example, by casting a veil of secrecy, however thin, over their moral and religious organizations. It is truth, faithfully applied, that conquers. "They overcame," we read, "by the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony." We can do the same; and when the real children of God agree to exclude the children of darkness, we shall have removed the grand obstacle to Christ's coming—false worships. The cloudy pillar, the symbol of God's presence, will come and stand over our country, and the law of God become the law of the land.

TO AMERICAN CONGREGATIONALISTS.

BY THE SENIOR EDITOR.

The State Association of Illinois met in Rockford, Monday evening, May 25; Sermon by Prof. Scott. Tuesday, routine business, devotional meeting led by Rev. Wm. Windsor of Aurora; Home missions, by Sec'y Tompkins and Evangelist Wiard; forenoon session closed by discussion on installations, preceeded by a report on the same by Dr. Goodwin. Tuesday evening a social banquet, elegant and abundant, given by the Rockford ladies, followed by toast speeches to a large audience.

This post-banquet meeting was the first which I reached. One was taken a little aback by a whole evening in a short three-day's session spent in litterally "making fun," an article which like the poet, should be "born not made;" but when manufactured is apt to be poor and dry. The toast-speeches were not nearly so good as the men who made them. They consisted largely of old anecdotes slightly revamped. For instance, the "sheep's tail" was originally a "lamb's tail," which is ordinarily larger than a sheep's; and the "fur cap" was a "felt hat" when Lincoln used it on the gloomy night of Bull Run, while straining to hear a weak city bell. Mr. Beecher was quoted many times; Talmage not once. And a venerable clergyman who studied under the sainted Pond and Shephard at Bangor, had just before observed to me, "Mr. Beecher has turned more men against the Bible than ten Ingersolls!" But here he was the mentor and model and prompter of merriment for the fine crowd who came together to be taught by ministers how to be happy. One was reminded by the indifferent puns and old familiar anecdotes, of Lord Addington, of whom Sheridan said: he depended on his memory for his wit.

A motion was made, but happily withdrawn, that the scant five minutes allotted to hearing from the local associations should be repealed, and so not hear from the churches, but stuff their year's work into the printed minutes. The programme presented seven topics which asked money from the churches: but not a word on the state of discipline, family prayer, or the Sabbath denied to tens of thousands of our finest young men on railroads, rivers, and canals. No word for the Bible in schools; not a moment or a speech or a prayer allotted to the mighty national struggle against the "hate, and blood and crime" of the saloon system. And last, but not least, the committee forgot to put in their programme any note of the secret lodge system which is sucking out the life-blood of this nation! While the Association was holding its joyous sessions in Rockford, the church of the United Brethren were grappling with this night-mare and Pantheon of the nations, in Fostoria, Ohio, and the General Assembly of the United Presbyterians met in Topeka to consider, with other things, the memorial of Wheeling Presbytery, asking them to appoint and pay a general manager of the anti-secret reform, to hold conventions in every presbytery against the system which murders civil rulers; blows up national capitols with dynamite; shields polygamy, destroys the oath of God by multiplying counterfeits; and is divorcing our nation from God by dispensing with Christ altogether, or offering him in commanderies, the devil's libation from a human skull!

The great Augustana Synod of North America, which represents one hundred thousand church-members, will meet for ten days in the largest church in Rockford next month. It is providing for the discussion of secret societies. The State Association has a topic—"The vangelizing of our foreign population!" There are seven Swedish churches in Rockford, one of which seats two to three thousand persons. There are two Congregational churches; and neither of those churches dare allow the secret lodge system to be discussed in their pulpits unless the speech is to be in its favor. They "see the wolf coming" and they "flee." The idea of the two Rockford Congregational churches "evangelizing" the seven Swedish churches there is simply ridiculous, without any laughable point. It brings tears rather.

WHY CONGREGATIONALISM RUNS DOWN.

1. Not for want of giving. The Congregationalists have originated almost all the benevolent societies, and have given more per capita, than most other denominations.

2. Not for lack of theological seminaries or for ignorance in their ministry.

3. Not for want of evangelists; who have almost all been Congregationalists.

And yet in the last twenty-five years Presbyterians have gained 90 per cent while the Congregationalists have gained only 27, less than one to three. The home of Congregationalism should be New York and New England, yet in these seven States, the Congregational year book shows that in the year covered by it the Congregationalists sunk in membership three thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine! For the accuracy of these statements I rely on the accurate Prof. Huntingdon in the Advance, May 28th. Let us take up the affirmative side of the question:

1. They have dropped by oversight an ordained eldership; given by God in person to the church, in the Old Testament; and continued by apostles in the New (Num. 11: 25 and Acts 14: 23). Simple flat Congregationalism without "elders that rule well" is without the God-provided means of discipline and oversight. A church without discipline is slowly sinking into the world.

2. Congregationalists have forsaken the Bible as a foundation, and rest on Congregationalism. Prof. Huntington in the article above mentioned says: "We need not claim that we have the only Scriptural polity. But we merely believe it to be, at least a little better than any other; else we should not remain in it. If it deserves our preference, it deserves our support."

Prof. Huntington thus gives up the Scriptural basis, and if men may manufacture church government for God, they may manufacture doctrines, rites, anything.

3. Congregationalism sinks because the social evils dread and fear it worse than other denominations. It was proposed early in the rebellion to "reconstruct the Union with New England left out," and the Grand Lodge of Michigan ordered Freemasons "to withdraw from the ministration of Congregational pastors till Dr. J. B. Walker's resolutions passed at Grand Traverse, should be repealed." The policy of the lodge is to keep two or three Masons in every Congregational church, just to silence its pulpit. For with the aid of the lodge behind and outside, enough difference can be made in the subscription for a minister's support to force the church to accept a man who will obey and be silent toward the lodge. But Masons everywhere hate and fear Congregational churches, and the lodge leaders quictly seek their destruction, and help their rivals. This is one chief reason why Congregationalism runs behind other sects. The lodge is a miasm to it.

4. But the grand reason of all that sinks Congregationalism in the race of denominations is precisely what made the disciples run away from Christ on the night of his betrayal. It is "the hour and the power of darkness." The hour, says Mathew Henry, when Satan is permitted to do his worst to bruise the heel of the seed of the woman. A little after Jesus said to his beloved disciples: "All ye shall this night be offended because of me." "That is," says Henry, "they would be so frightened with the sufferings they would not have the courage to cleave unto him."

Christ had gone to the capital of the nation which was the world's moral center, to put upon issue the question, which should have human worship, himself or Satan. The question is now approaching a decision, which was then put upon issue; and Satan grows active as his time grows short, and, in the ceaseless struggle between right and wrong, he gives his profoundest attention to those from whom he has most to fear; and from Bradshaw to Cromwell, and from Cromwell to Plymouth Rock, Congregational mind has been freest from sectarian bias and most opposed to the religious inventions of men by which Christ and his salvation are set aside. When the governor of Ross offered to surrender that Irish town to Cromwell, (whose guns had made a breach in the walls) if the people might "have liberty of conscience," Cromwell replied in these words, "I meddle not with any man's conscience, but if by liberty of conscience, you mean liberty to exercise the mass, I judge it best to use plain dealing and let you know that where the Parliament of England have power, that will not be allowed of."

It is that spirit of abhorrence of the world-wide fraud and deception of "salvation by ceremonies," which was in Cromwell; and which still lingers in "The Independents," as they were then called, that makes Congregationalists silently hated by "rulers of the darkness of this world;" so that with more money, and more learning and more culture than some of their brethren, they fall behind all of them in denominational success.

A better illustration cannot be found than the state of fact in Rockford. I am assured the Presbyterian and Methodist pastors there are Masons but that the Congregational pastors are not; although one of them receives and addresses Knight Templar commanderies in his church, Dr. Peters, pastor of the mammouth, beautiful Swede church there gave his Masons three months to choose between the church and the lodge. Ten of them chose the lodge and went off. When the great Augustana Synod comes there, June 19, that huge church will be crowded, and the ministry harmonious. They resist the devil and he flees from them. Now contrast with this the course of our Congregational brethren.

The Swedes who flaked off from the Lutherans rallied around a pastor who is a Knight of a secret lodge, and he and his mongrel progeny of secretists, were the other day received to association and are now good orthodox Congregationalists!

On Tuesday evening, at the post-prandial speech-making, the meeting was opened by prayer by a Mason, and the moderator of the Association is a Mason, and a member of an important committee named is a Knight Templar, who though a Union General, and a good one, in a secret society convention in New Orleans voted to clear of blame the White Leaguers who killed four hundred Republican voters, by what was reported to General Grant, as "premeditated massacre;" and that for no crime only attempting to organize a Republican party under the amended Constitution! Now put the above facts together with this other class of facts; to wit:

That that State Association voted at Farmington, thirty-nine years ago that an "organization requiring an oath or pledge of secrecy of its members is opposed to a church of Christ and a Republican State;" that this same State Association repeated similar votes in towns from Rockford to Jacksonville. That we adopted and printed Dr. Edward Beecher's report declaring that "by it" (the lodge) "Christ is dethroned and Satan exalted," and adopted at the same session in Ottawa, Prof. S. C. Bartlet's resolution declaring that "Masonry is hostile to good government and the true religion;" and putting these two classes of facts together, is it wonderful that an Association guilty of such flagrant contradiction of their true words by false action,—is it wonderful that Congregationalism should run down in the hands of such men?—aye, such good men, too; for good men they are, if there are any good men. The only possible explanation of such inconsistency is, that they are ignorant of Satan's devices, and ignorant of the nature of the lodge; that Satan who sifted Peter, who said he would die with Christ and soon swore he did not know him, has sifted these beloved brethren till they know not what they do.

We have seen some evils. Another time let us seek the remedy for them.

—The N. C. A. annual meeting at 221 West Madison street, Chicago, Friday, June 19th, at 10 A. M. Remember.

—We publish the notice issued by the committee for the Quarter-centennial commencement exercises at Wheaton College. The occasion will bring together hundreds of the friends of the institution, new and old. It will be a favorable time for those unacquainted in Wheaton to visit the College.

—A California friend writes that Prof. Morton, of the California State Normal School, lately said in a lecture in that State, that "the editor of the Christian Cynosure and others think that secret societies are undermining the religion and government of this country. Their opinions are worth considering." For California this is a bold speech, as brethren Cogswell and Richards can testify. Prof. Morton is a patron of the W. C. T. U. coffee rooms in San Jose, and has an opportunity of reading the copy of the Cynosure kept in their reading room.

—A glorious prayer meeting was held in the lower chapel of Wheaton College Sabbath afternoon as a result of notices in several of the churches, for a union meeting for prayer that the church assemblies now convening may be directed by the Holy Spirit in relation to Christian reforms, with special reference to the lodge. Secretary Stoddard led the meeting, and brethren Barlow, Stratton, Hawley, Blanchard, the editor of the Cynosure and others took part. The meeting will be continued next Lord's day, and if such a meeting could be held in every reform church the day of victory would surely appear.

—Bro. Dissette wrote last from Danville, Vermillion county, Ill., whither he went from Tolono. He recovered sufficiently from his injuries before leaving the latter place to address an audience, and sought for a church or hall or public place outdoors to gather one, but was prevented and refused. His letter came in too late for this issue. Let every reader of the Cynosure hold up his hands in prevailing prayer to God.

LITERATURE.

PELVIC AND HERNIAL THERAPEUTICS, by Dr. George H. Taylor. Large 12mo. Illustrated. Price 75 cents. John B. Alden, New York.

This is a richly instructive work on the diseases to which the pelvic and abdominal portions of the human trunk are subject. It is divided into three parts. Part 1st treats of prineiples. It is primarily laid down that chronic affections of the pelvis; (as displacements, etc., of the uteris) and of the lower portion of the abdomen (as hernia or rupture) always remaining during the continuance of the causes which produce them. The above are not independent affections, but due to causes easily understood and controlled; have no existence apart from such causes, and are fully remedied by their withdrawal. Part 2nd describes "special processes relating to the upper and the middle portions of the trunk." Numerous pictorial illustrations are introduced to assist those who may wish to make practical use of the exercises described. Part 3d, under practice, gives examples of various cures effected through the use of the processes described. The book contains many valuable practical suggestions to those suffering from the diseases treated of; and should be in the hands of thousands of sufferers of both sexes, who are often at the mercy of unscrupulous men.

The North American Review concludes its seventieth year with the June number. It never had so large a circulation, nor greater influence, nor a more brilliant staff of contributors. This number discusses seven topics of vital public interest by no less than fourteen eminent writers, not including the short contributions in "Comments." "Shall Silver be Demonetized?" is answered, pro and con, by three distinguished economists, Sumner, Laughlin and Walker, representing Yale and Harvard Colleges, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "The Tardiness of justice" is discussed by Judge W. L. Learned, and "Prohibition in Politics" by Gail Hamilton. This article is of special interest, as it may be said to reflect in some degree the sentiments of Mr. Blaine, the writer being a relative and member of his household. It is, however, a scolding, ill-tempered and illogical paper, lame in its facts and all at sea in its temper. "The Swearing Habit" is by E. P. Whipple, and "French Spoliation Claims" by Edward Everett. The policy of the Roman Catholic hierarchy toward our public schools is assailed in a learned essay by a new polemic, Mr. M. C. O'Byrne, of North Carolina, and defended by Bishop Keane, of Virginia. "How Shall Women Dress?" is answered by Charles Duldey Warner, Elizabeth Stewart Phelps, Dr. W. A. Hammond, Dr. Kate J. Jackson, and Mrs. E. M. King, the English leader of the dress reform movement.

QUARTER-CENTENNIAL AT WHEATON COLLEGE.

Twenty-five years ago, Wheaton College began sending forth her students with degrees of classical distinction. For seven years prior to that date she was getting ready for the series of annually recurring commencements which have followed. Numbers of her children both of those earlier years and since, have come to merited positions of honor and trust, and larger numbers still have filled humbler stations in life with credit to themselves and blessings to society. From a model community within her walls, they have gone forth to become models in the various communities in which they have located.

Five years ago a committee was appointed to arrange for the proper and appropriate celebration of the quarter-centennial of the college, at which time it was proposed that all the old students who have attended here, should be called back, whether graduates or otherwise. That time will be here with the roses of June. The authorities of the college have given a full day and evening to the jubilee, being Wednesday, June 17th, 1885.

Twenty-five years of toil and progress have given many things to rejoice over. Nearly six thousand students have received instruction here. One hundred and fifty-six have been graduated. Our building is three times larger than then; our endowment is about thirty-five thousand dollars, and we have no debts. Though we have been less faithful than we should, we have not wilfully departed from any of the truths revealed to us, no matter how disrelished or despised by the world. American slavery, against which this institution testified in the days of its power and pride, is in the dark and bloody past. Intemperance, war, Sabbath desecration, secret combinations of selfish men, and kindred evils, are coming to be looked upon by the wise and good with increasing opposition. One by one, these and other great evils, in the light we hope to aid in kindling, will be relegated with slavery to the past. During all these years, and in nearly every term of school, there have been souls converted, and we can truly and gratefully say, "Hitherto the Lord hath helped us." To the celebration of the approaching twenty-fifth anniversary of the college we heartily invite all students, patrons and friends.

THE GENERAL PROGRAMME.

The Baccalaureate sermon, by Pres. J. Blanchard, Sabbath morning, June 14th. The Baccalaureate sermon of the Theological school, by Pres. L. N. Stratton, at 3 P. M.; and address before the Society of Religious Inquiry, in the evening by Rev. E. Y. Garrette, of Paxton, Ill.

Graduating exercises of the preparatory school and art department Monday, June 15th at 2 P. M.; Junior exhibition in the evening.

Tuesday, June 16th, at 10:30 A. M., meeting of the Board of Trustees. The Theological school will hold its graduating exercises in the evening.

The Quarter-centennial Celebration will be opened Wednesday morning, June 17th, at 9:30 A. M., with an old time morning exercise of one hour, conducted by President Emeritus J. Blanchard. A general meeting for reminisences of old-time students will open at 10:30. Dinner will be served on the campus at 12 M. The afternoon will be spent in listening to class histories; a memorial address; and also an address upon the past, and future of the college by President C. A. Blanchard. The evening will bring the more literary portion of the exercises. Rev. LeRoy S. Hand, of the First Congregational church of Ottumwa, Iowa, will deliver the Alumni address, and Miss Ada Edmonds Hemingway will read the poem. Maj. J. Wesley Powell, Chief of the United States Geological Survey department, will speak as a representative of the undergraduates.

Commencement day, Tuesday, June 18th, exercises of the graduating class at 10:30 A. M.. Address by Rev. Albert Bushnell, of Geneseo, Ill. In in the evening will occur the usual concert and levee.

To this Quarter-centennial gathering, the friends, and especially the former students of the college, are cordially invited. Entertainment will be gladly furnished to all who will announce their coming to Miss Felicia H. Hiatt, Wheaton, committe of the Faculty.

L. N. STRATTON,
C. A. BLANCHARD,
HENRY L. KELLOGG,
MISS A. J. CAROTHERS,
MISS F. H. HIATT,
Quarter-centennial Committee.

THE HOME.

NOTHING TO SHOW.

"My day has all gone"—'twas a woman who spoke,
As she turned her face to the sunset glow—
"And I have been busy the whole day long;
Bet for my work there is nothing to show."

No painting nor sculpture her hand had wrought;
No laurel of fame her labor had won.
What was she doing in all the long day,
With nothing to show at the set of the sun?

What was she doing? Listen; I'll tell you
What she was doing in all the long day;
Beautiful deeds too many to number;
Beautiful deeds in a beautiful way;

Womanly deeds that a woman may do,
Trifles that only a woman can see,
Wielding a power unmeasured, unknown,
Wherever the light of her presence might be.

She had rejoiced with those who rejoiced,
Wept with the sad, and strengthened the weak;
And a poor wanderer, straying in sin,
She in compassion had gone forth to seek.

Unto the poor her aid had been given,
Unto the weary the rest of her home;
Freely her blessings to others were given,
Freely and kindly to all who had come.

Humbly and quietly all the long day
Had her sweet service for others been done;
Yet for the labor of heart and of hand
What could she show at set of the sun?

Ah, she forgot that our Father in heaven
Ever is watching the work that we do,
And records he keeps of all we forget,
Then judges our work with judgment that's true.

For an angel writes down in a volume of gold
The beautiful deeds that all do below.
Though nothing she had at set of the sun,
The angel above had something to show.

—Mary H. Rowland.

THE GOSPEL IN FINLAND.

Sometime within the last twenty years, a young man left an overcrowded city of Finland to find more room for work, if not for ambition, than his native land could furnish. He came to the growing, busy city of Chicago. He found work, as most strangers find it in the large cities of America. But, best of all, he found Christ. He had been "confirmed" in the Lutheran church before leaving home, and had felt no other religious need; but in the spiritual life of the "Moody church," where he had become an interested attendant, he began to feel the power of the Spirit, and was converted. About this time he married. His wife was from Sweden. She, too, was a Christian. They had children born to them in this land of their adoption. The young man, with a partner, bought a business which proved very successful and prosperous. They were "getting along" faster than they had reason to expect when they came to this country. A change, however, was near at hand. In a series of meetings conducted by Mr. Moody, our young friend was very much revived. He became at once burdened for his native land. After much prayer, he decided to sell his business here and go back to his old home in Finland, engage in business there, and, as a layman, witness for Christ among a people who are under all the fetters of a formal State church. He sold his property and went back. His old neighbors received him with enthusiasm. He had not capital enough to engage in business as he desired, but he was offered money on easy terms, and friends came offering to sign his notes with him. The way seemed bright.

True to his purpose, he began witnessing for Christ. It was the simple story of conversion, the simple exhortations to come to Christ, eloquent only in their earnestness. But this witness began to turn the city up side down. It became a matter of common conversation, and was everywhere opposed.

One bright Sabbath day the old Lutheran church of an old city was beautifully decorated for a communion service. The people came early to the meeting. Our friend was one of the number. Yearning for Christian growth and a baptism of the Spirit, he thought that surely at the communion of the old church he would find some spiritual help and sympathy. His heart was full as he entered the house dedicated to the worship of the Saviour. But he soon saw that the people were not there, as he was, for spiritual helpfulness. As he kneeled at the altar, beside him was one in a loathsome condition of drunkenness, who, during that solemn service, polluted the very altar at which he kneeled.

The next day our friend went to the priest with this matter, supposing that the priest would be glad to encourage one who was anxious to reach out a hand to save such vile creatures as those who had so defiled the table of the Lord. But instead of sympathy he received abuse. From that day the priest warned his people against our friend. In public he threatened the people, warning them not to listen to that young man who had returned from America, bringing with him damnable heresies. Other persecutions followed. The man who had signed notes for our friend urged him to give up witnessing for Christ; and when he steadfastly refused, they took advantage of their opportunities to embarrass him in his business. His goods were sold at auction, even his household goods and clothing. Nothing was left. It was a dark night, but a night before a day. Out of business, penniless, persecuted, the whole story was told in prayer to God. Only one way was open. Our friend must give his whole time and strength to preaching Christ. This he did, and the day began to dawn. Souls were converted. His own mother and sisters were brought to Christ, and they proved valuable helpers in the work.

This work did not go on without opposition. One woman who was converted was bitterly persecuted by her husband. Sometimes he would whip her, sometimes lock her in the cellar, or in other ways treat her with cruelty. At last, not able to turn her from her faith, he left her and sailed for America. Four women who were dependent on a rich farmer for work and for land on which to raise potatoes, which was their dependence for food, were told that they must leave the new faith or leave the rich man's land. Two left the faith, two the rich man. A father whipped his children for attending a New Year's meeting held in the little chapel built for Christian worship. The mother, fearing lest he would kill them, ran for help, but was shut out of the house all night.

This work has been going on now for several years. Our friend has worked in poverty, but in the love of Christ. The good wife taught school, doing her work, with her mother's help, for their family, and striving to live on the meagre provisions which came to her door. They bought a quart of milk a day, let the cream rise, and saved it until she had enough for a pound of butter, which she made and sold, saving for her little ones only the skimmed milk and the buttermilk. But all this time souls were being saved. That patient wife writes that she did not like to go to Finland, but her husband led her very gently; and now, after these years of poverty and suffering, she sees, as Israel saw, that, though a hard way, it was God's way, and she rejoices that he has kept her in the way. A few friends in America have sent money to buy a cow, and that missionary family use the milk almost as if it came direct from heaven.

Already this story is long, but the facts are abundant so that one hardly knows where to stop. Go, if you please, to the shores of the Gulf of Bothnia, and visit the poor people in the towns and country, and you will see the work of our missionary friend in more than a score of villages on that shore. Several congregations have been gathered and churches organized, into which scores of earnest Christians have been received. Perhaps you will find him on the way from place to place, telling the people of Jesus, the Saviour. But you will find the little children, the aged mother, and that patient little woman, whose letters are a fountain of spiritual life, and whose work is abundant, in a little school room, teaching the children of Christ, in a free school, with her own little flock, in her humble home in the city of Patalox-Wasa.—Rev. A. J. Bailey, in The Congregationalist.

THE DOVE IN THE STEEPLE.

Dr. Todd relates the following: "A steeple of an old meeting-house was to be taken down. A man climbed up toward the top, and fastened a strong rope around it. The street was full of men and boys, a great many of whom took hold of the rope to pull the steeple over. 'All ready!' cried the overseer. 'All ready,' shouted scores of voices. So they all set to work. Soon the poor old steeple began to tremble. Just then, there came a beautiful, solitary white dove, and flew round and around the steeple, not daring to fly into it, and not able to leave it. 'See that dove!' exclaimed a hundred voices. 'Poor thing, she must have some young ones up in the steeple,' said a few. Again they pulled, and again the old steeple reeled and tottered. The distress of the poor bird was now so great that all shouts were hushed. Again they pulled the rope and the steeple reeled. The bird hovered a moment on her wings, and just at the instant the steeple began to fall she darted up into it out of sight. A moment later the spire fell with a crash. I went to it, and there I found the poor dove lying between her two white children—all three dead! Alas poor dove! You were willing to die for and with your children, but you could not save them. But oh, when Jesus Christ died for men, he saved them! He did not die in vain, like the poor dove."

"INCREASE OUR FAITH."

The measure of faith is given to all men. Rom. 12: 3. Is the increase of what we already possess a gift or development? We believe Bro. Moody strikes the nail on the head in speaking on this subject; he says: "If you want to believe more in God, get better acquainted with him—know more of him, and faith in him MUST grow." Jesus says: "Learn of me." Not about me, but OF me. Simply praying for faith will not increase it, (we have known of people praying for years, for an increase of faith and yet in the end have less than when they started). STRUGGLING to believe will not increase it, but as your knowledge of God himself increases, so will your faith develop. How am I to know God? In two ways:

1st. From the written Word—"search the Scriptures; they are they that testify of ME."

2nd. Trust him and see if he does not make his promises good. Mal. 3: 10. Let the proving be done according to James 1: 5–8. Every time the trial is made in this way, you will find the promise fulfilled, and consequently your faith increases. There will be no end to this growth till we have learned all there is to know of God's faithfulness.—Faithful Witness.

AMERICAN HOMES.

The great majority of families spend twice as much on dress as they do on real comforts and necessaries, simply because their neighbors and the people in their social set do likewise. It is a foolish rivalry, which brings no comfort and no happiness, but it is followed with a spirit worthy of a better cause. It is responsible for the great decline in marriage in our chief cities and the cutting down of the size of American families. On the other hand, it has not a single good feature to recommend it, as it is the fruitful source of pride, insolence, and ruinous extravagance. The money spent on mere luxuries, which perish with the day, would suffice for the comfortable maintenance of a large household in the style of fifty years ago, when the patter of small feet and the sound of children's voices were deemed essential elements of a happy home. Now the society which is founded on wealth and vulgar display has usurped the place of the home, and life in hotel, boarding-house, or flat has taken the place of the simple household existence which gave American life of a generation ago its chief charm. Fortunately this wholesome life still exists in the country and the smaller cities and towns. From these homes come the men who rise to the chief places in the nation, control the great enterprises of the land, lead in all moral and intellectual movements.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HEALTHY HOMES.

There is some consolation, after all, in being poor and having a plainly-furnished house. Physicians tell us that the luxurious houses of the rich are unhealthy. There is too much upholstery in them, too much finery, too much dust and disease-germs, and not enough simplicity and cleanliness. The hard, uncarpeted floor that is frequently cleaned is preferable to the richly-carpeted one in a sanitary estimate; and some sensible rich people, following the suggestion of the poor man's cottage, with its clean floor, ventilating fire-places, sun-lit room, and sweet atmosphere, are introducing fresh-air flues, and substituting polished surfaces both in floors and walls, throwing out the germ-secreting carpets and dusty hangings. At village and country homes the close shrubbery and dense trees have been cleared away from near proximity to the houses, and the sun and air permitted to enter. Thus with better sanitary regulations inside and outside the dwelling, we hope to hear of less low fevers and stubborn malarial sieges.—Beehive.

I have heard of an artist who wanted to make a statue that would please everybody. So, instead of carving it out of a block of marble, he moulded it of putty. When it was finished he set it up in a conspicuous place, and invited the whole town to come and see it. One man thought the nose was too long. 'Thank you for the suggestion,' said the artist, and with his fingers he at once changed the Grecian to a pug. Another said that the lips were too thick, and they were promptly pressed in to please him. A third remarked that he admired dimpled chins, and with a punch on the putty his prefcrence was met. So they went on, until every limb and feature was changed to please somebody. And that putty man, before that day was done, was so devoid of all symmetry and proportion that the people who had helped to modify it laughed at it and at the artist.

THE SUM OF IT ALL.

[Written to comfort a young friend many years ago, and now by permission given to the young readers of the Well-Spring.]

The boy that by addition grows,
And suffers no subtraction,
Who multiplies the thing he knows,
And carries every fraction,
Who well divides his precious time,
The due proportion giving,
To sure success aloft will climb,
Interest compound receiving.—Dr. Ray Palmer.

THE GRASSHOPPER ON THE ROYAL EXCHAGE.

Whenever I go to London I always stand at the corner of the Bank of England for a minute or two, watching the crowd of busy men hurrying everywhere. What thousands of cares they carry! How many anxieties. Then I look at the royal exchange. It is pleasant to see the London sparrows, though they are a little black and grimy, chirping on the massive cornices, as free and happy as possible, above the din and awful hurry of the great city. They have no cares, no anxieties. They seem to know what the great letters mean, which are cut in the stones on which they hop. "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." God keeps the sparrows, and they are happy. I wish the busy city men would watch the sparrows, and read the great city text.

But the sparrows and the text are not the most attractive things about the Exchange, and I am sure if you look at it, you would think as I do—that the weathercoek is the most singular and curious thing about the building. It is not like any weathercock in England, or I should think in the world; for there, twisting on the pinnacle of the spire, is a monster grasshopper; and I'll tell you how it came to be there.

About three hundred and fifty years ago, a woman with a little baby in her arms, was trudging along a country lane. Presently, after looking to see that no one was watching her, she climbed over a gate into the field, and wrapping the baby in its little shawl, she laid it down in the grass, so gently as not to awake it, and then, never looking behind her, she climbed over the gate into the lane, and went on her journey.

The babe soon awoke, and began to cry; and it cried for a long, long time. And at last, tired and hungry, and hot with the sun, for it was a fine summer's day, it was wearied out, and dropped off to sleep again. "But God had heard the voice of the lad," and see how simply he brought help for the little one.

By-and-by, down the lane came a school-boy; he was whistling away, as happy as ever he could be. He had come out of school and was going home. He lived at the farmhouse a little way further up the lane. Now he gathered a few primroses, now he scampered after a butterfly, now he had a shy at a bird; but just as he came to the gate over which the woman had climbed, he heard a grasshopper chirping away so loudly, that he sprang over the gate to catch him; and there was the baby, fast asleep! Far more pleased than if he had caught a hundred grasshoppers, the boy took up the little fellow, and ran home with his prize. The kind farmer's wife, although she had many children of her own, at once determined to keep the little orphan who had been saved from death by a grasshopper.

Years passed away and the babe became a strong boy; the boy grew to be a man; he went to London, and became a merchant. God blessed all he did, and he rose to be the most noted man in the city. Queen Elizabeth was then on the throne, and often did she send for Sir Thomas Gresham, for the little deserted boy had become a knight, to consult him on the great affairs of state.

Just three hundred years ago, Sir Thomas Gresham founded the Exchange. The Queen came to dine with him, and lay the first stone; and there upon the topmost pinnacle, Sir Thomas placed a grasshopper; and there it is to-day, to tell the busy toiling city, an to tell you and me, when we go to see the city, that Almighty God will hear the infant's cry, and can save a valuable life by even such a little thing as a grasshopper.

So it was that "God heard the voice of the lad."—Sel.

A MONKEY AND A MIRROR.

A crowd of spectators were amused recently by the gambols of a large ape that was lording it over a number of small monkeys confined in a great iron cage in the Jardin des Plantes. Fruit and many other things were thrown into the cage, and the ape was always the first to seize them. Some one suddenly threw in a small hand looking-glass with a strong wooden frame. The ape brandished this about like a hammer, but suddenly perceiving the reflection of himself in the glass, he stopped and for a moment looked puzzled. Then he darted his head behind the glass to find the other ape. Astonished at finding nothing, he apparently thought he had not been quick enough. He then proceeded to raise and draw the glass nearer to him with great caution, and then, with a swifter dart, looked behind. Again finding nothing, he repeated the attempt once more. He next passed from astonishment to anger, and began to beat with the frame violently on the floor of the cage. Soon the glass was shattered and pieces fell out. Continuing to beat, he was suddenly surprised to see his image still remaining in the frame. Then, as it seemed, he determined to make one trial more. More circumspectly than ever the whole first part of the process was gone through with—more violently than ever the final dart was made. His fury over this last failure knew no bounds. He crunched the frame and glass together with his teeth, beat them on the floor, and crunched them again, till nothing but splinters was left.

WE SHOULD NOT

Forget a kind act.

Impose upon good nature.

Infringe on the rights of our neighbors.

Forget old truths in discovering new ones.

Ask favors of others that if asked of us we would not grant.

Censure those we do not understand. Great minds understand great minds.

Sacrifice self-respect and principle to secure a public office.

Be selfish. The greatest sin is selfishness. All that is diabolical originates from a selfish heart.

TEMPERANCE.

DREADFUL EFFECTS OF TOBACCO.

Another case of serious injury from the use of tobacco which has lately claimed public attention is that of Dr. Thomas Dunn English, of Newark, N. J., a well-known champion of the brewers, and a zealous opponent of the prohibition of the liquor-traffic. In the New York Tribune it is stated that "Dr. English has been an inveterate user of tobacco since he was a boy. He both smoked and chewed it, and at night his sleep was not easy unless a large roll of the weed was in his mouth. When the case of General Grant was brought prominently to public notice, with the statement that the cancerous growth was cause by smoking, Dr. English became alarmed, and was convinced from the similarity of symptoms that he had a similar affection, caused by the use of tobacco. During the last two months his throat has been gradually closing up; he has suffered intensely from pain and been under constant mental strain from the danger of suffocation." He has undergone a very severe surgical operation, and as we write, is still living with the possibility, though scarcely a probability, of recovery. The tobacco habit, especially among boys and young men, beginning with the cigarette, has become an evil of very large and threatening proportions. It is to be hoped that these recent conspicuous admonitions, furnished by the cases of General Grant, Dr. English and the late Senator Hill of Georgia, and others may be duly noted and heeded by all who are addicted to the use of tobacco.—National Temperance Advocate.

TOBACCO AND BLINDNESS.

At the annual commencement of the Hospital College of Medicine, of Louisville, Ky., Prof. Dudley S. Reynolds delivered an address to the graduating students, in which he took strong ground against the use of tobacco:

"It is a well-known fact that tobacco deranges the digestion and poisons the nerve centers of a majority of the male members of the human family. A species of blindness, not complete, but partial blindness, sufficiently great in extent to destroy the reading of ordinary type, results from the continued and excessive use of tobacco. Careful investigations have led to the discovery that that form of tobacco habit known as smoking produces the so-called amblyopia. This form of amblyopia is precisely identical in all respects with that produced from the excessive use of alcohol. Both are incurable. I know a number of persons in Louisville who are now practically blind from the excessive use of tobacco. A lady in Portland was forced to admit she had been a secret smoker of tobacco for thirty years. On abondoning the habit the further progress of her dimness of vision ceased, though there is little or no hope of her regaining that power of perception which she had already lost. She may be considered fortunate in the possession of enough vision to go about and attend her ordinary household duties. Smoking tobacco has never been known to result beneficially to any person in the world. It always lessens the sense of smell and taste; it always contaminates the breath; it always creates an unsteadiness of the muscles, through its irritating effect upon the nerves; and I know from personal experience it diminishes the capacity for mental labor. Now, if you can succeed in inducing even a few people to abandon the habit of smoking and to pay over to a common charity fund the amount formerly spent for cigars and smoking tobacco, the time may come when public taxation may be reduced, and the condition of the pauper, who is now miserable, made at least, comfortable. If the money destroyed by burning cigars and tobacco in Louisville could be paid into the city treasury it would support all our charitable institutions, and pay the entire expense of the street-cleaning department besides. This would reduce taxation nearly or quite one-half, and produce a corresponding improvement in the public health."

Methodist Episcopal Church and Tobacco.—The last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church represented in India by North and South India Conferences said: Discipline Para. 553.—

1. "The General Conference advises all our ministers and members to abstain from the use of tobacco as injurious to both body and soul."

2. "The General Conference recommends to the annual conferences to require candidates for admission to be free from the habit as hurtful to their acceptability and usefulness among our people."

Every preacher, therefore, seeking admission to the Methodist Episcopal ministry is asked, "Will you wholly abstain from the use of tobacco?" Discipline Para. 157, s. c. 21.

It is made the duty of every quarterly conference to ask local preachers "If they will wholly abstain from the use of tobacco." We pray for the day when there will not be a tobacco Methodist in the world.

National Temperance Society.—The twentieth annual meeting of the National Temperance Society was held May 12th in New York. The annual report of Secretary Stearns showed that the financial depression of the country had affected the temperance cause materially. There were distributed 545,890 of books, pamphlets, etc. The receipts from memberships, legacies, etc., $8,897. The missionary work in the year caused on outlay of $12,000. The Treasurer's report showed the entire receipts for the year to have been $60,218. The expenses slightly exceeded that amount. Resolutions were adopted congratulating the friends of temperance on the great advanees the cause had made, and upon the widespread and rapidly increasing interest in it. Temperance organizations throughout the world were urged to unite in a monster demonstration on the centennial of the inauguration of the temperance movement next September.

Beer Gardens Opened Sunday.—Under the $1,000 license law passed by the Sioux City, Iowa, council eleven saloons have taken out licenses, and many more, it is thought, will follow suit. About forty-eight saloons have been running since the prohibitory law came into effect, nearly all paying a $300 license. The city authorities promise to close all saloons not paying the $1,000 license. Beer gardens were open on Sunday for the first time this seasons. There were speaking and general rejoicing by the German citizens.

Miss Cleveland, as the mistress of the White House, is said to be opposed to the President's views as to the wine and liquor question. She is in favor of strict temperance principles in the Presidential mansion. She is clearly right on this subject; and the President, in adopting her views, would alike honor himself and serve the best interests of the country.—Independent.

THE CHURCHES.

—Bro. M. Elliot, Jr., of Wheaton Theological Seminary, is urging the Wesleyan brethren to take hold of the foreign mission work. He himself intends going to Africa. His letters are meeting with an encouraging response.

—John P. Brooks, of Bloomington, Ill., for some time editor of the Banner of Holiness, and W. T. Ellis, of Topeka, Kansas, opened a Gospel meeting in the Bethel Home, corner of Lake and Desplaines streets, Chicago, last Saturday evening, to continue so long as God permits.

—Pastor Seguin of the French Catholic Mission expects to spend some time during the summer in lecturing wherever the way may be open, on Romanism and Protestantism. Collections will be taken as often as possible for the proposed French church in this city. He may be addressed in care of this office or of the Free Methodist, Chicago, or of the Vanguard, St. Louis. His church worships for the time being in the lecture room of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian church, whose pastor writes earnestly on this mission.

—In May, 1883, the Baptist church at Denison, Texas, was destroyed by a cyclone. Recently the new building on the same lot was almost, if not entirely, ruined by a cyclone.

—The Baptist Union in Germany last year had 161 churches, with 33,483 members; a net gain of 1,190 over the previous year. There were 3,546 baptized. The churches raised for all purposes about $96,000, and their property is valued at about $332,302. They lost 321 members by emigration, and the exclusion of 864 shows a good standard of Christian character.

The forty-eighth annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago, was held last week. An extended discussion was held over the proposition to allow women to vote in the deliberations of the church, resulting in its defeat.

—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held a meeting at Grant Place M. E. church, Chicago, in honor of Miss H. N. Bell, who starts in a few days for Secunderabad, Deccan, India, to engage in the foreign missionary work at that point.

—Every Christian would be blessed in reading the semi-annual reports sent out by Wm. F. Davis of Chelsea, Mass., the evangelist among the lumbermen of Michigan. This mission is independent of ecclesiastical control, and is maintained on the faith principle, entirely or largely. Donations by mail should be sent to Wm. F. Davis, Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass. Bro. Davis pays for his private expenses from his own purse. We find this record of one day in the mission at East Sangamon: "The man who was refused admission to the church over two months ago because he was unwilling to renounce Masonry, testified this evening of the great blessing which he has received in these meetings, and how precious Jesus Christ has become unto him. He was asked if he would be willing to turn his back on Freemasonry for the sake of Christ, and at once replied, 'Yes, and on everything else.' After due examination, the church was convinced of the man's recovery from idolatry and welcomed him foyfully to their communion."

—The police of Boston arrested Wm. F Davis, the evangelist, of Chelsea; H. L. Hastings, the well-known evangelist and editor of the Christian, Boston; Rev. A. J. Gordon, a leading Baptist pastor of the same city, and the captain of the Salvation Army for preaching in the Common on Sabbath, May 17th. The ministers of the city were justly indignant and propose to give the city authorities an opportunity to arrest them all for the same offense. They will insist on their right to preach in the Common in spite of Roman Catholic police officers.

—A dispatch from New York reports the sale of the revised Old Testament tor the first week after it was put on the market light as compared with that of the revised New Testament. Mr. Cunningham, with C. T. Tillingham, says of the sale: "On Thursday, the opening day of the sale, we sold 6,000 copies of the Bible. The first day's sale of the revised New Testament amounted to 30,000 copies. From all that I can ascertain from retail dealers, I think that the sale of the new Old Testament is about one-sixth that of the revised New Testament." Harper Brothers, who are selling the Cambridge edition, report a good demand. Funk and Wagnalls have sold only fifty copies of the new work, and they declare that it is meeting with little favor. Thomas Wilson & Sons, agents of the Oxford Press, said there had been a steady sale of the book for the week.

—The May anniversary of the Baptist denomination opened Tuesday morning, at Saratoga, with the eighth annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society—Mrs. J. H. Crouse, of Chicago, president.

—The Cumberland Presbyterian Assembly met this year at Bentonville, Arkansas. The committee on Missions made a report recommending the Board of Missions to aid the Indian school in the Indian Nation, the establishment of city missions in California, and the appointment of one evangelist on the Pacific Coast. The Japanese student of Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., one of the converts of the Japan mission, was present and aided the cause of missions very much.

PRESBYTERIANS AT CINCINNATI.

May 29, 1885.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church now in session in this city (Cincinnati) is quite formidable in numbers, and emphatically respectable in regard to talent, some of the best minds of the country being here representing this leading church. Great interest is manifested in the discussions and full houses greet the speakers, and strict attention is paid to the arguments presented.

The opportunity was embraced to present the reform work to these representative minds by distributing about three thousand pages of anti-secret literature among the delegates. There were good things among them, such as, "Moody on Secret Societies," "Freemasonry in the Family," "A Pastor's Confession," nearly a year's file of the Cynosure, and last, but by no means, least, Dr. Blanchard's address before the American convention at Washington. Thus we sow the seed, hoping to gather after many days.

The General Synod of the Reformed Presbyterians was also in session during six days of last and this week. It was composed of men earnest, zealous, and tried, men who could not be deterred from the performance of duty, if martyrdom stood before them as the result.

Among the resolutions passed upon by the Synod was one to co-operate with the other Psalm-singing churches, and others, in the work of opposing the rum traffic, secret societies, and disseminating the truth of the Kingship of Messiah and his rightful authority over the nations.

This people being well versed in the anti-secret reform, and active in its favor, but little pains was used to educate them, save the giving each member of the session a copy of the Cynosure.

One brother from Nova Scotia remarked that he had long been desirous of seeing some of that literature, and requested another copy, which was given him. So we hope some little good was done to the glory of our Lord. W. A. S.

THE U. B. GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The change in the discipline which was voted in the Fostoria Conference was effected by the adoption of the following report:

We recommend that the following law in relation to secret combinations be adopted to take the place of section 3, chapter 10 of discipline:

Secret combinations.—A secret combination in the sense of the constitution is a secret league or confederation of persons holding principles and laws at variance with the Word of God and infringing upon the natural, social, political or religious rights of those outside its pale.

Any member or minister of our church found in connection with such combinations shall be dealt with as in other cases of disobedience to the order and discipline of the church. In case of member, as found on page 23 of discipline in answer to the third question of Sec. 3, chap. 4, and in case of ministers, as found in Chap. 6, Sec. 3.

Resolved, That Section 3 of Chapter 10, of discipline be and is hereby repealed. Respectfully submited.

S. M. Hippard, chairman; W. J. Shuey, J. W. Hott, J. H. Snyder, W. H. Price, J. W. Fulkerson, L. Bookwalter, Secretary; J. K. Statton, J. G. Mosher, Wm. Dillon, George Plowman, Geo. Miller, C. N. McKee.

Two members, William Dillon and J. G. Mosher, dissented from the finding of the committee on the subject of the constitution and presented a minority report recommending no change in constitution or discipline.

A committee of twenty-seven was voted on the recommendation of the above named majority to revise the constitution and confession of faith. Bishop Wright was ordered to the Pacific coast a nd J. W. Hott was continued editor of the Telescope

THE NATIONAL HOLINESS CONVENTION.

This meeting in the Park Avenue M. E. church in this city did not, we fear, accomplish so much for the sanctification of believers as many had hoped. Much of the time during the six days of the convention it was conducted as a prayer meeting, and some of the leaders seemed anxious to continue it in such a channel. Later, better counsels prevailed and a long declaration was adopted from which we make important extracts. On the whole the spirit of the meeting was good, and will result in a greater unanimity among the numerous holiness papers and societies.

FROM THE DECLARATION.

2. Entire Sanctification. This is also a comprehensive term relating to the second stage in Christian experience and life. It is that great work wrought subsequent to justification, by the Holy Ghost, upon the sole condition of faith in the infinite efficacy of Christ's all cleansing blood; such faith being preceded by an act of solemn and complete consecration and sacrifice of body, soul, and spirit and of all earthly possessions to God. This work has these distinct elements: (1) The entire extinction of the carnal mind, the total eradication of the birth-principle of sin. (2) The communication of perfect love to the soul thus washed from all moral defilement. (3) The abiding indwelling of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter. There is a distinct witness of this second work by the Holy Spirit, as the apostle affirms, saying: "Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us." Heb. 10: 15. There is such a close connection between the gifts of justification and entire sanctification, and such a readiness on the part of our heavenly Father to bestow the second as well as the first, that young converts should be encouraged to go up at once to the Canaan of perfect love. We recorded as our conviction, that only those who are walking in the clear light of justification are prepared to seek entire sanctification. If, through unfaithfulness, any have lost the witness of their personal acceptance with God, their first work is to seek the restoration of their forfeited inheritance; and when this is regained they may intelligently and successfully advance to the second stage. We cannot too strongly emphasize the fact, that the more than granite like foundation of justification is essential to the upraising of the superstructure of true holiness, in just proportions, and enduring strength.

3. Testimony. It is the duty of all who are made partakers of entire sanctification, as well as those who are justified, to testify thereof to the praise of the Giver. Such testimony should be very definite, as much as possible in the use of Bible terms, and in such a spirit of humility as to demonstrate to the hearers that there is no self-exaltation, but the the magnifying of the Lord Jesus. If such testimony be withheld, the light of the soul will soon become darkness.

6. Growth in grace. As the work of entire sanctification involves the utter destruction of carnality, and the consequent removal of all obstructions to Christian growth, and also makes the heart the temple of the Holy Ghost, bringing into it the treasures of infinite wisdom and strength, growth in grace thereafter should be rapid, constant and palpable to themselves and others. And to this end we recommend the careful study of the Scriptures and daily and constant attention to closet prayer.

7. Life associations. Inasmuch as the associations of life have a powerful influence in molding character, all who would live holily should not enter into marriage relations or business partnerships calculated to hinder them; nor become connected with secular or secret societies, which are prohibited by such Scriptures as the following: "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Eph. 5: 11.

9. Unsectarian aspects. The doctrine and experience of Christian holiness do not belong to any particular denomination, sect or party, but are the common heritage of all Christian believers. In this view it is highly appropriate that there should be the organization of unsectarian associations and auxiliary bands, and the holding of special meetings on the line of holiness, in order to demonstrate the essential unity of our faith in the bonds of peace, and also for aggressive united action in the promulgation of the truth as it is in Jesus.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian," 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

FARM NOTES.

APPLYING FERTILIZERS TO CORN.

It is quite reasonable to suppose that plants can be gorged with food as animals may be, and that injury may result from it. This is quite true as regards corn. The corn plant has a long season of active growth. It requires about 100 days for its maturity. If all the food which is required to mature the plant is added to the soil in a soluble and available condition, at the planting, a large quantity may be lost before the plant can utilize it. Soluble fertilizers diffuse themselves in a moist soil with great rapidity, and are quickly carried off by the drainage water into the subsoil. Sir J. B. Lawes has noticed the nitric acid of nitrate of soda, which has been applied to the surface soil, escaping in the water flowing from the drains in forty-eight hours after the application. If, then, six hundred pounds of this fertilizer should be applied to the corn crop before the sowing of the seed, it will begin to be lost before a single root has been formed to arrest its escape. This fact is given only as an instance of how fertilizers may be lost by misapplication. At the best an excess of fertilizing material given to corn in its early stages, forces a rank growth of stalk, and the plant food is exhausted before it can be converted into grain, which is the most valuable part of the crop. During some years past, we have been growing corn under a new system of fertilizing, which is to apply the fertilizer at intervals, as after each time of cultivation, instead of before and immediately after the planting. The effect has been to notably increase the yield of grain, and decrease the growth of stalk. By this method eighty bushels of grain per acre have been produced, and in growing sweet corn for sale, fine, large, and well-filled ears are secured. The fertilizer is dusted along the rows before the cultivator is used, or immediately after, and the first shower carries it down to the roots. The same method of applying fertilizers has been used for root crops with favorable results.—Am. Agriculturist.

AMMONIA FOR FLOWERING PLANTS AND STRAWBERRY PLANTS.

A writer in the London Gardeners' Chronicle says: Last year I was induced to try an experiment in chrysanthemum growing, and for this purpose purchased one pound of sulphate of ammonia, which I bottled and corked, as the ammonia evaporates very rapidly. I then selected four plants from my collection, putting them by themselves, gave them a teaspoonful of ammonia in a gallon of water twice a week. In a fortnight's time the result was most striking; for though I watered the others with liquid cow manure they looked lean when compared with the ammonia watered plants, whose leaves turned to a very dark green, which they carried to the edge of the pots until the flowers were cut. As a matter of course the flowers were splendid. The ammonia used is rather expensive, as I bought it from a chemist's shop; this year I intend getting agricultural ammonia, which is much cheaper. I have also tried it on strawberries, with the same satisfactory result, the crop being nearly double that of the others; it is very powerful, and requires to be used with caution.

TO RESTRAIN AN UNRULY ANIMAL.

No one can travel very far in a cattle section of the country, when the pasture is short and the springs low, without seeing cattle or horses fettered by some sort of a clumsy or crude apparatus to prevent them from jumping over fences. Sometimes it is a heavy "poke" hung to the neck, with an arm projecting forward to catch under the fence; oftener, perhaps, particularly on cattle, we see the head loaded down with heavy boards to blind the eyes, or the head covered nearly all over with leather or heavy sacking, for the same purpose.

A cow that is made constantly uncomfortable, must have her milk and butter yield considerably reduced, and is consequently, less profitable to her owner. The Breeders' Journal recommends a light harness for balky cattle, made as follows: Procure a common head halter, without a leading strap; in place of the strap, tie to the ring a half-inch rope eleven feet long, more or less according to the size of the animal, and about three feet back tie a small ring firmly to the rope; pass the rope between the fore legs which will bring the ring under the waist or girth of the animal; pass the rope up over the back and down to the ring and tie. This makes a harness that will keep the animal from getting its head high enough to jump a fence, while it does not injure or annoy unreasonably. Only a little practice will be required for finding the proper length for each of the parts.

The old practice of washing sheep before shearing has fallen into disuse among the most progressive farmers. It does not pay. Aside from the colds, rheumatisms, and other inconveniences incurred by men and animals, the wool is not increased in market value enough to justify the time and labor expended. If the fleeces are filled with burrs and rubbish, the washing they get on the sheep's back will not help them any. Better keep the sheep reasonably clean, and let the manufacturers do the washing.

An egg is one of the few things that cannot be adulterated; but, according to the Poultry World, its value may be considerably affected by the food supplied to biddy. The difference, it says, between an egg laid by a plump, healthy hen, fed with good fresh food daily, and an egg laid by a thin, poorly-fed hen, is as great as the difference between good beef and poor. A fowl fed on garbage and weak slops, with very little grain of any kind, may lay eggs, to be sure, but when these eggs are broken to be used for cake, pies, etc., they will spread in a weak, watery way over your dish, or look a milky white instead of having a rich, slightly yellow tinge. A rich egg retains in shape as far as possible, and yields to the beating of a knife or spoon with more resistance, and gives you the conviction that you are really beating something thicker than water or diluted milk.

Growing chickens should be fed often. Very young chickens cannot consume enough food at once to last them half a day, as their crops are small; their rapid growth of flesh, bone and feathers, and habitual exercise, demand material proportionately nourishing and active, to develop a vigorous constitution. The food should be of the very best, and perfectly mixed. Ground oats, with barley and corn meal, should be fed together, one-third more of the oats and barley than of the corn meal. This is better than to feed each kind by itself.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

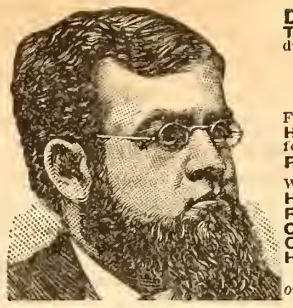
SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.



Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	 10	per cent
" " "	50	 15	" "
" " "	100	 20	" "
" " "	250	 25	" "
" " "	500	 30	" "
" " "	1000	 35	" "
" " "	1500	 40	" "
" " "	2500	 50	" "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ONLY PURE MINERAL WATER IS THE "WAUKESHA GLENN!"

HIGHEST AWARD OVER ALL OTHER MINERAL WATERS NATURAL OR ARTIFICIAL.

"WAUKESHA GLENN" reigns alone among Natural Dietetic Table Waters. Its numerous competitors appear to have, one after another, fallen away.

With ladies, gentlemen, and bon vivants everywhere, it has become the standard of dietary expedients, fortifying the digestive functions, and enabling free livers to indulge with impunity at table. The world of wealth, intelligence and refinement testifies to its sparkling, naturally pure and delightful qualities, as the beverage incomparable, and accredits it with being the surest and speediest source of clear complexions, high health and exuberant spirits. It has been tested by thousands, whose unsolicited testimonials are open to the public, and furnished to all who desire. Mailed free. Address,

T. H. BRYANT, Waukesha, Wis.

☞Waukesha is a delightful Summer Resort, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Chicago and Northwestern Railways.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

IN THE COILS; —OR— The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II. EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY; OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

The Master's Carpet. BY F. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 420 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

The membership of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in Wisconsin is 5,543. The increase in membership the past year has been 646. Amount paid on deaths, $74,000; receipts of the Grand Lodge the past year, $6,697.77; disbursements $6,509.72.

—The Knights Templar and Masons' Life Indemnity Company is a new society of the mutual insurance order, to hold uneasy lodgemen steady in the traces.

—The Garden City Council of the Royal Arcanum order, which had such a scramble to keep possession of their quarters in MeVicker's theater building in this city, have been fishing for whales. The Inter Ocean says of one of their late meetings: "During the evening the distinguished divine, the Rev. A. E Kittredge, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, was initiated into the mysteries of the royal secret, together with other gentlemen presenting themselves." It is astonishing what spirit can have come over this intelligent gentleman to lead him to such a course.

—The Masonic Advocate says of the Masonic back-kitchen degrees: "The order of the Eastern Star does not, as is often asserted, claim to be a part of Masonry. It has never sought recognition from Masonry, but it says to the individual Mason: We shall be pleased to have you and your family unite with us, and thus afford to those you hold most near and dear a source of enjoyment and protection similar to that you receive from your connection with Masonry. It thus not only brings the families of Masons together, but by the closer relationship thus established, it strengthens the bonds of friendship between them, and enables the performance of many kindly acts toward those who may need assistance."

—The Sons of St. George is an order largely composed of Englishmen, and apparently under the patronage of the Episcopal church. It was organized fifteen years since and has its lodges now from New England to west of the Mississippi. Its membership is over 20,000, representing 175 lodges. On the last Sabbath in April the lodges of this order about Chicago met at the Exposition building and marched through the streets to the Episcopal cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, near the Cynosure office, where services were conducted by the notorious Henry G. Perry.

—One council of Royal Templars of Temperance in Chicago, numbering 49 members, has paid a total of $983.14 to the insurance aid fund of the order; that is about $20 each. Cheap insurance!—yes, in actual value.

—It is not all "sweetness and light" even in the ineffable regions of the 33d degree, Sovereign Grand Inspectors General. A circular of warning as below, has been issued from the Supreme Council, 33d degree, A. A. S. Rite, for the northern Mason jurisdiction of the United States:

"WHEREAS, One of the spurious organizations having its headquarters in the city of New York, of which one Edward W. Atwood professes to be Sovereign Grand Commander, and Robert Folger, Grand Secretary General, both having been expelled by this Supreme Council, having published and circulated a book purporting to be the proceedings of a supreme council of the A. A. Scottish Rite: and,

WHEREAS, In the publication thereof they have in the style of binding, arrangement of printing, and general make-up of said so called proceedings endeavored as near as possible to imitate the style, form and general appearance of the proceedings of the regular Supreme Council of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States, as we verily believe for the purpose of deceiving and leading foreign supreme councils to think they are receiving proceedings of the regular and legitimate Supreme Council for this jurisdiction, we deem it expedient and just to caution you to carefully scrutinize all publications coming to you, purporting to be proceedings of a supreme council, and receive none as genuine unless those containing as officers the names of Illustrious Henry L Palmer, M. P., Sovereign Grand Commander, and Illustrious Clinton F. Paige, Grand Secretary General of the Supreme Council for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States, and Illustrious Albert Pike, M. P., Sovereign Grand Commander, and William M. Ireland, Grand Secretary General of the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

For Overworked Females.

Dr. J. P. COWAN, Ashland, O., says: "It proves satisfactory as a nerve tonic; also in dyspeptic conditions of the stomach, with general debility, such as we find in overworked females, with nervous headache and its accompaniments."

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... ... ... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical articles to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St., Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"

and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.
Furnished in any quantities at

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation.—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded hank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00. W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.
For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Ohicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

HOME AND HEALTH.

CHOLERA TREATMENT.

Hints in regard to cholora prevention and treatment are acceptable to the public, when they come from good medical authority. We note the following from a physician of Springfield, Ill. There has been much discussion of late over the discovery by Dr. R. Koch, of Berlin, Germany, of what he considers the specific cholera germ. Whether this discovery will point to the best means for the annihilation of his cholera bacillus, clinical experience will prove. . So far, in Europe this scourge has claimed lately as many victims as ever before. Take only short walks; stay, eat, and drink mostly at home; touch no raw food and drink no unboiled water—cooking and acids destroy the poison. Washing with acidulated water, especially after having been exposed to the contagion, will be a safeguard. Dress warm to prevent abdominal catarrh. Patients ought to be isolated. As workmen in copper have always been entirely exempt from an attack of cholera even where many hundreds were employed not a single case has occurred while they remained near copper—therefore it may be well to wear a piece of copper over the pit of the stomach, suspended by a string around the neck. Another prophylatic is sulphur (milk of sulphur), of which about half a teaspoonful may be sprinkled into each stocking twice a week. Camphor has been found indicated generally in the beginning of the disease, therefore every one ought to have convenient a small phial of spirits of camphor, of which a few drops may be taken on the slightest indisposition every five or ten minutes for a quarter or half an hour, at least, and quiet in a recumbent position, covered warmly. Other remedies may be required, of course, for symptoms not relieved by the camphor, which the physician when called will prescribe.

ARE YOU READY FOR CHOLERA?

The family wastes are of three sorts: 1. Garbage—the kitchen solid refuse, including ashes. 2. Liquid waste—kitchen slops, washing water, etc. 3. The wastes of the human body. Leaving the other wastes to another time, we call attention to the wastes of our bodies as the most dangerous of all, and at the same time the most readily disposed of. Nothing can be more inadequate for the purpose than the ordinary privy vault. It is not only a constant offence, but a continuous source of danger, its contents often contaminating wells at the distance of a hundred feet or more, and bringing disease and death into the family. Dangerous at all times, the privy vault is especially to be dreaded in time of cholera. There is but one thing to be done with a privy vault—abolish it! Do this at once, before hot weather. It is impossible to mend, improve, or make it tolerable. Fill it up and be done with it. The substitute for the vault is the earth closet. If the small house that has stood over the vault is more convenient than any other place for the earth-closet, use it. Such buildings are usually eye-sores, and the filling up of the vault removes all excuse for the unsightly presence. An earth closet may be placed in any convenient room; one may be partitioned off in a shed, in a barn or other out-building, or the closet may occupy a small room in the house without unpleasant results. The material required is dry loam, not sand but good soil, the stiffer the better. Dry this earth thoroughly, by spreading it on a platform of boards in the sun. When dust dry, pass it through a sieve to remove lumps; stones, etc., and store in barrels or boxes in a dry place. Where coal is burned, sifted ashes will answer in place of dry earth, but wood ashes must not be used. For the closet, self-acting ones may be purchased if preferred. but a simple and inexpensive closet may be made at small cost, that will answer as well as the most costly affair.—American Agriculturist.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the National Christian Association. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flago, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Preabyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 75c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysterica of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keyatone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doeshurg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; compriaes the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District North western Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on one Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. W. W Geealin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Coun. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M S Neweomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each, per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees " 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

At a meeting of the Cabinet Thursday the question of the continuance of the World's Exposition at New Orleans was considered. The Cabinet were unanimously of the opinion that there is no warrant of law for it, and that it would be inexpedient on other grounds.

Charles Denby, a prominent lawyer of Evansville, Ind., was appointed Minister to China, on Friday.

According to the records of the Hydrographic Office, Washington, the amount of ice and the number of bergs which have appeared in the direct path of European steamers within a month is unprecedented. The forthcoming monthly map will contain a statement of the number of vessels injured by collision with icebergs during the month, so far as heard from. The list now numbers twenty-seven.

President Cleveland reached Jersey City from Washington, Friday, and proceeded to the house of Secretary Whitney. Secretary Endicott and Secretary Whitney accompanied the President. Postmaster General Vilas arrived in the morning and went to meet a friend in Yonkers.

COUNTRY.

Postmaster Palmer of Chicago, has completed his preparations to turn the Postoffice over to Mr. Judd his successor. The office has handled $128,367,828.95 during Mr. Palmer's term.

Three explosions, resulting from the bursting of a can of benzine, demolished the front wall of a furniture warehouse at Philadelphia Thursday evening, killing a woman and injuring several persons. The building was burned, and adjoining structures were damaged by the flames.

During a dense fog on the 25th inst, the steamship City of Rome crashed into the French bark George Johns, off the Newfoundland Banks, twenty-two of the bark's crew perishing, the remaining two being saved by the boats of the Rome, which were promptly lowered.

The residence of T. C. Campbell, the criminal lawyer who was the prime cause of the riot, last year in Cincinnati, was mysteriously destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning.

John Harper and Etta Farmer (engaged to be married), and John Welsh were drowned near Toronto Monday. Two employes of the Detroit waterworks were drowned near that city Tuesday morning by the upsetting of a raft.

Ex Secretary Windom assigns as one of the reasons for the unsettled condition of business that Eastern capitalists fear the coinage of silver dollars may put gold at a premium and result in a financial panic.

The Shackamaxon Bank at Philadelphia failed to open its doors Friday morning causing excitement among the depositors. It is stated that two accounts were overdrawn to the extent of $203,000 wiping out the bank's capital and surplus.

In anger, Friday, John Motter a wealthy farmer of Findlay, Ohio, struck his 12-year old son a heavy blow, breaking his neck, and causing instant death.

Twelve elders and 400 Mormon converts arrived in New York, Wednesday, on the steamship Wisconsin, and were soon after sent on their way to Utah. They were from Switzerland, Germany, Ireland, Scotland, and England, and it has taken about eighteen months to recruit them.

Seven polygamists were sentenced at Blackfoot, Idaho, Saturday, Bishop Geo. Stewart, who declined to pledge himself to obey the law in the future, receiving the severest sentence—$300 fine and four months in the penitentiary.

A mysterious cattle disease has broken out on a farm at Saybrook, Ill., the animal suddenly falling dead as if from heart disease.

By the bursting of a water-spout at Indianola, Neb., Tuesday night, nine persons were drowned.

H. Herman Brothers' great furniture factory at New York, surrounded by tenement houses of the poorest class, was entirely destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning, the flames driving a hundred families in their night-clothes into the street. Nearly all the engines in the city were called on to battle with the conflagration. Five hundred men are rendered idle, and the total loss approximates $400,000.

While intoxicated at Orange, Mass., Tuesday night, George Prentiss ordered his son Willie to shoot a cap from his head. In the attempt the boy shot his father dead.

Cyclones did serious damage Wednesday at Nortonville, Goffs, and Frankfort, Kan., wrecking several structures and injuring many persons, a few fatally.

A three story frame tenement at Jersey City, occupied by five families, collapsed Wednesday morning, killing three children of one family and a lad of 15. Ten persons were injured more or less seriously.

A Pennsylvania syndicate has leased 10,000 acres of land in Bureau County, Ill., for the purpose of testing the number and extent of natural gas wells.

Fire early Thursday morning destroyed the business section of Medford, Wis., together with a large quantity of lumber. Twenty-six business houses were burned. The loss is placed at $200,000 with light insurance.

Adam P. Harley, a citizen of Erie, who, when lying at the point of death from consumption, proclaimed himself cured by faith, died Thursday while offering prayer for other ailing persons.

Five tramps captured a freight train Monday night at Fort Gratiot, Mich., threatening the train men with revolvers, and disarming two Deputy Sheriffs who came to relieve the embargo. The vagrants quitted the train near Frazer, stating that they wanted to get to Detroit in time to catch the circus.

At Charlestown, W. Va., Wednesday morning the brake-band of the Kanawha Mining Company's incline, 800 feet long, up a steep mountain, broke, and two carloads of miners going to the mines were carried up the mountain at a great speed. Nine jumped out, four remaining. Three were killed, one fatally hurt, and a number slightly injured.

The Apaches are making bloody trails through New Mexico. It is now thought three or four different bands are depredating and murdering in as many sections of territory. The hostiles are thought to number about 300. Three companies of cavalry and sixty scouts are on the trail. A company of volunteers, well armed and mounted are in pursuit of the Indians. About sixty persons have been killed since the outbreak.

FOREIGN.

The London News announced this morning on the highest authority that Russia's reply to England's counter proposals was received in London yesterday. The reply, it says, involves the acceptance of the proposals, and practically settles in a satisfactory manner the whole question of the Afghan boundary. Both Marnehak and Zulfikar remain in possession of the Ameer. The main features of the work of delimitation have been finally fixed and the boundary commission will settle the details. The negotiations have been conducted in a most friendly spirit on both sides.

LETTERS

Containing cash for the Cynosure were received during the week ending May 30, from the following:

L. Moore, Mrs. L. T. McKune, J. L. Brown, S. A. Pratt, Justus Miller, J. M. McEntarfer, John A. VanEps, Rev. J. R. Wylie, C. J. Matteson, Wm. Taylor, I. T. Gibson, Henry Cope, J. F. Baird, Wm. R. Morley, Rev. W. S. Spooner, Wm. Tisdell, Wm. Parkhill, Rev. A. Megginson, Louis Tallman, A. I. Salisbury, V. Rometame, Chas. McMillan, H. R. Smith, Dan'l Hyde, J. S. Gard, Aaron Burgess, Zeba Smith, A. H. Leach, Wm. Freeman, Edward Pfeiffer, O. D. Perry, Benjamin Harper, D. W. Nelson, Nathan Callender, W. H. Fischer. Mrs. S. H. Nutting, A. S. Waterbury.

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@84
No. 3		@82
Winter No 2		@94
Corn—No. 2		44½
Oats—No. 2		32⅛
Rye—No. 2		68½
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		11 05
Butter, medium to best	10	@20
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		12
Potatoes per bus	35	45
Seeds—Timothy	1 53	@1 62
Flax	1 30	1 38
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra		@5 50
Common to good	2 40	@5 00
Hogs	3 40	@4 30
Sheep	2 50	@3 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	87	@1 10
Spring		96
Corn	53	@55
Oats	40	@47
Mess Pork		12 00
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 80	@5 40
Hogs	3 80	@4 25
Sheep	2 00	@3 30

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen. $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees. in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this [illegible]ting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus.

"The exciting scenes of [illegible] of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

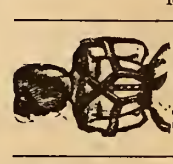
"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

LOOK AT THE
YELLOW TAG
AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIBES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the



FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV CHINIQAY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

LADY AGENTS can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters. Sample outfit free. Cincinnati Suspender Co., 179 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!
ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH.
HAY-FEVER.
CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 38. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1885. WHOLE No. 789.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Rev. Mr. Hiel's Letter.... 8
The Church Congress.... 8
The United Brethren Again..... 8
Expositions..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Lodge Incorporation..... 1
Our Brother's Keeper.... 2
Goad Pricks for Lazy Christians..... 2
A Brave Speech..... 2
SELECTED:
Exposures of Freemasonry..... 3
Work for Good Government..... 3
Siftings..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XXII. & XXIII. 4
LITERATURE..... 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
CORRESPONDENCE:
Washington Letter; Secretism in the Colored Churches; Wanted: a Masonic Book; Church Union; Lodge and Saloon.....5,6
REFORM NEWS:
From the Illinois Lecturer..... 5
To the Friends of Reform... 9
The Readers of Sweden..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

Following the opening of the Sunday theater a persistent effort was made last year, under the lead of a German infidel, to open the race track on the same day. A strong opposition suddenly developed and the project was postponed. Last week the advertisements were out for an opening performance this year. The friends of the Sabbath were not ready, with one exception. Dr. Kittredge of the third Presbyterian church after morning service called for volunteers to get testimony. Several hundred of his large congregation showed their interest and their forees were disposed so as to mark every violation of the laws. With Dr. Kittredge several lawyers are interested and reinforcements may be expected from several churches of the West Side. The fight will have to be made on the basis of the State law which does not make much account of the moral obligation of the Sabbath. It is a brave attempt to save Chicago from the Parisian Sabbath, though to an ordinray observer there is little ground left for difference between our city and the gay and wicked capital of France.

The bronze statue of "The Pilgrim" of heroic size was unveiled in the Central Park, New York, Saturday afternoon. The accessories were appropriate, and the address by George William Curtis deserves to live along with Macauley's renowned characterization; as imperishable as the bronze and granite of the monument. The people, whose deeds and character have inspired the eloquence of our greatest orators, have another interesting side of their character unfolded in Prof Phelps' article from the Independent, on the 10th page. Mr. Curtis replies to the current charge of fanaticism which an ignorant and atheistic generation has applied to the great founders of our Republic: "A fanatic? Yes, in the high sense of unchangeable fidelity to the sublime idea—a fanatic like Columbus sure of a western passage to India over a mysterious ocean which no mariner had ever sailed; a fanatic like Galileo, who marked the courses of the stars and saw, despite the jargon of authority, that still the earth moved; a fanatic like Joseph Warren, whom the glory of patriotism transfigures upon Bunker Hill. This was the fanatic who read the Bible to the English people and quickened English life with the fire of primeval faith; who smote the Spaniard and swept the pirates from the sea, and rode with Cromwell and the Ironsides praising God; who to the utmost shores of the Mediterranean and in the shuddering valleys of Piedmont, to every religious oppressor and foe of England made the name of England terrible. This was the fanatic, soft as sunshine in the young Milton, blasting in Cromwell as the thunder bolt, in Endicott austere as Calvin, in Roger Williams benign as Melancthon, in John Robinson foreseeing more truth to break forth from God's Word. In all history do you see a noble figure? Forth from the morning of Greece, come, Leonidas, with your bravest of the brave—in the rapt city plead, Demosthenes, your country's cause—pluck, Gracchus, from aristocratic Rome its crown; speak, Cicero, your magic word; lift, Cato, your admonishing hands; and you, patriots of modern Europe, be all gratefully remembered—but where in the earlier ages, in the latter day, in lands remote or near, shall we find loftier self-sacrifice, more unstained devotion to worthier ends, issuing in happier results to the highest interests of man, than in the English Puritan?"

One of the changes brought about by the new administration is in the Department of Agriculture, which has been for some six or eight years in the charge of Dr. Geo. B. Loring of Massachusetts, a Freemason whose degrees number among the highest, and who has been a constant opposer of Hon. Charles Francis Adams, for no other apparent reason than the consistent testimony of the latter as an American against the despotic lodge. The new Commissioner finds the mismanagement of the exalted brother of Albert Pike so gross that an investigation is likely to be in order soon. The Rural New Yorker says that Dr. Loring followed no honest system, at least in purchasing seeds, as 1,700 bushels of sorghum seed was bought in New York at nearly $3.00 per bushel, which could be had in Nebraska for 25 cents. "The whole $50,000 appropriated for making experiments in the manufacture of sugar from corn-stalks and sorghum, was expended for the pay of extra clerks recommended by the friends of the Commisioner, although the employes were so numerous they had little to do, and ten of the best paid of them are known to have done absolutely no work for some time, not even visiting the Department, except once a day. The late management of the Department is pretty certain to be fully investigated, and all the Washington correspondents agree that the affairs therein had reached a more scandalous condition than could be found in any other department of the Government."

The differences in the British cabinet do not heal by time. Two of the radical members insist that occasion no longer exists in Ireland for the renewal of the crimes act; but Mr. Gladstone still adheres to a modified form to be in force one year, though resignations are threatened. A disruption would seriously imperil the settlement of the Afghan dispute. The people have yet implicit confidence in Mr. Gladstone, who has determined, it seems, not to retire from public life until he sees his party safely through this crisis. Four members of the cabinet are in favor of the following radical platform, which probably embodies the reforms which are to be taken up and settled by Parliament: "1. A reform in the constitution of the House of Lord's by reducing the number of hereditary peers and increasing the number of life titles. 2. A reform of the law of entail, which will work toward a division rather than a concentration of land titles. 3. General reform in the land laws of Great Britain, to the end that the number of holdings in fee may be increased and titles to land more easily be obtained. 4. For Ireland the widest possible measure of self-government consistent with the unity of the British Empire. 5. Public denominational education on the principles accepted by the Irish party."

The news of a Mohammedan uprising in central Africa, which threatens to precipitate a war among the tribes about the great Nyanza lakes, has turned aside the five missionaries sent out by the Free Methodist churches who lately embarked for the East African coast. They will not go on to the head-waters of the Congo, as first proposed, but remain near the Zambesi river to colonize and begin he proclamation of the "glorious Gospel of the son of God." This uprising is an indication of the difficulties which must yet be overcome, the fanaticism, the superstition and the prejudice that must be subdued before the work of the Congo Association, lately recognized in the Berlin Congress, is completed. Along with the Congo Free State is the proposition of a Gordon Free State in honor of the hero who fell at Khartoum, which has for its object the preservation of the Nile for the world's commerce. A strong syndicate is already being formed in London which will operate under a charter from the crown to extend British commerce and suppress the slave trade. A number of wealthy philanthropists are engaged in the enterprise.

LODGE INCORPORATION.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

That Masonic lodges, both Grand and Subordinate, are bodies "politic and corporate" in the legal sense of the term, is made plain by the following act of the legislature of Illinois passed February 14, 1855, being an amendment to a previous act of Feb. 9, 1853:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the people of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly, That the Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, Grand Wardens, Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer for the time being, and their successors in office, of the Grand Lodge of the State of Illinois, Ancient, Free and accepted Masons, together with the Masters and Wardens of the several Lodges subordinate to said Grand Lodge, while holding said offices, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be a body politic and corporate, by the name, style and description of the "Grand Lodge of the State of Illinois Free and Accepted Masons."

SEC. 2. The said corporation, by the name and style aforesaid, shall have full power to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, prosecute and defend in all manner of actions at law or in equity, in all places where legal or equitable proceedings are had. The said corporation shall have power to make such constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations for its own government, and the management of its concerns and government of its subordinates, as shall be deemed advisable, and to alter or amend the same at pleasure: Provided, That such constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations, shall not conflict with the constitution and laws of this State and of the United States.

SEC. 7. Each subordinate lodge under the jurisdiction of the aforesaid Grand Lodge, now in existence or which may hereafter be chartered by the same, is also hereby declared to be a body politic and corporate by and under the name, style and number ser forth in their respective charters, and by such designation they may respectively sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, prosecute and defend against all suits arising in law or chancery, in all the courts of this State. The said subordinate lodges respectively, shall be capable in law of purchasing or receiving, by purchase, gift or otherwise, and of selling and conveying, real and personal estate for the benefit of said subordinate lodges respectively: Provided, That neither of said lodges shall at any one time hold real estate, exceeding in value thirty thousand dollars.

SEC. 10. This act shall be deemed a public act, and shall be liberally construed by all courts, for the benefit of the corporation herein created.

I remark on the above:

1. That Masonic lodges being "created" by the State by an act of the "people of the State," their existence and acts are matters which concern the people, and are as appropriately questions of politics as are banks, tariffs, or any other questions of public interest.

2. A creature of the State is subject to its laws. What the legislature has made it can unmake. Charters granted can be withdrawn and special privileges conferred can be revoked.

3. The right to create implies the right to inspect. This is always implied in all corporations, and is exercised in the case of banking and insurance companies. It is clearly indicated by the proviso in the second section, which declares that "such constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations shall not conflict with the constitution and laws of the State and of the United States." The State has a right to know whether these by-laws, rules and regulations are in harmony with the laws of the State, and hence has a right to appoint an inspector who shall report all oaths, penalties, covenants and ceremonies, or other regulations, and may rightfully require their publication by the lodges.

4. We have a denial of this right of inspection in the oath of every Mason to "always conceal and never reveal any of the secret arts, parts or points of the hidden mysteries of Masonry," including his obligation to "stand by and maintain the constitution, laws, rules and regulations and edicts of the Master Mason's degree." The denial of the right of a government officer, as such, to visit the lodge and report its proceedings to the legislature or the people should in each case work a legal forfeiture of sneh lodge eharters.

5. Masonic lodge charters are forfeited and void, becanse they DO have "laws, rules and regulations, contrary to the laws of the State."

(a) The administration of oaths. This is a power not conferred by the State and cannot be legally exercised. This is seen in the oath of every Master Mason to eoneeal the secrets of a brother Mason when communieated to him as snch, in all cases except mnrder and treason.

This oath is in its terms clearly illegal and was so deelared by the legislature of Rhode Island, after a earefnl investigation. Sueh, also, was the opinion of Hon. J. Q. Adams and many others. Unquestionably, this part of the Masonic oath has been and is construed as reqniring the coneealment of crime, and is one of the most potent influenees that prevents the due execution of the laws.

(b) Masonic penalties are illegal. So far as the law is concerned it does not matter whether a lodge actually intends to try men for fancied crimes and execnte on them a death penalty; or whether the form used is for the purpose of intimidation, in either case it violates the spirit of the civil law, and is inconsistent with the obvious intent of the legislature as expressed in the langnage of the law.

(c) Masonry violates the civil law and the conditions of its legal existence by its official declarations of disregard for civil authority. Thus, the Grand Lodge of Missonri in 1867 declares that "Not only do we know no North, no Sonth, no East, no West, but we know no government save our own. To every government save that of Masonry, and to eaeh and all alike, we are foreigners. We are a nation of men only bound to each other by Masonic ties, as citizens of the world of Masonry, brethren to each other all the world over; foreigners to all the world beside."—Grand Lodge report for Missouri, 1867.

In view of the foregoing we do well to put in the American platform: "We hold that the charters of all secret lodges, granted by our Federal and State legislatures, should be withdrawn and their oaths prohibited by law."

OUR BROTHER'S KEEPER.

BY REV. R. E. NESBITT.

Man was not created for isolation. "It is not good that the man shonld be alone." He is a social being. "None of us liveth to himself." Our life and character affects the life and charaeter of others, and in this way, man is either helpful or harmful to those aronnd him. Influenee is reciprocal. We are each acted upon by others, and in tnrn we act upon them; and in this way are, to a certain extent, "our brother's keeper." This power of influence, is very forcibly illnstrated in the law of attraction whieh governs the planetary system. We have more influence over those in our own household, ehurehes, and immediate vicinities, than we do over those who are more distant; and some men's influence is greater than others; yet all are extending an influence over the entire length and breadth of our land. Our minds affect the minds of others in our midst, and start a wave of influence that keeps widening aud increasing throngh the ages of the world: and eternity alone will reveal the full amount of good or evil that had its beginning in our lives.

Our influence is either helping to sweep away the refuge of evil, or it is destroying the good, and annihilating the virtue of others; spreading death and sorrow in its traek; and at the final settlement, when we are called "to give an acconnt of ourselves unto God," will stand for or against us. How very important then that we should be on the side of truth, that all our influenee may be for good.

We are our brother's keeper, and we should be inspired by this, to put forth strenuous efforts that he may attain unto the end for whieh he was created. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." What a plain foreible command, and are we obeying it? "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."

I wish to make an applieatiou of the subject. There are those licensed rum holes in yonr town. Are you sanetioning them? Are yon opposed to them? There is no neutral ground here; ouly two sides to a moral issue; for or against. "He that is not with me is against me." Look at the moral wreeks intoxicating liqnor is producing, as well as the amount of sorrow, suffering, pain and death it causes. Then do you ask, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

But, you remark, "I have no right to interfere with a man's business." It is true you have no right morally or legally to interfere with a man's business when it does not injure you or your fellow-man. But, no man has any right morally, and should not have legally, to engage in a pursuit that is to take the bread and happiness from others. These liquor dealers are nnder the moral law of love; and while they are going eontrary to their moral obligations, and trampling upon the rights of others, we have the right, yea more, are under the obligation to interfere and save our fellow-creatures. If a man was murdering my brother, would I not have the right to interfere, and save him, even though it might be at the life of his would-be assassin? Certainly I have, for no man has a moral right to do wrong. Liberty is only a privilege to do right; for when you give a man the privilege of doing wrong, yon deprive others of their rights, which is not liberty.

There is a quaint saying, and a true one, "Right wrongs no one." Look at the sale of liquor. Does it wrong any one? Go ask the wife and mother, whose home was peaeefnl and happy, before the husband and father yielded to drink. It has spread our land with crime and panpers. It has filled our jails and prisons with eonvicts. It has also filled onr cemeteries with graves, and hell with immortal souls. Oh! who can measnre the amount of wrong it has done, and is still doing, therefore it cannot be right, neither can it be right to sanction it.

But, remonstrates one, we do not sanetion it, we license it as an evil, to modify it. Then why not modify all other evils in the same way? No, fellow man, this is uot the way to modify. Make it a erime, and punish it as sneh, and then its great power is killed; and until this is done, do not sanction it by your vote.

No moral agent is truly good who neglects or stands indifferent to a known duty. "Indifference is criminality; neglect is sin." "Crime," says Webster, "is any violation of law, either divine or human; an omission of a dnty which is commanded, or the commission of an act whieh is forbidden by law." Now liqnor selling and drinking is forbidden by the great moral law of God, and "we ought to obey him rather than man." "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and maketh him drunken also." This is the sentence of God upon those who are engaged in, or any way abetting the great liquor eurse, and do we wish it pronounced npon us? If not, let us array onrselves against this great evil, and although we may meet with opposition, and be ridiculed, and even persecnted, do not let this deter us from doing the right. "For great is our reward in heaven; for so perseeuted they the prophets which were before you."

Byron, N. Y.

GOAD PRICKS FOR LAZY CHRISTIANS.

BY REV. I. F. AVERY.

Christ and Bible religion offer no premium for laziness. If a man will not work neither shall he eat. The tree of life groweth. Nothing is idle, worthless or useless. There is no actual waste in the economy of grace. The Master saith to every Christian loiterer, "Why staud ye here idle? Go work in my vineyard." Who can caleulate the direct and indirect worth and foree of individual life and effort when fnlly consecrated and devoted to God's service? Fignres can be made to lie, or may be so arranged as to deceive. It has been computed the world's population to-day is abont 1,423,907,000. The followers of Christ have been reckoued at 10,000,000. Let each one win one other to Christ during the year. In seven years it has been ealeulated the result would be that all would be won over to and for Christ. Every knee would bow and every tongue would eonfess that Christ is the Lord to the glory of the Father.

What have I done? What am I doing for Christ? On whieh do I spend most, needless luxuries, or the work of missions, home and foreign? In my own church work and serviee, at least in some degree and often in a full degree, I have my reward for help rendered. But for Christ's sake, and the salvation of souls, how mueh am I anxious and ready to give and do that others may have the knowledge that is enlightening and life-giving?

Every Christian ought to be a missionary. The first principles of Christianity demand and so eommand. The law of love is do unto others as you would that others should do unto you. The Gospel of the grace and Son of God requires earnestness and aetivity in seeking to save the lost. It is our duty to go forward in the work of rescuing, and not set small limits or be stingy in our efforts, for the field is the world. Aud the message, a crucified, risen Christ, the Saviour of the world, and the evidence that God so loved, and is love.

Halifax, N. S.

A BRAVE SPEECH.

[From an oration before Carlton College students by one of their number.]

A view of the reform world presents strangely glaring ineonsistencies. The toddling infant is tanght to lisp temperance rhymes; Sabbath-school scholars sing temperance songs; the intolerable nrchin writes prize essays on temperance; and temperanee literature fills the best homes. The temperance cause is one to whieh America's noblest women and brightest orators are giving their lives; and if the burly vender of spirits is guilty of half the erimes eharged against him by these estimable plaintiffs, it would reqnire more than a Vanderbilt's wealth to induce a pions priest to vouch for his release from the nether regions.

When a political party desires to bid in a few necessary votes to curry public favor, to scramble to popularity, or retain equilibrinm on its exalted(?) perch, the leaders immediately trot out the "pious dodge," and with sanctimonious faces pour forth the soothing panacea, "Polygamy must be crushed." The bootblack favors that; labor says "yes;" capital nods, and a spirit of thankfulness settles on all from the apparent harmony on one question in American polities. The loud-mouthed "stump speaker" hurls cnrses at polygamy like bombshells; the Congressional prince applies keen logic and sonnding rhetoric, while the press spins invectives by the yard, and the pulpit sanctions all by an irresistible "A minor" aecompaniment. The whole literary, oratorical and editorial world wheels into line and as one solid phalanx surrounding Utah ponrs into that unhappy territory sueh a tremendous volley that if it were material, polygamy, and the Mormons themselves, wonld be buried so deep that no future Jo Smith would ever dig through for the seeond inspired bible.

Sueh proceedings receeive approval; but when William Morgan published the terrible wickedness of the Masonic system, he was secretly seized by members of the lodge and thrown into jail on a false warrant. Thnrlow Weed ealled for an explanation. He was greeted by storms of indignation, nor was Masonic vengeance satisfied until it had sileneed Captain Morgan in the waters of Lake Ontario.

It is right for men to oppose intemperance and polygamy, to face them sqnarely and fight till vietory dawns. This should be done; but why should the other be left undone? Why should ministers fence this sin when nsing the Gospel sword against others? Why so vigorously chase gnats and swallow whole camels? What keeps the press so quiet coneeruing it? Why do respectable men resort to eggs and brickbats to defend this "divine(?) institution?" For what reason was the Y. M. C. A. of St. Paul ordered to banish anti-secreey literature from its tables? And the association drove ont the eolporteur to avoid being turned into the street. These questions are vital to the patriot, and can be answered only by examining into the "Seeret Empire."

Freemasonry is a religion; a religion which, it is claimed, takes a man from sin and fits him for heaven, "the grand lodge above." A religion, according to Sickels, the first three degrees of which "form a perfect and harmonious whole, nor cau we conceive that anything can be suggested more whieh the soul of man requires." And yet it is a religion that mntilates the Seriptnres, ignores Christ and denies God; that puts into the months of its devotees oaths, some of which are unfit to be mentioned, others so blasphemous in tone, in effect so antagonistic to justiee, and altogether so low and diabolical that John Quincy Adams says, "A eommon cannibal would be ashamed of them."

Does it seem strange that peculiar deeisions are made when judge, jury and criminal are united by such ties? Is the eoldness of the chnreh and the impoteney of the pulpit any eanse for surprise when the "elders" are "uneqnally yoked together with unbelievers;" when pastors and bishops kneel at an idolatrous altar, all seeking for light away from the "light of the world," and freqnently throngh the intercessions of one accnstomed to mouth blasphemies? Why call it an enigma that Christian men will not enforce temperance laws, when those very men have entered into covenaut with the saloon-keeper, and that at the shrine of Bacchus to protect him in all his erimes? It is a hard thing to see a brother go down by drink; but it doubles the bitterness to kuow that a chureh member is leagued with the murderer. We don't like to think of a sermon and saloon riot as partners; but the firm judgment of the "unfaithful watchman" enforees it like a cutting knife. It is unpleasant to look at a mangled corpse as the work of a religious institntion; bnt it is terrible to know that that institution is Americanized and fostered in free homes.

We do not follow heated imagination to draw highly colored figures, but present a few points of Freemasonry as it exists to-day—plain, blunt facts which we Americans must face, and living issues which we must decide.

EXPOSURES OF FREEMASONRY.

The publication of Masonic secrets by M. Andrieux, ex-prefect of police, in Paris, last March, astounded that city, and set the Grand Orient to threatening the life of the bold seceder. In London, however, it called out the following self-complacent article from the Freemason, upon which some remarks appear on the editorial pages:

"The more we think about Monsieur Andrieux's recent attack on Freemasonry, the more we seem persuaded of its futility and folly. The world is tired of exposures and attacks on our peaceful and useful order. Persons will not see who rush into print, thinking that curiosity has so much influence over the minds of men, so that anything which tends to lift up the veil which hangs over Masonic secrecy is always welcome, that there must be a limit to even human inquisitiveness and mortal credulity. Since 1724, one hundred and sixty years ago, we have been inundated with pretended revelations and pseudo-explanations of Freemasonry. What effect have they all had? None! positively less than none, if that be possible. A French Abbe, bolder than his English contemporaries, declared that he had 'exposed' and 'crushed' Freemasonry about 140 years ago. And yet Freemasonry survives. The assailants of Freemasonry may be divided into two great classes—those who profess to be Freemasons themselves, those who declare they are not Freemasons, but have become possessed of the papers of some defunct, if mythic, Freemason. The goat and the branding are not more absolutely false and ridiculous than their lame stories, their mendacious asseverations. In the first case the writer comes before the world, on his own confession, a self-asserting breaker of Masonic and human obligations, and he can neither long expect the credence, much less the sympathy, of the world. In the second case, if he pretends to explain, what he confessedly knows nothing about himself, on the faith of another's evidence, who is nameless, unknown, and non-existent, he is either palming off a deceit, or suggesting a deliberate imposture to his hearers and readers; and thus it is, that between this 'Scylla and Charybdis,' all such affected revelations and arraignments of Freemasonry have failed of their object, fallen short of their aim, and have been rejected by the common sense, common honesty, and common truthfulness of the world in which we live. Had M. Andrieux, for instance, confined himself to the assertion that French Freemasonry, in the main, is neither reasonable, tolerant, nor of 'sens commun' just now, he would have found few to disagree with him. Had he gone on to say that many of its customs were ridiculous, hurtful, and bad, 'per se,' we should gladly have repeated his words. But when he goes on, as we understand his professed attack, to proclaim all Freemasonry unsound and mischievous, because he argues 'from a particular to an universal,' we join issue with him at once, and beg him to remember what he ought not to have forgotten, in the plenitude of his wisdom and experience, that abuse of a thing does never take away actually the use of it, and that all he can fairly say to French Freemasonry is, to retrace its steps and re-adopt the sounder teaching and ceremonials of a better day. Monsieur Andrieux cannot think that Freemasonry generally cares anything at all for childish imputations or heated incriminations. In America, where that great army of faithful brethren has lived down 'the lie' of the Morgan episode, where fanaticism and ignorance to-day are even quoting Scripture, like a certain Satanic personage is said sometimes to do, to prove the abstract and concrete wickedness of Freemasonry proper; and where our brethren are marching on steadily and steadfastly, a 'great host, unappalled and unwavering,' we know how idle such attacks have proved to be, and how Freemasonry can and will trample all such foes and all such antagonists beneath its feet. And so it will ever be. Wherever its true and healing principles are rightly professed, wherever its living reality of loyalty and charity is verified and demonstrated, wherever its great banner of tolerant brotherhood is displayed, there we find a phalanx of good men and true, trying to 'leave the world better than they found it,' asserting the sacred right of a conscientious individualism, and aiding successfully in the advance of the human race, as pioneers in the great and glorious struggle of civilization, light, right, and truth."

"A good reason never needs an apology; an apology can never supply the place of a good reason."

WORK FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT.

Some kind friend sends the following clipped from one of the Monmouth, Ill., papers which sets forth principles fundamental to our nation, though in a conservative manner:

"Exactly what are the nature and purposes of a secret organization it is not expected that those outside the membership understand. A society may, however, cover with the most particular care and secrecy its doings and intentions and yet in spite of all carefulness its general character will be known publicly. For instance an organization could profess to be penurious, but if it did works of charity its profession would be taken for nothing. Likewise an organization's religious, social or political nature will sooner or later be known, because if it does anything its deeds will in time be recognized, and actions speak in no uncertain manner.

"If what has been said is true it follows that secret political organizations or secret societies that deal at all with politics should, if they value their prosperity, exercise great care in the course adopted. Such a society should remember that its own as well as the public weal, if it is selfish enough to rank the two thus, will be conserved only in case its efforts are directed by a serious regard for good government, general or local. If the members of the order, whatever one it may be, hope behind a vail of secrecy to do what they would not venture to do openly, and not be detected, they have only to refer to history to find evidence that ought to convince them of the error under which they are laboring. Their deeds and endeavors must be known in time and moreover if not conscientiously directed, their efforts will avail them nothing, or rather will work to the injury of the order or association. A conspiracy against good government can succeed only temporarily. Men have the right to organize, but the organization must be kept, not only within the limits of the law, but it must also regard the best interests of the community or state where it is located if it expects to have anything but a comparatively brief and unsuccessful career, and one for a time injurious to society. It may appear that remarks advocating right doing are in the nature of truisms and might as well be omitted and their place taken by a reference to some moral or ethical work. Those who read the current news and keep in mind events in foreign countries know the pertinence of such remarks. This country is not out of the way entirely of the danger that is clearly seen abroad. Every well-minded patriotic citizen should in view of these things carefully examine the real animus of any organization with which he may be acquainted, and if he detects any propensity that may, if allowed to contiuue, operate to prevent good local or national government, he should place himself in opposition to its maintenance."

SIFTINGS.

The talk so often heard now-a-days about the indecision of Mr. Gladstone is silly talk. A declaration of war would lose Herat. Such a declaration six months ago would have lost it. The only hope of saving it rests on diplomacy, on inducing Russia to agree upon a boundary line to be maintained by all concerned. Mr. Gladstone is using diligently the only weapon he has.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE G. A. R.—Is the organization a secret society? We ask for information. We think it is. It is classed with other orders; it holds its meetings secretly as they do; it has its passwords as they have; it has its so-called charity fund, so do they; its doings are not told to the outside world, neither do they publish theirs; it has its initiation oath and fee, so do they; now in what respect it differs from other secret orders we cannot see. We honor and respect an old soldier, one who has fought and suffered to save our country and her flag, but we can not honor or respect the secret society to which they belong under the cloak of a Soldier's Society. We have been trying for years to convince ourself that it is not a secret organization, but the secrecy of it towers above all else in spite of all we can do. We asked our minister's opinion when in private conversation with him, and we got but little satisfaction from him. He thought "it was not a secret organization but did not know, and at any rate it would become extinct when this generation will have passed away and all the old soldiers gone." But here comes the new order called Sons of Veterans, governed, as we understand, by the same rules and regulations as the G. A. R. are, to perpetuate the same all but the name.—M. in Christian Instructor.

If you want to put down an evil the shortest way sometimes is to invoke law. In Minneapolis, last week, the Protestant clergy denounced the indecent play-bills posted up through that city and preached and "resolved" about the matter. Father McGoldsick, of the Roman Catholic church, however, obtained warrants for the arrest of the bill-poster and the proprietor of the theatre. Very often people are satisfied to talk against wrong when they could repress it, at once, if they did their duty as citizens, for if the authorities do not voluntarily enforce laws, others must set the machinery in motion.—Baptist Weekly.

Young men, if you want to play the rough and cheat the people, it is a very unsafe thing, unless you first join the A. F. and A. M. That is the great organization to protect criminals and keep them from the just punishment for their crimes.

We boldly challenge anybody to point to a single case where a Knight Templar has been punished for crime in Iowa, during the past five years.—Blanchard Record.

To use an expression made popular, we believe, by General Hawley some years ago in regard to a very different question, dynamiting "is not the American way!" The methods of the assassin, of the sneaking and cowardly murderer, are not, and never will be, popular in this country. It is true that two of our Presidents have met their death at the hands of the illegal taker of life, but there was no popular support to either mad and murderous act. Lynch-law, on our borders especially, has had too much vogue, but this is decreasing; and there is a long distance between lynching a villain who it is feared may escape justice, and the dastardly and reckless use of explosives, where invaluable works of art, and innocent men, women, and children, together with the supposed "oppressor," are confounded in a common destruction.

Let the question once be brought to an issue in our American communities, and the politician who hesitates to denounce dynamite, and all that goes with it,—all cowardly and conscienceless attempts to settle either public or private questions by means of private and secret violence,—such a man is lost. He will find too late that his deference to an unreasoning, brutal, and restricted sentiment has brought him into contact with the great, sound, uncowardly, law-abiding sentiment of the people of of these United States.—The Century.

DIRECTNESS IN PRAYER.

Dr. James Hamilton tells the story of a dying child in Scotland, whose father and mother were kneeling by the bedside, when the latter asks the former to pray. The good man is one of those who has only one form of prayer, and he proceeds with his usual "exercise" as far as "Lord, turn again the captivity of Zion; then shall our mouth be filled with laughter and our tongue with singing." The good wife can endure it no longer, and interrupts him with, "Eh! man, you're aye drawn out for thae Jews, but it's our bairn that's deein," at the time clasping her hands and crying, "Lord, help us! Oh, give us back our darling, if it be thy holy will; and if he is to be taken, oh, take him to thyself."

All form is not formalism, but there appears to be a tendency in all of us to drop into some form of unwritten liturgy, than which the prayer book is far better. I remember a saintly man, who has long since exchanged prayer for praise, whose petitions were thus stereotyped. So familiar did they become that most of the boys in our school could take them up at any point and repeat them to the end, and I know of one who has not forgotten them to this day. Once he introduced a special request, and his flounderings were painful and ludicrous until he reached firm ground again. His efforts were far better than none.

A touchstone of devotion, it seems to me, is the directness and vivid earnestness with which we put up our petitions. How cold these formal prayers seem in a revival; they indicate anything but a revival state on the part of the utterer. Peter's prayer when he felt the cold waves of galilee, was only three words long, but it brought salvation. Study the other prayers of the Bible, beginning with the model of all prayers, and notice how severely simple, yet how full of heart-felt meaning. When our prayers come from our consciences merely, they are not apt to be very explicit.—Sel.

A good deed is never lost; he who sows courtesy reaps friendship; and he who plants kindness gathers love.—Basil.

Every good priuciple is more strengthened by its exercise, and every good affection is more strengthened by its indulgence, than before. Acts of virtue ripen into habits; and the goodly and permanent result is the formation or establishment of a virtuous character.—Chalmers.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XXII.—Concluded.

Mrs. Deming was setting up the heel of a stocking, and necessarily occupied in counting stitches, so that she had as yet taken no part in the conversation. But it was not because her mind was not fully made up on the subject, for she now spoke out decidedly:

"I believe every word of that sermon was Gospel truth, and I wish there were more ministers like Elder Wood. He's got the real martyr spirit in him. Think how wonderfully that Peter Snyder was converted under his preaching! It seemed almost as it was in the days of the apostles; and for my part I think the warnings of such a man ought to be regarded. It did me good to hear him say right out what I've thought and said myself ever so many times about Masonry's protecting the saloons, and encouraging drinking and all that sort of thing."

Now to know that some good and noble soul whom we have reason to look up to with reverence thinks just as we do is certainly one of the best possible reasons for holding on to our belief that can be adduced outside of divine inspiration; and Mrs. Deming may be pardoned if she clicked her needles with a conscious sense of superiority. Whether Uncle Zeb cared enough for the institution to which he nominally belonged to take up the cudgels in its defence it is impossible to say, for at that moment the appearance of a man riding by on a light sorrel steed—in fact the identical horseman who not only would have passed poor Tom by on the other side, but worse even than the ancient Levite, would have consigned him to the tender mercies of the police and the lock-up—turned the current of the conversation into a slightly different channel.

"That Dacey now is a smart-appearing man, and I suppose he's done a good deal in getting the grange started. But it looks to me as though he'd got a number of axes to grind with all them farming machines that they say he's agent for. But then," added Uncle Zeb philosophically, "the hull world is putty much like a big grindstone if you look at it in that light."

Mr. Deming decidedly wished that these remarks had not been made in the hearing of his wife, but she had reached another intricate point in her knitting and was perhaps not paying much attention, and Uncle Zeb had such an innocent way of bringing out his inconvenient sayings that Mr. Deming in spite of his inward discomfort could not really believe that there was any malicious intent behind them.

The gentleman just now under discussion was a comparatively new comer in Fairfield, but he always dressed well, and seemed to have plenty of money, and in addition to these two prime points he was, as Uncle Zeb had expressed it, "a smart-appearing man." It was generally understood that he held certain agricultural patents in trust for interested parties, and there were some in Fairfield who, like Uncle Zeb, thought his activity in organizing the grange sufficiently accounted for by this latter fact. He was good-looking, and a fluent, entertaining talker, and nothing being positively known against him, Fairfield society generally pronounced him "charming." It is true there were a few prejudiced people who ventured to disagree with the popular verdict; who saw something sinister, even sharp, low and cunning, under his bland smile and undeniable good looks. But of this class was not the open-hearted, choleric, unsuspicious Mr. Deming; nor Dora, who was rather weary of her boyish admirers, and having made Mr. Dacey's acquaintance at the grange meetings had begun by thinking what an agreeable contrast a mature man of forty, who had traveled about and seen the world, presented to callow youths of eighteen and twenty, who seemed to know as little what to talk about as what to do with their feet and hands; and ended by thinking a great deal more about him than was prudent.

Dora had an intuition that her mother would disapprove of any such match, and possibly her father too; and she never meant to marry without their consent, but what was the harm in such a very pleas ant acquaintanceship that would never be likely to go any farther? The moths who hover about candles are not always of the masculine persuasion. Dora had not the smallest intention of singeing her pretty wings. That was a thing that never occurred to her in all her dreamings, but why did his next remark make her feel for the first time in her life inclined to be angry with kind old Uncle Zeb?

"Dacey looks some like a man I used to know in Ohio. He come from some Eastern State, Connecticut I think it was, and set up store. And he was jest a going to marry one of the finest gals in the neighborhood when who should come onto the scene but his wife with two of her children! He'd spent all her property and then run off and left her."

"He ought to have been hung," said Mrs. Deming, rattling her needles with quick emphasis.

"So I say," echoed Israel Deming. "Such men ought not to be above ground."

"Fix it any way you've a mind to there'll allus be rogues jest as there'll allus be grasshoppers and weevils and potato-bugs," replied Uncle Zeb, sagely.

"There wouldn't be so many rogues if Masonry could be put down," said Mrs. Deming. "It stands to reason. Talk about there being good men in the lodge! So there is, but you put a dozen fools and one knave together, and I'll warrant that the knave will manage the fools."

"Well, I hain't been nigh the Masons for twenty years," said Uncle Zeb, when he had got through shaking with his little inward laugh. "I expect there's been changes since then."

"When I was a girl," said Mrs. Deming, "I used to hear them tell about raising the devil in the lodge and wonder how it was done. I don't believe that has all gone by yet."

"I've seen it done lots of times," returned Uncle Zeb, boldly. "They'd have to rap on the ceilin' and say over something in Latin, and then he'd come stalking through the room, hoofs and horns and all, lookin' as if he'd jest stepped out of one of the picters in Pilgrim's Progress."

"Uncle Zeb, what do you mean by telling such yarns!" exclaimed Mrs. Deming, whose Anglo-Saxon love of truth was slightly scandalized. But Dora, who saw in this veracious account only an avenue to exercise her youthful spirit of fun, sprang up from her seat and said in her prettiest and most coaxing fashion,

"Oh, Uncle Zeb, show me how they did it. Now do, please."

It was in vain that he tried to parry this startling proposal with the plea that it was so long ago he had forgotten the precise form of incantation necessary to use.

Dora, in her young, bright wilfulness, was not easily turned off from the idea, and with his usual readiness to enter into a jest, Uncle Zeb finally consented. Mrs. Deming indeed rather disapproved of any such trifling with the invisible powers of evil, but the force of her protest was rather marred by her previous skepticism, and so amounted to little.

"I guess I'll try it out in that ere back room," said Uncle Zeb; "but there must only be we two. More might break the spell."

In great glee Dora led the way to an unfinished apartment where the rough work of the family was generally done. There was a good-sized loft above and an open stairway leading to it, while doors at either end opened—one on the barnyard, where Dora's favorite bantams cocked expectant eyes and waited for her to throw them their customary feed of corn; the other commanding a splendid outlook over a field of billowy wheat, which, as it met without a break the blue line of the horizon, gave that sealike sense of measureless distance which is so restful to earth-weary souls—like a thought of eternity.

Uncle Zeb began to knock with his cane in various places on the walls, muttering meanwhile a peculiar and self-invented lingo. It is needless to state that he had not the smallest idea of raising anything except echoes, but magicians, ever since the Witch of Endor's day, have sometimes done better than they expected, and Uncle Zeb was suddenly startled by an answering thump and clatter overhead, while to his horrified vision something that owned unmistakable hoofs and horns shot down the stairs and past him out at the door. We are sorry to be obliged to record it of Uncle Zeb, but he was a sad coward, and such unlooked-for success in his experiment put him to precipitate flight, followed by peals of convulsive laughter from Dora, who, when the first instant of half-petrified amazement was over, saw through the whole mystery.

"Why, mother, it was only the O'Sullivan goat," she explained between her bursts of merriment, as Mrs. Deming made her appearance with Mr. Deming close behind, just in time to be a witness to the denoument. "You know the Van Eycks who lived here before we did owned him first, and he has never forgotten his old quarters."

"I declare, wife, if that ain't the best joke I ever heard of. Uncle Zeb really thought he had raised the old Nick himself." And Mr. Deming also exploded in a fit of uncontrollable laughter joined in heartily by his spouse, while the unfortunate magician finally ventured back looking rather foolish.

"This is the fust time I ever tried a Masonic experiment, and I guess it will be my last. But Marthy Washington! I reckon it won't be the last I shall hear on't."

In which conjecture it is needless to assure the reader Uncle Zeb was perfectly correct.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A PECULIAR KIND OF MORALITY AND BENEVOLENCE.

We do not see how we can better apologize for the undignified ending of our last chapter than to give the reader a glance into the law office of Stephen Howland, whom we have neglected of late, while pursuing the fortunes of the other characters in our story. He set out in his profession as the reader knows with a very high aim, and all things considered, he has kept to that aim with commendable resolution. When a young, ardent soul throws itself with all the earnestness of its nature into the battle against an organized and powerful wrong, it receives as it were in the very act a kind of invisible guard and shield. This does not always prevent the man, as proved by one or two melancholy instances in our political history, from being captured by an ignoble self-interest, and made to grind in the prison-house of the very foes he once fought—a blind and shorn Sampson, an Ichabod from whom the glory has forever departed.

It is too early yet to reckon on Stephen Howland's future with perfect certitude, but for our part we have a great deal of faith in the prayers of that simple, hill-country couple—even more than we have in his Puritan birth and training, powerful factors though they are. And at the same time Stephen, in spite of all these helping forces, visible and invisible, stands in a place where he needs all the support they can give him. We are told of lying spirits going forth to bewilder and deceive, and there is certainly one in our own day which has been even known to air its falsehoods and blasphemies in Christian pulpits; a spirit that substitutes mystery for truth, shadow for substance; that strikes at the heart of faith with the concealed dagger of a disguised infidelity; and would smirch the white robes of the Bride of Christ herself in the vain attempt to whitewash its own garments.

This spirit Stephen Howland is now confronting, and it speaks from the lips of Mr. Felix Basset.

(To be continued.)

LITERATURE.

WORKS OF JOHN RUSKIN: The Seven Lamps of Architecture; Lectures on Architecture and Painting; The Queen of the Air; The Ethics of the Dust. Four volumes in one. Illustrated, pp. 639. Price, $1.25. John B. Alden, New York.

The enterprising publisher whose name has become identified with editions of good books at the lowest price, is now undertaking the noble task of issuing the complete works of John Ruskin. This is the initial volume of the fifteen, which are being prepared at large expense, and in a style of type and binding suitable to the superb style of this great master of the English tongue. In no living writer as in Ruskin can we find passages which we can read and re-read a score of times and always turn to again with fresh delight, ever discovering new power and beauty, which arouse emotions like those which always surge through the soul when one stands before a great and masterly painting. Take this passage from the chapter "The Lamp of Memory;" it is as if one stood and took in the glory of the landscape with his own eyes:

"Among the hours of his life to which the writer looks back with peculiar gratitude, as having been marked by more than ordinary fullness of joy or clearness of teaching, is one passed, now some years ago, near time of sunset, among the broken masses of pine forest which skirt the course of the Ain, above the village of Champagnole, in the Jura. It is a spot which has all the solemnity, with none of the savageness, of the Alps; where there is a sense of a great power beginning to be manifested in the earth, and of a deep and majestic concord in the rise of the long low lines of piny hills; the first utterance of those mighty mountain symphonies, soon to be more loudly lifted and wildly broken along the battlements of the Alps. But their strength is as yet restrained; and the far-reaching ridges of pastoral mountain succeed each other, like the long and sighing swell which moves over quiet waters from some far-off stormy sea. And there is a deep tenderness pervading that vast monotony. The destructive forces and the stern expression of the central ranges are alike withdrawn. No frost-ploughed, dust-encumbered paths of ancient glacier fret the soft Jura pastures; no splintered heaps of ruin break the fair ranks of her forests; no pale, defiled, or furious rivers rend their rude and changeful ways among her rocks. Patiently, eddy by eddy, the clear green streams wind along their well-known beds; and under the dark quietness of the undisturbed pines, there spring up, year by year, such company of joyful flowers as I know not the like of among all the blessings of the earth."

To such a passage the reader may ever turn with as much satisfaction as he would stand before a noble painting or a landscape he had traveled far to

sec. The painting would cost thousands; but in Ruskin we have a whole gallery at no more cost than a new coat or dress.

"Asiatic Cholera, a sketch of its history, nature and preventive management." Dr. Oscar C. DeWolf, the Health Commissioner of Chicago, has given the public in this brief but valuable pamphlet information which the threatening approach of the cholera plague makes a necessity. The American Book Co., 133 Wabash avenue, Chicago, publish it at 15 cts. a copy.

The Library Magazine for June has an abundance of substantial reading in such articles as "Some Modern Abuses of Language," by Edward Freeman, the English historian; "People of Genius," by Mrs. Mulock-Craik; "Shall the Indians have Justice;" An Anglo-Turkish Alliance, by Hobart Pasha;" "England and the Soudan;" "The Christians' Guild;" "The Russian Advance in Central Asia;" and "The Labor Question in the South." John B. Alden, New York, publisher.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

TUSCOLA, DOUGLAS COUNTY.

When the city marshal called on me at the Smith House the next morning after I was mobbed he asked if I intended to prosecute the men who composed that mob. Whom should he arrest? etc. How could I tell whom to arrest?

My reply was, that a city which possessed such lawless elements and was so completely under mob rule that the right of free speech no longer exists in it, has in this very condition of social organization a sphere for the vigorous exercise of its power in municipal government. And the time may come when all her energies in that direction may be called forth. In short, the authorities may find themselves as impotent to control the mob then, as they were unwilling in this instance. I added that I had reached Parson Brownlow's conclusion and when the noon train left town, I would "do for them what the devil never had done—leave them." And I did, blind of an eye and bespattered with eggs. I walked those streets to the train regarded as a curiosity by the people and grinned at by the men who "circumscribe their desires and keep their passions within due bounds with all mankind, more especially a brother Mason." How did I feel? Well! my head gave me considerable pain, but I had the use of one eye and though a chunk was knocked off of one of my knuckles by an ill-aimed stone, I had the use of it, and as I walked those streets, I felt like a king; for "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." The two hundred cowards who by night at the word of command could throw stones, eggs, brickbats and other missiles at one man for telling the truth, could not in open day look me in the face, so I was permitted to enter the train without further molestation and soon reached

TOLONO.

Here I found a quiet place to rest, and recover from the wounds received at Tuscola, for my head felt worse than when first struck.

On Sabbath there was to be memorial services at the Baptist church in the town, all the other churches dismissing their services and uniting in this. I attended. Rarely have I ever seen such an effort. The doctrine of salvation by faith was entirely lost sight of, in the prospect of salvation by works.

When the service was over, as I was passing out, a card was thrust into my hand and on looking up, I saw the friendly countenance of Rev. J. P. Stoddard and together we left the church. As it is more than likely that he has written up his visit to Tolono for these columns, I'll not attempt what is already better done.

A few days after he returned, I was able to use both eyes. Then I distributed tracts through the town and tried to get a place in which to preach. The M. E. pastor, Rev. E. S. Carlile, refused to let me preach in his church, had never read Finney and and was about as uncivil as a priest might be who held a patent on the church. I called to see the Baptist pastor. He is newly installed and is not the man referred to above who conducted the memorial services. He was not at home, but I learned from his wife that he used to be a Mason, but that he is out of the lodge by his own act, because he cannot conscientiously remain in the order.

I next applied for the Town Hall. I could have had the privilege of preaching in it to the craft and the citizens by paying for that privilege and trusting to their tender mercies to reimburse the Association; but the experience gained at Casey, by a similar procedure was too fresh in my mind. I next began to look for a site from which to preach out of doors, but was shortly informed by the city marshal that it would not be permitted. Others urged him, but it was no use and so I bade farewell to the town and boarded the train at midnight.

DANVILLE, VERMILLION COUNTY.

On Sunday morning I entered the Kimber M. E. church and heard a grand sermon from pastor Rev. J. F. Stout. While the congregation were singing, I stepped quietly out, stood at the foot of the steps and handed out reform tracts. Some seized them with alacrity and thanked me for them. When all had passed, I walked down the street and gathered up a few which had been thrown away and soon reached a "place where three weary travelers sat down to rest." One of them accosted me with, "Say, step here a minute. What's the object in this?"

"In what?" I asked, for I determined that he should introduce the subject.

"In your giving away those tracts. Can't you find more remunerative employment? Were you ever a Mason? Didn't you have to take an oath? What objections have you to it, or to Freemasonry?"

I replied, "The object in this is to expose and thus remove secret societies. I can find much more remunerative employment from a mere worldly point of view. Yes, I had to take a Mason's oath. It is extra-judicial. It is wicked. It requires me to conceal a Mason's crimes from my fellow citizens. Freemasonry is anti-Christian in character, there is murder in it."

Here he interrupted me with the exclamation, "Yes, and you deserve murder, for your perjury! You get out of this town! We don't want you here!!"

"I have not the slightest doubt of it," I replied.

"We did not send for you!," piped in another. "I say it plainly, you ought to be murdered," said the first."

"I do not misunderstand you," I said.

"Well, now! you can go on, be moving along!"

"Pardon me sir. You gentlemen accosted me and sought this interview, I have as much right to this street as you, but since you desire it, I'll go on."

"Yes; you go on, we want you to go on."

Much more than the above passed between us. One of the first things all three did, was to assure me that they were all Masons, which was quite unnecessary, considering the language they used in closing this interview. What assurance have I that these are empty threats?

Insert a pin here and refer to the above when a mob has injured a man for speaking on this subject. Then when friends of the craft or members of secret orders say that they were not Masons who mobbed him," refer to it and ask what reason can another set of men have for assailing him?

The Masons here have evidently been expecting me, but not having named my destination when leaving Tolono, the craft did not know what lodge to give "due notice" to concerning my approach and hence this denouement stirs the ire of these men, for the designs upon the trestleboard are akin to the "hand-writing upon the wall." I have been told that it will be useless for me to apply for any place in this city in which to speak on this subject.

A Christian warned me as a friend to not attend church on Sabbath evening: for the tracts have been freely distributed and they are carefully read and eagerly sought, and this has widened the circle of Masonic knowledge of my presence. Knowing the feelings of the craft toward me here, I acted on the advice of the above mentioned friend. I lay no claim to patent for bravery and have no ambition to appear in the role of a hero, for I do fear the vengance of the craft. I have clouds of fear at times; they are brief but they are real. But "I know in whom I have believed," and resort to him and trust his promises. "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."—John 8: 12. I often think that I'm like a mouse on the prairie; a shade comes over him on a clear day; it is the shadow of a hawk and the poor thing runs for its life, over the knoll, into the ravine, along the path; while ever and over it the dread monster spreads his wings, soars aloft and basks in the sun. He is in no trouble: by a simple act of obedience to a law of gravitation he can obtain his midday meal. All he cares to do is to keep his eye on his victim and his shadow over him, while the latter strains every nerve and seeks every covert, happy if at last it find shelter in the crevice of a rock. So, sometimes with me, the shade of this great buzzard whose maw is full of all uncleanness and dead men's bones, comes insensibly over me and for awhile appals me! Then I feel like calling on good old Jeremiah and hearkening to his lamentation, "As for us, our eyes as yet failed for our vain help; in our watching we have watched for a nation that could not save us."

Here I want to interrupt the prophet to ask: "Jeremiah, were you ever a Mason?" But he continues: "They hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets: our end is near, our days are fulfilled: for our end is come. Our persecutors are swifter than the eagles of heaven."

Then I turn from Jeremiah to Jesus and receive the comforting assurance: "Lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world," and obtain strength to renew the conflict. It is the same old story of human weakness and divine aid. I realize the fact that of all the laborers in this vineyard I am the most unprofitable.

Do not infer from the above that I live in Doubting Castle. I am conscious of spiritual advancement and have more soul comfort while passing through this very struggle than I can describe with pencil point. But to return to the relation of this city to this reform. I cannot say whether I shall be able to secure a place in which to speak or not. I shall make an effort in this direction to-morrow, if spared, and you shall hear the result in the future.

G. T. DISSETTE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

May 6, 1885.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Yesterday there met in this city, the twelfth annual National Conference of Charities and Correction. During the day the delegates visited Mount Vernon, and at 8 P. M., met in Willard's Hall which was finely decorated. Judge McArthur of the District Supreme Court, called the meeting to order. Prayer was offered by Rev. S. N. Geesing of the Epiphany church, and addresses of welcome were made by Judge McArthur and Mr. J. B. Edwards, District Commissioner. These were responded to by addresses from ex-Gov. Anderson of Kentucky, and ex-Gov. Hoyt of Pennsylvania, after which a letter was read from President Cleveland expressing his regret at not being able to keep his engagement to be present at the opening of the conference, and expressing his deep interest in their work. The address of Gov. Anderson was able, eloquent, and had much of special interest. He alluded in vigorous terms to the fact that the National Government had no prison of its own and to the practice of placing the nation's criminals in State penitentiaries. The choice of a place of confinement was governed, he said, by the avarice of the marshals, and the prisoners were placed where they could be placed the cheapest. Some of these places were worse than the Black Hole of Calcutta. He termed the practice infamous, and declared it to be the duty of the National Government to set the example to the States in the treatment of prisoners with a view to their reformation.

Phillip C. Garrett, president of the conference, then delivered the opening address. He traced the progress of philanthropy from early English history down to the present, and sketched the great advance that had been made in the treatment of criminals, the insane, and the wards of society. His address was replete with valuable suggestions on the treatment of criminals and the insane. We took exception to but a single item, his derisive remarks on the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Committees were appointed on credentials, and on business. The conference was invited to visit the White House at 1:30 P. M., to-day, and arrangements were made to visit the prisons and beneficiary institutions of the District. Mrs. S. J. Spencer, Corresponding Secretary, invited the conference to a reception and refreshments in the Willard House. The sessions will continue for six days.

A careful revision of the pension list for the District shows nearly one hundred names not entitled to pensions. Some of them are dead, some widows have married, and some have entirely recovered from their disabilities. This will save to the Government nearly $100,000 annually. What an immense gain, if all similar leaks could be stopped!

It appears from the commissioner's report that the number of liquor licenses has increased fourteen per cent. during the last year, or about three times as fast as the population. Shall this abomination that maketh desolate prevail forever? Surely the question of national prohibition in this District is coming to the front, and it must be met. What are tariffs, or questions of prison reform,—such as are now being discussed in Willard Hall—compared to the great evil that fills the prisons, the almshouse and the insane asylums with victims?

H. H. HINMAN.

SECRETISM IN THE COLORED CHURCHES.

MORGAN CITY, La., May 29, 1885.

DEAR EDITOR:—I have seen several copies of your paper and like it. I wish I could have some copies for distribution among my colored people. Secret societies are ruining them, also, so called benevolent societies, though not exactly secret yet they detract from the church and pave the way for the secret organization. Their mutual aid and display of regalia are much the same as in the secret orders. All this care of sick, etc., could be done by the church much better.

The other day I visted a church and though the pastor belongs to two secret orders, yet he said to me that those societies had been a curse to his church. Said he, "Our church members have built two elegant halls for our secret societies and now our church needs repairs and no one wants to help. Our time and thought and money too, all go to those societies. Besides, it mixes up the church and the world in a way that degrades the church. Often they will say, 'Our society does more for us than our church.' The fact is, they do more for the society than they do for the church: and all the good that is in them came from the Christian element they have engrafted, and yet the society and not the church gets the honor.

Something must be done; we need light. Many are being deceived. Can you send me some easily understood tracts for distribution, also your paper for my reading room? Three months ago, we opened one here—the first for colored people in this State. It is a great blessing in this saloon-cursed town. I have been twenty-one years at work among the colored people of the South. It is a hopeful work and pays well in the higher coin of Heaven. Your sister,

J. P. MOORE.

WANTED: A MASONIC BOOK.

WENONA, Ill., June 1, 1885.

I must have it. I tell you why. About eighteen months ago at a literary society, held in a schoolhouse between Tonica and Lostant, Ill., the subject of secret societies was brought up for discussion. As secretists are always averse to talking in public upon the subject, the writer volunteered to plead their case. In order to be fully equipped for the work he borrowed a copy of Mackey's Manual from a benevolent Royal Arch Mason, who is always willing to see Masonic light shine abroad in the land. Where that book is reflecting the rays of Masonic light to-day we don't know. It was lost. Our friend is in mourning over that book and refuses to be comforted. He says he cannot live without it, and that it is a better book than the Bible. One sorrowful fact to him is that a son, who has lately started out on the broad road that leads to the Masonic heaven, wants this book to guide him. After searching in vain for more than a year, I despair of ever finding this book and have promised our friend to advertise in the Cynosure, and get a genuine copy for him from some regenerated Mason who has quit reading Mackey's Manual and gone to reading the Bible.

Now, dear reader, are you that man, or do you know of such a man, who has a copy of Mackey's Manual? If so, I want to negotiate with you for the book. Address box 155, Wenona, Marshal Co., Ill. Don't put the price too high, Masonry has declined greatly in price in this section of Illinois, and we would expect to buy second-hand goods very cheap. The expositions made by Ronayne and Starry and Lowe, and the lectures given by Stoddard, Hinman and others in Central Illinois have greatly depressed the market. Masons who still adhere to the lodge don't seem to put on so much style as formerly. At a Masonic funeral in Wenona last winter, they all wore their aprons under their coats, except one. The profane world did not know why they concealed this necessary appendage of a well-dressed Mason. Various reasons were suggested by different ones for this singular conduct. Some thought their bibs were dirty, others that they had holes in them. Perhaps the Wenona Masons had heard of the individual who, on seeing a Masonic funeral parade, innocently asked when the old lady died. A wicked wag had told him it was the funeral of a member of a dish-washing association.

S. I. WHITE.

CHURCH UNION.

SAN ANTONIA, Texas.

Let us have it. But let us not spend our time trying to yoke up the two lions, the lion of the pit and the Lion of the tribe of Judah. The Roman church tried this when they got the heathen into the church by taking in these idolatrous worships, but the Lion of the tribe of Judah refusing to be yoked withdrew and left the lion of the pit in full possession. The readers of the Cynosure would not think it possible for an enlightened Christian and Antimason to unite with a church whose preacher and leading members were all Masons. There are other things in our churches just as exceptionable that others could not conscientiously unite in. Let us not labor to unite humility and pride, spirituality and worldliness, truth and error, sin and holiness; but let every professed Christian make a personal matter of it; get to the Lord; get baptised "with the Holy Ghost;" "filled with all the fullness of God;" made perfect in love. Compel the lion of the pit to withdraw, and the work is done.

WARREN PARKER.

LODGE AND SALOON.

COLUMBUS, Miss., May 25, 1885.

I was talking not long since with a Congregational minister about Freemasonry and he said, "Congregationalists must oppose secret orders by not joining them. So many of our people are in those orders, that is all the way for us to oppose them." He remarked that many prohibition papers were good papers, and were opposed both to whisky and secret orders, but said nothing about the secret orders. Will such prohibition papers awake and arise and see the evil their example is doing? They stand before the world as unwilling to witness to the truth of what they know, and others are not slow to follow their example. Many a criminal is not executed because one witness refuses to testify, and in consequence of temperance papers refusing to testify against secret orders many ministers and their followers are misled. Prohibition and Antimasonry must march forward together.

ELI TAPLEY.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON XII.—June 21, 1885.—Christian Progress. 2 Peter 1: 1–11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. 2 Peter 3: 18.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. It is through personal appropriation of the promises that we become growing Christians. vs. 1–5. Peter writes these words of tender and solemn exhortation while standing in the shadow of his own approaching death. "Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle," seems to be the central thought in his mind, urging him to stir up to new Christian zeal and faithfulness those just starting in the race. As a first condition of progress in the divine life he puts faith in the promises. Every step we take toward the goal must have the strong, unfailing plank of God's word underneath or we shall be mired in the Slough of Despond. We must personally appropriate the promises. It is not enough to know they are in the Bible; we must feel that they are there for us. And secondly—

2. We must add to our faith works. vs. 5–9. "Add to your faith virtue;" i. e. an uncompromising, courageous acting according to that faith. A lack of vital, living belief in God's promises is the chief reason why the church and ministry as a whole are so half-hearted and timid in supporting unpopular reforms. The great reformers in all ages have been men who had implicit trust in God's power to sustain through the severest trials and persecutions. It was through this trust that they "subdued kingdoms, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens." This is the martyr faith of which the church so sorely needs a revival. "To virtue add knowledge." "He that doeth these things shall know of the doctrine," says Christ. Weak, timid, halting disciples are always ignorant disciples. "And to knowledge temperance." A complete control over self is only gained by such a view of God as will show us the worthlessness of self, and the degradation of submitting to the domination of anything lower than his will. And to temperance patience." Patience is the natural fruit of self-control. "And to patience godliness." i. e., likeness to God, spiritual perfection, a will in unity with his. When we have attained a state of perfect patience, we have come into the godlike state. "And to godliness brotherly kindness." If we are like God we shall love our brother. "And to brotherly kindness charity." We cannot keep true love from growing. The more we love the church the more all-embracing will be our love for sinners—the more anxious our desire that they shall be saved.

3. The need of diligence. vs. 10–12. It does not matter how unmistakable may be our calling for any particular art, trade or profession, we shall certainly fail therein if we consider ourselves above the need of diligent application. At best we shall only be mediocre. Even in worldly matters we need to make our calling and election sure. How much more so in spiritual. Our lesson presents us in closing with several practical points. (1) The knowledge of Jesus Christ is the root of godly living. (2) Perfection is gained by a succession of steps, the practice of simple, everyday virtues. (3) The greater our attainments, the more zealous we shall be to stir up others less advanced. (4) Faith is the Alpha, love the Omega in this alphabet of Christian graces.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How important is faith? Ha. 2: 4; Rom. 1: 7 Is salvation dependent upon great deeds? Rom. 2: 7. Does true faith fear man? Job 5: 19; 1 Sam. 17: 37.

THE PROMISES.—Those spoken by God, and especially those given through Jesus Christ. The nature of the promises is indicated by the words that follow. They include pardon, peace, eternal life, participation in the divine naturc.—Plumptre. The promises in view may be especially the two all-inclusive fulfillments of God's engagements, namely, the advent of Messiah (compare Luke 1: 67–75) and the gift of the Spirit (which is described as "the promise of the Father," Acts 1: 4).—Schaff. The grant includes all that the infinite God can do for the well-being of man; it far surpasses all human comprehension and thought. It is the breadth and length and depth and height of the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, which is concerned for the believer's interests. Thus, all there is in heaven is opened to man by the promises of God.—N. W. Taylor.

THE PRECIOUSNESS OF THE PROMISES. 1. They are precious because they are so great. (a) Great in extent; (b) great in value; (c) great in number. 2. They are precious because they are sure of fulfilment. Every promise is built upon four pillars: God's justice, which will not suffer him to deceive; God's grace or goodness, which will not suffer him to forget; God's truth, which will not suffer him to change; God's power, which makes him able to accomplish.—Thomas Manton. 3. They are precious in that all good is included in them. Everything we can need, far beyond our power to conceive, is promised from God.—Pel. The promises are a precious book; every leaf drops myrrh and mercy. They are golden vessels, laden with the choicest jewels that heaven can afford or the soul desire. There is nothing you can truly call a mercy but you will find in the promises.—Brooks.

"Add to your faith virtue." Rather, in your faith supply virtue. The construction and meaning of this and the following clauses is not in the A. V., "add to" your faith virtue, etc., but the word in is each time used of that which is assumed to be theirs, and the exhortation is to take care that, in the exercise of that, the next step is developed.—Alford. By means of your faith acquire virtue.—Trench. What is meant is that each element of the Christian life is to be as an instrument by which that which follows it is wrought out.—Plumptre. Each grace, being assumed, becomes the stepping-stone to the succeeding grace; and the latter in turn qualifies and completes the former. Faith leads the band, love brings up the rear.—Bengel.

"Virtue." Not merely general excellence, as in our modern use of the word. Here the word conveys the definite idea of might, energy, or moral courage,—what Bengel aptly terms "a strenuous tone and vigor of mind." This is to be furnished in and with our faith, or in the exercise of our faith; so that our faith shall not be an uncertain, feeble, and timorous thing, but a manly and powerful thing, with a touch of heroism in it.—Schaff. Restoring the word to its original import, viz., manhood, or manliness, we should use it exclusively to express the quality of fortitude; strength of character in relation to the resistance opposed by nature, and the irrational passions to the dictates of reason; energy of will in preserving the line of rectitude tense and firm against the warping forces and treacheries of temptation.—S. T. Coleridge.

"And to (in) brotherly kindness, charity." Love, philanthropy, universal love, the love of all mankind.—Binney. Universal kindness of thought, word, and act towards all; a catholic large-heartedness, not confining the spirit of brotherly kindness to brethren only (Matt. 5: 46, 47). So that these two last correspond to the "love to one another and to all" of 1 Thess. 3: 12.—Alford. So charity completes the choir of graces in Colossians 3: 14.—Bengel. Religion begins with faith and ends in love, and the circle is complete. We set out with believing; we graduate at last in that holy affection which makes us "partakers of the divine nature," We can make no advance beyond the point we have now reached. We stand on that summit which has nothing higher than itself. "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." He who liveth in love is one with his Maker.—Adams.

—The additions to the white Baptist churches in Richmond since Mr. Moody's recent visits are nearly, if not quite, 600. Numerous accessions have been made to the Methodist churches also.

OBITUARY.

Another veteran soldier of the cross is gone. Died at his residence in Vienna, Oneida Co., New York, May 2nd, 1885, OTIS WHEELOCK, aged 89 years. He was naturally possed of a vigorous and cordial spirit, and bore an uncompromising testimony against all popular evils of the age. Slavery, intemperance and oath-bound secret orders, he long regarded as among the greatest hindrances to Christian civilization. He loved the Cynosure. He was a life-long member of the Baptist denomination. The funeral services were held at the house, attended by a large number of neighbors and friends and members of the church of North Bay, to which he belonged. Rev. Mr. Ford, pastor of the church preached from the text: "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth."—Psalm 12: 1.

G. W. HALSTEAD.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissette, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe.
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Capwell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has noue but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

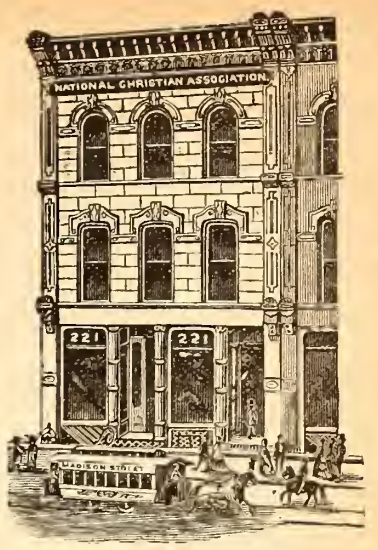
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry. N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Ermen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITES, Andros, Grecce.
C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie: Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1885.

"All who wish to be free from sectarianism must break away from connection with sects."—J. F. Browne. This doctrine is mere destruction, and in Christ's day would have condemned as sin joining the "seet of the Nazarenes." Destroying the churches to get rid of seets is burning down barns to get rid of rats.

If any one can read the number of Miss Flagg's serial in the last Cynosure, (June 4th,) without tears swelling to his eyes, he must be

"Blest, rather cursed, with nerves that never feel, Kept snug in caskets of close-hammered steel."

The book should be published at onec in English, Swedish, German and Holland Dutch. (Will Dr. Veenboer note this?) It is deeper and broader than "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Mrs. Stowe made slavery horrible. This was her one point and she made it. Miss Flagg's object is the whole of Christian civilization and her book, like Cowper's poems, will be eloquent on common topics, and will please us whilc it mends our follies and eorrects our errors, and though less thrilling than "Uncle Tom," it will be read longer and do more good.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the National Christian Association, June 19th inst., and the American party conference the day following, will be morei mportant than any other because the reform is spread wider and struck deeper than in any former year. If thc men now fully enlightened and committed in heart to this cause, can agree on some form of united action and voting, all other true reforms who crystalize around it and there will be no separate Prohibition party in 1888; nor any forsworn idolaters, knights, secret worships and cut-throat oaths among Prohibitionists. Come, all who can.

"Practical questions of the greatest moment must be decided." So says Secretary Barrows's call to the American Home Missionary Convention at Saratoga, June 2–4. In 1834 Moses Stuart, Leonard Woods, Ebenezer Porter and Thomas H. Skinner, all but Prof. Stuart, doctors of divinity, and constituting the faculty of Andover Theological Seminary, petitioned the legislature of Massachusetts for an investigation of Masonry, and repeal of the charter of thc Grand Lodge. What say Messrs. Barrows, Goodwin, Curtiss, and others of the Saratoga convention? Were those great men of Andover fools?

REV. MR. HIEL'S LETTER ON WALDENSTROM.

We give this honest and able letter in the present number.

The Cynosure aspires to a cool and correct judgment on all subjects, above all, in Christianity whieh underlies everything else. Its editor, therefore, visited Augustana College, the college and seminary of the American Swedes. We asked Prof. Olson to whom the faculty referred as authority:

"Do you know Dr. Waldenstrom?"

"Intimately."

"Does he deny the divinity of Christ?"

"That charge is made, but it is an extreme charge. Dr. Waldenstrom is followed by thousands wherever he goes, and when some of his positions taken against the State Church were assailed, I think he was driven by controversy and in self-defense to go farther than he otherwise would."

"Do you consider Waldenstrom a Christian, a regenerated man?"

"I think Waldenstrom has been converted to Christ. Thousands of his more enlightened followers show symptoms of receding from his extreme and vague utterances concerning the atonement; while the weaker and more worldly ones go beyond their leader in denying that Christ has "made propitiation for our sins."

Prof. Esbjom took the same view of Waldenstrom's teachings. Both he and Olson regard infant baptism not at all as a "ritual regeneration," but a divine help to parental faith in pleading the promise of salvation for the believer's offspring: and the eucharist as "a channel of divine grace," as the old Puritan divines did. And all the Swedish Lutheran ministers at Rock Island, Genesco, Galva, and Rockford, insist on conversion to Christ, not on church confirmation, as what saves the soul. And in all these towns the Swedish Lutheran ministry hold, as expressed by the Presbyterian Synod of Cincinnati, at Dayton, in 1836, that "Membership in a Masonic lodge is incompatible with a credible profession of the Christian religion;" and they enforce discipline up to that line.

The writer well knew the good Dr. Hasselquist, president of the Rock Island College, when he and Esbjom were forming the great Augustana Synod, now representing 100,000 members. We see, as yet, no manner of need of a new Waldenstromian sect. Surely there are sects enough. Nor, on the other hand, do we think it just to accuse the free churches of Sweden, whieh have withdrawn from the Lutheran State Church there, of the heresy of "denying the Lord that bought them." The mass of them, as represented by Mr. Montgomery's book, are spiritual, earnest Christians, and noble men and women.

There are two million and a half of these Swedes now being Americanized; and the lodges, those "man-traps of Satan," as the old Scotch divines used to call them, are gaping, like erocodiles, to swallow them up. They are becoming artizans, merchants, manufacturers, and county officers; and the devil, as he did to Christ, will offer them worldly success if they will worship him! Shall it be that Congregationalists, pretended successors of the Puritans, will turn agents of Satan to decoy these precious children of the Northern lights, into these meshes of Satan? We hope not.

THE CHURCH CONGRESS.

This unique assembly, met in Hartford, Conn., May 11–14, was as distinguished in its material as by its object, the extinction of the Christian sects. Men like Dr. Crosby, Bishop Cox, Dr. Miner, and others placed the evils of schism under a shower of sunbeams; and the meeting itself was one step toward the realization of its object: the oneness of Christians in Christ.

It used to be demanded of Abolitionists, "Show us your plan!" And we answered, "Our plan is to convert the people of the United States into Abolitionists. Then there'll be no slaves." And there are none now.

In the fall of 1867 a paper was presented to the writer, calling an anti-secret convention in Aurora, Ill. It was signed by Philo Carpenter and eighteen or twenty others. We met in the City Hall, Oct. 31st, 1867, and instead of a few counties, six States were represented. Bro. Loggan had come all the way from Nebraska to attend that convention. The City Hall was full at night, and when Loggan had done speaking, Mr. Carpenter leaned over and whispered, "These men are giants!" But they were not. They were "speaking with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." There were in that hall, Methodists, Free Methodists, Wesleyans, Congregationalists, Baptists, and United Brethren; BUT THERE WERE NO SECTS THERE! The Spirit had fused us into one "body of Christ."

Eighteen hundred years before that October meeting in Aurora, there was a similar meeting in Jerusalem. It was composed of Parthians, Medes, Cretes, Arabians, etc., speaking nearly all the languages of the babbling earth; certainly they were from "every nation under heaven!" Yet in that meeting this motley crowd of sects spoke a language that every one understood. There were no sects there. They were "all one in Christ Jesus." If that Hartford Church Congress had preceded their convention by a ten days prayer meeting for the Holy Ghost, and then met for the same object for which those "devout" Jews met, namely, to set up the worship of the true and living God through Christ, and overturn the ceremonies of "Diana of the Ephesians," Jupiter, Mercury, and other secret lodges, that meeting would have been followed by similar results. But if it had been proposed in that Hartford Congress to lay aside out of religion all mere man-made rites, as, for instance, "The solemn rite of confirmation," Bishop Cox would have been astonished.

A Greek proverb says, "It is the easiest thing to find faults; but to give advice how bad things may become better is the part of a wise counsellor."

How are sects to be destroyed, and the sin of schism stopped? Bro. Fee's Berea Evangelist says, Let each come square out of all the present churches and denominations.

Well, now suppose a thousand or two come out and begin to obey God by "assembling themselves together" at Berea, Ky. Is not that another sect, whose creed is that there shall be no sects? One hundred thousand Scandinavians have come out from the State Church because its priests and bishops are mere worldlings, drinking, gambling, Freemasons, etc., etc., and they will not be called after Luther. But a church of 200 of these non-sectarian Christians at Moline call their church "Gustav," after Gustavus Adolphus, which name is no better than Luther.

Ten thousand men on a common are pulling and hauling each other into sects, each squad having a trumpeter of its own, till night comes upon them. They all at once see a star and travel toward it, and lo! all move in harmony together. When we all travel toward the Star of Bethlehem, names and forms will melt off and leave us one. And once sectarianism fairly out of us, the Christians of any village could meet together and agree to drop sectarian names; number their churches 1st, 2d, 3d, etc., according to their age; and when they get enough to meet the wants of the village, sell the rest for school-houses.

THE UNITED BRETHREN AGAIN.

The more we read and reflect on the Fostoria Conference, the more hopeful we become of the United Brethren church. It is a mistake to consider Bishop Wright's re-election to the episcopate "a sop thrown to the reformers" to keep them in the church. Dr. J. W. Hott received forty-two votes for the post to which Bishop Wright was elected; and Rev. Z. Warner who has been the bitterest and boldest anti-reformer in the body, ran steadily against Wright and received fifty-seven votes on the fifth ballot to Wright's fifty-four. We at first feared the object was to send Bishop Wright to the Pacific coast to get him out of the way; as Brigham Young used to send Mormons with troublesome consciences on a foreign mission. But the votes for Warner showed that the anti-reformers put a high value upon the office, and the fact that Shuey and Weaver could easily have defeated him, and did not do it, showed that they did not wish to keep him out of the board of Bishops.

Then our excellent Dr. Davis is still professor and chairman of the trustees of the Seminary, and Bishop Wright is a vice-president of the Missionary Board and of the commission on the constitution; and those who have read Dr. Davis's crushing replies to Bishop Weaver's "Outlook," and seen in Bishop Wright's paper, the scathing and just strictures on Glosbrenner, Weaver and other anti-reformers and lodge champions, will see that the apparent Bull Run defeat of the reformers by seventy-seven to forty-two was only apparent. Glosbrenner, though he plead for re-appointment, was set by as an emeritus and Dr. Berger, the opponent of Bishop Edwards and reform, was dropped from his editorship, to his sore discomfort.

The popularity of Bishop Weaver, who had the largest vote for bishop, is a puzzle. When the nullifiers made their descent on Dayton, and defied law and constitution; when one of them put the Telescope on the floor and trod on it, Bishop Weaver was crooning to them in their haughty Tribune; and while giving to Christ his hollow profession of opposition to secret societies, he made the secretists love him, because while charged by his church with the responsibilities of discipline, they saw he meant to do nothing against them; and as lodgery is treason to Christ, he gave "aid and comfort" to traitors; and he floats as froth does, while heavier bodies sink out of sight.

There is this to be said, that the anti-secret law was an invention to save the labor of discipliue and this was its weakness, and helped the wrong side. Christ is the sole law-giver for his church, and nothing will oust sin but his words. Years since, the writer ventured to exhort Dr. Davis to bring the indictment against the lodge, in the name and words of Christ. Satan cares no more for church-constitutions and church-laws than Sampson for green withes. The venerable and learned man assented that his personal indictments gained power. But the reformers still rang changes on "our church," "our constitution," and "our laws," for which secretists cared as much as seeessionists did for the U. S. Constitution and laws they were trampling down.

If now the reformers look to God's Word and Christ's example; if they give testimonies instead of making laws, if they show that from Genesis to the Apocalypse, human, false lodge-worships draw the hottest bolts of God's wrath, that the worship of the beast and his image are lodge-worships, and land at last in the lake of fire and brimstone; if they discipline like Moses and Josiah (Ex. 32: 20, and II Kings 23d chap.), burning and grinding the implements of false worship, and making the people drink of their powder; this church and this nation can be rescued as well as that of the Jews. In the time of Christ there was not in Judea an idol or a slave, though the world outside was full of them. It pertaineth to these United Brethren to lead us. Let them "call a solemn assembly." We will follow them. So will two millions of Lutherans, with a host from lesser sects. Let us renew Pentecost, and God will renew the baptism of fire. Let us, as they did, bring together "devout men from every nation under heaven," and set salvation by Christ against salvation by ceremonies, and we shall see like results follow.

There is no need of splitting the Brethren church, if the reformers know their time and seize it. Even Dr. Warner is toned down from a nullifier to a brother; and from a careful and a prayerful study of the Fostoria Conference, we believe that Shuey & Co. see that the lodge is doomed, and too heavy a load for them to carry. Let Halleck Floyd unite the Star and the Chambersburg paper, and call a National Convention for Christ vs. anti-Christ.

EXPOSITIONS.

The London Freemason, from which we quote on another page, manifests no better or more truthful spirit than the Voice of Masonry of this city, or the Grand Orient of France in its attacks on M. Andrieux. The world-wide publicity given to his articles and correspondence is answer enough to "the world is tired of exposures." The press is the keenest interpreter of popular desire, and the Andrieux letters and the celebrated statement of Thurlow Weed published everywhere with avidity in 1882 show that people are yet ready to read expositions of lodge villainy. Masonry has too many enemies who yet fear while they hate to allow any other reception. It is true that the lodge survives these exposures, but it is as counterfeiting, treason, and assassination survive.

The London paper leaves us to infer that it regards Masonry in France as different from Masonry anywhere else. Such an admission is a fatal one, for it is a blow at the universality of the order. If Masonry can differ in France, it may in Illinois, or in Cook county.

It is safe for a London paper to talk about "the lie of the Morgan episode," just as it is for O'Donovan Rossa to threaten dynamite. It is out of reach. And the Cynosure accepts the compliment about fanaticism and ignorance quoting Scripture. It is Masonic, just as the lodge ritual use of Scripture is Masonic, where the Bible is a tool, of less account than a square and compass, which are equally, with it lights of the lodge.

We shall give the London paper an opportunity to inform itself by an exchange.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman, we learn, has returned to Washington from Willimantie and is expeeting to assist on the American, Bro. Bailey's time being now largely, but not wholly, occupied with a elerkship in the Surgeon General's office to whieh he has lately reeeived an appointment. We regret to hear that these new engagements will probably prevent one or the other from attending the annual meeting.

—The Morrison, Ill. reformers are preparing for a big grove meeting, with St. John to speak and the people of Lee and Whiteside eounties to hear. Bro. G. Sholes, who maintains in age the enthusiasm of youth is warmly engaged in the meeting which will shake the rum power in that region.

—During May, Bro. Loggan was busy in Kansas, visiting Leonardville, Mayday, Sabetha, Willis, Topeka and Lecompton, speaking at most of these points. He visited the United Presbyterian General Assembly and was much pleased with the appearance of that great meeting. He hopes to visit Mitchell and Jewell counties soon.

—The friends at the Cynosure offiee were eheered by a eall from T. K. Bufkin last week, an old and true friend of reform, who like the rest of us shows the marks of honorable warfare, but whose courage and zeal have not one whit abated. He has been spending some time on the Pacifie coast, and while there cut a staff of "Aeacia," and another of "Green Bay," whieh he presented to the senior editor and general agent, and for which he has their most hearty thanks. May the rod and staff on which David leaned comfort and support this good brother until his pilgrimage shall end.

—Secretary Stoddard spoke on the seeret orders in the Swedish Lutheran ehureh, Englewood, pastor Vibelius, Sabbath evening. A fair audience gathered in spite of a severe storm, and their elose attention marked the deep interest of the hearers. Pastor Vibelius is in earnest in the reform and wishes more done in Englewood to promote it. He proposed to bring the matter before the next ministers' meeting, and seeure eo-operation. Bro. S. was indebted to friend Grossman and his wife for hospitality.

—Rev. C. C. Foote, of Detroit, is suffering greatly from an uleer over the pupil of one of his eyes, which besides being very painful threatens to cause blindness in that organ. The inflammation was subsiding last week, but was still very troublesome.

—Bro. George C. Clark, the Reform singer, expects to attend the N. C. A. annual meeting and bring with him a great historical character, the veritable George Harris of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He was a fellow slave with "Uncle Tom," a brother of "Emeline," and played with little Eva. Mrs. Stowe received from him many of her characters and facts which have become famous around the world in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and fill no inconsiderable place in a very important part of our American history. Bro. Clark has known him ever since he escaped from slavery, and reports that he is heartily in favor of our reform, and is moreover an interesting speaker. A place must be given him on the evening programme in Farwell Hall. Rev. M. A. Gault is expected to speak at that time on the relations of our reform to the movement to Christianize the Constitution, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard will also make an address.

N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the corporate body of the National Christian Association will be held in Carpenter Hall, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, June 19, 1885, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M. It is desirable that not only members of the corporate body but as many friends as possible shall attend this meeting.

By order of the Board of Directors of the N. C. A.

F. W. Capwell, President of the N. C. A

J. D. Nutting, Secretary.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE REFORM.

The Master says putting the hand to the plow and looking back unfits a man for heaven. Lot's wife tried the experiment and her experience should deter every Anti-mason from doing likewise. If you have enlisted in the reform movement championed by the N. C. A., never for a moment indulge the the thought of drawing back lest it should be to perdition. If you have been planning to attend the annual meeting on the 19th inst., don't let any ordinary hindrance prevent you. The Captain of our salvation will be here, for we meet in his name, and he expects every man to do his duty. Come if you can, and if you eannot, pray that the Lord may guide those who do come, and say to the enemy who is always interested in sueh gatherings where his kingdom is in danger, "Get thee henee."

J. P. Stoddard.

THE "READERS" OF SWEDEN.

AN INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF A GREAT RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT.

Wahoo, Neb.

Editor Cynosure:—In your issue of April 30th, the "Bad Exehange" of the Swedish Lutherans was spoken of, leaving the Lutheran for the Congregational ehureh. Being a Swede and a member of the Lutheran ehureh of this eountry, you will, I hope, exeuse a few words of information as well as of eorrection. The "bad exehange" is mainly by modern Soeinians, not by Lutherans.

The "Scandinavian Revival," spoken of by you some time since seems to be represented as started by Messrs. Waldenstrom, Ekman, and Fernholm. This needs eorrection. That revival was in its greatest progress and aeeompanied by the greatest blessings to the saving of souls from sin and death, when these gentlemen were mere boys, or even before they were born. Their main eredit is (if indeed history will judge it a credit) that they have retarded the progress and to a great extent obliterated the results of that blessed revival by the strife they eaused among the so-called "Readers," i. e., the more earnest Christians of the land. The prineipal human instrument in bringing about this revival in Sweden was the late Rev. C. O. Rosenius, an earnest and devout Lutheran minister and one in every respect "orthdox" as a Lutheran. A society was organized about thirty years ago: The "Evangelieal Fosterlands Stiftedsen," (Fatherland-Institution) with the objeet of spreading devotional literature and sending preaehing eolporteurs among the people. All over the country mission societies were organized, whieh served as supporters of the Fatherland Institution. Mission sehools were started where several hundreds, if not up to thousands, of young men have been trained for their work as colporteurs, or foreign missionaries, or started in their preparations for the regular ministry. The Readers were mainly, of course, the supporters as well as the result of this home mission and foreign mission work, and they, very naturally, considered themselves friends of it. Among such mission or colporteur-schools the Fjellstedt-school at Upsal, and Rev. Ahlsborg's school at Ahlsborg are the most noted. A Special Foreign Mission Institute was opened at Johannelund for the education of foreign missionaries. A publishing establishment was started at Stockholm, where hundreds of thousands of Bibles, sermons, other religious books, and several religious periodicals were printed annually. In 1873 the number of eopies of such books and tracts issued and distributed by the Fatherland Institution amounted to 5,876,600: And this was before the name of P. Waldenstrom was known outside his circle of friends and acquaintances. C. O. Rosenius was the central figure and the spiritual guide, humanly speaking.

On his death, in 1868, Waldenstrom was chosen his successor as editor of The Pietist, a devotional periodical extensively read and highly appreciated by the Readers all over the land. As such he had at once the love and confidence of all the earnest Christians, and the prayer that he might prove a second Elisha, being doubly blessed by his predecessor's spirit. Whether Waldenstrom held the Socinian views of the atonement and of the person of Christ before he entered on the editorship of The Pietist, or came to them shortly after, no one can tell. He did not begin to promulgate them, however, till a few years after. It was in the fall of 1873, if my memory is right, that he took the first step. As soon as his views were stated sufficiently clear to be fully understood, the leading men within the Fosterland's-Stiftedsen sounded the voice of warning. Even the old venerable Dr. P. Fjellstedt, for many years a Lutheran missionary in India, and author of an excellent "Bible Commentary for Common People," wrote a pamphlet against his views. A very excited and often bitter contest arose. Many got disgusted with the quarrel, and, becoming wrecked in the faith, turned avowed infidels. Many mistook this spiritual strife for spiritual life, and then the life was, of course, on their side, but only death on the other. This division was only among the so-called "Readere" and "Friends" of the mission work. It was a fight, not between dead ceremonial ritualism as an attributed characteristic of the State Church, and a real living Christianity, but a fight only among the earnest Christian element of the country. Those relying on ceremonies or not caring for any religion at all were merely lookers on, or probably said: "Go it, go it!" like loafers urging boys to fight in order to have some fun. When Waldenstrom and his party failed in getting control of the Fosterlands Stiftedsen, they started an organization of their own. About one-fourth or probably one-third of the Readers followed Waldenstrom, and were named after him. The original Readers are now sometimes, for the sake of distinction, ealled "Lutheran Readers," because the "Waldenstromians" also lay elaim to the name Readers as well as the name "Mission-Friends."

The violent strife that raged among the evangelieal element of the eountry, made it impossible for Waldenstrom and his friends to co-operate with the Readers, as of old. Then an effort was made to effeet a union between the other denominations, all to eome in on a platform broad enough for any one. Thus the Methodists and Baptists and others were invited, and sueh a platform was drawn up. The Baptists eaused some trouble and were accused by Waldenstrom of coming in only for the sake of proselyting. His co-laborer, Ekman, is at present more of a Baptist than anything else, and many of the friends of Waldenstrom have openly joined Baptist congregations in Sweden.

This union was then abandoned and a movement started to organize into one eompact whole all those Readers that followed Waldenstrom. The Swedish Mission-Allianee is the result of that work and it is the members of this Alliance that are urged to enter the door thrown wide open by the Congregationalists of this eountry. In general they have the ideas of their leader, and are, therefore, more Socinians than Lutherans.

The Fosterlands-Stiftedsen earries on its work as vigorously as ever. It has several mission stations in Afriea, and is now opening a new mission among the Galla tribes. The system of sending out preaching eolporteurs is still kept up, and it is my candid eonviction, that its work in the past, as well as in the future, has been and will be more effective in evangelizing the people than all the other Christian missionary work combined. But as this work is carried on steadily and silently and, as far as possible, in peace with the State Church, a superficial observer might not notice it. And, if he is a member of a denomination that is proselyting in the country, he is very liable to ignore it, as it has the name and bears the stamp of Evangelical Lutheran Christianity. Yours in the love of Christ, S. M. Hiel.

THE HOME.

THY WILL BE DONE.

We see not, know not. All the way
Is night. With thee alone is day.
From out the torrent's troubled drift,
Above the storm—one prayer we lift—
Thy will be done!

The flesh may fail, the heart may faint,
But who are we to make complaint,
Or dare to plead in times like these,
The weakness of our love to ease?
Thy will be done!

We take with solemn thankfulness
Our burden up, nor ask it less;
And count it joy that even we
May suffer, serve, or wait for thee.
Thy will be done!

Though dim, as yet, in tint and line,
We trace thy picture's wise design,
And thank thee that our age supplies
Its dark relief of sacrifice—
Thy will be done!

And if, in our unworthiness,
Thy sacrificial wine we press;
If from thy ordeal's heated bars
Our feet are seamed with heated scars,
Thy will be done!

Strike, thou the Master, we thy keys,
The anthem of the destinies!
The minor of the loftier strain,
Our hearts shall breathe the old refrain:
Thy will be done!

—John G. Whittier.

PRAYER AS A STATE.

In real life, prayer has three phases of development. It may be a refuge, a habit, or a state. The majority of men pray in emergencies. The majority of Christian men pray at stated seasons. Comparatively few realize the high ideal of prayer as a state of continuous living.

Our fathers, especially of the earlier generations in this country, seem to have understood this more profoundly than we do. They understood it in a more practical way. They prayed for what they wanted, and expected to receive it. If they did not receive it, the failure set them upon great "searchings of heart." The result commonly was that they prayed again. They had faith in importunity. They noted the fact that the promise, "Ask and ye shall receive," was given in immediate sequence to a parable which represented a failure in prayer.

There is something sublime in their application of prayer to the common exegencies of life. Look at the records of the ancient courts of probate in New England. How did their wills read? First and above all, "I commit my soul to the infinite and almighty God!" So they were wont to go about the business of putting their house in order for their last journey. Look at their religious diaries. They are childlike in the devotional faith they record. The writers take God into their confidence as a friend. They make their business his business. If one of them moves to a new house, he prays about it before and after. If he buys a house or a horse, he prays over his bargain. A harvest, a journey, a "cold spell," a dry summer, an autumnal freshet—the things which make up the talk of a country village, make also the converse of good men with God. Their faith was not restricted to Sundays and sermons, to funerals and epidemics.

The articles of their daily food are each one a gift of God, for which thanksgiving is prompt. Many times in the history of those days is the gift of Indian corn gratefully acknowledged. It was a new esculent to them, of ready and abundant growth, and often saved them from starvation. The pious chronicler of the early days of Concord, writes: "The Lord is pleased to provide great store of fish in the springtime." And again he records: "Let no man make a jest of pumpkins; for with this fruit the Lord was pleased to feed his people till their corn and cattle were increased."

In such familiar uses of religion there is always danger of twaddle. But nothing of that sort mars the manliness of the olden times. Religion was mixed in admirable proportions with good sense. It made a compound of tough, practical fiber. One of the ancient customs was to invite the minister to come and ask the Divine blessing on the land of the farmer. "Blessing the land" it was termed. A minister once, on being called thus to visit a farm on Cape Cod, found it in a miserable plight for the want of good husbandry. "No," said he, "this farm does not need prayer; it needs manure." Such were the homelike and sensible ways in which the Most High was welcomed to their plain and frugal homes. Was ever Wordsworth's "plain living and high thinking" more grandly illustrated?

Even the comic side of prayer in certain conditions did not escape them, yet did not disturb them. A hundred years ago a good citizen of Sudbury attended the "Thursday Lecture" in Boston, and heard the preacher pray for rain. At the close of the service he took the preacher's hand and said; "You Boston ministers, as soon as a tulip wilts under your windows, go to church and pray for rain till all Sudbury and Concord are under water!" It was comical, and they both saw it. But, none the less, they believed that if good men prayed for rain they got rain. Failure was only a reason for praying again. It was very unscientific. Be it so; but a grand fact which underlies science was expressed in it. The grandest life man can live was in it, settle it with science as we may.

This profound faith in prayer as a constant accompaniment of life was the secret of the extreme length of the prayers of our fathers. They often interpreted literally the command; "Continue in prayer." Their ministers sometimes indulged in such prolixity of devotion that, if one of their successors were to do it now on a Sunday, his people would ask for his resignation on Monday. It was because, as a rule, they succeeded in it. Prayer was the most effective force they knew. It swayed the universe. They knew nothing of steam outside of their tea-kettles. They did not know lightning by the scientific name. They did not know that gravitation held their feet to the ground, and that without its permission they could not adjust their knee-buckles. The Corliss engine and the Cunarders and Hoe's printing-press were not. If they had been predicted, they would have been treated as a hoax. The telephone would have savored of witchcraft to them; they would have kept a fast-day before venturing on its use. But they knew prayer as the superlative of all forces. They used it in good faith.

Here, also, was the secret of their resolute and cheerful temper. It is an egregious mistake to paint them as men of disconsolate conscience. That they were sour-faced men is as much a fiction as the "Blue Laws." Mr. Emerson thus describes them: "A sadness as of piled mountains fell on them. Life became ghastly, joyless, a pilgrim's progress, beleagured round with doleful histories of Adam's fall and curse behind us; with doomsdays and purgatorial and penal fires before us; and the heart of the seer and the heart of the listener sank within them." This is the hereditary notion of the Pilgrims. It goes down from father to son, bulging with accumulating lies as it advances, till its figure has become hideous.

Never was there a more stupid blunder in the judgment of historic characters. They were not such men. Jeremiah, the prophet of the broken heart, was not their model. St. Paul was their model. Their ministers preached a score of sermons on the Epistle to the Romans to one on the books of the "weeping prophet." Their minds were freighted with great convictions. They lived in the rapids of great events. Their piety was sympathetic with both. Such piety is always of the resolute and cheering type.

It has been said that no man can be a true poet who has not a cheerful temper. It is more true that no man can be a Christian of the Pilgrim type without such a temper. No man or woman without such a temper could have lived through the first winter at Plymouth after the landing in 1620. Such believers live in light, not in twilight. They may not be hilarious men, but they have and give the good cheer of indomitable courage. Our fathers, especially of the earlier generations, were men of that guild. They were men of the meridian and the morning.

It is not given to men of "ghastly, joyless life," whose minds are intent on "purgatorial and penal fires," to do the deeds our fathers did. Downcast and sour-faced men, weighed down by "a sadness as of piled mountains," are not the men who build States and emancipate nations. Men who walk with eyes on the ground, with "hearts sinking within them," do not found colleges in their poverty, when the gift of a bushel of corn is a sacrifice. They do not form churches and free governments, which illuminate the globe in after times. It takes a stalwart, uplooking faith to make history. Such men were the fathers. If they observed more fast-days than we do, they observed them in good faith, with no solemn mockery of the Most High. They observed more days of thanksgiving as well, and did it more religiously. There is not in the world's history an institution which blends a profound piety with social festivity more beautifully than the New England Thanksgiving Day of the olden time.

Our fathers prayed more in every way than we do. If they had personal conflicts with Satan, they conducted them in a soldierly way. They fought like men who meant to win. They did win. If they hanged witches, they did it in dead earnest, believing that they were doing battle with the devil. They grappled with the arch-enemy with stout heart, hand to hand, where many of our day, with the same faith in malign powers, would have run away. They were born conquerors, and they had the reward of conquest. They lived in the main a life of victory and gladness. The truth is that, like all successful men, in the tug of life they had no time to mope; and they had as little disposition as time.

But the grand secret of their gladsome courage was the state of prayer in which they lived. They had faith that whatever ought to interest them did interest God. Whatever ought to engage their faculties did engage the perfections of God. They were the subjects of decrees which had no beginning. God had ordained from eternity whatsoever came to pass; and he had elected them as his instruments in bringing things to pass. They were coworkers with God and could not be overreached or defeated in their life's work. Reverently they talked with God as with a friend. Therefore they enjoyed God. If ever men lived who, in the sense of lofty, courageous hope, enjoyed life, they were such men.

The fact deserves emphasis that prayer, as a continuous state of religious living, is independent of conditions. No calamity of life can nullify it or make it untimely. It becomes an atmosphere—pure, life-giving tonic, like that of the mountains or the sea. It is difficult for religious moods to exist under its uniform and equal pressure. In glad hours it as joy and in sad hours a comfort. It keeps life in equilibrium against disturbing forces. Like a finely finished chronometer, it is self-adjusting to variations of temperature. St. Paul struck out a scintillation of its virtue when he said: "If God be for us, who can be against us?" We believers of the common stock come to it often as a discovery which takes us by surprise. We respond: "Surely enough, who? Where is the fury of the oppressor?"

Great emergencies are the true test of great forces. If ever an interregnum might be expected in which a life of prayer might be suspended under an overwhelming sense of its uselessness, we should imagine that it might happen to those who were inmates of Confederate prisons and prison-pens during the civil war. Men of ordinary faith, who have never known ecstatic trust, or marvelous answers to prayer, might easily give it up in such forlorn conditions. "Hells upon earth," in a "God-forsaken country," they called those places of wretchedness who suffered in them, at Andersonville and Richmond. Yet many of our Christian soldiers came back from them, and live to tell us what joy, what peace, what strength they found in those "hells" in the consciousness of God's friendship. To some of them it was a revelation. Their courage rose to a level with their extremity. In one of the little newspapers which were printed or written there to while away the time, is to be found, week after week, this notice: "Prayer meeting at eight o'clock, in cell No. 7." What a hidden history does that brief advertisement reveal! A prayer meeting in hell! That is what it amounts to.

It reminds me of an account I met with many years ago of an eminent clergyman of New England, the president of one of our Northern colleges. In his last illness, disease clouded his reason. His religious faith failed him, and he fell into a profound melancholy. The "unpardonable sin" lay heavy on his conscience. He told his friends that he was going to hell. He had sinned away his day of grace, and no other place was fit for him, or he for it. It was useless to reason with a mind which had none. At last one of his clerical brethren said to him substantially: "Well, Dr. A——, it may be true. Doubtless some fearful examples of hypocrisy must be held up as a warning to the universe, and you may be one of them. You had better lay your plans for it and think what you will do in hell. You would not like it to be taken by surprise and not know what to do with yourself. How will you fill up your time there?" In a moment his faith righted itself. He replied: "I will set up a prayer meeting in hell the very first day!" At that resolve his reason righted itself. He saw that any place in the universe where he could be conscious of God's presence, and where a contrite sinner could have the will to pray, could not be hell to him. He died in peace. It was a new version of the Psalmist's thought: "If I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there!"—Prof. Austin Phelps, D. D., in the Independent.

Receive Christ with all your heart. As there is nothing in Christ that may be refused, so there is nothing in you from which he must be excluded.—John Flavel.

VERSES FOR THE CHILDREN.

"God help me evermore to keep
This promise that I make:
I will not chew, or smoke, or swear,
Nor poisonous liquors take.

"For poisonous drinks are very bad,
I know the names of some:
Ale, brandy, whisky, wine and beer,
With cider, gin, and rum.

"I'll try to get my little friends
To make this promise too;
And every day I'll try to find
Some temperance work to do."

GLASS, AND THE SUBSTANCE OF WHICH IT IS MADE.

"What's that?"

"Glass."

"Well, what is glass?"

"It's glass."

"So it is, but what are the ingredients? Pudding is pudding, but it has to be made first."

"Don't know."

"Have you a dictionary in the house?"

"Yes, two of 'em."

"Well, you take down Webster and turn to page 572, and you will read: 'A hard, brittle, transparent substance formed by fusing sand with fixed alkalies.' Now you've got a start and we'll post up a bit on glass."

Glass is moulded, blown and rolled. The big sheets of plate glass you see in the store windows are mostly of English and French make. We have just as good machinery and workmen in this country, but it would seem that the materials are not as good, for American plate-glass takes second rank. The sheets are rolled on hot iron beds, with red-hot rollers, and it is a tidy bit of work to turn out the big panes free from flaws. It is said there are only two localities in America where sand for the manufacture of the best glass can be had, and there are several countries in Europe without a grain.

It isn't so many hundred years ago that the houses of kings and emperors were without a pane of glass, and long enough after the substance was known, glass was made only for the nobility. In building houses even fifty years ago glass was looked upon as one of the big items of expense, and for this reason the sashes were fashioned to receive small panes. Up to 1860 a store window, which had a pane 30x40, was looked upon as a mammoth concern, and the glass was only common at that. Nowadays panes six feet by ten, and half an inch thick, are plenty enough.

Blue, red and other colored glass are simply the plain glass covered with a preparation and submitted to a baking until the color sets fast.

All the hand work on stained glass, such as flowers, birds and borders, is put on with the brush, and the glass is then baked as the other. Just what the preparations are the glass men will not tell you, each manufacturer seeming to have some secret which he does not want another to to discover.

Efforts have been made for a good many years past to render glass malleable in order that it might replace iron, tin, and earthen-ware to a great extent. If this discovery could be made it would be good-bye to the tin-stores. All our pans, basins, kettles, pails, spiders, pie tins and so on, would be of glass, able to stand any heat, and warranted not to break when flung across the house.

Do you know anything about ground glass? Did you ever wonder how the hanging baskets and beautiful scrolls displayed on the glass panels of front doors were placed there? Come with me into the works and we'll post up about it.

In the first place, all the glass received is plain. The first move with ground glass is to frost it. They were a good many years finding out how to do this, and a very simple thing gave them the clew. An English servant-maid found some paint on a window which would not wash off. She took a smooth pebble and some sand and scoured away, and she not only removed the paint, but frosted that portion of the glass. The glass men soon had the correct idea, and here it is before us. It is a tight box about five feet wide and ten feet long, with a depth of about one foot. It is hung on iron rods so that it rocks like a cradle as the steam power is applied to the machinery. The glass is laid flat in the box, covered with wet sand and pebbles, and the shaking begins. The pebbles and sand shaking over the surface of the glass scratch it and produce the frosting. It takes about an hour and a quarter to complete the work, but this homely invention accomplishes as much in that time as a diligent man could in two weeks by hand.

When the glass has been frosted it is ready for the artist. He takes it to his bench and draws a pattern in crayon, thus making black and distinct lines which show through the glass.

When the grinder takes it in hand he sits before a revolving grind stone which has been turned to an edge hardly wider than the blade of a table knife. One grindstone cuts straight lines, another the curves and so on to the number of five or six. The side on which the pattern is drawn is held on the stone, and he must have a true eye and a steady hand. If he deviates from the lines his work is spoiled for the eye can at once detect the carelessness. An adept will grind scrolls, bouquets and the finest work as neatly and rapidly as an artist can draw them.

Where colored glass is ground the pattern is made by simply grinding out the color, which leaves the ornamentation in white and the body of the glass in color. There are only about twenty-five ground-glass factories in the United States, and the pay of an adept workman averages $3 per day the year round. All the grindstones are imported from one quarry in Scotland, there being no stone in any other country so well fitted for the work.

But for the common glass lamp-chimneys what would our immense wealth of kerosene oil amount to? It isn't so long ago that the first chimneys were made, and a manufacturer says that it was a greater invention, and prolific of more hard study, than any piece of complicated machinery.

The first bottles made would sell now for valuable relics. Even down to fifty years ago they were rough and uncouth, with no pretense to symmetry. It was the same with the first tumblers and goblets. People bought them as ornaments and curiosities, and only visitors were allowed to drink from them. Such articles are now real gems of workmanship, and wine-glasses and cut glass bottles are so finely decorated that they cost as much as if the material was of silver.

About fifteen miles from Richmond, Va., is a farm house with some of the first window panes brought over to America. They are 10x12 in size and were brought here in the sash. At that time the use of putty was not known for glazing and the lights are held in place by strips of wood tacked against them. The cost of each light in England was about $3, and not one of them can compare with the pane you can buy to-day for seven or eight cents. They are full of air-bubles and crinkles, and those difficulties bothered glass-makers for many years after those panes were sent over. One of the first palaces erected in Russia was provided with glass which would nowadays scarcely pass muster for a horse barn, and some of the first public buildings in America paid $7 per pane for glass which one could hardly see through and which would not be put to any use at all in these times.—Detroit Free Press.

TEMPERANCE.

JOSEPH COOK VS. TOBACCO.

I am not a fanatic, I hope, on the topic of tobacco, opium or chloral, any more than on that of intoxicating liquors; but as we are now in several commonwealths requiring compulsory scientific instruction of the youth of the land as to the mischiefs of both strong drink and narcotics, and as it is useless so to instruct youth while the leaders of society set an evil example, I excuse myself, and hope you will excuse me for directing public attention to the testimony of these physicians. I sit in the railway coaches and at hotel tables, and hear the example of some foremost preacher in London, or of a foremost preacher in one American city or another, quoted in defense of the abundant and habitual use of tobacco. I suppose that physicians will grant that there are few, perhaps five out of 1,000, who can use tobacco with impunity for a long period of years. But they tell us also, that the most serious dangers are connected with an excessive use of it, and I think we are all ready to admit that with the young the habit is extremely dangerous. Germany, in several of her provinces, is arresting on her streets the children who use cigars. We know what our own schools for military training and for the education of seamen have been doing of late in this matter. We know what strong resolutions have been passed in some of the great religious gatherings, especially in the vast and aggressive Methodist church, which may Heaven bless for its crusade against the filthy weed! There is a rising sentiment on the right side of this topic, and why should we not listen to the voice of Providence when it calls our attention pointedly to a great mischief? There was recently an examination for candidates for admission to a church in Japan, and a prominent preacher there, Mr. Ise, put to a candidate for admission the question whether he used tobacco. The reply being in the affirmative, the preacher said: "There is no definite command in the Bible against the use of it; but all purity becomes a Christian. I shall advise you not to unite with the church until you give up tobacco." After a proper amount of reflection, that Japanese convert came into perfect harmony of opinion with his spiritual adviser. Now, perhaps preachers ought not to go so far as this Japanese convert, who was a mere pagan before he was converted. When a man in the pulpit, however, sets the example of the use of tobacco to the young in his congregation, must we not lament the fact? Is it not time to lament it in public? Is it not time to ask the revered men who set a bad example in this particular in high places in God's church to look at what Providence is doing in this country? A great historic character is likely to be cut off twenty years before the time at which he might otherwise have gone from us, simply because of excess in a habit which, to all who have not learned to like it, is loathsome. One of his staff has had a cancer taken out of his lip, and it originated from a similar cause. The records of the medical profession detail scores of such cases. Emily Faithful says that Americans are very courteous to ladies; but she hints delicately that an American who will take his hat off in an elevator, for fear of being discourteous to a lady, will often, in the same elevator, expectorate or smoke tobacco in her presence. We tolerate in men habits that we would not in dogs.—The Independent.

The Champion, the Chicago organ of the saloons, is sensible in what it says about one feature of what is claimed for high license: High license is a humbug. They say it will drive out the low dives, the dago-shops, the resort for thieves and criminals, etc., all humbug. The owners of all disreputable places are better able to pay a $1,000 license than the honest publican who scantily supports a large family with the products of a small saloon can afford to pay one hundred dollars.

A man with a reputation extending over this continent lies in the Tombs prison, New York, an abject and miserable wreck of humanity. He was committed for intoxication, having been found in the arms of another besotted wretch on the sidewalk of a down-town street. He is a talented relative of Dr. Talmage's old church organist, George W. Morgan, and has squandered three fortunes in rum, although he has not yet attained the prime of middle age. He frequently played the organ in Talmage's church a few years ago, and his fame as a master of that instrument was known throughout musical and church circles. He is the author of the popular poetry which was extensively published a few years ago under the name of Phelim O'Dowd, and it is also said he is the author of several well-known pathetic songs, one of which was the rage about two years ago. The song realized a fortune for its author, and the money soon went for rum. For the last two or three years he has earned the fluid which has robbed him of his respectability and his fortunes by sweeping out the tramps' groggery at Carlisle and West streets, or by begging in the streets.

Governor St. John's travels and speeches have been made throughout the length and nearly the breadth of these United States, but it was left for the State of Illinois to offer him the first personal indignity. The refusal to give him a place to speak in Representative's Hall by the legislature that has burdened all the people, Prohibitionists equally with Democrats and Republicans, with taxes wholly disproportioned to its performance, was speedily followed by personal insults to him and to those who managed his lectures. Last Saturday evening, on the train leaving Naperville, where he had spoken during the day to two or three thousand people, he was assailed with the vilest of profanity, as "the traitor that sold out to beat Blaine," by a drunken mob, and but for the interference of passengers would have been attacked with more than wordy weapons. At Taylorville, another point in the State, already noted for its brutality toward women, the president of the W. C. T. U. which had engaged Governor St. John as a lecturer, in company with her little child, returning late to her home after attending to some duties at the lecture hall, was assailed from a thicket by a fusilade of eggs, a cowardly indignity that ought to put even rowdyism to the blush. When the spirit of persecution descends to such depths, what may not be looked for at the hands of a degraded citizenship? If Taylorville wants to be known in history as the ruffian-town of Illinois, it is bidding high for the distinction. Let the town beware the vengeance that waits not on human courts, nor imagine that its delay means immunity.—Union Signal.

The Churches.

—The Chieago Presbytery report that the additions to their churehes are five per eent. less this year than last.

—The fiftieth anniversary of Oberlin Theologieal Seminary was observed last Friday, June 5th. The exereises of the graduating elass were held in the Seeond ehureh, two Wheaton students being among the number. The elass numbered eleven. C. W. Hiatt, of Wheaton, spoke on "Human Might in the Pulpit;" J. D. Nutting, on "Small Churches and What to do with Them."

—Rev. B. T. Roberts, one of the general superintendents of the Free Methodist churehes, passed through Chieago Friday, on his way to the opening eamp meeting of the season in Minnesota. He called at the Cynosure offiee and hopes to return next week and attend the annual meeting.

—Bro. Robert Shemeld and his eompany of five missionaries sailed from England May 14, as he writes to the Free Methodist. They were embarked for East Afriea via Lisbon and the Cape of Good Hope, eonfident in the power of God to earry them through every diffieulty that might be eneountered. Among the passengers were several other missionaries.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley, the evangelist, has been for a short time at his home in Wheaton, but announees in the Wesleyan his readiness to begin tent meetings among the Eastern conferences of the chureh.

—Bro. O. C. Bailey, who has for some time been assisting his brother in the office of the American, in Washington, is now visiting his father in this eity. He expeets to begin preaehing under the direetion of the Congregational Home Missionary Soeiety of Miehigan. Next Sabbath he preaehes at Dexter.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly, whieh was in session in Cineinnati two weeks, adjourned Monday, June 1st, to meet next year in Minneapolis.

—Mr. Moody, the evangelist, began a series of meetings in Atlanta, Ga., on the Sabbath day. There is already a great revival in the place, and among those engaged in this work are Governor McDaniel, Mayor Hillyer, Hon. E. P. Howell, and Henry Grady of the Atlanta Constitution.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian ehureh in the Southern States, met at Houston, Texas, May 21. About 140 eommissioners were assembled. The Rev. R. H. Raymond, of Alabama, was eleeted moderator.

—The Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Hare, Missionary Bishop of South Dakota, has during his missionary episeopate confirmed one thousand Indians. Several eonverted Sioux have been ordained to the ministry. There are now twenty-five eongregations who contribute liberally to the support of the Gospel among them.

—The Moravian Theologieal Seminary, at Bethlehem, Pa., has reeeived a bequest of $5,000 from the late Samuel Riegel of Bethlehem. Friends in Boston have sent the sum of $717 to the Missionary Board of this denomination to aid in a mission to Northern Alaska. Over $5,000 has been raised for this purpose, and two missionaries with their wives, are to be sent out during the present month.

—Wednesday, May 20th, Rev. Dr. S. M. Newman, until reeently of Ripon, Wiseonsin, was installed pastor of the Congregational ehureh in Washington, D. C. This is one of the largest and strongest ehurehes in the eity, over whieh the Rev. Dr. J. E. Rankin, now of Orange, New Jersey, was until last fall, the pastor.

—The eighty-first annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Soeiety was held May 6th, in Exeter Hall, Lord Shaftsbury presiding. The total ineome for the past year was £253,766, the expenditures for the year amounting to £131,006. The issues for the year had been 4,161,032 of Bibles, Testaments, and portions, bringing the total issues from the eommeneement of the soeiety to 104,196,965. In nine months 955,000 eopies of the Penny Testament were disposed of.

—Prof. Christlieb, of Bonn, in Germany, has established an "evangelist sehool" ealled the "Johanneum." Already nine evangelists have been sent out. These messengers endeavor to reach the unehurehly masses by means of prayer meetings (Bible stunden), addresses, visiting, ete. Their sueeess, so far, has been eneouraging. Both in mind and method, the Bonn professor is not unlike the English Spurgeon.

—The United Presbyterian mission in Sialkot, India, has had a remarkable inerease in a few years. The membership in the churehes has inereased in four years from 397 to 1,671. Last year there were 560 adult baptisms.

—A young Chinaman who, in this country, has saved $15,000 in the laundry business, has applied for admission to Cornell University. He says he has been eonverted to Christianity and intends to go as a missionary to China.

—A large and prosperous mission sehool has lately been established at Vietoria, British Columbia, for the benefit of Chinese; and we saw it stated on what may be regarded as good authority, that a Christian Chinamen in Tahiti, who earns $25 per month, devotes $20, or four-fifts of the whole, to the purehase and distribution of traets and leaflets among his countrymen in California.

—The eagerness of the Japanese for the Seriptures the past year, writes Dr. Nathan Brown, from Yokohama, has been astonishing. Four thousand Gospels have been disposed of and over 10,000 smaller portions and traets. Dr. Brown's prineipal colporteur has sold and distributed over 12,000 books and traets with his own hands. He is, besides, an exhorter, and never goes among the people without giving them an explanation of his work, and what is the objeet of selling the books. All Japanese Christians, Rev. E. H. Jones writes, own Bibles and read them, always turning to the passages referred to by the preaeher in his sermon—not a bad habit for Christians of every race.

—The United Presbyterian church of North Ameriea eonsists of nine synods and sixty presbyteries, 738 ministers, 868 eongregations, 124 mission stations, 3,413 ruling elders, 58 lieentiates, 88,871 members, 8,845 Sabbath-school teachers, and 826 schools with their 78,085 seholars. The chureh last year paid $477,098 for the salaries of its ministers, or an average of $925 to each pastor; for eongregational purposes, $264,977; to its benevolent boards, sueh as home and foreign missions, $133,928; or a total of$955,248, an average of $11.58 per member. During the past year no less than 9,591 new members have been reeeived into the ehureh, either on eertifieate or profession of their faith.

—The last report of the MeAll mission shows that the total number of mission stations now open is ninety-four, of whieh thirty-four are in Paris and its environs, and sixty in Marseilles and other provineial towns. The average attendanee at the meetings at these various stations is about seventy-five. The total expenditure the past year was something upward of sixty thousand dollars.

—There was but one graduate at the San Franeiseo Presbyterian Theologieal Seminary this spring, and he was ehosen to go on the foreign mission field.

—The International Missionary Union, embraeing the returned foreign missionaries, in the United States and Canada, of all denominations, will hold its meeting again at Wesley Park, Niagara Falls. The sessions are to commenee July 28th.

—An eminent elergyman of Edinburg, writing to a friend in this country, says: "You eannot eonceive the sensation of relief and the impulse to all good works given by the prospeet of peace. The United Presbyterian Synod felt the lifting of the elouds to be an unspeakable deliverance. Now the other assemblies meet under the same eheering influenee. We rejoiee so mueh because the victory seems to have been gained by moral influenees, and the tribute to the power of Christianity in the world to be all the greater. Nor are we forgetful of the sympathy of what was best in America throughout the crisis."

—At the Western Unitarian Conference held lately in St. Louis Rev. Robert Laird Collier said: "The New Creed of the Congregationalists was just sueh a ereed as Mr. Channing or Henry Ware would have written. Then eame Parkerism, and now he was afraid the time would eome when some of the brethren would pronounce for Ingersoll. If they would only stop short of Ingersoll, he believed he could shake hands all around."

—Statisties for 1884 are said to prove that there are 76,760 evangelieal preaehers in the United States, 126,109 eongregations, and 10,561,648 eommunieants. Of miscellaneous seets there are 38,791 preachers, 10,763 eongregations, and 7,169,655 adherents. If eaeh member of an evangelieal ehureh represents another who is a member of the eongregation, the evangelical population amounts to 21,123,296. On the other hand the Romanists claim 6,905 priests, 7,663 congregations, and 6,800,000 souls, constituting the entire population adhering to Rome. Yet this minority aspires to rule the eountry.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Believer's Meeting for Bible Study will hold its ninth session at Niagara, Ontario, July 23–30. The programme of study will inelude among other topies one daily eoneerning the Holy Spirit, one daily eoneerning the Lord Jesus, besides the eonsideration of sueh themes as Inspiration, the Use of the Old Testament, Holiness, Theories of Annihilation and Restoration, the Dispensations, Power of Serviee, Foreign Missions and the Seeond Coming of our Lord.

There is promise of the attendanee of a large number of eminent teaehers of the Word. In addition to names familiar to attendants of other years, some unable to be present hitherto, expeet to come and assist in various ways. A number of brethren from Great Britain are also expected.

Special request is made for earnest prayer in behalf of the eonference, that it may give a plain and positive testimony touehing the great truths of the Bible; and lead Believers to a deeper knowledge of Christ, to more loving, self-denying service, to great and unfaltering faith in the word of God and to joyful hope of the coming glory.

Copies of the annual eireular will be sent to any address and to all persons desirous to attend, on applieation to the seeretary, W. J. Erdman, Jamestown, N. Y.

British Methodists and the Suffrage.—A writer in the Daily News, London, makes an important statement in regard to the Methodists of Great Britain, to whom the new suffrage law gives a vote. In his artiele it is pointed out that there are to-day in Great Britian some 14,000 Methodist churehes, the members and attendants being numbered by millions, the majority of whom are in the rural distriets, and are Liberals almost to a man. At the eoming election the larger portion of these will vote for the first time. The writer proeeeds: "It is not diffieult to see whieh side the new voters will take in the settlement of the great questions of the near future. Take that of Disestablishment. It will be a hard task to attempt to persuade rural Methodists that if the Establishment is not maintained, the light of Christianity will be put out in the villages, and gross darkness eover the people. They will point to their 14,000 voluntary churehes, with what they esteem a more vigorous, if not purer flame. * * * The experienee of years has, moreover, alienated the sympathy their fathers perhaps onee felt for the Establishment. The supereilious and eontumelious treatment to whieh they have been subjected, and of whieh the dweller in towns knows but little, the petty perseeutions, the intolerant bigotry which has hindered the seeuring of sites for and the ereetion of ehapels, whieh has plaeed them at a social disadvantage and often deprived of trade and employment, whieh has too often been manifested in the presenee of death and at the side of the grave, these things will now bear fruit. They have been patiently borne, for the sufferers have been members of a religious, and not of a politieal body, and have in the past been without the weapon of the vote."

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the Tract Fund for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Prcs. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	8
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	8

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—The Odd Fellows of Pennsylvania claim a membership in the State of 81,317, a net increase over last year of 813. The loss of the year was pretty heavy: By death, 954; withdrawn by card, 677; members suspended, 4,533; members expelled, 50; total, 6,214—nearly one to every thirteen members.

—The Missouri Knights Templar Triennial committee was organized in 1884, to make suitable arrangements for the twenty-third triennial conclave of the Grand Encampment of the United States, to be held at St. Louis, commencing the third Tuesday in September, 1886.

—George Canning Longley lately died in Prescott, Ont. He bore the following Masonic degrees: Thirty-third, ninety-sixth, and ninetieth, and was at the time of his death the Grand Master General of the Royal and Oriental rites of Freemasonry, as well as Grand Commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish rite, and many others for Canada and New Foundland. It is said that he had more degrees and was an honorary member in more grand bodies than any other one man in the world. But what did all his degrees and titles and lodge flummery amount to in the hour of death?

—The order of Chosen Friends was organized in Indianapolis in May, 1879, as a benefit insurance society for white persons. Several Masons of high degree in Chicago, George Sawin, Gil W. Barnard, L. L. Bond, Amos Pettibone, B. E. Hand, and others, have organized a "council" of this order especially for Masons. The sixth anniversary of the order was held May 29 in this city.

—The Modern Woodmen of America is a new secret order with a few camps in Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado. July 4th it will celebrate at Moline, Ill., with orations, etc. A member writes this concerning its character: "The Woodmen keep out of Chicago for reasons that are satisfactory to the head camp and the fraternity. The Woodmen is very popular wherever introduced, is original in its ritualistic work, emblems, street costume, and regalia, and its members are determined that it shall take rank with the other honored (!) and meritorious (?) fraternities of the West." Its membership is about 100 working, camps. Its next general meeting will be at Sterling, Ill.

—The Royal Templars of Temperance is a secret temperance society with an insurance attachment. It was founded at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1877, and had about the beginning of 1885 a membership in the United States and Canada of 25,000.

—The Masons of the District of Columbia some time since set about establishing an asylum and industrial school for the orphan children of Master Masons of the United States, to be known as the Garfield Memorial Institute. They have sent out circulars to the lodges of the country describing the plan and asking each Mason to give $1. The treasurer of the fund was Hon. Geo. B. Loring, Commissioner of Agriculture, whose shortcomings and mismanagement are now being aired by his successor.

—At the last general meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in this city, after taking breakfast at the Palmer House, the delegates were taken in carriages to the Catholic cathedral of the Holy Name to mass.

—A local paper in Michigan says: "A woman at Bay City disguised herself as a man and clerked in a store for a year, and then applied for membership in the Knights of Pythias and was initiated. During the work of the third degree her sex was discovered. It seems that in the third degree they have an India-rubber rat and a celluloid snake, which run by clockwork inside, and which are very natural indeed. The idea is to let them run at the candidate to see if he will flinch. When the snake ran at the girl she kept her nerve all right, but when the rat tried to run up her trouser's leg she grabbed her imaginary skirts in both hands and jumped onto a refrigerator standing near, which is used in the work of the fourth degree, and screamed bloody murder. The girl is a member of the order, however, and there is no help for it. This affair may open the eyes of members of secret societies and cause them to investigate. It is probable that quite a number of the Odd-fellows, Masons, Knights of Pythias, etc., are women and no one will ever know it."

—The Supreme Lodge A. O. U. W. ("Ancient Order of United Workmen") elected Hon. John A. Brooks, of Illinois, Supreme Master Workman, and endorsed the action of the Loyal Grand Lodge of Iowa on the litigation matter. The beneficiary certificates of the order in force number 148,122; the deaths last year were 1,074, and the amount paid for death-losses aggregated $11,420,294.

—The Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum met in Buffalo last week. This is Rev. A. E. Kittridge's secret society. The financial report shows 62,549 full, and 12,062 half-rate members, reported on January 1 to the insurance commissioners, and that insurance amounting to $15,954,000 is at present carried by the members.

—A lodge of the Order of the Golden Chain installed its officers last week in this city.

SOMETHING NEW AND PRACTICAL.

Having seen the Ross & Co. Novelty Rug Machine work, we can cheerfully say a beautiful rug can be made with yarn or rags in a day that would require weeks to make by hook. By the use of this machine the rug does not need clipping, as the loops are all equal length. A child ten years old can operate the machine. The machine is very simple and yet wonderful when you notice the rapidity and precision of the work. Many useful things can also be made, such as mittens, hoods and lap-robes; so that it becomes a source of revenue instead of an expense. They also manufacture a full line of stamped patterns on burlap, and have a large stock of carpet yarn to fill them with. For the convenience of their patrons they have arranged by price list the proper amounts of yarn in suitable colors and shades to fill each pattern. We know the parties to be honorable and responsible.

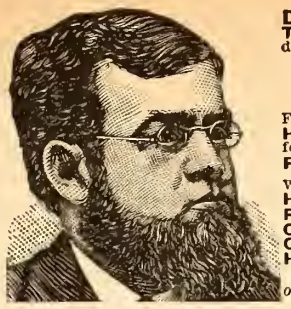
If any one of our subscribers desires to obtain a copy free of one of the most attractive of the magazines for children and young people, simply send a postal card to D. LOTHROP & Co., Boston, Mass., with the following request: "Please send me a copy of The Pansy, mentioned in the Cynosure." Be sure to give your full name and address.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by



Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen. $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees. in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - NewYork.

N. B.--Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY; OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"

and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

HOME AND HEALTH.

THE DRESS OF BABIES.

To every mother, and especially to every young mother, this subject is one of great interest and of vital importance. Her own comfort, not less than that of her infant, depends largely upon the manner in which the baby is dressed. Comfort and health are interchangeable words in this case. Many a baby is supposed to be crying from colic when the real cause of its uneasiness is the tightness of its wrappings, their weight or their unsuitableness. If the mother will put herself in the child's place and reason from her own experience, she will not be apt to err very much in dressing her infant. Warmth is one of the requisits of health to babies, as we all know. Frequently, however, the baby, from being kept in too high a temperature or while nursing, gets into a perspiration; if flannel is worn next to the skin, there will naturally be a prickling sensation, wherever the flannel and skin are in contact. To guard against this, the flannel band around the abdomen should be lined with silk or soft muslin, and the shirt worn next the body should be of linen cambric. Flannel that has not been thoroughly and carefully washed. or from which the soap used in cleansing it has not been thoroughly rinsed, should never be allowed to come in contact with the surface of a baby's body. Many a mother who cannot endure the touch of unwashed flannel—as who can?—prides herself on the care with which she keeps the new baby-flannel from sceming soiled, and looking as if it needed to go into the wash. A little reflection will convince her that until flannel is washed, it should never touch the baby's skin.

Tightness of clothing is another frequent source of uneasiness and bad humor in babies. A great many mothers think the baby's bands must be tightly pinned to keep the clothes in place and support the walls of the chest and abdomen, when, in fact, the young of human kind need bandaging no more than kittens, puppies, or pigs. A gentle, yet vigorous rubbing of the entire body of the child after its morning bath and when its night-wrap is put on, will give strength and elasticity to its muscle, of both of which it is robbed by compression. If the clothing is suspended from the shoulders, as it should be, the bands can be buttoned loosely, so as to give free play to every part of the body. Babies thus dressed sit alone and walk much earlier than when, in effect, kept in straight jackets for the first six months of their lives. The weight of an infant's clothing often makes it uneasy and fretful. It is as natural for a child to keep its feet and legs in constant motion as its hands and arms. If, therefore, the weight of two or three yards of flannel, muslin, and cambric hang about a baby's feet and legs, how is it possible for freedom of motion to be enjoyed? The fashion of making the dresses and skirts of an infant a yard, or a yard and a half in length, is as injurious as it is senseless and extravagant. The sole use of long clothes for babies is to keep their little feet warm, but when these are pinned up tightly in a foot blanket, and two or three pounds weight of dry-goods superadded, no wonder the circulation in the lower extremities is impeded and the little things are so long in learning to walk. Three-quarters of a yard, and some say half a yard, is quite long enough for baby skirts, and at four and five months old long clothes should be laid entirely aside and short clothes worn. Nobody thinks now of putting a baby into low-necked and short-sleeved dresses, except in the very warmest weather. Fashion and sound sense alike dictate covering these sensitive parts of the body.

Uneasiness is frequently produced in very young children by putting large napkins on them, so that the lower limbs are kept too wide apart. Children are oftener made bow-legged in this way than by walking too soon. Napkins of of old, soft linen are better than anything else for baby wear during the first month or two. All india rubber, oil silk or oilcloth about the person of a baby should be as religiously abjured as soothing syrups. They act like poultices: if the mother could not endure them, much less can the baby.

No pins save safety pins should be used in the fastenings of a baby's clothing. Tapes and buttons alone should be employed in fastening the bands, and safety pins in keeping the napkins and the stockings in place. The latter are often tied on so tightly as to impede the circulation and give great uneasiness to the child. An elastic band sewed to one side of the stocking, and fastened with a pin to the flannel band around the waist, will keep both band and stockings in place.

This subject was brought, not long since, before a ladies' Physiological Society, numbering among its members two or three practicing physicians, and the conclusions reached in the discussion are given above.—N. Y. Tribune.

HEADACHE.—Dr. Halcy says that, as a rule, a dull, heavy headache, situated over the brows and accompanied by languor, chilliness, and a feeling of general discomfort, with a distaste for food, which sometimes approaches to nausea, can be completly removed in about ten minutes, by two grain doses of iodine of potassium dissolved in a half wine glass ful of water, this being sipped so the whole quantity may be consumed in about ten minutes.

For a home-made disinfectant, dissolve a bushel of salt in a barrel of water, and with the salt water slack a barrel of lime, which should be wet enough to form a kind of paste. For the purpose of a disinfectant, this home-made chloride of lime is nearly as good as that purchased at the shop. Use it freely about sinks, cellars, gutters and out-houses and in this way prevent sickness, suffering and expense.

TO REMOVE INK FROM WOOD.—Dilute half a teaspoonful of oil of vitriol with a larger spoonful of water and apply it to the ink spot with a feather. Let it lie for a few minutes and rub it off quickly, then repeat if not all removed.

The ventilation of cellars is a subject of great importance, inasmuch as the foul gases which arise from the decaying vegetable matter therein, and are allowed to pass to the rooms above, are very injurious to occupants. To provide against this, and to secure proper ventilation, a pipe should be constructed between the cellar and the chimney, the upward draft of which will remove all impure air.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

As an Appetizer.

DR. MORRIS GIBBS, Howard City, Mich., says: "I am greatly pleased with it as a tonic; it is an agreeable and a good appetizer."

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... ... ... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 2 1-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.
Furnished in any quantities at

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence..—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation.—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, lĕrn'ĕd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00. W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.
For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.
In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."
The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated," the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

IN BRIEF

The new high-license liquor law in Ohio will yield nearly $2,000,000 to the State in its first year. It is thought that there will be a falling off in this revenue, as many of the groggeries cannot stand the tax, and thousands of small dealers will be driven out of the business.

B. S. Snider, who served in a New York regiment during the war, and has drawn a pension ever since, walked into the pension office the other day and requested Commissioner Black to stop his pension of $72 a month as he believed he was now perfectly sound in mind and body, and considered it was robbing the government to longer accept money paid for disability.

Hon. John L. Hayes, in the Wool Manufacturers' Bulletin, brings out the interesting fact that Great Britain, though having only 35,000,000 of people, while the United States has 55,000,000, is and has been for ten years, a larger importer of woolen goods of foreign manufacture than the United States has been. In the ten years from 1875 to 1884, inclusive, Great Britain imported $370,952,115 worth of woolen goods of foreign manufacture. This excess is not due to a larger consumption of woolen goods by Great Britain, for the annual consumption per capita in Great Britain of clean wool, whether in the form of wool or fabrics, is three and two thirds pounds, against an annual consumption of four and one-third pounds per head in the United States.

About a quarter of a mile from the Seaside House and about sixteen miles from Astoria, Oregon, there is a deposit of clam shells which is probably the largest in the United States. The shells cover an area of over four acres, and are in places ten feet in depth. Over one thousand loads have been hauled away to make roads, with scarcely a perceptible diminution of the immense deposit. From time to time relics of the old clam-eating tribes that made that place their headquarters are found. A party recently found a clam opener. It was made from a whale's tooth, about eight inches long and ground sharp at the end. There are some sixteen feet of soil on top of these clam beds, on which grow fir trees, some of them 400 years old.

Vast walls of floating ice, rising nearly a thousand feet out of the sea, and seeming in size like large islands, are reported as stretching away far beyond the limits of vision in that part of the Atlantic six hundred miles due east of Cape Cod. Old sea captains say they never saw the like before. Captain Lord, of the steamship Critic from Lieth, Scotland, was detained over two days by these great masses of icebergs, unable to get through or around them. They stretched out for a hundred miles or more in a direction from northwest to southeast.

Margaret Brooks was convicted in Philadelphia of being a common scold and was sentenced to four months' imprisonment. Her 18-year-old daughter jumped to her feet and struck an aged lady witness in the face with her fist. Mother and daughter then became intensely excited, crying, screaming and striking right and left. The mother having been removed to the prison van, the judge sentenced the daughter to four months' imprisonment also, for contempt of court. At this announcement the girl again became frantic, screaming and fighting like a tiger. Being a robust young woman, it took two of the strongest officers to remove her to prison.

Referring to the count of money in the U S. Treasury vaults, a dispatch says: There are $9,000,000 silver in bags, each containing $1,000, weighing fifty-nine pounds three ounces. So $100,000 in silver would pull down the balance at almost three tons, and $1,000,000 would be nearly 60,000 pounds. The entire amount of coined silver now in the treasury vaults, it is estimated, will weigh 543,700 pounds. A pound of gold coin is worth $240, and $280,000 of it weighs a ton. There are nearly twelve tons of gold fives, tens, and twenties in the nation's strong-box. Of paper money, too, there is an enormous amount. One hundred and fifty millions of dollars are in five, two and one dollar bills. About seven of these bills measure a yard in length, so that the whole would make a green-back belt that would reach around the world.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Socretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full accounnt of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Docshrg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and oth[illegible] This is the latest, most accurate and comp[illegible]osition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Ma[illegible]Over one hundred illustrations—several [illegible]m full page—give a pictorial representati[illegible]the lodge-room, chapter and principal cerem[illegible]of the degrees, with the dress of candidate, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 page[illegible] in cloth, $1.00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each, per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Baln. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lehheus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the InITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the ChrisTIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DeGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents.

Lodgeship Judged by Its Own Utterances Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rchekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the RePUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that sec[illegible] societies interferc with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEALTH.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland on Thursday appointed Gen. W. S. Rosecrans of California to be Register of the Treasury, vice Blanch K. Bruce, the colored orator, resigned.

A. G. Menocal, civil engineer United States Army, has reported to Secretary Whitney the arrival at New York of himself and party, who have been surveying the route for an inter-oceanic canal across Nicaragua.

Lieut. C. C. Foulke sends to the Navy Department an account of the capture of the American schooner Sherman at Phyong Yang, Corea, in 1866. When the craft appeared in the river native officials started out in small boats, and the Sherman's crew believing that hostilities were threatened, fired shots in the air, the Coreans retreating. A few days later combustible materials were ignited and floated down the river, setting fire to the Sherman. Many of the crew jumped overboard and were drowned; the remainder were captured and beheaded.

A movement is on foot to secure the removal of Major J. W. Powell, the head of the Geological Survey. The name of Prof. Shaler of Harvard was mentioned for the place but he declines, positively, at the same time highly eulogizing Major Powell. Prof. Pumpelly, who is a member of the bureau, is now most prominently mentioned. Ten years ago the Chinese government sent over to this country for a man to conduct a geological survey and Pumpelly was the man who was sent.

COUNTRY.

The closing ceremonies of the New Orleans exposition took place June 1, and the exhibitors who do not propose to remain next season immediately began packing their treasures.

The Secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture states that of the 1,613,298 acres of winter wheat sown 40 per cent has been plowed up, and the ground seeded to other crops, and that the product of the State will not exceed 12,000,000 bushels.

The New York State Board of Health informs the Illinois Board that a car-load of hogs, shipped from Chicago to Fredonia, N. Y., and sold in small lots to farmers, have died of what is alleged to be cholera, and that they communicated the discase to other animals.

A tornado accompanied by rain and thunder passed over Paris, Ill., Thursday evening, wrecking the Metropolitan block and Presbyterian church, together with other smaller structures. A hail-storm in the Danville district wrecked window glass and damaged crops.

Tuesday afternoon several buildings at Monmouth, Ill., were unroofed by the wind and stocks of goods were damaged by water. The roof of the woolen-mill was crushed in by the falling smokestack and a barn was burned by lightning.

All window-glass factories west of the Alleghenies will be closed down within two weeks, and when work is resumed in the fall wages will be reduced 25 per cent.

Frank McGuire, made insane through losses in the failure of the Erie County Savings Bank, mortally shot his sister at Erie, Pa., Monday morning. Others are reported insanc from the same cause.

Mrs. James W. Winn, a widow, with three of her children and Mrs. Tony Stefano, wife of an Italian musician, were drowned about twenty-five miles below Wilmington, N. C. The children were wading in the water, and, getting beyond their depth, the women went to their rescue, when all were drowned.

R. M. Reynolds, ex-First Auditor of the U. S. Treasury, jumped over the railing of an upper story in the Southern Hotel at St. Louis, Tuesday morning, and falling upon the marble floor of the rotunda was instantly killed.

At Upper Cross Roads, Md., Sunday afternoon, lightning killed Mrs. Elcnore Caldwell, and her seven-months old babe which she was nursing at the time.

Emory Clark, armed with two pistols, forced his way into a church at Dalton, Ga., Tuesday night, and elbowing his way through the assemblage, mortally shot Sam Watkins, and then fired five shots at random. Watkins' offense was that he had taken Clark's girl out riding.

In the severe storm of Tuesday last four persons were killed by lightning in Chicago, and by the capsizing of a sail boat in the harbor three men were drowned.

The Chicago city council last week declared the official count of the municipal election, which should have been done a year ago. Carter Harison was re-elected Mayor by a plurality of 375 votes. The Republicans have two and the Democrats two of the other officers elected.

The Illinois Central fruit trains have lately brought into Chicago at different times 18, 20, 40, and 43 cars laden with strawberrics. Centralia is the chief shipping point in Illinois.

At Owatonna, Minn., Sunday morning a terriffic hail and wind storm damaged corn and small fruits and stripped all trees of foliage; also breaking many windows. The hail-stones were as large as hens' eggs.

After the doctors had visited General Grant Sunday afternoon they said that, as compared with a week before, there was no appreciable increasc of the swelling on the throat and no apparent increase of the cancerous trouble in the throat.

Samuel Bowman, of Circleville, Ohio, with his family and visitors, was poisoned Monday by unknown persons. Mrs. B. died and her husband is not expected to recover.

The so-called charges against Auditor Brown, in Iowa, were brought to the attention of the grand jury of Polk county at Des Moines. It spent three days in investigating the charges against the auditor and his deputy, and declined to return any indictment. Gov. Sherman and his ring are now worsted.

Another indictment (for grand larceny) has been found against Ferdinand Ward, in New York. It is alleged that just before the failure of the Marine Bank he carricd off a bagful of its securities.

The Bartholdi statue will be lighted at night by electric lamps at the base, the rays being cast upward by means of strong reflectors. From the uplifted torch there will be thrown a vertical beam of light, reaching the lower cloud stratum, from which it will be reflected far out to sea. The idea of rays streaming from the diadem has been abandoned.

Wednesday evening an attempt was made by three masked men to assassinate Dr. Underwood and G. H. Riteneur near Eldora, Iowa. These gentlemen were prominent in the prosecution of the Rainsberger brothers for a murder committed last November, and Thursday two brothers of the alleged murderers were arrested for the attempted assassination. Early Friday morning the two were taken from the Eldora jail by a mob and riddled with bullets.

FOREIGN.

Dispatches from Bombay, June 2d, stated that a disastrous earthquake had taken place in Cashmere, a country in India. The shocks were very severe at Serinagur, the capital of the country, beginning on Sunday and continuing at intervals of ten minutes for days. The barracks in which several hundred soldiers were quartered, were completely destroyed, collapsing so suddenly that half of the men were imprisoned in the debris and fifty are known to have been killed, while a hundred were injured. A portion of the city was demolished, while of the remaining buildings very few escaped damage, many having large rents made in them. The people became panic-stricken and fled from the city, taking refuge in booths and tents in the open fields The Mohammedan mosque in the little town of Saguir, twenty miles north of Serinagur, was demolished and 200 persons were killed.

Thus far this season over fifty persons have committed suicide over gambling losses at Monte Carlo.

The law prohibiting manual labor on Sunday goes into effect in Vienna on the 11th inst.

The Princess of Wales is reported to be endeavoring to secure a meeting between the Prince of Wales and the Czar of Russia with the view of establishing a permanent peace between England and Russia.

Prussia has presented a scheme in the Bundesrath for a canal from the North Sea to the Baltic to cost 156,000,000 of marks, Prussia to pay 50,000,000 and the remainder of Germany 106,000,000.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	87¾	@89
No. 3	78	@79
Winter No 2		@95
Corn—No. 2	45¾	46
Oats—No. 2		33½
Rye—No. 2		66
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		10 25
Butter, medium to best	10	@15½
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		11
Potatoes per bus	35	45
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 55
Flax	1 30	1 38
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 15	@5 65
Common to good	2 40	@5 00
Hogs	3 40	@4 25
Sheep	2 50	@4 75

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	92	@1 00
Spring		94
Corn	51	@67
Oats	40	@46
Mess Pork		12 00
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 40
Hogs	3 70	@4 85
Sheep	2 00	@3 00

WHETHER CHOLERA

Is coming or not every householder should know that cleanliness and disinfection are the greatest preventives. The most powerful and surest factor for this purpose is a perfect cleansing, bleaching and purifying soap, making clothes beautifully white and sweet. It should be exclusively used in all departments of a household. DREYDOPPEL'S SOAP is sold in full pound cakes only by all wholesale grocers and firstclass retailers.

DREYDOPPEL'S BORAX SOAP,

SKIN DISEASES,

Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Sores, Pimples, and all Itching Skin Eruptions, are surely cured and prevented by the exclusive use of BEESON'S AROMATIC ALUM SULPHUR SOAP, an exquisite beautifier of the complexion and toilet requisite. 25 cents, by druggists or sent by mail.

Address WM. DREYDOPPEL, manufacturer, 208 North Front Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dreydoppel's Disinfecting Powder, 15 cts. a large box.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.

WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $10 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

LOOK AT THE YELLOW TAG AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIBES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional, will be forwarded by the return of mail for $1.10 sent to REV CHINIQUY, St. Anne, Kankakee, Co., Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Patented Dec. 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufact'rs of stamped Rug Patterns & dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

WANTED. Educated Men to sell at County Normals this summer a new and inexpensive reference book for teachers and students. Endorsed by eminent educators. Specimen copy with terms to agents $1.25. Address,
AUTHOR "COMMON SCHOOL COMPENDIUM,"
602 Ninth St., Des Moines, Iowa.

How To Build MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES.

Just published. A large book, giving plans, views, descriptions and reliable costs of 40 modern houses, $400 up to $6,500, for all climates. So complete a book of this kind usually costs $5. OUR PRICE ONLY 50 cts., sent post-paid. Address,
BUILDING ASSOCIATION,
24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!
ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH. HAY-FEVER. CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. MME. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 39. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1885. WHOLE No. 790.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Rev. Dr. Milligan..... 8
United Presbyterian General Assembly..... 8
Knox County Court-house, Ill..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D. 1
A Neglected Field..... 2
The Church Walking with the World..... 2
Sixty Years Ago..... 2
SELECTED:
The Voice of the People (Poetry)..... 3
Associated Evil-doing.... 3
A Converted Priest to the American Cardinal..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XXIII.—Continued..... 4
Pith and Point..... 6
OBITUARY..... 6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Ohio Report..... 7
Ohio Call..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Self, the Foundation of Secretism; Slandering Judge Hammond; A Missouri Editor's Trials 6
REFORM NEWS:
Lecturing in Canada; From the Minnesota Agent; From the Kansas Agent; From the Illinois Agent..... 5
The Commencement Season 9
Washington Letter..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERATURE..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
HOME HINTS..... 14
FARM AND GARDEN..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

REV. A. M. MILLIGAN, D. D.

Nineteen years ago (May 13, 1866) Dr. Milligan preached his first sermon as pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian church, Pittsburg. His text was: "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." His last sermon was preached in his brother's church in New York city, from the text: "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Taken more than a year ago with Addison's disease of the kidneys, he went to California last fall in the hope of recovery. As days passed by and strength failed, he began to long for home that he might breathe his last among children and friends. Together with his wife, who had faithfully and tenderly attended him, and Rev. N. M. Johnston, of Oakland, an old and valued friend, he left the Pacific coast. In Wyoming, some twelve hours west of Cheyenne, death brought him a final release from suffering and entrance on glory. To-day his body is brought back to this city (Pittsburg) which he loved so well and where he labored so long, and tears are in the eyes of many beside his relatives and friends. This life, now ended, was in many respects a remarkable one and deserves more than a passing notice.

He was born in Vermont, of Scotch parents and united in his character the distinguishing excellencies of the Scottish and New England people. A member of the Reformed Presbyterian church, he inherited the reverence for the Word of God, the love of civil and religious liberty, and the hatred of all injustice which was ingrained into the men who were harried by the dragoons of Claverhouse. A soul thus in accord with the Divine will was armed and sustained by a mind of unusual acuteness and power and a physical constitution of great tenacity and vigor. Thus equipped by nature, he did not neglect that culture, for lack of which the greatest natural gifts so often perish or are wasted on trivial pursuits.

He began his studies with his father, Rev. James Milligan, himself an excellent scholar, and afterward pursued them in Craftsbury Academy, Vermont His father removing to Western Pennsylvania, he took his college course in Western University, and pursued his theological studies in the Seminary of his church at Allegheny City. He was licensed to preach in 1847, and in 1848 was ordained and installed as his father's successor in the congregation at New Alexandria.

He remained in this place until 1852 or 1853 when he removed to Philadelphia, where he preached to the Third congregation until 1854, when he was asked to return to the New Alexandria congregation, with which had now been united those of Clarksburg and Greensburg. Here he continued his work until, 1866 he accepted the call to the Pittsburg congregation of which we have already spoken. During all these years he was a most faithful and efficient pastor, earing for the flock over which the Holy Ghost made him minister with the greatest tenderness and love. There have been, and will be, wet eyes and sorrowful hearts in all these congregations now that the end of this loving, useful life has come.

REV. A. M. MILLIGAN, D. D.

But although so faithful in all the departments of ministerial labor, he never made the mistake of isolating himself from the practical affairs of men. Against the system of American slavery, then in the height of its power, and holding in a terrified silence legislatures, pulpits, papers, and the platform, his whole nature rose in indignant protest and, without conferring with flesh and blood as to consequences to reputation, property or life, he thundered against that iniquity like an inspired prophet. He was ordained as we have seen in 1848. This was the time of the Dred Scott decision, and of that covenant with death and league with hell, known as the Missouri Compromise. Against these particular symptoms of the nation's disease, along with their source, he adopted in fact, if not in words, the platform of Garrison: "On this subject I do not wish to speak or write with moderation. I will be as harsh as the truth, as uncompromising as justice. I will not retreat a single inch, and I will be heard."

When John Brown made his raid into Virginia many even of those who were hostile to slavery hesitated to justify him. Not so Dr. Milligan. He boldly approved his course, named one of his sons Oswatomie Brown, wrote a letter of sympathy to him while caged in that Charleston jail and gladly shared the insane hatred and contempt of a nation which was then partner with slave drivers as it now is with dram shops. He followed truth, about to be crucified, "without the gate bearing its reproach."

Rotten eggs were thrown at him; a cartoon entitled: "The Nigger Lover," represented him as kissing a negro woman; at Greensburg twice and at Blairsville and Elder's Ridge once, he was burned in effigy; at St. Louis, a mob of a thousand men surrounded the church in which he was preaching, howling and demanding that he leave the city. None of these things moved him, but he held on his course as the one of whom Wordsworth says:

"My soul was like a star and dwelt apart."

He denounced oppression and oppressors. He opened his mouth for the dumb; became the champion of the downtrodden, ignorant and despised; and dinned in the ears of a sleeping church and an angry world God's denunciation of that giant inquity; nor did he lose heart or zeal until it was pushed into the pit whence it came.

So, also, when the question respecting secret societies came before him for a judgment his only inquiry was, what is the truth? and when he saw that these organizations, under pretence of goodfellowship and charity were simply conspiracies against society, the state and the church of God, he took arms against them as against slavery before. Those who heard him in Library Hall a few years ago, on Masonic oaths will not soon forget the clearness and power with which he showed the blasphemy of calling on a holy God to witness to such obligations as are assumed by the members of that and similar organizations.

But of what use to particularize, when any chance picked incident of his whole career illustrates this same predominant characteristic. As was well said by Dr. McAllister at his funeral: "He never counted sides, but only desired to know where right lay; and that determined, took his position by it. From which position he never suffered the clamors or howlings of men to cause him to withdraw by so much as a hair's breadth for so long as an instant of time."

He was favored above many. His father, his brothers and sons all are, or were, preachers of the Gospel. In his church he was universally beloved, and he saw the work of God prosper in his hands. In the fall of American slavery he witnessed that for which many great and true-hearted men longed, but without the sight of which they died. In his last illness, though far from home, he was in the midst of friends and each moment of his lessening days was brightened by the loving cares of his faithful wife. And on the other side he is not a stranger but greeted by children and the Master whom he loved so well, receives a crown laid up, enters a mansion prepared, and joins a great company of apostles, martyrs and saints.

The funeral services were held in his own church which was crowded with relatives and friends. Rev. Prof. D. McAllister, D. D., Rev. Mr. Burchard, Rev. Dr. Cooper, Rev. Dr. George, Rev. Pollock Johnson, Rev. Prof. D. B. Willson, Rev. Dr. Sproull, and Rev. N. M. Johnston of Oakland, Cal., took part in the services, Dr. McAllister conducting them with rare good taste and judgment. There were many beautiful floral offerings, and the speakers seemed each to feel how far short of his worth were the words they spoke. He sleeps in Bellevue cemetery waiting the resurrection morning, when glorified and immortal he shall rise to meet the Lord.

In our human blindness we are accustomed to speak of such men as cut off in the midst of their usefulness. How contrary to fact! When the sun sinks in the West after a long day of service, and leaves the heavens full of trailing splendors we never think of him as dead, but recognize the fact that he is enlightening other lands, bringing gladness to the young, hope to the sick, painting the flowers and ripening the corn on millions of fertile fields. Is it not so with those whom we call our dead? Are not they who so loved to serve here, already entered on wider fields of usefulness? Freed from hindrances and enabled to touch more gently, more firmly, more efficiently the hearts of men? Ought we not to see a deeper meaning in the words of our blessed Lord: "He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die?" Sorrow we must. This is appointed us, but we can hope in the midst of our sorrows and find the clouds of grief always glowing with rainbows which seal the covenant of God.

There is seldom a death which more forcefully suggests such thoughts than that of Dr. Milligan. He was a rare man. In stature more than six feet tall, well built and weighing over two hundred pounds, though never showing flesh; a strong and massive head, a flashing eye, a gentle, loving face, he was in appearance calculated to attract instant attention. He was a good student, and his mind, brushing aside the cobwebs which so hopelessly entangle the thoughts of weaker men, struck at once the hinge point of every question submitted to it. These qualities were not, however, his chief glory, but rather that absolutely unswerving integrity which, joined to his courage and faith, made him a leader in every good cause which asked his aid.

He was a trustee of Western University, president of the National Christian Association, a chief support of Geneva College, of whose board of trust he was vice president, and in every gathering for truth and righteousness which he could reach, his voice was heard. He attached to himself almost every man with whom he came in contact, even those who were his enemies, because he told them the truth. Such a life is far from ended when the benediction is said at the grave. Not to mention the service which he may perform in that spirit land to which he has gone, he still remains on earth in hearts purified, elevated, strengthened, encouraged and his influence always mighty for good, will extend in ever widening circles until the Lord himself comes.

Pittsburg, May 14.

A NEGLECTED FIELD.

THE COLORED CHURCHES OF THE SOUTH AND THE DUTY OF THE N. C. A.

I have found no State in the South where secret societies and so-called benevolent societies are a greater curse to the colored people than in Lousiana. There are over seventy lodges of secret orders for the colored people in New Orleans, including 11 Masonic, 12 Odd-fellows, 7 Knights of Pythias, 1 Brothers of Friendship, 3 Ancient Order of Forestry; and 8 connected with these that admit women; 19 Brothers and Sisters of Love and Charity, 7 Good Samaritans and 3 Patrons of Husbandry. In addition to the secret lodges there are 28 labor organizations and a large number of societies for taking care of the sick and burying the dead, as the "Morning Star," "Evening Star," "Hickory Boys," etc. There are still more secret societies among the white people in New Orleans than among the colored.

These secret societies have been organized in nearly all parts of the State. When one sees how much money these poor, deluded people spend in rooms and buildings, fees and dues, regalia, etc., and how much time they waste in parades, it is easy for him to see why they are kept poor and do not support their schools and churches better. The preachers have as a rule taken the lead in these societies. Some have even quit preaching to engage in the organization of them; but I am glad to see that many of the better pastors have begun to see the evil connected with them and are opposing them on principle. They see that they are sapping the life of the churches, spiritually, as well as financially. I met a pastor of a large church a few days ago, who told me that he and his people had helped to build two halls for secret societies, and now when he wanted to build a church house he found that so many of his members were members of those societies and it cost them so much to keep up their dues that he could not get the money needed. Hundreds of churches are in a similar condition. This man and hundreds of others would oppose the societies if they had the courage to do so. Their oaths of secrecy and the fear of the influence of the orders make cowards of them. Many of the best of the colored Baptist pastors in this State have quit attending the meetings of lodges, and I am hopeful that some of them will become strong enough soon to openly renounce them.

During the past month I have met about one hundred and fifty pastors, and many other leaders in the colored Baptist churches, in meetings that I have held in western and northern Louisiana, and have freely talked to them in all the meetings about these societies as well as other evils. They have manifested deep interest in all that I have said. The fact that I can speak from personal knowledge, "give my experience" in some of the secret orders, evidently adds weight to what I say, and I feel sure that some will be led to imitate my example in renouncing all forms of secretism.

The National Christian Association has a far greater work to do among the colored people of the South than any of its friends perhaps realize Thousands of dollars ought to be spent in circulating the Cynosure, in distributing tracts, and in the employment of men to visit the schools and churches, who would not only show the people the evils of secret societies, and other societies, but teach them true principles of benevolence and show them how to organize their churches so that through them, the divinely appointed channels of benevolence, they might "visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction" and while so doing, "keep themselves unspotted from the world."

I often find evidence of good done by Bro. Hinman and Bro. Feemster during their visits South some years ago, and also from sending the Cynosure to colored pastors. H. WOODSMALL.

Monroe, La., May 22, 1885.

THE CHURCH WALKING WITH THE WORLD.

Why is it that God's kingdom on earth must ever be made up of the inevitable "church and society?" If "one sinner destroyeth much good" why take the world's people, install them "trustees" and thus form an alliance by indirectly uniting what God has forever separated?

These so-called "friends of the cause" are its bitterest enemies; for they assume that man though acting in disobedience, covered with the cloak of worship, can be accepted. Christians practically affirm that unbelief can assist in God's work, and insolently inquire, "Doth God regard?" An organization of Christians here in Alabama elect trustees, all Odd-fellows, some out of the church, some in it. A donation was to be held. The Odd-fellows said, "Take our hall and welcome." The church accepted.

Then the trustees wanted an O. F. lecture in the church! The poor Christians hung their heads submissively and said, "Oh! we must; we've had their hall you know." So instead of "separation" we have amalgamation. After disregarding God's order and the first principles of power, we kneel in God's temple and pray and beseech and supplicate and try to move God and stir up the Holy One to "plead his own cause;" as if God were indifferent to the "cause" that lies nearest his heart of anything on his footstool.

O that God's people would remember that his "eyes run to and fro through the whole earth to make himself strong in behalf of those whose heart is perfect before him." "Why say ye, Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?"

When I go into a city church and cast my eyes about there is the "soft raiment" of the pew-holder. There is no lack of wealth, or learning, or numbers, or talent. The church has a great deal more than it is willing to consecrate to God. Hence the absence of power, so evident to those who cannot offer "strange fire," or fire of their own kindling.

Moody often meets with churches that are run by one man. This man is invariably a man of wealth or position; a worldly man. Moody scents an enemy. Is told that "there are obstacles that cannot be overcome." Moody coolly affirms that he knows of no obstacle that the Lord can't remove, and the "bond-woman's son is cast out," for this son will ever mock the fruit of faith.

These "sons" get into the church by amalgamation. The true spirit of faith grows fearful concerning God's promise, and alliances are formed with the Egyptians that the Lord's cause may prosper. At first the thing sought looks very good, though the way it was sought was not of God. Hence God's comment proves true: "And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him: and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren." Gen. 10: 12. These Ishmaels are still in the church, and their "hands against" the true seed.

I spoke of this state of things to Christians from whom I had reason to expect sympathy. I was surprised to find them ready to accept church officers out of the church, saying that it looked generous and free and showed an interestedness, etc. One further stated that my views were just like a "close Baptist," and wondered if I did not offer prayer like some, and then repeated the hackneyed story of him who prayed, "O Lord, bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more."

Many a time have I found that reproof involves a double trouble. He who sees evil and warns the people, is judged for seeing it, hated for reproving it, and mobbed for exposing it. Such is the price paid for holding up a beacon light. Such the penalty for being a faithful steward according to the dictates of a pure conscience. Yet God is true and faithful and graciously grants his "little ones" a glory that bids them tread the furnace superior to the element that rages within. True service has its "times and seasons" and in keeping God's commands there is "great reward."

As we advance in service, the very fact that we advance is understood by meeting new duties and fresh disquietudes. Every stage of Christian experience proves this truth. I have before me another's words, which are so much better than my own that I will quote from a chapter on the life of Joseph:

"Faith, sonship and service with all their trials are not so pressed as the pure and loving soul of fidelity to truth. The Joseph's are mocked and sold by brethren. They are slaves, while they who took the price have wondrous liberty. They are tempted, but will not yield, but suffer bondage, the innocent for the guilty. Shut up in prison and bound. Being is proved to be far more than doing. 'John in prison' is led to doubt what 'John baptizing' never questioned. They that 'will be perfect' must be shut up. Till we have felt it we cannot conceive that sickness of heart, which at times will steal upon the patient sufferer: that sense of loneliness, that faintness of soul, which comes from hopes deferred and desires unfilled, the selfishness of brethren and the heartlessness of the world.

"We ask ourselves, If the Lord were with us should I suffer thus? not only the scorn of the great, but even the indifference and neglect of those whom I have served, who yet forget me. So Joseph might have asked; and so till now may the elect ask, as they stand alone without man's encouragement or sympathy, not turned aside by the falsehoods of the vile, or the scorn of the learned, with their face set as a flint, yet deeply feeling what such an endeavor costs them. To get a glimpse of this sorrow needs an instructed eye.

"Faithfulness cannot go unrewarded, the blessing may seem to tarry, but for every delay there shall be the largest interest. Fidelity approves itself. 'In all things they approve themselves, in much patience, in afflictions, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults.' Thus journey on the Lord's beloved. Joseph lives to see every secret wrong redressed, and his deeds of truth and love manifested. His brethren live to see chastening, self-reproach and humiliation."

Thus Bible facts are examples set forth to explain Bible doctrines. They are as "great spoils" to Bible Christians who live on "every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God." J. E. L.

SIXTY YEARS AGO.

"I add a second circumstance which seems a hardship to the enlightened and conscientious part of the clergy. When we baptize children we thank God 'that it hath pleased him to regenerate them with the Holy Spirit, to receive them as his own children by adoption and incorporate them into his holy church.' When the same children are presented to the bishop for confirmation, he also addresses the Divine Being as 'having vouchsafed to regenerate them by water and the Holy Ghost and as having given unto them the forgiveness of all their sins,' while many of them are as vile young rogues as ever existed. Then when we come to bury them, we dare do no other than send them all to heaven, though many of those we commit to earth have been as wicked in life as men can well be on this side hell. This surely is a great hardship. Yet we have no remedy. We must do it or forfeit our roast beef and plumb pudding."

The above extract is from a volume vindicating Christianity against Tom Paine sixty years ago. The author was the Rev. David Simpson, minister of Christ church, Macclesfield, England. He does not defend wrong practices, even if under the authority of his church, but although we seldom meet with such an open candid avowal of serving error for the sake of the "roast beef and plumb pudding," yet there can be no doubt that many men to-day in different denominations do not testify against popular evils, fearing to incur persecution for righteousness' sake by consistent testimony against them. Such was slavery; such is intemperance; such is lodgery. Each of them is in its very nature hostile to Christianity, and the last one is a hypocritical Judas which kisses the Master to betray him. May God in mercy awaken the sleeping consciences of his professing children in this day and generation. All honor, therefore, to the courageous men who avow their honest convictions. T. H.

When evil habits have once been confirmed they can be overcome seldom or never by the call of duty or by a sense of moral obligation, but by the power of some new hope, some new interest or affection, and, most of all, by the power of that affection which is called forth by the revelation of divine grace.—Scotch Sermon.

In self defense, at Cincinnati early Tuesday morning, Dr. E. E. Loy shot and killed his brother-in-law, Harry Champlin. The latter, who was in a half drunken condition, began abusing his mother, and also struck a lady visitor with a chair. Dr. Loy and the coachman attempted to get Champlin to bed, when he rushed down stairs, and securing a carving knife, threatened the doctor, who then fired with fatal effect. Loy was released on a $10,000 bond.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Swing inward, O! gates of the future;
Swing outward, ye doors of the past,
For the soul of the people is moving
And rising from slumber at last;
The black forms of night are retreating,
The white peaks have signaled the day,
And Freedom her long roll is beating,
And calling her sons to the fray.

And woe to the rule that has plundered
And trod down the wounded and slain,
While the wars of the Old Time have thundered
And men poured their life-tide in vain;
The day of its triumph is ending,
The evening draws near with its doom,
And the star of its strength is descending
To sleep in dishonor and gloom.

Tho' the tall trees are crowned on the highlands
With the first gold of rainbow and sun,
While far in the distance below them
The rivers in dark shadows run;
They must fall, and the workman shall burn them
Where the lands and the low waters meet,
And the steeds of the New Time shall spurn them
With the soles of their swift-flying feet.

Swing inward, O! gates, till the morning
Shall paint the brown mountains in gold,
Till the life and the love of the New Time
Shall conquer the hate of the Old.
Let the face and the hand of the Master
No longer be hidden from view,
Nor the lands he prepared for the many
Be trampled and robbed by the few.

The soil tells the same fruitful story,
The seasons their bounties display,
And the flowers lift their faces in glory
To catch the warm kisses of day;
While our fellows are treated as cattle
That are muzzled when treading the corn,
And millions sink down in Life's battle
With a sigh for the day they were born.

Must the sea plead in vain that the river
May return to its mother for rest,
And the earth beg the rain clouds to give her
Of dews they have drawn from her breast?
Lo! the answer comes back in a mutter
From domes where the quick lightnings glow,
And from heights where the mad waters utter
Their warning to dwellers below.

And woe to the robbers who gather
In fields where they never have sown,
Who have stolen the jewels from labor
And builded to Mammon a throne;
For the snow-king asleep by the fountains
Shall wake in the summer's hot breath,
And descend in his rage from the mountains
Bearing terror, destruction and death.

And the throne of their god shall be crumbled,
And the sceptre he swept from his hand,
And the heart of the haughty be humbled,
And a servant be chief in the land;
And the Truth and the Power united
Shall rise from the graves of the True,
And the wrongs of the Old Time be righted
In the might and the light of the New.

For the Lord of the harvest hath said it—
Whose lips never uttered a lie—
And his prophets and poets have read it
In symbols of earth and of sky,
That to him who has reveled in plunder
Till the angel of conscience is dumb,
The shock of the earthquake and thunder
And tempest and torrent shall come.

Swing inward, O! gates of the future,
Swing outward, ye doors of the past,
A giant is waking from slumber,
And rending his fetters at last;
From the dust, where his proud tyrants found him
Unhonored and scorned and betrayed,
He shall rise with the sunlight around him
And rule in the realm he has made.

—James G. Clark in Woman's Tribune.

ASSOCIATED EVIL-DOING.

That ancient command, "Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil,"—(Ex. 23: 2,) was given in divine wisdom, and is especially important in view of the fact that iniquities committed by several persons in common, are rarely, if ever, repented of, confessed, or corrected. Peter sinned, and "went out and wept bitterly;" Judas sold his Lord, and returned saying, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood," and cast down the accursed silver in the temple; but when did the Sanhedrim, the great council of the Jews, ever confess their guilt in condemning Christ, in murdering Stephen, in scourging the apostles, or in persecuting the church?

Was there ever an ecclesiastical assembly known to confess or undo a sin, an outrage, or a wrong that they had done? Sometimes, after years have elapsed, and other men have taken the place of the wrong-doers, corrections and confessions have been made; but that has been one body of men confessing the faults of another body which committed them. But for any associated body of men to undo a wrong which they themselves have done, is almost too much to expect in this world.

Most persons who have had acquaintance with ecclesiastical matters can recall instances where flagrant wrongs have been committed, sometimes by honest men acting under the direction of self-willed leaders, or unscrupulous lords over God's heritage;—wrongs that most who knew them would in private conversation freely admit and deplore; and yet they would join hands with the wrong-doers and allow right to be trampled under foot, or observe a judicious silence, which would inure to their own personal advantage; and then after years spent in ineffectual toils, would wonder at the absence of divine blessing, and try to lay the blame on sinners who did not receive a message which was preached without power and heard without effect.

Sometimes a church is cursed for a whole generation by the palsying power of a great wrong perpetrated, unconfessed, and unrepented of; and not until death has gathered those who are responsible for it, does the divine blessing fall upon the desolate and dewless soil.

God calls upon men to put away evil. It is not easy to persuade an individual to correct a wrong. It is tenfold harder to persuade a corporate body to do the same thing. There is almost always some one too blind to see, too deaf to hear, too unreasonable to be convinced, and too stubborn to yield, and hence a wrong thus done, usually goes to the judgment to be made right.

How important that Christian men, learn to walk carefully before the Lord, guided by reason, conviction and righteousness, rather than to follow the crowd, and be swept into crooked ways. It is better to be alone with God in the desert or the dungeon, or to be steadfast for the right, and valiant for the truth amid a thousand foes, than to go with the multitude into the crooked paths, and sin against the Lord in following others who are swift to do evil.—The Armory.

A CONVERTED PRIEST TO THE AMERICAN CARDINAL.

"The Converted Priests' Home,"
St. Anne, Kankakee Co., Ill., May 20, '85.

To Cardinal McCloskey,

Sir:—As you are the representative of the Pope on this continent, it is to you I must address this document.

Born in the church of Rome (Feb. 1865), a native of Limerick, Ireland, I have found myself constrained to come out from her, in order to obey the voice of my conscience.

But before giving you the reason for that solemn action, let me tell you that our merciful God has given to me more than to many others of our nation, the opportunity of knowing her unspeakable and secret abominations and to understand her errors when very young. I had an occasion of living with a priest who is very closely related to my mother, and it is from the very words and actions of that man that I had begun to suspect that the religion of Rome was nothing more than a deception, a fraud. Yes, it is then I have read for the first time those words of fire written by the finger of God on the walls of the Roman Catholic church: "Mystery; Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth."

Beastly drunk almost every day, he was saying his mass every morning and preaching with zeal and burning eloquence every Sabbath the doctrines of his church, to his poor, deluded people. Many times staggering at the altar from the large quantity of wine he had drank under the name of "The Body and Blood of the Lamb of God," he was holding in his hands and giving to the people what he pretended, and what he assured his people was his Saviour and God, Jesus Christ. And will I relate what was daily occurring between him and his two servant girls when he was in that state of brutish drunkenness? No, my pen refuses to unveil those mysteries of hell.

But you will probably answer me: Is it the fault of the holy church of Rome if that priest is a beastly drunkard? Was not a Judas found among the twelve apostles chosen by Christ himself? Cannot the church of Rome be holy notwithstanding the infamous conduct of that priest, as Jesus was the Holy of Holies in spite of Judas?

I will answer you that your comparison would have some weight if there were only one wicked, debauched, swindling priest among twelve honest ones. But it is the contrary. I have seen with my own eyes during the time I have been within the walls of that modern Babylon, that there are not twelve sober, honest priests for every one drunkard; but there are twenty-three drunken, profane, debauched, swindling priests against one, whom I will not call honest, but a little less debauched and more prudent in his public life than the rest. What I say here, I say it in the presence of the great God who will judge me hereafter. I have no personal feelings against any priest, bishop or cardinal. It is the contrary. Without a single exception they have been exceedingly kind and genteel towards me. I do not hate their persons, but I abhor their secret and public vices, and I say with my Saviour Jesus Christ: "A good tree cannot bear bad fruit." Rome cannot be the blessed tree of life, planted on earth, and watered with the blood of Calvary. It is a bad tree, for it gives almost nothing else but bad fruit.

Your celibacy is one of the bad fruits which grow on that bad tree—your celibacy is a fraud. Your priests, with very rare exceptions, do not observe it. Your celibacy is a mask to deceive the world, it is a veil behind which your priests lead a life of nameless debauchery. I have the proof in hand of that fact, if you dare to deny it. In the very town from which I addressed you this letter, your bachelor priest lives alone, these last two years, with a beautiful girl.

Your "auricular confession" is another specimen of the bad fruit borne by that bad tree which was planted by the hand of Satan among Roman Catholics. Public decency prohibits me from mentioning the infamous things thrown into my young heart and soul by my Father Confessor the very first time I went to confess. I could swell a volume larger than that book, "The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional," by Father Chiniquy, ex priest, were I to tell you all that I know of your "auricular confession." Suffice it to say that I corroborate every word written in that beautiful work—that book which ought to be read by every father of a family and every citizen of the United States. Your calling Mary "the mother of God" is another bad fruit of that corrupted tree, the church of Rome. If Mary is the mother of God, then God must be younger than Mary; he must be younger than Joachim and Anne, the parents of Mary. If Mary is the mother of God, then Adam must be older than God, for he was older than Mary. Your God, then, who had Joachim with Adam for grandfather, and Anne with Eve for a grandmother, must be a false God, and you worship an idol under his name.

Your transubstantiation is another specimen of the fruit of that miserable tree, Romanism.

God himself on Mt. Sinai, when giving his eternal laws to man, said: "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them." (Ex. 20.)

Christ could not break that commandment by ordaining his apostles to take a little cake, make a graven image, and change it into a God. The wafer-god you adore is an idol, and you, Cardinal, are an idolator with all the Roman Catholics every time you celebrate what you call "the mass." I could show you many other bad fruits decaying on that unprofitable tree, Romanism, but this is enough. I am almost certain you will be satisfied with the foregoing facts. After having been not only an ecclesiastic, but a novice and professor with the Monks of St. Viateur in the United States, I must say that I have seen enough of that church to convince me that she is not the church of Christ. I give up her blasphemous teachings and her lying tradition to follow the Gospel of Christ, which tells me that salvation, eternal life, is a gift of God, purchased by the death and blood of Christ. I have looked at the gift and found it unspeakably grand and good. I have accepted it. Rich and happy in its possession to-day, my only ambition is to invite my poor and dear fellow-countrymen to break the fetters which bind them, and shatter the ignominious yoke of Rome, to follow and love Christ as their only Saviour, Light and Life.

Truly yours,
John Styles, Ex-Monk.

A great many people think that unbelief is a sort of misfortune, but do not know, if you will allow me the expression, it is the damning sin of the world to-day. * * * Don't think for a moment that it is a misfortune, but just bear it in mind it is an awful sin, and may the Holy Spirit convict every reader that unbelief is making God a liar. Many a man has been knocked down on the streets because some one has told him he was a liar. Unbelief is giving God the lie; that is the plain English of it.—Moody.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued.

"We've missed you at the lodge meetings lately," began Mr. Basset with his easy, cordial smile; "and last night especially. We had an installation, and there were a good many visitors from neighboring lodges—some notable ones. So it was really quite an occasion, and if I had had a doubt of your being there I should have called round. This lack of interest among members hurts Odd-fellowship more than the attacks of all the anti-secret fanatics. Now I was looking over the reports of the Grand Lodge the other day, and I find we are really losing ground in spite of large accessions—so many members drop away after the first year and neither attend nor keep up their dues."

Stephen's eyes were by no means fully opened to the evils of secrecy, but he had begun to feel a natural disgust for the reiterated mummeries of the lodge room. The principles taught might be all right—might even be as Mr. Basset had so many times averred, a perfect religious system, able in the absence of any other guide to lead its devotees straight to heaven; but Stephen had a strong dislike to farce, and an equally strong dislike for inconsistency. The Odd-fellow ritual, especially the coffin scene, had not in the beginning recommended itself to his common sense or his good taste; and worse than that he had reason to fear that there existed a deplorable laxity in practice among many of the members of this "moral" order. He had fully meant at some convenient season to have a serious talk with Mr. Basset, in the hope that these unpleasant doubts and suspicions might thereby be laid to rest, and the present occasion seemed favorable. So he began, rather hurriedly and with a half wish that the talk was safely over, for between his desire neither to offend Mr. Basset nor compromise the truth he was not likely to find very smooth sailing.

"I have been pretty busy of late with one or two important cases, and the installation quite slipped from my mind last night. But now we are on the subject, I must say that I have lately learned facts which have both surprised and pained me. I find there are quite a number in our lodge who are in one way or another connected with the liquor business. I am trying, as you know, to serve faithfully the temperance people of this city who have done me the honor, though young and unknown, of making me their special attorney. And it is embarrassing to feel that I am joined by lodge vows with men who have a personal interest in supporting the traffic. I can well see how cases may, and no doubt will, arise in which I shall have to act against a brother Odd-fellow or stultify my conscience. And I have been seriously considering whether it would not be better on the whole to procure a demit and withdraw from the lodge entirely. I have nothing against the order personally, and I know there are good prohibitionists in it. But that has nothing to do with the difficulty, for it is not with those that my business as temperance attorney will be likely to bring me into collision. Why, I know from undisputed authority that the saloon property which pays the heaviest tax in Jacksonville is owned by an Odd-fellow, a prominent member of our lodge."

"Oh, if you come to that," answered Mr. Basset, whose countenance, after the first start of surprise, settled back into its usual agreeable smile, "no social or even religious organization was ever perfect. Look at the church! I can point out to you members in good standing who do that very thing. I could count you off a dozen, to say the least, good Methodists and Presbyterians, who rent their property to saloonkeepers. I don't excuse such inconsistency of course, but the lodge is really no worse than the church when it comes to the point."

Stephen was silent. At heart he felt a thrill of indignation, as if he had heard some courtesan with painted cheeks compared to his mother. If it were so; if he had been deceived all along in both; if one were as good, or, to borrow Mr. Basset's expression, no worse than the other, what better thing remained for a man than to fall back on pantheism, positiveism, or even a refined paganism, and drift into the unknown abyss with the motto of the old grovelling heathen world of St. Paul's day on his lips, "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die." Not that Stephen was really conscious of having any such thought; he would have repudiated it at once had it presented itself in honest fashion. He would have said, "There is something better;" and clung to his old faith with the tenacity of a soul that fears shipwreck. But the unconscious infidelity which is like the microscopic germs that diffuse invisible poison in the air we breathe and the water we drink, I know of nothing that will guard against that but such a baptism of the Holy Spirit as shall consume these spiritual sporadic germs in its swift, down-rushing fires that take the whole life for a sacrifice and the whole heart for an altar. And it was just this that Stephen lacked.

He was aware that what Mr. Basset had said was sadly, unmistakably true. The churches in Jacksonville seemed to be engaged in a pretty even race with the world, which begat the natural fruits: unseemly rivalries with each other, and spiritual deadness. They had oyster suppers, and fairs, and festivals, and entertainments of every description; and now and then there was a spasmodic effort to "get up a revival," as useless, and perhaps to heavenly eyes as painful and hideous as the attempt to galvanize a corpse into seeming life. Was it strange that this modern Sardis allowed to stand unquestioned on her membership roll the names of those who "took the price of blood and the wages of iniquity?" or that there were even whispered reports of scandalous sin on the part of some of her prominent professors? But why did it not occur to Stephen, as a curious coincidence, to say the least, that every professed Christian whom Mr. Basset vauntingly pointed out as in complicity with the liquor traffic was either a Mason or an Odd-fellow? Why did he not think that union with unbelievers who practiced secret works of darkness might be just as disastrous to the purity of the church now as in early times when such "unequal yoking" was so strictly forbidden?

But Stephen, as we have said, was silent. His silence, however, made no difference with Mr. Basset, who talked on.

"Now just think of all the benevolent work that is being done by the order. I don't mean to say anything to run down other organizations, but for pure charity commend me to Odd-fellowship. Over two million dollars was paid out for relief last year—you can see it for yourself in the printed reports, I believe I've got one in my pocket now. When anybody says anything against Odd-fellowship, there's a plump knock-down argument for 'em. I just turn round and say, 'Why don't the churches do this work?' and that generally shuts them up. Just picture to yourself how many widows and orphans have been made glad; how many desolate homes have been cheered; in short, what a munificent work of love and good-will has been accomplished by the judicious distribution of this immense sum! Whatever else we do, my dear young friend, don't let us circumscribe our charities. 'He that giveth to the poor lendeth unto the Lord.'"

Stephen colored. He was naturally generous and open-handed, and he could not bear the tacit imputation of meanness in his motives for leaving the lodge. But he only reached up to one of the pigeonholes where he kept his papers, and drew out a letter.

"What you say, Mr. Basset, reminds me of a letter that I received to-day from the widow of a certain Jacob Strycker, a lately deceased member of our lodge. I should like to show it to you as it refers to an important matter that I think ought to be set right immediately."

"Jacob Strycker?—let me see," said Mr. Basset. "Oh, I remember now. Mr. Strycker died at Ft. Wayne, slightly in debt to the lodge at the time. That circumstance, you know, cancels all claim to a benefit."

"But hear what Mrs. Strycker says:—'I write to you, Mr. Howland, because you are a lawyer and know about such things. The lodge in Jacksonville to which my husband belonged, and of which I understand you are a member, has refused to give me the customary benefit on the ground that his dues were unpaid at the time of his death. This is not so. He mailed five dollars from Ft. Wayne the day before he died, which was received and credited, and left a small balance in his favor. I know my husband believed that I would be provided for. Will you please look into this matter, and see that justice is done to a poor widow and her fatherless children, though she can only pay you with her blessing and her prayers. LYDIA STRYCKER.'"

"Of course there must be some misunderstanding," remarked Stephen, as he folded the letter. "No lodge in the land, I hope, would take such mean and dishonest advantage of a mere technicality, as Mr. Strycker's money was of course on the road at the time of his death."

"Well, now, that don't seem right, does it? She has written a very touching letter. I declare, I am really very sorry for her. But then as a sensible woman she ought to understand that there can't be any rule devised that will not sometimes and in some cases bear hard. The rule of Odd fellowship is, 'Pay in advance,' and of course there will always be some compelled by misfortune to violate it. In that case all they pay in is forfeited, but they enter with that understanding, so it is really all fair enough when one comes to look at it—only, as I said before, it comes hard in particular cases."

"But Mr. Strycker kept up his dues," interrupted Stephen, impatiently. "Lawfully that money belonged to the lodge as soon as it left his hands."

"Well, I think it would have been better to have stretched the point and handed over the benefit; decidedly I do. Such things give a handle to the anti-secret party if they leak out, and they are sure to. We might pass round a subscription paper for Mrs. Strycker. I don't doubt but you could collect a handsome sum from the members of our lodge by going privately to them and stating the unfortunate features of the case. I would be willing myself to put down five dollars."

"No," said Stephen, rather hotly. "Mrs. Strycker has not asked for charity but justice, and justice she shall have. There shall be an appeal made to the Grand Lodge."

Mr. Basset drummed lightly with his cane on the floor and—a rather strange thing for him—did not immediately reply. Clearly the young lawyer was not made of the most manageable material in the world, and would have to be dealt with carefully, or in other words, dosed liberally with that commodity vulgarly known as "soft soap," which, by the way, as the reader has doubtless perceived, Mr. Basset had a native gift for administering. He had no intention of letting so valuable a member as Stephen Howland slip out of the order. And here comes in the natural inquiry, what made him valuable? and why should Mr. Basset be so specially anxious to retain him?

The former of these two questions is very easily answered. Stephen, as a young and rising temperance lawyer, could give the lodge a moral prestige that would offset any number of Van Gilders. What could more effectually shut the mouth of anybody disposed to carp at the convivial origin of Odd-fellowship, or to intimate that while intoxicating liquors might be forbidden in the lodge room, it still kept up the traditions of its birthplace in an English ale-house by gathering in saloons after the meetings adjourned, or circulating pocket flasks privately in committee rooms to an accompaniment of tobacco smoke, vulgar stories and coarse jokes, than to point to Stephen Howland, attorney for the Law and Order League, as a member in good and regular standing? As acceptable material for the lodge, he ranked nearly equal in point of fact to a popular clergyman.

The second reason is not so easily given. Mr. Basset's love for Odd-fellowship proceeded from mixed motives that could be resolved into unmixed selfishness by a little close analysis. He had an ease-loving nature, and preferred, so to speak, a self-adjustable religion that would fit every phase of worldly requirement; that would have an elastic adaptation to anything doubtful in belief or dubious in practice; in short, something totally different from the tight-fitting Bible code which would expose his moral and spiritual infirmities by conscious twinges as a tight shoe discovers a bunion. This he found in Odd-fellowship. It made no difference that he was nominally a professor of the Christian religion. He could wear the livery of both; and perhaps in the great day of account it will be found that at least a part of the guilt of such hypocrisy must be laid at the doors of those churches that allow this double profession, and thus in effect put the Christless paganism of the lodge on a level with the soul-saving doctrines of the cross. He never consciously avowed to himself that he looked upon Odd-fellowship as a possible covert in case of criminal "imprudence," for he hoped on the contrary never to forfeit what he was very fond of—the good opinion of his fellow-men, by any outward act that would condemn him in the eyes of society. And yet all the while there existed in his mental background a dim shadowy consciousness that the protection clause in the Odd-fellow's obligation might make it a very convenient thing if—but Mr. Basset never carried his thoughts beyond that innocent little preposition.

Stephen, for his part, looked on Mr. Basset as a good-hearted, social kind of a man, though rather shallow. On the whole he liked him. He had a certain open way with him that is always taking to a frank nature, and any suspicion of selfish motives in the latter's evident anxiety to retain him in the lodge was as far as possible from Stephen's mind.

(To be continued.)

REFORM NEWS.

LECTURING IN CANADA.

The Cynosure has occasionally spoken of Rev. T. L. Wilkinson of Brantford, Oatario, editor of the Iconoclast, as an able lecturer against the lodge; we have also selected able articles from his paper. We find the following in a late number of the Iconoclast and would urge Canada friends to send for Bro. Wilkinson often aud pay him well. Says the Iconoclast:

The editor of this paper believing that secret societies in general were, in many respects, inimical to the unity, spirituality and prosperity of the church of Christ, has prepared a lecture on the subject and is now delivering it as occasions offer, to the people of Canada. It was recently delivered in the Methodist church, West Flamboro, and the local correspondent of the Dundas True Banner, in its issue of May 7th, speaks of it as follows: "According to last week's report Rev. T. L. Wilkinson of Brantford, preached on Sabbath evening last in the Methodist church to a good audience. His text was I Peter 5: 8, and was well handled. On Monday evening he lectured in the same church on 'Secret Societies and their relation to the Christian Church.' It was a masterly piece of oratory, being about as well put together as anything we have heard for a long time. Every person we have heard speak of it says it more than met their expectations. If the Rev. gentleman should come this way again he will be sure to have a full house."

Rev. T. W. Jackson, of Copetown says, concerning this lecture, "It is a lecture that every church member should hear. The lecturer shows most conclusively that much time and means and praise due to the church are given to secret societies and the church left in the shade. Too often it is said by Christians 'The I. O. O. F. or A. F. and A. M. etc., nursed me when sick, paid my doctor's bill, etc., but the church would not do it,' when in reality three fourths of the money expended by the secret society was furnished by members of the church and the church robbed of the credit. Some think the condemnation of the secret societies too strong; but this opinion was expressed by persons who had formed an extravagant idea of their excellence and the transition in their minds was too great to carry them entirely with the lecture. Yet they all were led to exclaim 'Oh, if we only had such a church as the lecturer portrays it would be grand,' and yet they do not see that the only way to get such a church is in the line indicated. I cannot speak too highly of the merits of the lecture, both as to the force of thought and also the beneficial effects that must accrue from such an address. More anon."

FROM THE MINNESOTA AGENT.

WINNEBAGO CITY, Minn., June 8, 1885.

EDS. CYNOSURE: I commenced service for the Minnesota State Association, April 6th, and had the pleasure of meeting the Young People's Literary Society of Rev. Sjoblom's church in Red Wing, on April 13th, and gave a forty minute address.

Counselling with Bro. S., he advised to go back to St. Paul. At St. Paul I met Bro. Fenton, who rendered good service in obtaining the Swedish Baptist church, East St. Paul, where I lectured the following Saturday evening. I was entertained by Bro. Fenton, and from Saturday until Monday morning Bro. Forney, proprietor of Forney's Hotel at 108 3rd street, St. Paul, entertained me royally, and I bespeak the patronage of all the friends of reform for Bro. Forney, who is also a good anti-secretist.

From St. Paul to Northfield; could not get a hearing there, not even the privilege to address the students of Carlton College, on the subject of secretism. From Northfield to Red Wing, where I lectured in the Swedish Lutheran church. From Red Wing to Lake City, where I lectured in the Academy of Music, the hall having been engaged and paid for by Bro. T. W. Palmer. From Lake City to Greenwood Prairie, where I preached on Sabbath and lectured Monday, Again from Lake City to Scotch Settlement, where I was greeted by a good audience. From Lake City to Wasioja and vicinity. Attended the meeting of Dodge county Association at Wasioja, gave three lectures at Wasioja Seminary, and went on to Winnebago City.

In the vicinity of Winnebago City I met warm friends of the reform, who both pay and pray for the success of our reform; consisting of such men as Rufus Johnson, his son Albert, Frank Forbes, and the Williamses, all brothers, and connections of Bro. R. J. Williams, who is spending the summer in northern Minnesota for his health, which I pray he may regain.

In relation to finances during these two months, I cannot report favorably, and friends must do more than they have done if the work is to be a success. My expenses were $19.55; collections on the field, $7.66. It was expected that my expenses, and at least $10 per month should be collected on the field. The friends will see that my expenses exceed receipts by $11.89. Collections have been made on subscriptions, of which an account has been kept, not reported here.

There is plenty of hard work to do in Minnesota, and I find great apathy, even among the professed friends of the cause; others again, are ardent and hopeful. If the Cynosure could circulate freely all over the State great good would be accomplished. People feel very indignant at the treatment Bro. Dissette is receiving in Illinois; but if he can stand the arguments he receives from Masoury, he will come out victorious in the end. J. P. RICHARDS.

FROM THE KANSAS AGENT.

LECOMPTON, Kan.

DEAR EDITORS:—After my trip in Clay and Riley counties, I returned home; circulated a notice of a lecture in our own church on Monday, May 11th; had a good audience of my brethren and neighbors. At the close nearly all came forward and received tracts and papers.

The next morning I started for Sabetha, and to make connection I had to stay in Washington over night. I visited the Evangelical minister, Rev. H. Toedman, gave him the "Appeal to American Pastors," and some other tracts, and he kindly promised me the use of his church for a lecture any time when not in use. Next day reached Sabetha. We were troubled some about getting a place to speak in; but brethren Coleman and Thompson succeeded in securing the Congregational church for Friday evening. Had some conversation with a man who was once a Methodist class-leader, but had turned aside to the "miry places" of Masonry and infidelity. We had a small but attentive audience.

The next day went to Willis, where Rev. G. H. Hemmingway had published appointments for me to preach on the Sabbath and to lecture the three following evenings. Had good and attentive audiences all the time. At the close, Wednesday evening, a gentleman, a very intelligent member of the Wesleyan church, once a professor of mathematics in Mount Pleasant College, Iowa, I think, arose and stated that he had a conversation not long since with a member of the Knights of Labor," who expressed similar principles to those of the German Socialists, the French Communists and Russian Nihilists, and it was time we were aroused to the fact that they were right among us.

While the village of Willis is strongly infected with secret societies, there is an excellent, healthy, anti-secrecy, Christian community around it, and I believe the seed sown there will grow and be cultivated by the kind and earnest pastor and his church.

From Willis I came to Lecompton, where I found the Brethren papering the chapel and preparing for the commencement at Lane University. On Saturday went to the General Assembly of the U. P. church at Topeka. They are an earnest, able body of Christian ministers. I did not hear all the discussion on the secrecy question, but I understood their final action was that as some members of the G. A. R. were now in the church they might remain but that no more be permitted to join.

My notice here was not well circulated, but I spoke Tuesday evening, June 2, to a small audience in the Wesleyan Methodist church.

R. LOGGAN.

FROM THE ILLINOIS LECTURER.

DANVILLE.

I called on Rev. J. F. Stout, pastor of Kimber M. E. church. He seems to think that "there is nothing in it," (penal secrecy), that in due time I would become satisfied that such is the case and return home and let this question rest. He said that he was not a Mason or an Odd-fellow and never had been. That he never had been inside of a secret lodge but once, and that was "simply an insurance order, the Ancient Order of United Workmen." He visited it once only. In speaking of the system as a whole, he said that he considered it "all foolishness." As I arose to leave he wished me well and bade me a hearty God speed!

I next called on the mayor of the city, J. Baird, Esq., who assured me that I should have the privilege of speaking on the public square, if I did not obtain any other place for the purpose. S. M. Mansfield kindly endeavored to obtain Armory Hall for me. Meanwhile I called to see the city marshal, Mr. L. Myers, who assured me that he'd "take due notice and govern" accordingly in case I decided to speak out doors.

I next called to see the sheriff who is a Mason. He assured me that he would have no objection to granting me the use of the court house on that account, but that the county authorities had passed a resolution against the use of the building for any purpose, other than holding court. I determined to publish my notices to the effect that I would preach in Ellsworth Park at 3. P. M., on Sabbath, and on the same evening at seven o'clock on the public square.

Then I called at the city hall to see the marshal and while waiting for him, I walked into the fire department just under the city hall. When I came to see the marshal the first time, I left a lot of reform tracts, Wesleyan Methodists and Cynosures for the firemen to read, on the table provided for that purpose, and this second visit was to see what effect these tracts and papers had. One of the men on observing me said to another:

"Did you see that crank who was giving away pamphlets against Masonry down near the post office?"

"No. He ought to be kicked out of town. Who pays him for it? What good can he do?"

Here a third one joined in the conversation: "He's a perjured man; I would not believe him under oath."

"Well, sir!" cried number two, "He's about as bad as old Blanchard! I heard him lecture once, and he claimed to have been all through the Masonic lodge, that he knew a butcher in Chicago who murdered his wife and cut her up and shipped her in a barrel of pork to New York. And a man in that crowd who heard him, jumped up and said, 'That's a lie; that man used to work for me and he's a barber—not a butcher;' and, sir, he made old Blanchard look right foolish. But that's the way with these fellows; they are making money out of it; it is a money-making scheme."

These remarks were intended for me and calculated to draw me out; but the Saviour's injunction occurred to my mind, "Give not that which is holy to the dogs; neither cast ye your pearls before swine," so I left them.

They have an interesting mission Sunday-school carried on in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. I was invited to open it with prayer, which I did and shortly after hastened to my park appointment where quite an audience was congregated, who listened with apparent interest. A big, well-meaning policeman was not going to let me speak at all, but when I told him I had the consent of the mayor he began to recognize his friends, and said apologetically, "Oh, well! If the mayor said you might speak here, it is all right; but I am afraid that there will be a row if you speak here." The latter he repeated three times. But the people seemed interested, and there was no "row."

When night came another large and interested assembly listened to me on the square, to which I spoke for about an hour on the "Legal and Moral Qualities of the Oaths of Secret Societies." I was completely surrounded by a dense crowd of men, and from appearances was virtually in an "open lodge," if the emblems worn by these men meant anything. But they listened with profound attention, and when I closed, they held quite an animated discussion among themselves. For an hour after, there were men still on that spot discoursing the merits and demerits of secret orders.

In the discussion to which they referred I had analyzed the Entered Apprentice and Master Mason's obligations and quoted them in full. Strange to say, they did not deny that these were the obligations of Masonry, but were endeavoring to harmonize them with the duties we owe to God and man. Quite an undertaking no doubt, and with the literature sown broadcast through the city in tract form, one in which they will find employment some time.

One thing has been fully demonstrated here, and that is, that the right of free speech exists in this city. A minister who resides in a distant town was present on Sabbath evening when I preached on the square. He called this evening and warned me to "keep a sharp lookout. You have a family, you tell me; now sir, they are more to you than all this. If I were you, I'd take them, and you'd never catch me very far from them. You don't know what these fellows may yet do for you. Yes, sir; I am a Mason, an Odd-fellow, a Knight of Pythias. I've been through and know what is in the thing and tell you, you're in danger. I would not be in your place under any circumstances. Of course, I believe you are conscientious in it. Yes, that's a good exposition,"—Doesburg's, GEO. T. DISSETTE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SELF THE FOUNDATION OF SECRETISM.

CLEAR CREEK, Ark.

I have been a member of the Good Templars' Grange and some other lodges. The object of the first named is unquestionably a good one; but as it lays a foundation of justification of secretism, and builds its hope of reform on purely human agencies, it is objectionable. Self is at the foundation of secret societies generally. I am fully convinced that the mucilage of Masonry, aside from personal fear should secrets of the lodge be revealed, is the fact that evil-doers are protected and often—very often, I might say generally—rescued from the power of civil law; and owing to the fact that so many respectable men, professors of religion and even preachers are Masons, the people are deceived as to its true nature. A preacher here, a Master Mason, denies the oaths of Masonry, and explains to his brethren that it is a society having a system of moral laws pointing to the Creator, and is something like a Sunday-school. But those of us who know anything of the inside of the lodge know that it has a tendency to cause its members to lie. I have lectured some here against Masonry, and I affirm that no man can be justified in the sight of God and be a Master Mason. To one who is walking in the light of the Gospel the Spirit will surely tell him even in the first degree of Masonry that a Christian has no place in the lodge. Hence I desire to have the masses informed of this soul-destroying system that they may shun its nets.

So long as whisky is made men will get drunk. The liquor traffic is a monster in the land and should be wiped out. Let us have constitutional prohibition. I will be glad to co-operate with you in any Christian movement for the destruction of these enemies to salvation. Yours for righteousness and peace, N. W. PLYMATE.

SLANDERING JUDGE HAMMOND.

Jabez D. Hammond states in his political history of New York that he was not sufficiently informed to write an account of the Anti-masonic movements that followed the Morgan tragedy, and delegated that task to a competent friend, but intimates conservatively his belief that both parties might have indulged in exaggeration to some extent.

A recent Masonic writer in the history of Otsego county asserts that Mr. Hammond was among the warrant members of the new lodge which was revived in Cherry Valley, N. Y., in 1854, after lying dormant for twenty-eight years. Mr. H. is either misrepresented in this, or his curiosity got the better of his discretion. It is probable that he was then in or approaching the period of dotage interdicted by Freemasonry, as he died at an advanced age the following year.

The above writer states that the minutes of the first meeting and list of warrant members being lost were supplied from memory, and that the master of the old occupied the same position in the new lodge. This is the usual course pursued by Masonic writers to falsify facts and render history agreeable to the fraternity and deceptive to others. Every department of literature is corrupted by unsubstantial data to promote their ends. It is incredible that a name untarnished in its earlier years and sanctioning a denunciation of the lodge, should contribute in its later to the restoration of the lodge. But the dead can contradict no lies. *

A MISSOURI EDITOR'S TRIALS.

A letter dated May 18, 1885, which the editor of the Investigator wrote me from Stewartsville, Mo., reminds me of the Lord's soap boiling. For when I began the work, "Three Babylons" which the Investigator is now publishing in its columns, the Lord showed me in a vision that he would boil the people into soap, to clean his house with; and the editor's letter makes it look as though the soap is blubbering well in the boiling, which is counted by soap makers a sign of the soap's being good. The editor, F. W. A. Riedel, says: "You, dear brother, throw the light of truth among the people, as though you threw a mountain into the sea, (confusion), and now behold the waves rise, the storm howls, and the whole machinery is in a wild commotion. Sleepers awake, and the bones of the dead are stirring. The drunken grow sober, and the sober drunk. Here is wrath over threat, there joy and triumph. The people begin to disagree among themselves, and split into parties. But after all, many straying sheep will now, I hope, be brought back to the shepherd of their souls."

He writes again under date of June 2, saying, "A formidable persecution is being prepared against me and the Investigator by the Freemasons and other secret society men here, who are mostly Methodists and free thinkers, joined together in their church and lodgisms. Your article in last week's Investigator, (May 30th), excited in them a real ferocious manner." Bro. Riedel has written me several times of the persecution they are heaping upon him because of his boldness for the truth, in daring to publish my work in his paper; and that some were even threatening to dispose of him at any hazard; and I wrote him some time ago, that perhaps he had better defer publishing the work in his paper, and go on and put it in pamphlet, as he proposes to do after it is gone through the paper. But amid even their threats of taking his life, he goes on publishing the work all the same. And for which I think he deserves much praise.

S. H. PIERCE.

PITH AND POINT.

EPISCOPAL RITES INSTEAD OF HEATHEN.

A Free Methodist, in conversation with an Episcopal rector, speaking on the subject of secret societies, the latter said he belonged to the Masons and Odd-fellows; but said when he acted as chaplain he made no lodge prayers but used the form of his church. He also said he buried many masons, but never used their burial service; said their prayers and funeral services were nothing but heathen rites. He was asked if that did not show it to be a heathen institution clear through. He said the Masons talked much about his not using their forms, but they left Christ out and he would not use them. Quite candid for an adhering Mason!—E. F. W.

ODD-FELLOWS AT LAWRENCE, KAN.

The Cynosure reveals clearly the spirit of secret societies at the present time. I have already been greatly benefited by reading it. The secret societies are very strong at this place. A regular Odd-fellow service was held here not long ago in a large Baptist church. It is to be lamented that such mummeries should be permitted in the house of God.—JOHN A. HERNBORG, Lawrence, Kan.

HEARTY SYMPATHY.

I am much pleased with your paper and can heartily endorse the American platform. I live here in the midst of secret lodges and rebels. If I expected to remain here I would arm myself for the fight. I have the sword of the Spirit, the shield of faith and the helmet of salvation; but I would send for your publications and take my part in public and private. I bid you god-speed in this glorious work of reform. These great truths are very near my heart. I was rocked in the cradle of abolition of slavery, war, intemperance and polygamy.—DAVID BOWLES, Boonsboro, Ark.

GO AHEAD.

As to your opposition to secrecy, I am with you in that. Go ahead! I pray God through Christ his Son and my Saviour that I may be able to make the devilish and unfair thing of Masonry known. May God give the Cynosure speed and spread it. It is the most welcome paper I get. I am a poor man; if I had money I would put your paper into every house in my country. I am a Primitive Baptist and clerk of an Anti-mason association.—JOHN M. GUTTERY, Holly Grove, Ala.

HE READ RONAYNE.

In regard to the manufacture and sale of liquors, I am very much opposed to it and have been since God sanctified my soul and opened my eyes fully to see the devices of the enemy of God and man. I never knew enough about Freemasonry until lately I read Ronayne's exposition. I am opposed to it or anything that cannot bear the light. I am fully in sympathy with you, brethren, and regret not being able financially to help you. May God bless you and enable you to endure to the end. My health is poor at present and I have not been able to go on with my work; therefore I can do but little. I am pleased with your paper and if I regain my health I will work in the interest of it.—JAMES D. BYARS, Columbia, La.

OBITUARY.

JACOB RASOR was born in Montgomery county, Ohio, and died in Lockington, Shelby county, March 11, 1885, aged 65 years, 6 months and 22 days. He became a Christian at the age of 17 years, came to Shelby county when 18, and joined the United Brethren church in his 25th year.

He was married to Rebecca Ziegler, September 3, 1863, and settled in Lockington, where he lived until death. For many years he held license to exhort, and was a faithful worker. He was interested in the progress of the church. Although he was an earnest and devoted class-leader, yet his work was not confined to our place. His exhortations and positive Christian experience often encouraged members whose faith was not as strong as was his own. Unlike many others he sought no excuse when duty presented itself. During the last year of his pilgrimage he might have been seen, even though weary, with staff in hand, wending his way to the house of God. In his early Christian life it was customary to call upon exhorters to close the meeting. Speaking of his work, he said to the writer, "I never refused to pray or close a meeting after ministers; however hard, I never refused."

For several months he was confined to his room, and the last three months to his bed; but during those months of affliction the Lord was with him. His Christian hope and preparation for death may be expressed in his own language as he gave it to the writer a few weeks before his death. Said he: "I have felt for the last few months that my work is all done, and now I am just waiting at the station for the train. My hope is bright and beyond what I could have expected—all that it could possibly be. God is fulfilling his word in taking care of me while I am sick. He is with me. I have not had a temptation or trial for the last two months. I do not know how my prospects could be brighter, unless I were taken to heaven and my portion explained; this I do not ask. The Lord is with me and that is all I ask. I do not ask to leave this world shouting. I would rather leave the world in a quiet way; my nature has been quiet. I will wait patiently the time. Great peace is what we want. The Saviour said: 'My peace I leave with you,' and I feel I have it. I feel so happy that my work is all done—nothing to do but to resign myself to the will of the Lord. Nothing in religious matters to arrange. I am glad the Lord has permitted me to live to finish my work. Great peace and joy."

He expressed only two reasons for living longer: That he might be a comfort to his wife, and that he might work more for the Master. Shortly before his death he was asked if his way was bright. He replied: "Oh yes."

He has gone from labor to reward. Of him it may be said "in the evening it was light." Long will brother Rasor be remembered by ministers and friends who loved him. He will be greatly missed in the church. He leaves a wife and many friends and relatives to follow his good example. May the blessing of God be upon them all. J. W. LOWER.

BIBLE LESSONS.

SECOND QUARTERLY REVIEW.

STUDIES IN THE ACTS AND THE EPISTLES.

LESSON XIII.—June 28, 1885.

[From the U. P. Bible Teacher.]

1. Acts 27: 1–26. Paul's Voyage. 1. The departure from Cesarea. 2. The storm. 3. Good news.

2. Acts 27: 27–44. Paul's Shipwreck. 1. Nearing land. 2. Precautions. 3. Landing.

3. Acts 28: 1–15. Paul Going to Rome. 1. A new danger. 2. A field of usefulness. 3. On to Rome.

4. Acts 28: 16–31. Paul at Rome. 1. Paul's defence. 2. Paul's preaching. 3. The Jews rejected. 4. Steady work.

5. Ephisians 6: 1–13. Obedience. 1. Children and parents. 2. Slaves and masters. 3. All to God.

6. Phil. 2: 5–16. Christ our Example. 1. Humility and love. 2. Following Jesus energetically.

7. Phil. 4: 4–13. Christian Contentment. 1. Christian joy 2. Christian character. 3. Christian giving.

8. 1 Tim. 11: 15; 2: 6. The Faithful Saying. 1. The faithful saying. 2. The word committed to Timothy. 3. Manner and motives of Gospel ministry.

9. 2 Tim. 3: 14; 4: 18. Paul's Charge. 1. Saving himself from apostacy. 2 Saving others. 3. Reasons.

10. Heb. 1: 1–8; 2: 1–4. God's Message. 1. The greatness of the Author of the Gospel. 2. Our duty.

11. Heb. 9: 1–12. The Priesthood of Christ. 1. The Aaronic priesthood. 2. The better priesthood.

12. 2 Pet. 1: 1–11. Christian Progress. 1. The salutation. 2 God's work. 3. Our work. 4. Motives.

Delitzsch is one of the humblest of the towns of Germany; its population even now is not more than 8,000, and thirty years ago it was much less; but from small beginnings among the shoemakers of Delitzsch, in 1850, Herman Schulz has by faith and patience created one of the most remarkable social structures of the century. When he died in the spring of 1883 there were 3,500 co-operative societies in Germany organized under his own control, besides thousands more in Austria, Italy, Russia, and Belgium which owed their origin to his example and looked up to him as their father. Those 3,500 societies had a membership of 12 000,000, a share capital of $50,000,000, deposits amounting to $150,000,000, and did a total business of $500,000,000 a year.

—The will of William W. Smith, of Worcester, Mass., recently deceased, gives his whole estate, valued at $25,000, to the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, for the education of colored men in Africa.

Let the horrible adaptabilities of oath-bound secrecy once be apprehended by the thoughtful man, and let him realize the danger of such a system within a republican system such as ours, and he cannot rest till it is destroyed.—Blanchard Record.

The statistics show that 55,000,000 people in this country last year consumed proportionately less spirits than 31,000,000 people consumed in 1860. The consumption in 1884 was 72,990,837 gallons, as against 86,364,574 gallons in 1860. If the consumption in 1884 had been proportionate to that of 1860, it would have amounted to 160,000,000 gallons. While it is true that there has been a comparative decrease in the consumption of distilled liquors, the use of wines and beer has been greatly increased. On the whole, this is a gain for temperance.

OHIO'S REPORT FOR MAY.

Cash received:—

Wm. Weir, Martin's Ferry	$1 00
R. S. McClenahan, West Rushville.	5 00
J. Excell, Limaville	1 00
Total	$7 00

Whole amount of cash and subscriptions received to date, $262.75.

S. A. GEORGE, Secretary.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic. Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissette, Cynosure office.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion

Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.

Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.

Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.

New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.

Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cowell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rigbts and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to bang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

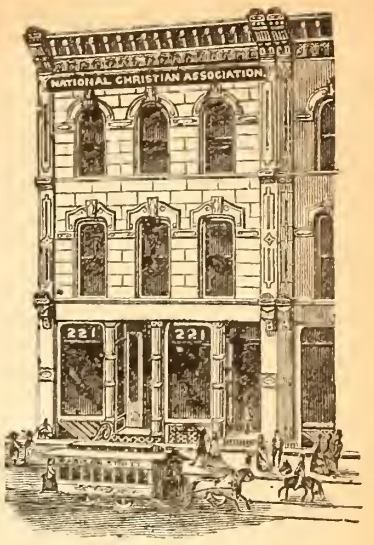
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno· Sec., S. L. Cook, Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie: Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas.., H B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1885.

The Wheaton College Commencement, the annual meeting of the N. C. A., and the American party conference, will be over and past before our readers open another Cynosure. But this number reaches most of them in time to pray for the presence and guidance of God in these important gatherings.

MISS FRANCIS E. WILLARD (the American tells us) has given in a letter to the Good Templars, her endorsement of the degrees and secrecy of that section of the Masonic polyp. This affects and alarms us. Miss Willard once professed to her secretary, that she should shun the temperance lodges, and once in the papers has spoken against Masonic oaths.

The Masonic press published that Mrs. Governor St. John took her babe in her arms and followed her husband to the lodge, and sat down on the door-steps till the lodge was out. The story was untrue, but Mrs. St. John by her religious convictions and womanly instincts is opposed to the lodge, and her convictions are colors which will not bleach out. Her husband is hated for his wife's principles and his own; and is dreaded by the lodge on account of both.

DR. R. H. MCDONALD sent Miss Willard his check for $500 for temperance work in Maine, and he proffered to spend one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000) for temperance literature, if nominated at Pittsburg. The editor of the Cynosure has corresponded with Dr. McDonald. He is a high Mason.

W. H. HOLCOMB, SR., one of the best men living, now 88 years old, has been stone blind for many years. Dr. Fitch of Rockford, has operated on his eyes, and the Rochelle Register reports that Mr. Holcomb can see now, with a prospect of reasonably good sight. His son has been mayor of Rochelle, and the family are much respected. Mr. Holcomb, the father, permitted an abolition lecture in a building which he owned in Knoxville, Ill., when mobs were in fashion; and when there were signs of a disturbance, he quietly arose and said that every person disturbing the meeting would be prosecuted. This quelled the disorder. His life-long trust has been in that great Physician

"Who from thick films can cleanse the visual ray,
And on the sightless eyeballs pour the day."

St. John was excluded by Republicans from the State-House at Springfield, Ill., and threatened by a drunken mob after speaking at Naperville, where the G. A. R. leaders robbed him of a half hour or more of his time, pretending not to know he was in the hall. In 1844 Birney drew votes enough to defeat Clay by Polk and bring in a Democratic administration; a war to extend slavery, and Texas with four slave states in its bosom. Birney was treated like a gentleman, St. John is burnt, snubbed and mobbed. Why? Because the lodge is enraged at St. John and dreads the influence of his wife.

"NO BISHOP, NO KING." The two main pillars of Satan's kingdom on earth are, 1. Complete subjugation of man to man; and, 2. Rites substituted for religion. The Episcopal Bishop of Illinois gained his post by the secret lodge system when he had been an Episcopalian but some three years. Bishop Fallows, who made the speech in Oriental Hall, Chicago, at the formation of the "Lodge of Intelligence," was promised a bishopric in Bishop Cheney's church while yet a Methodist at Bloomington, Ill. English bishops carried King James I. over to episcopacy against his solemn oath to the Scotch Presbyterians. His one reason for violating his oath was, "No bishop, no king." The ten years' war, ended by Cromwell's protectorate, was between Episcopal cavaliers and Puritans; or between rites and faith. As every section cut from the polyp becomes a perfect animal, so every little set of religious rites with Christ left out,—Mormon or Masonic, strikes for the dominion of this globe, and thereby proves itself to belong to Satan who claims to be its God. And one little rite, added to the Word of God, contains dynamite enough to blow up any free government, as poison enough can be ejected from the tooth of a snake, not bigger than a cambric needle, to break down the blood of a giant.

REV. DR. MILLIGAN.

He whose likeness, and life-sketch by his son-in-law, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, this Cynosure presents to our readers, was all, and more than human eulogy can describe him. The senior Cynosure editor first saw him in 1867–8, while traveling to arrange for the convention in Pittsburg which formed the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies. Introduced by an open letter from Dr. Stevenson of Philadelphia, we at once became, not only acquaintances and friends, but bosom friends. Arm in arm we visited every pastor in Pittsburg in behalf of the first national anti-secret convention. We visited, among the rest, a colonel who was then a U. P. pastor, and who had evidently joined the lodge, and so met us with evasive, non-committal talk. On leaving him and coming out into the street, Dr. Milligan quietly observed: "To know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified, is to have got along some ways." Our treatment by the colonel had been little short of rude; yet this gentle and tender reference to it was all he had to say. No asperity, no bitterness of look or language east a backward shadow over our interview. He was faithful and fearless, and yet utterly destitute of censoriousness.

"Paul's love of Christ and steadiness unbribed,
Were copied close in him and well transcribed."

"The Covenant" which gave its name to the Covenanters, of whom Dr. Milligan was one, was, in 1661, burnt by the common hangman under Charles II., who had twice sworn to protect and support it. Hence they learned to confront false public opinion. Their doctrines may be said to have been burned into them by the fires of persecution. The writer learned more of religious doctrine from his acquaintance with Covenanters in Pennsylvania, while lecturing there on slavery, than he gained from one college and two theological seminaries. He found in them a people who did not clip, pare, rationalize and adjust the truths of God, but took them as they stood in the Bible, and believed them because they were Bible. And, as the sketch says, Dr. Milligan did not rest in dry, abstract doctrines; but, like his Scotch ancestors who defied the dragoons of the Stuarts, and stood firm by the creed which was burned by their hangman, he boldly undertook to apply God's ideas to the ways of men.

In May, 1871, one hundred and seventy-five ministers and elders met in Dr. Milligan's church in Pittsburg, stood up and with hands lifted towards heaven, with awful solemnity swore to "reject all systems of false religion and will-worship, and with these all forms of secret oath-bound societies and orders, as pernicious in their tendency and perilous to the liberties of both church and state." This was three years after our first national anti-secret convention had met in the same city. And, although Dr. Milligan's name is not given as its author, the whole covenant bears the impress of his mind and hand. It was a reproduction of the covenant subscribed by their ancestors, two hundred years before, on a tomb-table on Greyfriar's churchyard, which the vast crowd signed kneeling upon their knees, many of them opening their veins and writing their names with their blood, and adding after their names the words, "till death!"

That old "Solemn League and Covenant" was a sworn pledge of total abstinence from popery, prelacy and episcopacy, which, like the mongrel lodge-worships of to-day, were a mass of human inventions substituted for faith in Christ. And as our dear brother lived to see the human auction-block, manacles and bloody slave-whip vanish away, let us hope his children will see the total abolition of the lodge. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth; the faithful fail from the children of men." "But the transgressors shall be destroyed together: the end of the wicked shall be cut off."

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

This large and influential body met, 200 strong, at Topeka, Kan., June 28, and held a five days' session, Dr. Wm. Johnston of College Springs, Iowa, Moderator. The business of the church proper was satisfactorily done. The instrumental music question was referred to the sessions with an exhortation to study the peace of the church. Strong action was taken in regard to temperance; and on every subject but one, general satisfaction will be given to the membership, unless instrumental music be an exception. Some ten members voted nay on the report which was adopted on that subject.

The G. A. R. was discussed at length and the action taken was unsatisfactory. The subject was called up by Dr. D. W. Collins the last day of the session, and a sensible substitute was offered, but was not adopted. The original report was then adopted. It "counsels the members of the U. P. Church to stand aloof from this and all similar associations." This is good advice but the treatment of the subject by the body was defective in the following particulars:

1. Much weak eloquence was expended on "The boys in blue," when the speakers must have known that many "boys in blue" will not join the "Grand Army," enlisted after the fighting was done for political objects, thousands having joined to promote the nomination of John A. Logan, a 32° Mason to the Presidency.

2. No ritual of the G. A. R. was presented because it is secret, and grave ministers were not ashamed to discuss a thing intentionally kept secret from them.

3. Nothing was said of the sin of trampling on Christ's example who kept clear of all such bodies, and had the fact recorded; and required us to "follow" him.

4. No notice was taken of the fact that, in some "posts" members are admitted who were never soldiers: nor of the well known fact that the G. A. R. have rings in their noses and are led by Masons, who join them for that purpose, and who own the temples.

5. Nor one word said of being secretly "yoked with unbelievers," and worshiping before their strange altars.

The excellent Wheeling memorial was lumped together with other memorials, with no distinct mention of it, and no notice taken of its requests.

"This was the most unkindest cut of all."

Just so truly as effects follow their causes, there is trouble brewing for this grand and excellent church unless, in addition to "fasting and prayer," some such action is taken as the Wheeling Presbytery asked for.

"Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." What "fruit" of a religious nature will be borne by secret organization with ungodly men, with ritual, chaplains, altars, etc.?

KNOX COUNTY COURT HOUSE, ILL.

Freemasons, without consent of the supervisors, who control the public property, by collusion with the architect, have arranged to lay the corner stone of this building on their spurious saint's day. Mr. Edward Chambers has written a sensible protest against Masons using the building to advertise their secret craft, sell secrets which are not secrets, and swear young men by the profaned name of God to conceal each other's crimes.

G. C. Lanphere, whose drug store was the first place known where the college students bought and drank liquor, is out in an article in the Republican Register, defending the lodge and pleading for the privilege of using this public property for a swindle, as corrupt as a lottery, mock-auction, or faro bank.

EXTRACTS FROM LANPHERE'S ARTICLE.

1. "It is not a religious ceremony."

2. The calling of the Mason "leads to the worship of the Supreme Architect of the universe." (Not religions! though the stone is laid with prayer to the "Supreme Architect" to bless the people, grant good crops, etc.)

3. Again, says Lanphere of the corner stone laying: "Much of this is fiction," * * * "but so are many of the ceremonies of the church" * * * "the water in baptism, and the bread and wine in the holy communion are each and all fictions." (No religion in it!)

Again he says Bishop Spaulding's laying the corner stone of the Catholic church there was "a private affair" of that church, and he adds, "In the same sense is the laying of the corner stone by Masons a private affair." That is, the Grand Lodge of Illinois has the same right to the court house that Catholics have to their church! This claim and purpose of Masons to control the decisions in that court-house, as Catholics properly do the worship in their church is what is protested against.

Mr. Chambers sent a protest to one of the supervisors, Mr. Rufus W. Miles, who is on the building committee. Mr. Miles replies to Mr. Chamber's note: "I do not know that any member of the Board of Supervisors was consulted;" but adds, "If the Masons wish to monkey around and lay the corner stone, let them do it. And then if they wish, let those who are opposed to Masonry take it up and lay it over again."

But Anti-masons have no false secrets to sell, and no counterfeit oaths to impose, or false worship of "the Grand Architect," alias, "the god of this world" to inaugurate! These, Mr. Miles, are something more serious than "tomfoolery," as Mr. Lanphere's article shows. The lodge is neither government nor Christianity, but the rival and foe of both; and will destroy both when it gets the power.

The Grand Lodge of Illinois was chartered by the legislature, Feb. 14, 1855, and so is amenable to the laws; and it has no more right to Knox county court-house for its purposes than highwaymen or tramps. By all means let an injunction be taken to forbid this heathenism and incipient treason, using public property for secret purposes.

—The Cynosure has been much cheered by the visits of nearly a score of brethren going or returning from conferences, assemblys and synods. Our prayers go with them to their meetings and their homes.

—Bro. Hinman was unable to secure signers to the Joseph Cook request at the Hartford Church Union Congress, but made some effort, which will not be in vain, to disseminate our reform principles. He found one gentleman, a seceder from Freemasonry who was before a persecutor of them that withstand the lodge.

—The Freeman of Adams, Mass., a while since called attention to the jury of Cheshire. Of the twenty-four men eleven were Freemasons. This partiality is the subject of remark, as being a "heavy sprinkling" of lodge-men. At the same time it is complained that not one Irishman is upon the venire.

—Our readers have missed for some time the welcome name of Rev. J. D. Gehring, a Missouri contributor. The reason is a sad one, which will draw out the sympathy of every friend—it is the sickness and death of a beloved son, who died at the age of 15, a few weeks ago. May the comfort of the Holy Ghost be given to our afflicted brother and his wife.

—Rev. D. McDiarmid, of the Canada Presbyterian church, Elmira, Ill., has been grievously afflicted in the loss of a son, who it is supposed was accidentally shot while out hunting. Bro. McDiarmid and his church warmly welcomed Bro. Hinman last winter and assisted in the lectures given in the place.

The resignation of the Gladstone Cabinet in England is a political change of the gravest importance. The vote was on the budget which was regarded of less significance than other measures, yet gave many members of the Liberal party an opportunity to show their spite at the premier's foreign policy. It is said that the vote might have been postponed, but Gladstone, though informed of the possibility of a defeat preferred to go on. He may be counting on the approaching elections, when the two million voters who first exercise the franchise will be likely to support the party which gave them the privilege, and thus reinstate the Liberals more strongly than ever. It is notorious that the opposition have not the leaders who can carry England safely through the complications now about her, and if Russia is intending to seize Afghanistan it is safer to do so now than ever, for in case of war an English army would be badly supported at home. The Queen in her dotage shows a decided leaning to the aristocratic notions of an age that is past. She has never loved Gladstone and rejoices in his fall. She wants a renewal of the Soudan campaign with its inevitable sacrifices, the retention of Egypt, and other changes which will still more complicate the foreign relations of the kingdom. The Parnellites are likely to pay dear for their factions opposition. They will find they have helped overthrow a real friend and must now deal with a party which has been most hostile to their revolutionary schemes.

—The nursery of the Bethesda mission, No. 368 South Clark street, under the charge of the Central W. C. T. U. of Chicago, was opened over a year ago for the care through the day of small children whose mothers are compelled to support themselves and their little ones by their own labor. The venture has proved such a success that the management have found it necessary to enlarge their accommodations, and the adjoining building has been refitted and refurnished in the most complete manner.

—Eighteen years ago a number of moslems were arrested by the Turkish government for reading the Bible and attending the Christian chapels. Now they can visit the Christian chapels without hindrance, and over 80,000 copies of the Bible, or parts of the Bible, printed in the Turkish language, have been openly sold in the Turkish empire. The highway for the Gospel is being opened in every land.

It is amazing how Freemasonry can overturn commonwealths and kingdoms and yet escape history. One may read Hume, Lingard, Macauley and learn nothing of the lodge. It destroyed Cromwell's Commonwealth of England, restoring popery and the Stuarts (in 1660), for which Charles II. gave it the name of the "Royal Art," (Rebold, p. 54); while in France, it overturned monarchy, murdered king and queen in 1793, and inaugurated anarchy and made France a sort of Masonic hell. It destroys existing government of every name and lies hid from history till centuries are past, and then these gloomy exploits of revolution and crime do not appear in civil histories, but creep out in such works as Rebold's General History of Free-Masonry in Europe! The lodge is to nations what assassins are to men. Witness our late rebellion.

THE COMMENCEMENT SEASON.

At Wheaton the anniversary exercises opened on Sabbath morning with the Bacculaureate sermon, a powerful discourse by, Pres. J. Blanchard from Daniel 12: 4: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." In the evening, the annual sermon before the Society of Inquiry was preached by Rev. E. Y. Garrette of Paxton, Ill., from the text, "The books were opened" (Rev. 20: 12); a unique and eloquent discourse of especial and important application to the young men and young women of the College. Large audiences were present and a generous enthusiasm pervaded all the exercises. The address to the graduating class in the morning was by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, and the several pastors of the place assisted in the exercises.

The closing exercises of the preparatory school took place Monday afternoon with an exhibition in the evening. Preparations are made for a notable celebration on Wednesday, under the auspices of the alumni and old students. Rev. L. S. Hand represents the former, and Major J. W. Powell, the intrepid, one-armed explorer of Colorado canon, the latter. To revive the memories of Abolition days, George W. Clark, the famous "Liberty Singer," and George Harris, one of Mrs. Stowe's heroes in "Uncle Tom," are to be present.

—Monmouth College holds its anniversary this week, opening with the baccaulereate sermon by President McMichael, Sabbath afternoon. Annual sermon before the Students' Christian Union, by Rev. W. J. Robinson, D. D., Allegheny, Pa., in the evening.

Monday, June 15th, at 8 P. M., the annual prayer meeting.

Tuesday, the annual meeting of the Senate. Class Day exercises, in the Opera House, in the evening.

Wednesday, anniversary address by Rev. Herrick Johnson, D. D., Chicago, Ill,; public exercises of the Alumni Association.

Thursday, June 18th; Commencement, with a concert in the evening, under the direction of Prof. S. H. Price, in the Opera House.

—The annual sermon before the Theological Seminary at Wheaton was preached by Prof. L. N. Stratton in the College Hall before a large audience from the text "Preach the Word." Revs. J. L. Barlow, A. J. Chittenden, C. A. Blanchard and others assisted in the services. The subject gave an opportunity for a very able and forcible answer to claims of ignorance that the Bible and true science are contradictory. The graduating exercises of the class occur Tuesday evening.

—Commencement at Muskingum College, New Concord, O.—Baccalaureate sermon by Pres. F. M. Spencer, Sabbath, June 21st. Address to the Christian associations, by Rev. J. H. Wright of Xenia. Alumni address by Rev. J. M. Moore, Ontario, O. Literary societies' address by Rev. W. H. McMillan, D. D. Commencement, June 25th.

—It is an encouraging report from Lake Forest, near Chicago, that 59 of the 60 students in the Collegiate department are earnest and exemplary Christians, and that in its Collegiate and Academic departments there are 30 candidates for the ministry.

—A new hall connected with Mr. Moody's Mt. Hermon School for boys at Gill, Mass., was dedicated May 20th. It is a brick three-story building, containing a chapel, library, and recitation-rooms and laboratories, the cost, $30,000, having been met by the royalty on the sale of Gospel Hymns.

— A young Japanese noble graduated Friday from the Rutgers College Grammar School, at New Brunswick, N. J., receiving the prize for the best oration, and another for the cleverest work done in history during the past year.

—Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa., held its commencement during the last week in May. An unusually large class of twenty-two graduated, and the institution is reported in a very prosperous condition.

—The commencement of Capitol University, of Columbus, O., Prof. M. Loy, president, occurs June 24th.

—P. L. Cable, of Rock Island, last week gave a check for $25,000 toward the erection of a new college building of Augustana Seminary and Theological Institute.

—Mr. Charles Warren Stoddard, formerly of the San Francisco press, and a writer and traveler of wide reputation, has accepted the chair of English literature in the University of Notre Dame, Ind. In the faculty of this university is a former surgeon in one of the regiments of the first Napoleon and a survivor of Waterloo—the Rev. Dr. Neyron, who, at the age of 94, still teaches anatomy.

OHIO'S CALL.

Attention, all who love the light and hate darkness! An anti-secret convention will be held at Cedarville, Green Co., O, beginning Tuesday, July 7th, at 7:30 P. M. The main object of the convention is to reorganize the State Association and take steps to make our opposition to the Secret Empire more effective. The importance of this meeting cannot be overestimated. Let every friend of the cause be present if possible. Rev. J. P. Stoddard and other able speakers will be present.

S. A. GEORGE, Sec'y. O. C. A.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Grand jury of this District after concluding its labors, made a report on the growth of juvenile depravity, growing out of idleness and the many temptations to vice. They especially deplore the fact that the so-called "free-pool" is attached to most of the drinking places; that so few of the boys learn trades; and that punishment in the jail is not attended with labor.

The court on accepting their report remarked "that while he knew nothing of the pool he had noticed that the signs 'free pool' are associated with free lunch at the liquor saloons—evidently the liquor only is to be paid for. He regretted, too, on the boys growing up without trades, attending dime museums and other theatres, and reading dime literature, while some branches of trade seem to be entirely in the hands of foreigners. The trade societies are in some manner responsible, for they shut out boys from work. He hoped this subject would be taken up by the public and a remedy be applied.

It is a matter of congratulation that public attention is thus called to these questions. Next to the iniquity of suffering liquor to be sold at all, the additional enticements of gambling are to be reprobated. Next to this is the secret order nuisance which from its hidden conclaves sends forth the edict regulating the wages of men, enforcing idleness often at the cost of life, and saying just how many boys may learn trades. Just now the Typographical Union declares that there must not be more than two boys in any office. Heretofore it has been supposed that parents and guardians might determine the pursuits of the youth committed to their charge and that legitimate labor was open to American citizens. But secret and selfish clans interpose and the result is idleness, dissipation and crime. It is indeed high time that the subject should be taken up by the public and the remedy applied, which should be the suppression of all societies or orders that seek to accomplish their ends by any other than legal and open methods.

The exceedingly lenient way in which houses of ill-fame are regarded and treated by the authorities should be the occasion of alarm as well as disgust, and should arrest the attention of the philanthropists now in conference in this city. A fine of $50 for the prostitution of girls who are little more than children should be regarded as complicity with, rather than punishment of so great an offence against public morals and the rights of those who are the victims.

The conference of Charities and Correction closes the sixth and last day with this evening, (the 10th). It has been an exceedingly able and interesting gathering, representing the leading philanthropists and scientists of the land. The report on the District by Mrs. S. C. Spencer, speaks of great progress in the beneficent institutions during the last year. It appears, however, that Washington is a great resort for able-bodied tramps, 2,459 of whom have within a year been arrested and sent to the workhouse. Aside from private charities the United States and District of Columbia jointly have expended in one year on the criminal, delinquent and dependent classes $680,625.23, which is a cost per capita of $3.21; while the dependent classes in New York cost per capita but $1.92. In either case the amount is excessive and should lead to a system of prevention rather than of cure. The suppression of the liquor traffic would greatly diminish this vast outlay.

H. H. HINMAN.

THE HOME.

SELF-LOVE.

Oh, I could go through all life's troubles singing,
Turning earth's night to day,
If self were not so fast around me, clinging
To all I do or say.

O miserable omnipresence, stretching
Over all time and space,
How have I run from thee, yet found thee
The goal in every race.

Inevitable self! vile imitation
Of universal light—
Within our hearts a dreadful usurpation
Of God's exclusive right! —F. W. Faber.

SOLD CHEAP.

One evening as I stood in the postoffice in Lawrence, Mass., two young men came from the window where stamps were sold, and passed me on their way out.

"See here," said one to his fellow; and glancing toward him I saw in his open palm two new two-cent pieces, and my ear caught what sounded thus: "I gave him five cents for a stamp, and he ought to have given me back one, but he gave me back two."

"All right," said his companion, as they passed on, evidently pleased with the speculation, while I stood musing to myself, "Sold cheap! Two cents for the honor, honesty, fairness, and manly principles of two young men."

I know that this style of business is by no means uncommon among young men and old men, and even among men who profess to be devout men, and who sometimes make long prayers; but it is none the better for all that. Nor am I yet convinced that, while godliness is profitable, ungodliness is still more profitable, or that while "godliness with contentment is great gain," ungodliness without it is greater still. But I have a strong suspicion that in a pecuniary way this kind of petty meanness will never pay. Honesty, even in this crooked world, has its market value, and a habit of dishonesty, even in little things, cannot long be cherished without being found out. And when once a man has been caught in some mean, pitiful trick, he is marked and watched. Who would like to intrust such young men as those with uncounted gold, or with business where honesty and fidelity are required? Who would pay such a man as much for his services, where integrity was needful, as they would if he had returned the extra two cents and rectified the mistake? Who would not feel that a man who could be bought so cheap was hardly worth purchasing?

And besides, these petty dishonesties grow so fast and large that of them come swindles, robberies, forgeries, defalcations, embezzlements, frauds, and "pickings and stealings" of every grade and kind. Hence covetousness overleaps its mark; it vaults skyward, and falls, as Satan fell, "like lightning," down to infamy and shame.

The man who will deceive in trade for a dollar, equivocate for a shilling, or lie for a penny, may think he is shrewd. I doubt it. He who will do this to lower the price of what he buys or raise the price of what he sells, either puts small value on his manhood, or else he is sold cheap!

A man may know how to pile cordwood with the good sticks outside and "crows'-nests" in the middle; he may be able to pack his apples with the best ones near the barrel-heads, or his strawberries with the big ones on top of the box, or his cloth with the longest cuts on top of the case; he may make bread from alum and gypsum, butter from tallow and ocher, tea from sloe-leaves and Prussian blue, and ginger from Indian meal and capsicum; he may make paper from clay, leather from paste-board, cloth from shoddy, wine from cider, and reputation from hypocrisy; he may furnish molasses from the pump, milk from the clouds, sugar from the sand-bank, and religion from the devil; he may learn all those "black arts" of transmutation taught by Satan to so many apt disciples in these days of rottenness and rascality, and may think he has already found that philosopher's stone which supersedes the command to love thy neighbor as thyself, and turns everything it touches into gold; but at last he may find that the old tales of leagues with Satan have come true again, and that in every tricky bargain over which he chuckled, he was sold himself, and sold cheap. Using false balances here, at last he may himself be weighed in the balances and found wanting. The homely German proverb, "He that takes soup with the devil needs a long spoon," is well worth remembering; for the spoons that are often used for the purpose prove far too short for safety.

Many a poor wretch has sold his birthright for a morsel of meat, and has sold it cheap. He that sells himself to Satan a dozen times a day in petty meannesses, in two-penny lies, in traders' tricks, in small deceptions, may become rich and seem honorable; but he has rotted out his manhood, his integrity, his nobility of soul; he does not own himself, nor does he belong to Him who hath bought His people with His blood; he is a slave of the devil, sold under sin, sold to work iniquity; yes, sold, and sold cheap!

Will these things profit in the end? Will they pay? Though mere honesty does not save a man, will not dishonesty damn him? Will it not unfit him for the presence of Christ, in whose lips no guile was found? Are not lying lips an abomination to the Lord? What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? What shall a man give in exchange for his soul? What is a man worth? Who shall tell the value of a man who is bought by the blood of Christ, and whom no one else is rich enough to buy?—H. L. Hastings.

A HARD HIT

One of the Baptist pastors of this city preached not long ago a very pithy and pungent sermon from the text, "Will a man rob God?" The question was answered in the affirmative—as regards some men, judging both by past history and present examples. This was illustrated by an anecdote, very felicitously told. We shall aim only to give the point. It was so sharp it could not well escape the listener. A man asks another, "Are you a believer in the Christian religion?" "O, certainly." "You are a member of some church, then, I suppose?" "Member of a church? No indeed. Why should I be a member of a church? It is quite unnecessary. The dying thief wasn't a member of a church, and he went to heaven." "But of course you've been baptized? You know the command——" "Been baptized? Oh, no. That's another needless ceremony. I am as safe as the dying thief was, and he never was baptized." "But, surely, since you will not join a church or be baptized, you do something in acknowledgment of your faith? You give of your means—you help the cause in some way?" "No, sir. I do nothing of the kind. The dying thief——" "Let me remark, my friend, before you go any farther, that you seem to be on pretty intimate terms with the dying thief. You seem to derive a great deal of consolation from his career; but, mind you, there is one important difference between you and him. He was a dying thief—and you are a living one."—Michigan Herald.

KEEP A STIFF UPPER LIP.

There has something gone wrong,
My brave boy, it appears;
For I see your proud struggle
To keep back the tears.
That is right. When you cannot Give trouble the slip,
Then bear it; still keeping
"A stiff upper lip."

Though you cannot escape
Disappointment and care,
The next best thing to do,
Is to learn how to bear.
If when for life's prizes
You're running, you trip,
Get up—start again,
"Keep a stiff upper lip."

Let your hands and your conscience
Be honest and clean;
Scorn to touch or to think of
The thing that is mean;
But hold on to the pure
And the right with firm grip;
And though hard be the task,
"Keep a stiff upper lip"

Through childhood, through manhood,
Through life to the end,
Struggle bravely, and stand
By your colors, my friend.
Only yield when you must;
Never "give up the ship;"
But fight on to the last
With a "stiff upper lip." —Sel.

THE DANCING PEA.

Push a pin half-way through a green pea, making the two ends as nearly as possible the same weight, i. e., let the point come a little more than half-way through. Then break off the stem of a common clay pipe, and the toy will be complete.

To make the pea dance, put it on top of the pipe stem, the point of the pin sticking down the bore. Throw your head back, so that the stem may be held vertically, and blow gently. This will make the pea rise; keep blowing harder, until the pea rises entirely from the pipe and is supported in the air. It will now begin to spin round and round, and turn over and over, all the while bobbing up and down, as long as the current of air is kept up.

The dance may be changed by pushing the pin up to its head. The pea will now rise to the top of the pipe, and dance slowly and with great dignity around the edge; or if the blast is a little stronger, it will spin rapidly, unless the blower stops to laugh, when it is apt to fall into the open mouth below.—Harper's Young People.

UNDER FIRE.

Some time before the war a Presbyterian clergyman from New Hampshire went South, with his family, for the benefit of his health. He purchased a little farm in Virginia, about three miles from Washington, D. C., access to which was had by the way of Georgetown and the Aqueduct bridge. He gradually failed in health, however, and died, leaving a widow—Mrs. Gayes—and two girls and two boys. At the breaking out of the war in 1861, Mrs. Gayes and her elder daughter, who was about fifteen years of age, took a decided stand in favor of the Union cause. It required not a little moral courage to do this; but there was no element of fear in the make-up of any of the family. At first their home was within the Confederate lines, and communication with Washington was very difficult and hazardous. Mrs. Gayes was ridiculed, and sometimes threatened, but it availed nothing.

After the Confederate lines were driven back a few miles in 1861, fortifications were constructed around Washington for the protection of the National capital. They consisted of a chain of forts arranged in nearly a circle. This line crossed the Potomac near Chain Bridge above Georgetown, extending thence down to Arlington Heights and some distance below, recrossing the river between Long Bridge and Alexandria, and so on around until the circle was complete. Within this line, and about a mile and a half from Fort Smith, situated on a little eminence, was Mrs. Gayes's modest home, protected now from the enemy, but suffering more, perhaps, from her friends. Many regiments were encamped near by, and little by little her timber and fences and stock and crops disappeared, until there was scarcely anything left save the house and the land. Even the cook-stove was missing one morning. Very frequently through the night she was aroused by the beating of "the long roll," the shouting of words of command, and the tramping of regiments as they swiftly formed in line of battle to meet the expected enemy. On such occasions all the members of the family would hastily dress, secure about their persons what valuables they had, and patiently wait. During all these trying years she and her daughter were devoted friends of the Union cause, and their willing hands were untiring in doing something for the soldiers.

It was a midsummer morning in 1864. Out in the fields and over in the city it was scorching hot. But in Mrs. Gayes's house, protected as it was from the rays of the sun by the abundant foliage of the great oaks which surrounded it, the heat was not oppressive. Mrs. Gayes was in the sitting-room reading a paper. The eldest daughter was in Washington. Charley, the eldest son, who was then twelve years of age, was playing with the dog on the porch. It was a peaceful, quiet picture of Virginia country life. Suddenly there came a loud, whistling, screaming sound, followed by a terrific explosion directly over the house.

"Why!" ejaculated Mrs. Gayes, as she started from her seat, "what a heavy clap of—" thunder, she was about to say, but the unmistakable humming, twanging sounds which followed close upon the explosion, with the falling of leaves and broken branches from the trees, told her it was a shell from some heavy gun.

"Is it possible the rebels are making an attack?" she said.

The children now came running in from their play, and one of them cried out, "Oh, mamma! the lightning has struck the trees." Mrs. Gayes went out on the porch and looked and listened, but nothing unusual could be seen or heard.

"It was a shell," said she. I expect a gun at one of the forts went off accidentally."

"Well, said Charley, "when they load their guns I wish they'd point them toward Richmond. They ought to be ashamed of themselves."

"I don't think we shall be troubled any more," said the mother, as she returned to the sitting-room followed by the children. She had just resumed her seat when another shell buried itself in the earth a few rods from the house and burst, throwing up clouds of dust and dirt.

"What can it mean?" said Mrs. Gayes.

"I know what it means, mamma!" cried Charley. "That New York regiment which has just been sent over to Fort Smith has put up a target in our field, and the fellows are firing at it. I wish I was a general. I'd put every one of them in the guard-house!"

The boy was right in his surmise, and in a few moments another missile thrown from one of the huge siege guns, with which the fort was armed, struck a quarter of a mile away and came bounding or ricocheting toward the house, striking the ground at intervals in its mad course, something as a stone when thrown violently upon the water skips along the surface. With a shriek like a demon it plunged through the garden, destroying everything in its path, filled the air with dust, gave two or three more screeches, and finally burst over near the road. Mrs. Gayes turned pale.

"Come down into the cellar with me, all of you," said she; and they obeyed with alacrity. After she had quieted Eliza, the negro servant, who was alternately praying to "de good Lord" and to "Missus Gayes," to save her, she said:

"Charley, you must run up to Mr. Piersous just as fast as you can, and ask him to go around to the fort and have the firing stopped. And you remain at Mr. Pierson's until I send for you. Don't come back. You are not afraid to go, are you?"

"No, mamma, I'm not afraid," answered the brave little fellow as he clasped his mother's hand a little tighter.

"I knew you would not be; and now as soon as the next shell comes I want you to go." When it came she kissed him, and said, "Now, my brave boy, run!"

She would gladly have gone herself, but she thought it better to remain that she might be with the other two children in case the house should be struck and burned. It cost her a struggle to send her son forth on such a perilous errand, and her face was very pale as she kissed him. Away sped Charley through the garden, glancing with wonder at the great furrows the shells had plowed, climbed the fence and started to run with all his might toward Mr. Pierson's house, which was half a mile distant. He had scarcely left the garden fence, however, when another shell came tearing through the shrubbery he had just passed and burst close to the house. The mother's heart stood still for an instant—and there was cause for it. One of the flying fragments struck poor Charley, and he fell to the ground with a cry of "Oh, mamma!" Down in the cellar the mother heard the cry of her wounded boy, and in a moment she was kneeling by his side. It was a sad sight for a mother to look upon. The cruel piece of iron with its ragged edges had stripped a great piece of flesh from the back of his ankle upward, completely severing the cord and laying bare the bone. He was lying upon his face, and the blood was already staining the green grass where he had fallen. Speaking words of encouragement, she removed his shoe and the fragment of stocking, and hastily bound up the wound with strips torn from her clothing. In this way she stanched the flow of blood and quieted his fears, though she could not alleviate his pain.

"Now, Charlie, I must go up to Mr. Pierson's myself, for a shell may strike the house, and then Mary and Robby will be burned. I'll put you behind that tree, and you will not be in much danger."

"But you'll run, mamma, won't you?"

And the tears trickled down Charley's cheeks, though he tried very hard to keep them back. The tree was a large chestnut, and its generous trunk afforded a pretty ample protection against the shells, two of which had struck near by while Mrs. Gayes was binding up the wound. Arriving at Mr. Pierson's she dispatched him in great haste to the fort, while she with swift feet returned to Charley. Becky and Berty Pierson, aged seventeen and eighteen, with true girlish heroism, returned with her notwithstanding the bursting shells. On the way they passed several negroes sheltered behind stumps and stones, and Mrs. Gayes vainly begged them to follow her and assist in the removal of the wounded boy. They found Charley behind the tree, and he said, "Oh, mamma! I'm so glad you've come back." He could not walk at all, and he was weak from pain and loss of blood. So his mother and the two girls carried him in their arms as best they could. Down the hill, half-blinded by the smoke and stunned by the awful explosions, slowly moved the strange procession. They waded the little stream in the hollow, stopping a moment to bathe Charley's face and hands and carried their burden up the hill to Mr. Pierson's house.

By this time Mr. Pierson had reached the fort, and the firing ceased. The other children were sent for, and in a few moments the regimental surgeon and hospital steward came galloping down to express their sorrow at what had happened and to render assistance. The surgeon's proffered services were most gladly accepted. When he was ready to examine the wound, the mother said:

"Now, Charley, it will hurt you to have the wound dressed; but it must be done, and you must try and bear it. It will soon be over."

"I'll try," said Charley, "if you'll be sure, mamma, and not let my leg be cut off."

She pressed him to her heart, and assured him with loving words that there was no occasion for so serious an operation.

"Sing to me, mamma. Sing to me!"

"Why, Charley,—I—I—don't believe I can sing now," she faltered.

"You must, mamma, you must! Please sing to me just the same as you always do, and I'll keep awful still." And he reached up and put his arms pleadingly around her neck. There was a silence in the room as the little sufferer persisted in his strange request. Then the mother closed her eyes and tried to sing. Her voice was tremulous at first, but by a mighty effort she expelled from her mind every thought save the remembrance of her love for her wounded child; and she was soon able to sing to him almost as sweetly and softly as if in her own quiet home. The boy's arms gradually relaxed and he lay back again quietly upon the blood-stained bed, with his head resting half upon his pillow and half upon his mother's lap. His eyes were closed, and his pallid face had lost something of the roundness and fullness which marked it in the morning.

The mother was bending over him with one of his hands in hers. On the other side of the bed sat Bertie Pierson fanning Charley's face. At the foot stood the surgeon and the steward. Clustered around the room were a half dozen of neighbors looking on with sympathetic, awe-stricken faces.

When the mother began to softly sing the song she knew he loved there was a solemn hush in the room and every eye was filled with tears. Even the rough old surgeon as he cut away the bloody bandages was seen to turn away his head and hastily draw his sleeve across his eyes a number of times, and the steward was hardly able to distinguish his instruments. Under the soothing effect of his mother's voice the boy allowed the wound to be dressed and the cruel stitches to be taken. Later in the day he dropped asleep and awoke considerably refreshed. He was uncomplaing through it all, and the fortitude with which he bore his sufferings excited the admiration of every one.

In the cool of the evening Charley was taken home in an ambulance, sent for that purpose from the fort. The officers did everything in their power to atone for the suffering they had so carelessly but unintentionally caused. The surgeon and his assistants attended him tenderly and carefully until he was well. The surgeon offered to procure his mother a pension, but Mrs. Gayes declined, saying that she was too thankful that her boy was alive to think of asking aid from the government. Charley was soon able to walk with the aid of crutches, but could not dispense with their use for many months.

Mrs. Gayes, now an aged woman, loves to tell of those perilous times. One of her daughters, a lady of rare qualities, fills one of the highest positions allowed to her sex in the government departments at Washington. She has in her little cabinet at home the very piece of shell which did its cruel work that day. It is rusty, and when picked up was blood-stained. Charley is a florist, and brings his flowers regularly to one of the Washington markets. He limps a little, and will always have cause to remember the summer morning when the New York regiment in Fort Smith bombarded his mother's house.—New York Tribune.

TEMPERANCE.

TOBACCO AND BLINDNESS.

At the annual commencement of the Hospital College of Medicine, of Louisville, Ky., Prof. Dudley Reynolds delivered an address to the graduating students, in which he took strong ground against the use of tobacco.

It is a well known fact that tobacco deranges the digestion and poisons the nerve centers of a majority of the male members of the human family. A species of blindness, not complete but partial blindness, sufficiently great in extent to destroy the reading of ordinary type, results from the continued and excessive use of tobacco. Careful investigations have led to the discovery that that form of habit known as smoking, produces the so-called amblyopia. This form of amblyopia is precisely identical with that produced from an excessive use of alcohol Both are incurable. I know a number of persons in Louisville who are now practically blind from the excessive use of tobacco. A lady in Portland was forced to admit that she had been a secret smoker of tobacco for thirty years. On abandoning the habit, the further progress of her dimness of vision ceased, though there is little hope of her regaining that power of perception which she had already lost. She may be considered fortunate in the possession of enough vision to go about and attend her ordinary household duties. Smoking tobacco has never been known to result beneficially to any person in the world. It always lessens the sense of of smell and taste; it always contaminates the breath; it always creates an unsteadiness of the muscles, through its irritating effect upon the nerves; and I know from personal experience that it diminishes the capacity for mental labor. . . . If the money destroyed by burning cigars and tobacco in Louisville could be paid into the city treasury, it would support all our charitable institutions, and pay the entire expense of the street cleaning department besides. This would reduce taxation nearly or quite one half, and produce a corresponding improvement in public health.—Lutheran Evangelist.

A TOBACCO EXPERIENCE.

The writer commenced using tobacco when about sixteen years old, using it about eighteen years. Smoking was the mode of use mainly. And with him it was one of the greatest enjoyments of life. During the first few years the effects it had upon the physical system were not so perceivable as they were in after years. But for the latter half of the time of its use it became more and more perceptible. So much so that many times during the last ten years he strove to abandon the use of it, quitting it sometimes for a few days or weeks, one time for twelve months. But the habit had become so fixed and the appetite so strong all resolutions formed were unavailing, soon broken, and the practice resumed. Many a vow was made to break off from it. But they were broken over, proving utterly futile against a thoroughly cultivated appetite for such a stimulant. And for years these vain attempts were made and repeated to get clear of a practice that was laying the foundation for broken down health, as it proved to be. During the winter of 1849 and '50 this became self-evident. His nervous system began to give way. And the symptoms were so palpable he abandoned the use of it. But like many reformed drunkards, it was only for a time, and the "sow that was washed returned to her wallowing in the mire." He felt that he was in bondage, a slave to an appetite and a habit from which neither resolutions nor solemn vows could emancipate him. All confidence in his own efforts to break off the fetters that bound him to such a health-destroying and demoralizing practice was lost, when one Sunday morning he retired to a private place, and kneeling down, he prayed for divine assistance to enable him to abandon the use of this filthy and injurious practice. That assistance was given. And from that hour all desire for tobacco was taken away, and he has no further trouble about it. And up to this day, now more than thirty-three years, he has never had the slightest desire to use the weed in any way. The cure was instantaneous and permanent.—India Methodist Watchman.

The Madagascar government has passed laws prohibiting the manufacture or sale of rum. The penalty for each offense is the payment of £2 and ten oxen. Any one found drunk with rum will be fined 28*s.* and seven oxen. The penalty for introducing rum is a fine of 1£ and five oxen. A few Madagascar legislators imported into New York and Massachusetts as temperance missionaries would find needy and useful fields of labor.

The whisky men have scored another temporary victory at Muscatine, Iowa. The condemnation of fifty-eight barrels of whisky seized by the Temperperance Alliance has been on trial in Judge Hayes' court. The jury, after being out four hours returned a verdict of not guilty, and the liquor will be returned to the owners. The whisky men are jubulant, but the temperance people are determined, and the work of enforcing the prohibatory law will be continued with renewed vigor and determination.

A writer in the Toronto News says, if any one denies that prohibition prohibits, he can find in "the Iowa state prison (81) saloon keepers who are so positive that the law prohibits that they are going to stay in jail from six to twenty-four months to prove it."

LITERATURE.

The June Century coutains a paper by the Protes-Episcopal Bishop of Kentucky, entitled, "How shall we help the Negro?" in which the writer, who is a Southerner by birth aud an ex-Confederate officer, takes the ground that the whites must help the colored people, "teach them, guide them, lift them up; and that we may do so, we must treat them as men." John E. P. Daingerfield describes his experience while held as hostage by John Brown in the memorable Harper's Ferry raid. The portraits of the Herschel family are fine, that of Sir John unusually so. Other illustrated papers are: "In and out of the New Orleans Exposition," "A Florentine Mosaic," "Still hunting the Grizzly," and "Orchids." In the war series special events like the disaster to the Confederates at Beaver Dam Creek and the terrible battle the next day at Gaines's Mill are particularly described by General D. H. Hill, and by General Fitz John Porter, who shows his bitter hatred of Pope, to whose defeat at the second Bull Run he was a large contributor. Porter's personal friendship for the rebel generals is confessed with great care and political significance, since he may now try again for the removal of the curse justly resting upon him. The maps in these papers are probably the most complete and satisfactory battle-maps ever published in this country, and striking pictures and portraits accompany in profusion. General Imboden contributes a striking anecdotal paper on "Stonewall Jackson in the Shenandoah," describing the famous Valley campaign, which had an important bearing on the withdrawal of McClellan to the James river.

In St. Nicholas, E. P. Roe, in "Driven Back to Eden," keeps abreast of the season with pleasant accounts of outdoor work and play; Lieut. Schwatka gives a further account of the sports and occupations of "The Children of the Cold;" and Edmund Alton, in "Among the Law-makers," informs us how Senate-pages and Senators have a great deal of fun in andout of hours. Haydn is the subject of the third "From Bach to Wagner" sketch. In addition there is a full quota of short stories and articles brightly illustrated though not altogether valuable for young folk's reading.

—The English Illustrated Magazine, besides a continuation of the illustrated poem, "The Sirens Three," has illustrated papers on the English Historic "New Forest," The London Ragmuffin" who furnishes some animated scenes for the pencil if they are not very esthetic in tone.

"Concerning Printed Poison" is a timely pamphlet by the Quaker philanthropist, Josiah W. Leeds, of Philadelphia, whose little book on the theater a while since received wide and deserved commendation from the press. The subject now discussed is quite as important as the other; indeed, while the theater is local and fixed, the vile paper goes everywhere poisoning the mind of every reader whose eye lights upon it. It is a pleasure to know that there is a rising public sentiment against this great iniquity, and its efforts will be greatly aided by this pamphlet; since the author, with the true spirit of a Christian reformer, teaches that of which he has experience. This pamphlet should be read in every household. Price, 8 cts.; 60 cts. per dozen. Josiah W. Leeds, 528 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

On July 1st will be issued from the press of Craig & Barlow, 170 Madison street, Chicago, a large work, eutitled "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome," by the venerable Father Chiniquy, who has spent many years of his life in its production. It will be the most comprehensive presentation of Romanism, in all its aspects—civil, social, and religious—heretofore published, aud contains facts of thrilling interest to all lovers of liberty. The chapters relating to the assassiuation of Abraham Lincoln, are startling in character. The book is sure to cause controversy.

—Princeton, N. J., is to have another Review. It is to be devoted to science, art and literature. It will be edited by Prof. Will Sloane, son of Rev. J. W. R. Sloane, D. D., Professor in the Covenauter Theological Seminary, Allegheny. Dr. McCosh is greatly interested in the movement. The late Princeton Review was a failure because it was too philosophical. Its history will be a lesson to its successor.

James Anthony Froude, the historian, now in this country, says that he considers it one of the greatest houors of his life to have been chosen to tell the story of Carlyle's life. Of the criticisms, he says it was but natural for some of Carlyle's thrusts to have been resented. "But what was the use," he asks, "of writing a man's life if all his weaknesses are to be passed by, and the whole story of his life to be one tissue of fulsome flattery?"

THE CHURCHES.

—Pastor Seguin of the Reformed Catholic church was in St. Louis last week. His visit is mentioned favorably by several papers.

—The ministers at Dubuque have decided to do their utmost to put a stop to ball-playing on Sundays.

—The Bible Institute conducted in Farwell Hall building, Chicago, for four weeks, closed Tuesday after a very successful and profitable term. Prof. W. G. Moorehead of Xenia Theological Seminary, who conducted the institute, was assisted by Miss Dryer, Rev. Mr. Goss and others.

—Rev. J. R. Reasoner, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Collinsville, Ill., committed suicide by shooting a short time since.

—Rev. R. W. McBride, son of Wm. McBride of Elmira, Ill., was engaged last year in the mission to the Warm Spring, Indians in Oregon. His report to the General Assembly was received with joy on account of his remarkable success. Nineteen persons have united with the church and fifty-six Indians partook of the last communion.

—Bro. John D. Nutting, secretary of the N. C. A. corporate body, has just completed his studies at Oberlin Theological Seminary, and has accepted a call to the Congregational church at Wauseon, Ohio. His ordination occurs next week Friday. The Wauseon church numbers 140 members, and is located in a thriving town of some 2,000 inhabitants.

—The Presbyterian Banner says that the receipts of all the Presbyterian boards for the past year were $1,837,354.66; so that their entire membership of probably 625,000 only gave an average of less than three dollars for each, or less than a cent a day.

—Two obstacles to missiouary work in South Africa are the bad character of Europeans, and wine-farmiug. The Koraunas are dying out, chiefly from drink. In Natal the progress of Christianity is hindered by polygamy, whiskey and the happy savage life of the naked Kaffir in his glorious climate.

—In South Africa there are representatives of German, French, Norwegian, Moravian, English, Scotch, and American Missionary Societies. These report in the aggregate about 175 missionaries, 1,000 native preachers, teachers and helpers, 30,000 members, 195 schools, and 10,500 scholars.

—Through missionary effort the number of translations of the Bible during 80 years past has increased from 50 to 250; the numoer of Protestant missionary societies, from 7 to 70; of male missionaries, 170 to 2,400; contributions for missions $250-000 to $6,250,000; converts, 50,000 to 1,650,000; and of mission schools, 70 to 12,000!

—The King of Belgium, the president of the African International Association, has decided to open an African Seminary in connection with the University of Leyden, at which young men will be prepared for missionary work in the newly opened districts of the dark Continent.—Independent.

—Rev. Arthur T. Pierson reports a remarkable work of grace at Bethany church, Philadelphia, during the last three months. The number of names voluntarily placed on the converts' roll is 538.

—F. P. Hammond, an American evangelist, has closed a revival in Glasgow, Scotland, which lasted twelve weeks. The number of conversions is put down at 5,000.

—For some weeks past, one of the most wonderful revivals ever known in India has been in progress there. Several native preachers, from Lucknow, with Rev. A. C. Paul, of Barabanki, went to Ajudhiya and the next morning began their day by praying in their tent. A poor leper, a Brahman heard and drew near. Some bystander heard and said: "Here is a case for you, make this man a Christian." The suggestion was acted upon, when all at ouce the leper himself began to pray in Jesus' name, and to cry out that Christ had saved him. One after another came up, were convinced of sin and joined the praying baud, until the tent was surrounded. The scene was Pentecostal. Two hundred and forty-eight were converted and sought baptism the same week. About twenty-five of these will form the nucleus of a Methodist church in Ajudhiya. Most of them, however, came from beyond the Ganges where they will return as Christians. The majority were Brahmans. No European missionaries were present. The two native preachers baptized the converts.

—The decision of the Supreme Court of Kansas on the felonious and incendiary act of a juryman, in leading the other eleven in prayer for divine direction, has not yet transpired. There are many lawyers and many clients who would naturally cry to a praying juryman, like their confreres in the New Testament, "What have we to do with thee? Art thou come to torment us before the time?" Prayer would be about as welcome among them as a policeman in a gambler's den.—Advance.

—A Bread and Cheese Mission is conducted by the East London Tract Society and Christian Mission. Missionaries go out, during the silent hours of midnight, to carry a piece of bread and cheese to the hungry who are walking the streets, not having sufficient to pay for a bed in even the lowest lodging-house. A word is spoken and a tract given along with the food. Among persons thus relieved was a poor old man eighty-two years of age, who was raking the gutter outside a greengrocer's shop at three o'clock in the moruing, for pieces of orange peel. When asked whether he would take a piece of bread and cheese he cried, and his heart was too thankful to express his gratitude.

THE WHEELING MEMORIAL IN THE U. P. GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The notable proposition of Revs. Williams aud Waddle, adopted by the Wheeling United Presbyterian Presbytery, was referred to the proper committee in the Topeka Assembly. The final action is thus reported in the Instructor:

"Took up the report of the Committee on Bills and Overtures in reference to the Memorials of the Presbytery of Wheeling, and others in reference to our distinctive principles on Psalmody, secret societies and communion. The resolutious of the report are as follows: Resolved,

"1, That the General Assembly hereby declares anew its devotion to all the distinctive principles of the church, and its determination so far as in it lies to have all under its supervision properly instructed in these principles and to have them carried out by kind and faithful discipline.

2nd, That the sessions of the congregations throughout the church, be directed to see that the distinctive principles of the church are properly taught in the Sabbath schools under their care, and that pastors are enjoined to give careful and needed instruction upon these subjects in their public and private ministrations.

3rd, That the sessions of the church be enjoined to be faithful in requiring the intelligent assent of those whom they admit to membership in the church to all her distinctive principles and to exercise the discipline which the Scriptures and the standards of the church require in the case of any who violate these principles

4th, That Presbyterys are hereby enjoined to exercise proper Presbyterial care with respect to the distinctive principles of the church by seeing that sessions of which they have the oversight are faithful in the admission of members and the exercise of discipline, by Presbyterial conventions relating to these matters, and by such other means as may be best adapted to secure the end in view and that they report their obedience to this injunction annually to the General Assembly in connection with their report upon the Narrative and State of Religion."

Adopted unanimously and heartily after considerable earnest discussion.

THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

This interesting meeting was held in Rev. C. D. Trumbull's church, Morning Sun, Iowa, beginning May 27th, with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. P. H. Wylie, and continued one week. Rev. David McKee, of Clarinda, Iowa, was elected moderator.

The review of the work of the church for the year was eucouraging. During the past year there has been a decrease of three in the number of ministers. The total iucrease in membership is 815; net increase, 49. There is a decrease in the number attending Sabbath schools of 693; iu total contributions, of $57,900. There are on the Synod roll at the present time 111 ministers, 81 of whom are pastors. There are 17 licentiates, three of whom are students of the third year in the seminary. There are 10,280 communicants; 10,280 atteuding Sabbath schools. The total contributions of the church for all purposes during the year are $188,993, according to one report; according to auother $216,000, and another, $230,000. The amount raised from all sources for missions was as follows: Foreign Mission, $15,729.19; Domestic Missiou, $2,672.86; Chinese Mission, $2,103.62; Freedmen's Mission, $4,-653.07. The three principal points where foreign missionary work is doue are Latakiyeh, Suadea, and Tarsus, in Syria. The work is in a most prosperous condition.

The death of Rev. A. M. Milligan, D. D., was deeply felt and regretted by all. It is proposed to endow a professorship in his memory in Geneva College, an honor well merited.

The Synod resolved to withdraw from the Presbyterian Alliance unless the Scripture Psalms be hereafter, as at first, used in worship during the sessions of the Alliance.

The next meeting of the Synod is to be held at Rochester, New York, on the first Wednesday in June.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—The sixteenth annual session of the Grand Orange lodge of the United States met in this city last week at Knights of Pythias Hall, corner Madison and Jefferson streets.

Rev. William F. Morrison, ex Grand Councilor, was found guilty at San Francisco, Friday, of defrauding the order of Chosen Friends by forged death certificates.

—The Masonic Grand Lodge of Wisconsin met last week. A resolution was presented providing for the appointment of a committee to consider the advisability of erecting a home for widows and orphans. An effort was made to have the committee instructed to report at once. After considerable discussion the amendment to this effect was defeated, and they were instructed to report at the next regular meeting. This is looked upon as a death-blow to the measure.

—Two years ago Judge Blodgett in the U. S. Circuit Court of this city decided the case of Mrs. Klaiber vs. the Illinois Freemasons' Benevolent Society, by a judgment for the plaintiff of $4,600. The grounds upon which the company had refused to pay the widow the amount of the policy were as follows: In December, 1873, Bro. Klaiber made application for membership in the I. F. B. S., stating he was an affiliated Master Mason, and a member of the Acacia Lodge of LaSalle. A policy was issued to him in favor of his first wife, who died in 1876. When he married the plaintiff a new policy was issued in her name. The assessments were duly paid until Klaiber's death in July, 1880. On July 21, 1880, the by-laws were changed so as to allow any Master Mason, whether affiliated or not, to become a member. It was found that Klaiber had taken a demit from the Acacia Lodge some time before his application. The judgment of the court did not take any account of the demit, but of the requisitions of the lodge only. Klaiber had paid his assessments for seven years. This is Masonic insurance!

—The supreme delegates of Patriotic Order Sons of America, to the number of twenty-five, had breakfast at the Leland this morning. They were enroute to Denver, to attend the supreme convention which convenes there next Monday. —Chicago Evening Journal.

—The Supreme Lodge of the United States, Ancient Order of United Workmen, met at Des Moines, June 2. The report of Supreme Recorder Sacket for the year 1884 shows the receipts to have been $243,501.05, with a total balance in the hands of the Supreme Receiver January, 1885, of $2,955 01; and in the hands of ex Supreme Recorder Davis, $11,735.-34. The total number of beneficiary certificates in force in the jurisdiction is 143,122 The total deaths in 1884 was 1 074, and the death losses amounted to $11,420,294 The average death rate varies greatly in different States. In Iowa it is but 5.59 to the thousand; in Pennsylvania, 7.76; in Ohio, 14.79; Indiana, 12 42; Illinois, 6.71; Minnesota, 7.63; Missouri, 9.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended. Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	10	per cent
" " "	50	15	" "
" " "	100	20	" "
" " "	250	25	" "
" " "	500	30	" "
" " "	1000	35	" "
" " "	1500	40	" "
" " "	2500	50	" "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail. Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men,	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire,"	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	4

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are priuted:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"

and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

'The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lessou in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

HOME HINTS.

KEEPING FRUIT WITHOUT CANS.

We published a communication in the Prairie Farmer from the editor of the Sharon (Mass.) Advocate, describing a simple process of keeping fruits in bowls and other open-top vessels, simply covered with the unglazed cotton, such as is purchased in the stores rolled in blue paper, as follows:

Directions—Use crocks, stone butter-jars, or any other convenient dishes. Prepare and cook the fruit precisely as for canning in glass jars; fill your dishes while it is yet hot, and immediately cover with cotton batting securely tied on. Remember that all putrefaction is caused by the invisible creatures in the air. Cooking the fruit expels all these, and as they cannot pass through cotton batting, the fruit thus protected will keep an indefinite period. The writer of this has kept berries, cherries, plums and many other kinds of fruit for two years with no cover save batting on the jars."

As previously stated, if fruit can thus be unfailingly kept, it is a matter of great interest. We find in the Sharon Advocate of July 25, our articles and remarks, reprodueed and the following editorial remarks which are confirmatory of the previous statements, and we advise at least a limited trial of the process by our readers. We will not discuss the theory of the method, which is of less immediate importance than the practical outcome. Mr. Wickes says:

"This subject is of such importanee to the public, and so little understood that we again refer to it. Brother Judd, editor of the Prairie Farmer, is no doubt correct in supposing that the preservation of fruits in tightly-sealed cans results from the exclusion of the oxygen of the air. We suppose, however, that depriving the bacteria of oxygen deprives them of life, as no animal life can exist without it. Prof. Tyndall demonstrated several years ago that all putrefaction was caused by the bacteria in the air, and could be prevented by inclosing the article in cotton batting. The published results of Tyndall's experiment fell under the eye of Dr. Chase, an eminent physician of Thomaston, Maine, and he at once saw its practical value. At his suggestion, Mrs. Chase put up several gallons of damson plums in some pots with but little sugar, the jars being only covered with cotton batting. The plums kept perfectly until opened one and two years afterward. Mrs. Chase told the result to the editor of the Advocate, and we have for three years put up berries in the same way, and never had a jar fail to keep. Last year we opened in the presence of several people a jar of blue-berries that had been put up just two years, and found them in nice order. To Prof. Tyndall belongs the honor of the discovery, and to Mrs Chase the honor of being the first to make a practical use of it. We desire to make so useful a matter known to the general public and we only claim to have been the first to publish the directions."
—Prairie Farmer.

PROFIT IN FRUIT RAISING.

When fruit sells too low for profit it is time to preserve it and reap treble gains. The quickest and cheapest way of keeping fruit will be found most profitable. Dried fruit is easily handled, and is coming back into favor with knowing housekeepers, who recognize good things, and know how they should be cooked. No expense for evaporators is necessary. I long sinee made up my mind that evaporated fruit is inferior to sun-dried in flavor, and talking with old dealers in family stores I find they prefer the sun-dried for their own use. The best cook I ever knew said the same, and there is reason for it. The sun ripens, and develops sugar and flavor in cut fruit dried in its rays. To have a nice quality of dried fruit, select firm, fine ripe specimens, wipe clean, pare and cut with silver knives, as steel turns them black on the edges, and hurry into the sun as fast as they can be prepared.

The cheapest and best way of drying fruit is to lay it on lengths of cheesecloth, suspended in a frame out of doors, in full sun, with white mosquito netting over to keep off shreds and insects. This allows the air to reach both sides of the fruit at once, and when you want to turn it the whole can be swung over on another cloth, leaving the first ready for a new batch. Apples should be pared, cored and cut in eight pieces. Peaches should not be pared, for the richest flavor is lost with the skin. They should have the fur removed by dipping baskets of them a moment into weak boiling lie of wood ashes or common potash, and wiping with coarse towels. Common peaches only need to be cut in halves to dry. We had peaches dried in this way last winter, which when cooked would be hard to tell from the best canned peaches in looks, with richer flavor.—Vick's Magazine.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Natnre of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 2? cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the In-ITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Chris-TIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 De-GREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Re-PUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Browulee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees. 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FARM AND GARDEN.

A FIGHT WITH THE BUGS.

A square fight with the bugs and the worms must begin early. The curculio must be met as soon as the plums and cherries are dropping their petals. He begins to sting before the calyx bursts from the fruit. While waiting for cherries he will do a vast amount of damage among apples and pears. The only remedy yet devised is to shake the trees and catch the fellows on a cloth large enough to spread uuder the whole tree. Then quickly get down and pick them up and crush them. They will pretend to be dead for a few momcnts after falling, but will be up soon and off. You must be lively. They prefer plums by all means to cherries, if there are trees enough. In a chicken yard trees are partly protected by the fowls devouring the bugs.

Squash bugs must next be faced. They come down in a cloud and do their work so promptly that iu an hour your splendid vines are ruined. Box your hills when planted, and if the bugs then assail them dust with white hellebore. Kerosene water may be used if special care is taken not to put into a pail of water over one teaspoonful of kerosene. This remedy is excellent for the big stink bug that comes a little later. Saltpeter and other remedies are not of the least avail.

For rosc slugs sprinkle with water in which you have two spoonsful of hellebore and one of kerosene. Keep a pail standing for a few days to use when nec essary. Whale-oil soap and such stinking compounds should never be used. They are worse than the slug. No one can go near a rose-bush for a week after the vile stuff has been used. I would rather not have a rose. The remedy I give is absolute, and generally only one application is necessary. I have about two hundred rose bushes which I go over in one hour, and the pest is gone for the year.

Now comes the current worm, which must be treated precisely as the rose slug. At its first appearance give it the kerosene and hellebore water. But it must be well applied. If the worms come when the fruit is near maturity, leave out the kerosene, for it sticks the hellebore to the fruit and it might not be entirely safe Applied earlier the rains entirely wash it off before picking time.

Kerosene oil is the general specific for exterminating almost all vermin when it can be applied It is death to chiuch bugs and a sure cure for hen lice. Apply it to the roosts and pour a little into the nests. It will work more effectually than sulphur or lime, although they are valuable and effective. Kerosene is death also to potato bugs; but must be applied with care. I am using the same mixture that I usc for rose-slugs and current worms—one spoonful of kerosene and two of helbore in one sprinkling pail of water.

It is equally useful for mites and fleas that infest turnips, and many varieties of vegetables and flowers. I have not tried it on aphis, but propose to do so soon, and do not doubt its efficacy,

The cabbage worm is most safely destroyed with a stick sharpened to press into the foldings of the leaves and crush the fellows. Hot water is a remedy, but it is likely to kill or spoil the cabbages. It is not safe. Hellebore and similar poisons are likely to remain in the head, and the kerosene is not sure of hitting the worms.

Worms' nests on apple trees and lawn trees are best destroyed early. Those not to be reached by hand may be easily burned out with a roll of cotton tied or wired on the end of a pole and saturated with kerosene. Carry some matches and when you cannot reach a nest light and apply the torch. A place may be thus in a few years nearly rid of worms. A man never has a true deed of property that the worms and bugs run annually. Decency also requires a cleaning out of the vermin. I am in sight of a fine picce of property where insect armies have full control, and breed in uumbers sufficient to overrun all the rest of us

Let auy onc who has trouble with bugs or insects of any sort try kerosene. It is our panacea. Use discretion in applying it to vegetation. As a general rule, one spoonful to a pail of water is enough, and is safe —E. P. Powell in Independent.

For blacking for leather take twelve ounces each of ivory black and molasses; spermaceti oil, four ounces; white wine vinegar, two quarts. It is said to give a high polish, and to neither crack nor eat the leather.

An average cow for dairy purposes should give twenty pounds of milk per day during 200 days every year; eight pounds of cream for every 100 pounds of milk, aud forty-five pounds of butter for every 100 pounds of cream, and fully ten pounds of cheese for every 100 pounds of milk.

Grass, says the Ohio Farmer, is the sheet-anchor of successful farming. The proportion of grass lands in any section of the country is a pretty sure index of the degree of agricultural prosperity enjoyed, advancement made or profit produced. Where grass is neglected labor is increased and soils are deteriorated.

The "little busy bee" must be a special inhabitant of California. The San Francisco Call says that onc of the most remarkable yields of honey ever heard of has just been garnered by H. C. Parks, from his apiary near Riverside. The yield for the past season from thirty-three hives was seven and a quarter tons, an average of four hundred and fourteen pounds to the hive.

Eighteen hundred dollars' worth of strawberries have been raised on two and a half acres of ground, by a farmer of Delaware township, Camden county, New Jersey, and he accordingly has received a premium from the State Board of Agriculture.

It is estimated that it takes 113 acres of timber land to keep up the wear and tear of ties on every mile of railroad in the United States. There is a bonanza for the man who plants timber to meet this constant demand. It will be a long time to wait, but as every man desires to invest something for his posterity, we know of no better endowment than a grove of timber, and if he has reasonable hope of ten years' lease of life he may reap much benefit from it himself.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Incomparable in Sick Headache.

Dr. FRED HORNER, Jr., Salem, Va., says: "To relieve the indigestion and so-called sick headache, and mental depression incident to certain stages of rheumatism, it is incomparable."

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lessou text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Liuks, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictiouary, coutaining the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.

Furnished in any quantities at

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned iu the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentioths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous aud better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00. W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It coutains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet compriaing a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Ohioago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Cleveland last week apointed F. H. Marsh, sheriff of Ogle county, U. S. Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois, to the great disappointment of a ring of politicians.

An examination of the Washington Monument last week Monday confirmed the report that the capstone had been shattered by lightning A break was made by the lightning at the northeast corner of the stone and four fragments fell to the ground, where they were found nearly forty feet from the base of the monument.

COUNTRY.

A bulletin from the Illinois State Board of Agriculture is to the effect that the wheat crop of the State this year will be the smallest in twenty-five years.

The New York Board of Trade endorses the plan of a government subsidy of 30 cents per ton for every 1,000 miles sailed or steamed by vessels built and owned in America and engaged in foreign trade, the grant to be reduced to ten cents at the expiration of ten years.

On the first ballot the Republicans of New Hampshire Legislature renominated Senator Henry W. Blair.

Judge Joseph B Foraker of Cincinnati was nominated on the first ballot for governor by the Ohio Republican State convention. The remainder of the ticket is: Gen. Rob't P. Kennedy for Lieutenant Governor, Judge George W. McIlvaine for Supreme Judge, John C. Brown of Jefferson for Treasurer, J. A. Kohler of Summit for Attorney General, and Wells S. Jones of Pike for the Board of Public Works.

A train on the Sioux City division of the Saint Paul road was blown from the track near McCook, Dak., Friday evening by a cyclone. The sixty odd passengers all received bruises, but only three were seriously injured. Miles of telegraph wires were leveled, but the crops escaped, as no hail accompanied the storm.

At Tarentum, Pa , Friday the explosion of a car of petroleum, to which one of the lads applied a lighted match, fatally burned the three sons of Henry Altmeyer, aged 7, 5, and 2 years.

Several days ago Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, of Lafayette, Ind.. attacked an editor and government officer, Williams by name, with her parasol. He returned the blow with his cane. Mrs. Gougar offered $100 to any one who would flog him. The Womans' Christiau Temperance Union of Lafayette petitions the President to remove Williams from office, that of Third Auditor of the Treasury. It is said Williams offers to retract his statements about Mrs. Gougar if she will withdraw her offer to pay $100 to have Williams publicly whipped.

It is reported from Gethsemane, Ky., that Father Emanuel, a monk in the monastery there, was so cruelly treated by the Abbot that he died, and that his body was interred in the potter's field, being refused a resting place in the abbey cemetery. Father Emanuel, whose age was 73, was thought by some to be of unsound mind.

After striking shale gas, and some veins of rock salt, the Cleveland Rolling Mill Company discovered petroleum in their well Friday at a depth of 2,700 feet, and the oil flow is now copious. The petroleum is unusually clear and of the best lubricating character.

Further swarms of locusts have appeared on the ridges north of Chattanooga, Tenn. The numbers are increasing, and all shubbery and trees and every green object is covered with the insects. In some localities they are so numerous that all other sounds are drowned by their noise. To day they began moving into the valley, and are spreading through the lowland farms. They appeared in this county seventeen years ago, and their ravages destroyed nearly all vegetation.

The storm Sunday afternoon, June 7th, was very destructive to crops, timber, and stock in the Kickapoo valley. The village of Victoria, Wis., on the Mississippi river, was almost completely blown away. A number of buildings at Forest City, Dakota, were destroyed by the wind.

Victoria is a small village between La Crosse and Lansing, on the Mississippi. It was visited by a double cyclone—one from the southwest and the other from the northeast—at 1:30 P. M., which swept everything before it. It lasted about thirty minutes. Over fifty houses were blown down, and barns, trees, and shubbery disappeared as if by magic. The darkness was almost impenetrable save for the lightning, which darted in every direction and illuminated the scene in rapid flashes.

Lodi, Wis., suffered most from hail. After the storm the ground in that village was covered to a depth of about four inches with great hailstones, the majority of which were two inches in diameter, while thousands the size of goose eggs were to be seen. Lodi lost 3,000 panes of window-glass. Prairie du Sac reports 2,000 windows smashed, and in long strips of country farm-houses lost every pane on the north and west sides. Barns, outhouses, windmills, and fences were blown down, haystacks scattered, trees two feet in diameter uprooted, and many crops badly washed.

A hurricane, accompanied by a waterspout, struck Woodstock, Va., on the same night, unroofing the Methodist church and blowing down fences and trees. The streets were flooded by the rain. No such storm has been known here in the memory of the oldest citizen.

The Ohio Supreme Court has decided that the assessments paid by saloon-keepers before the Scott law was declared unconstitutional cannot be refunded. Some $2,000,000 is involved.

There came near being a serious disaster at the State street bridge, Chicago, Saturday afternoon. As a street car full of passengers was passing off the bridge at the south end, the horses being already on the ground, a steamer struck the north end of the structure, suddenly swinging it. The driver was thoughtful enough to set the brakes and disconnect the team from the car on the instant, thus preventing the car and all its passengers from plunging into the river. The horses fell in but were rescued. One woman in escaping from the bridge had her foot crushed.

New Orleans finally arranged to send the Liberty Bell home to Philadelphia, and it was started on its journey Saturday.

FOREIGN.

An earthquake occurred in Eastern Caucasus. The town of Sikuch was completely swallowed, and the township suffered damage to the extent of several million rubles.

The following are the provisions of the treaty of peace: French soldiers shall not enter Chinese territory, nor shall Chinese soldiers enter French territory. The relations between France and Anam must not be of such a character as to embarrass China. A boundary commission shall be appointed to settle questions relating to the frontier by December next. Frenchmen entering Chinese territory shall be provided with a passport. Taxes at Pao-Shun and Lang Son shall be collected by Chinese and French consuls appointed at those places to superintend commercial relations between the north of Tonquin and Yunna and Kwangsi. The French shall construct a railway in Tonquin. If the Chinese wish to construct a railway they must construct a French railway. The treaty shall endure for ten years. Existing negotiations shall remain unchanged. The French shall evacuate Chinese territory directly.

The rejection of the budget in the House of Commons late Monday night was followed Tuesday by the resignation of the Gladstone ministry. This action was determined upon at a prolonged cabinet council. When the premier arose in parliament to announce the resignations he received a hearty ovation from his admirers. At the conclusion of his speech both houses adjourned until Friday. The vote was 264 to 252, some fifty of the Liberal party refusing to support the government. The main attack was made on the additional tax on beer. The Queen asked the Marquis of Salisbury to form a new cabinet, which he has undertaken.

The ravages of cholera in Spain are assuming terrifying proportions. The Spanish government has forbidden cholera inoculation, being probably satisfied that the practice extends the epidemic. There is a panic in Madrid, where it is known that several cases of cholera have occurred, notwithstanding the authorities attempt to suppress the facts.

The steamship Peerless was burned at Ottawa, Ont., Monday night. Four hundred persons were aboard but all escaped.

Gas which generated in the coal bunkers of the British iron turret ship Inflexible exploded as she lay off Portsmouth, Eng., and the vessel was greatly damaged, while fifteen of the crew were severely injured, three of them fatally.

Later dispatches regarding the earthquake in the Vale of Cashmere say that whole villages have been destroyed, and Dubgood, Jamalapar and Ovan have disappeared entirely, engulfed in the awful convulsions. During the continuance of the shocks a sulphurous dust was sent forth, impregnating the atmosphere. At the same time volumes of hot water issued from the great fissures made in the earth. The fort at Guraio and the granaries in many parts of the vale have been swallowed up. A large supply of rice and a considerable amount of money have been distributed throughout the Vale of Cashmere to relieve the distress. It is estimated that over 200 persons were killed.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	87½	@88
No. 3	78	@79
Winter No 2		@94½
Corn—No. 2	47	47⅜
Oats—No. 2	34	37
Rye—No. 2		65
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		10 30
Butter, medium to best	10	@15½
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		11
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 55
Flax	1 30	1 38
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	12	@29
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 15	@5 75
Common to good	2 40	@4 50
Hogs	3 90	@4 25
Sheep	2 50	@4 30

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 40	@6 15
Wheat—Winter		@99½
Spring		92½
Corn	53	@57
Oats	40	@43
Mess Pork		11 25
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 10
Hogs	3 70	@3 75
Sheep	2 00	@3 00

Cook Ed 13 Wabash Ave

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Patented Dec. 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufact'rs of stamped Rug Patterns & dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

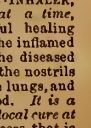
WANTED. Educated Men to sell at County Normals this summer a new and inexpensive reference book for teachers and students. Endorsed by eminent educators. Specimen copy with terms to agents $1.25. Address,
AUTHOR "COMMON SCHOOL COMPENDIUM,"
602 Ninth St., Des Moines, Iowa.



ASTHMA. Smithnight's Asthma and Hay Fever Remedy. Sold under POSITIVE GUARANTY. Sample FREE.
L. SMITHNIGHT, Cleveland, O.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

LADY AGENTS can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters. Sample outfit free. Cincinnati Suspender Co., 179 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

ORGANS The most beautiful and finest toned in the world. Low prices, easy payment. Send for Catalogue. Address
Weaver Organ & Piano Co., YORK, PA.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

ANY MAN Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free. Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

* * * This marvelous house has been built more than 300 times from our plans; it is so well planned that it affords ample room even for a large family. 1st floor shown above; on 2d floor are 4 bed rooms and in attic 2 more. Plenty of Closets. The whole warmed by one chimney.

Large illustrations and full description of the above as well as of 39 other houses, ranging in cost from $400 up to $6,500, may be found in "SCOTT'S MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES," a large quarto pamphlet, showing also how to select sites, get loans, &c. Sent postpaid on receipt of 50c. Stamps taken, or send $1 bill and we will return the change. Address, BUILDING PLAN ASSOCIATION.
(Mention this Paper.) 24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!
ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH. HAY-FEVER. CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 40. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1885. WHOLE No. 791.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The N. C. A. Anniversary 8
Is the Old Testament Inspired?..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Reminiscences and Reflections..... 1
Experience in Preaching against Masonry..... 2
SELECTED:
United Presbyterians and the G. A. R 2
The United Brethren Case 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XXIII & XXIV. 3
The Commencement Season. 4
The N. C. A. Annual Meeting..... 8
The Ohio Meeting..... 8
The American Party Conference 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Washington Letter; Sects—Berea Evangelist; A G. A. R. Case; Campaign Funds or Prayer; A Disgraced Pulpit; Secretism and Pride..... 5,6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERATURE 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
OBITUARY..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST 7
FARM AND GARDEN..... 14
IN BRIEF 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS 16
MARKETS 16

An item in the New York Witness says that, according to the claim of a Roman Catholic newspaper, there are 10,000 Protestant children attending the schools of that church in this country. In this appears some of the fruit of Capel's sowing last year. But if the Catholics demand the services of the priest in our public institutions, and at public expense, as in the lately defeated "Freedom of Worship" bill in New York, why may not Protestants send their elders and pastors to minister to the spirits of these children in Romanists institutions?

Edwin P. Whipple, the cultured and graceful essayist, in a recent article in the North American Review on swearing, noticed some cases where a profane oath has given, to frail human ears, apparent intensity and force to a statement. Such an instance, if ever there was one, was given the other day in the Birmingham, Iowa, Free Prees, in these words: "The other day a Mason asked our opinion in regard to a certain patent medicine. We told him that we had as much respect for, and confidence in the stuff as the members of the lodge have for a minister of the Gospel when they have him down on his knees in the third degree, swearing, under a horrible death-penalty, that he will not violate the chastity of the female relatives of brother Master Masons, he knowing them to be such. 'Well,' he replied, 'that's but d——d little.'"

The Japan Mail reports a most remarkable preaching service held in Tokio, in the largest theater of the city. The audiences are variously estimated at from 4,500 to 6,000 each day. The preaching was mostly by native Japanese pastors, and the people listened eagerly for four hours each day while the Gospel was preached to them. The Mail says: "The large attendance, the earnest attention with so little dissent or interruption, in so public and free a place as the most popular theater in Tokio, give evidence of a marked advance in public sentiment in favor of Christianity within the space of one short year."

The fight against horse-racing on the Lord's day goes on vigorously in Chicago. A large subscription is being taken among the churches for a prosecution fund, and the C. B. & Q. railway and the West Division Horse-car line have both refused extra trains or cars for the benefit of the race-track owners. The legal advisers in the case have given their opinion that any person may prosecute the manager of these races, criminally, or may obtain an injunction against them and prosecute them as a common nuisance; or action may be brought by the State's attorney to enjoin the racing company and vacate its charter. The Supreme Court of Illinois has decided that the legislature cannot charter a nuisance and that a corporation forfeits its charter by using it to violate the law of the State to which it owes its existence. The racing park lies alongside Garfield Park, whose Commissioners have power to prohibit horse-racing on any and every day in the week within 400 feet of the park, limits whether such racing is an annoyance or not. With these legal points on their side and a good courage the friends of a peaceful Sabbath in Chicago are hopeful of the victory. The president of the racing company is an infidel German politician of some notoriety, who would have a grim delight to uproot our Sabbath institutions and laws and make America as irreligious as France or Germany.

The rapidity with which France paid the German indemnity of five milliards of francs, for the war of 1870–71, was one of the wonders of the world in national financiering. But the very power thus developed restored to the new republic much of the war prestige lost to the tactics and battalions of Von Moltke. Hatred of the conqueror inspired the French, but love of our own country has animated Americans in the great work of debt-paying accomplished since the close of the war twenty years ago. We are now paying at the rate of $42,000,000 a year, or $100 a minute; but this is hardly one-third the rate of a few years ago. The contribution of about 75 cents is all each individual is obliged to pay in yearly to make up this sum, a small price to pay for the satisfaction of placing the credit of the United States at the highest, of sharing the splendid reputation our country enjoys throughout the world, as a prompt, honest, debt-paying people. The Chicago News wisely remarks upon this power as a grand factor in the question of international peace: "The United States could now borrow money at a lower rate of interest than any other nation under the sun. There are several advantages in this. To name one: A nation's strength depends largely upon its ability to provide the 'sinews of war,' of which money is the greatest. Great Britain is greater from this cause than from the actual number of fighting men she could raise among her own population proper. For this reason we are able to get along with almost no standing army or navy—barely enough to act as a police force and take care of the fortifications to keep them from dilapidation, and to keep a corps of skilled officers in training for any emergency that might arise demanding the sudden action of a large force of citizen soldiers. Nearly every other nation has a large percentage of its most vigorous men in field or camp or fort or on shipboard, with another heavy percentage toiling to support these and the expenses they incur."

The Boston authorities have relaxed their vigilence against out-door preaching and will hereafter interpret their statutes on that subject with the liberality of American principles rather than according to the dictation of the Romish hierarchy. The arrest of Dr. Gordon, H. L. Hastings, Wm. L. Davis, and others for preaching in the Common, has brought the issue to the front and victory for the right. Mr. Hastings wrote a powerful vindication of the right so to preach the Gospel as allowed by the second article of the old Massachusetts Bill of Rights. The document has been sent abroad all over the land, and reads like the statement and appeal issued by the National Convention of 1880 after the Music Hall mob. As our Anti-masonic lecturers are often compelled to hold the meetings under God's blue sky, like the old conventicles of Scotland, they will like to see what has been said on this subject. The American of Philadelphia has given the case the following forcible and eloquent comment: "The right to hold meetings in the open air, even in our cities, is one of those traditions which go back to the roots of the English race. Out of such meetings grow our whole system of jurisprudence and of politics. To ask our fellow-citizens to meet under a roof, even to hear a man speechify or preach, is a modern innovation. But the innovation has become so well established that the old right seems likely to be sacrificed. It is coming to be an accepted principle that religious services are in some sense disorderly, unless they are held in-doors. This new assumption is especially dangerous to society. A Christian church which would be content to confine its ministrations within the walls of sacred edifices, would commit suicide. All the great aggressive movements for the Christianizing of the world, from the days of the apostles, have been in the open air. There the great revivalists of the Middle Ages—Francis of Assisi, Berthold of Regensburg, Vincens Ferrer, Anthony of Padua—preached to the people. Luther's Reformation was proclaimed in the market-places before it found its way into the churches. George Fox found an audience on the streets and under the shadow of the hay-ricks. Whitfield, Wesley, and Rowland Hill preached to audiences too great and miscellaneous for any church to hold them. The great upstirrings of religious feeling in America in 1804, 1819, and 1837, were in connection with open-air meetings. That of 1857 fell into the hands of business men, who showed their prejudices and set bounds to its efficiency by putting it under roof. . . . And if there is any spot on this continent which might be claimed as the right place to hold a public meeting for any lawful use, it is the common land of a New England town. In old England no one would question the right. Is America less a free country, or has 'Hire a hall' become the eleventh commandment with us?"

The furnace of affliction is often the means which God uses to purify the soul from the dross of pride.

REMINISCENCES AND REFLECTIONS.

BY GEO. W. CLARK.

Halting a short time in a little village and finding the people greatly excited, I enquired the cause and ascertained that two cases of small pox were reported to have occurred in a neighboring county; and although miles away, and the cases were of a mild type, the supervisors, the physicians, the health officers, the town board, sounded the alarm and mustered their forces to the rescue. Resolutions, ordinances, rules and regulations were adopted to warn and guard the people and protect the citizens. And large placards were posted up through the streets, and sentinels stationed at suitable points to guard the town against the approach of the dreaded disease.

This was considerate, to be sure. It was wise and humane, and it was suiting the action to the old proverb, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure!" But now suppose, instead of such wise precaution, these sage officials had got together and "sat" as a "Board" and gravely determined to "license" a number of "good moral characters" to sell small pox infection, and thus multiply its victims and its horrors throughout the community! Would not the whole town have risen up and pronounced these "officials" a set of infernals, or insane, and hustled them off to a prison or a madhouse? And is it not a most singular and incredible fact that the same profound wisdom and consideration should not only indifferently suffer the existence, but deliberately legalize the fitting up of any number of places, and in a most enticing style, and allow them to be kept open night and day, Sundays not excepted, for spreading throughout the community maddening and destructive poisons, infinitely worse than small pox, worse from their physical, moral, social, and pecuniary effects upon individuals and upon society, infinitely worse, because they not only demoralize and kill the body, but they kill the character and kill the soul.

These poisons when taken into the system irritate and inflame the mucous membrane of the stomach, disturb and derange the liver and kidneys, foul and fire the blood, disorder and break down the tissues, bedevil and frenzie the brain, corrupt and deprave the heart, pervert the judgment, benumb and deaden the sensibilities, stupefy and sear the conscience. In short, they degrade and palsy the whole man, bloat his face, blear his eyes, burn his vitals, blast his industry, his character, his usefulness, his happiness, and the comfort and happiness of his family and friends, and blast his hopes and chance of heaven.

Finally, if through the commission of some crime to which they directly lead, they do not thrust him into prison, or suspend him on an ignominious gallows, or dump him dead in a dirty gutter, or kill him in a drunken fray, they soon hurl him into the burning hell of DELIRIUM TREMENS, the indescribable horrors of which the annals of suffering humanity furnish no parallel, not even the fearful hydrophobia!

Talk of small pox! who would not rather a son, a brother, a father, or a husband would suffer and die forty deaths, so to speak, from small pox, than live one vile, wretched, loathsome, despised life of drunkenness, and die one wild, frantic, hopeless, despairing, HORRIBLE DEATH OF DELIRIUM TREMENS?

Who will account for the terror and clamor, and the efforts made to guard against small pox infection, and the utter and stolid indifference to the ten thousand fold greater evils of alcoholic poisoning? and the still greater depravity which actually legalizes the alcoholic poisoning by the wholesale? O man, for consistency! O God, for prohibition!!

Detroit.

EXPERIENCE IN PREACHING AGAINST MASONRY.

BY MRS. H. E. HAYDEN.

While looking at the condition of the professed Christian churches of the United States, I am surprised to see how few ministers there are who dare lift up their voice against secret societies. Some ask, Is it our duty? and others, Will it do any good to expose the evils of Masonry? etc. In answering these questions I will relate from my own experience.

When I had been preaching two years and had become accustomed to the new work God had given me in the church, I was led by his Spirit to preach against Masonry and all other kindred societies. From that day to this I have not failed to give a clear testimony on that subject in every place. In Warren, northern Illinois, the Masons had the largest lodge in the State. I went there in 1869 and commenced missionary work by preaching in Lincoln Hall. In a few weeks the Lord led me to let the light shine from the Bible upon the darkness and abominations of the Masonic lodge. I sent notices to the Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist ministers, stating that I would preach on secret societies on Sabbath afternoon. The notices were read at the morning services, and a large congregation convened at 3 o'clock. The large hall was crowded. I was now close to the devil's stronghold, but I did not know it. The Odd-fellow's and Mason's lodges were present, and the Master of the Masonic lodge sat at my left hand on the platform. I shall never forget what wonderful manifestations of the Divine presence I felt on that day. The meeting was commenced with reading Scripture, singing, and prayer. At the close of the singing I was so filled with the power and glory of God that I could scarcely stand upon my feet; and I thought to myself, if I was ever prepared to speak for God it is now. My text was, "For such a high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens." Heb. 7: 26. All through the sermon I was driven along by a tempest of God's power which far exceeded any thing I had received before when speaking on that subject. I was aware that some would be offended and never come to hear me again; so I crowded as many truths as possible into one discourse. I spoke in the main against Masonry, as she is the mother of all the secret brood. I spoke particularly on three points: her Christless prayers, her horrid murderous oaths, and her want of Christian benevolence.

The next week sister Delong of the M. E. church called on me and said: "Did you not feel the power and glory of God last Sabbath? It seemed to me that the whole room was filled with the presence of God." "Yes," I answered, "the Lord did bless me exceedingly, and it seemed as though the very atmosphere of heaven had come down to earth."

The faith of the people in secret societies began to be shaken. Some Masons broke off the galling yoke immediately and became my warmest friends. There was a merchant in town by the name of Lawrence Miller. He was an Odd-fellow. He left the lodge, took his demit, and joined the holiness band, and was elected their leader. He became an earnest worker for the cause of Christ. While conversing with him upon the subject, I was more than ever convinced of the great necessity of all ministers everywhere lifting up their voices against this great abomination that maketh desolate. In private conversation he said to me: "I was a Christian and enjoyed the presence of God when I joined the Odd-fellows. I was told that it was a good society and had heard nothing against it. I attended the lodge regularly, and when you came to Warren I was almost backslidden. The light of God's Spirit had almost gone out in my heart and I did not know the reason why. Your sermon revealed to me my true condition. I saw just where I was: and I have left the lodge forever."

I had said in my discourse that affiliating with secret societies would lead a Christian imperceptibly away from God, and put out the light of his Spirit in their hearts. God cannot and will not countenance such union with the world. Brethren and sisters in the ministry, it does do good, and it is our duty to expose the evils of secret societies everywhere. God says to us in his Word, "Cry aloud; spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions, and the house of Israel their sins." Isa. 58: 1. Shall we keep still and say nothing, and look on complacently and let this Masonic wolf and her whelps devour the sheep of Christ and eat up the lambs? God forbid. The Lord help us to warn the people when we see the sword coming. St. James says, "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Then if we know secret societies are evil and do not warn the people we become sinners, do we? Yes. God's Word says so, and who can refute it? There are many ministers who confess to our anti-secret society lecturers, that secret societies are evil. Then why don't they speak out boldly and publicly? I would not dare to stand in their places at the judgment. I would expect Jesus would call me a hireling who cared not for the sheep.

Suppose all the ministers in the United States should commence at once to oppose secret societies. There would be a terrible tumbling and crashing of churches (so-called) of course. But then they could be built up on a better and more sure foundation. Better have a church of three who will stand for the truth and oppose all sin, than three thousand who are stubborn and rebellious and will not accept the whole truth.

Perhaps one minister will say secret societies are so interwoven with society that if I speak against them I should lose my salary. In the language of another I would say, "Better lose your salary than your soul. Better support yourself and preach to a few, than cover up the truth and be thronged by the multitude."

Another minister will say, If I denounce secret societies in public I should be turned out of my pulpit. Better be turned out of your pulpit than to be shut out of heaven. Still another perhaps will say: I would bring terrible persecution upon myself. Yes; "They that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Christ says: "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you." From the very day that God led me to let the light of his Word shine into the Masonic lodge in Warren I have been persecuted by the minions of the lodge. They have done me all the harm in their power. I have been compelled to learn this fact, that continued vigilance is the price of life. Nevertheless I shall not cease to assail the strongholds of Satan and the persecutions of his children will not cease while I live.

Sometimes when I have suffered severe persecution Satan has suggested that if I had not spoken against Masonry I might have avoided so much trouble. At such a time my mind is always referred to that most wonderful meeting in Lincoln Hall, at Warren, when God's glorious presence was so manifest to all his children. I believe that God designed by such a wonderful display of his glory and power, to teach me that he was greatly pleased and highly honored with this warfare against the secret works of darkness. And the thought of that meeting is a constant source of strength to me while exposing the evils of that great enemy of the church of Christ. Was not St. Paul persecuted just as soon as he was converted and began to preach at Damascus that Jesus was the Christ, and that he did rise from the dead? If he had only stopped repeating that Jesus was the Christ and that he did rise from the dead, he would have been well received by the old church.

Just so it is with the little band of reformers in the United States to-day. If we would stop saying that Masonry is an abomination in the sight of the Lord; and that loyalty to Freemasonry is treason to God, this bitter persecution would cease. We may preach against every other sin of the day and provoke very little opposition; but when we assail this secret stronghold of Satan we shall hear the mutterings of Masonic vengeance. We shall hear the lion roaring in his den: and some of us have felt the grip of his paw upon our lives for a time. "But none of these things move us; neither count we our lives dear unto ourselves, so that we may finish our course with joy."

Harmon, Ill.

UNITED PRESBYTERIANS AND THE G. A. R.

Can a United Presbyterian consistently belong to the G. A. R? We answer emphatically, "No." The Testimony of that church on secret societies is as follows:

"We declare, that all associations, whether formed for political or benevolent purposes, which impose upon their members an oath of secrecy, or an obligation to obey a code of unknown laws, are inconsistent with the genius and Spirit of Christianity, and church members ought not to have fellowship with such associations."

In joining the church he is to subscribe to this article as well as to the others of the Testimony. Page, 612, "Applicants shall be received on answering affimatively the following formula of questions: * * * * * * * * * *

"Do you profess your adherence to the doctrines received by this church as set forth in the * * * Declarations of the Testimony, etc.?"

The following argument and illustration, though not a part of the Testimony, may be useful as a guide to the meaning of the Declaration.

"In making the above declaration, it is freely admitted that there are many things with which an individual becomes acquainted, which it would be improper for him to reveal. (Prov. 11: 13; 20: 19). The same thing, also, may be affirmed in relation to associations. It is not, therefore, the fact of secrecy, simply considered, that we condemn. What, then, is it? It is the fact of a person giving an oath or promise that he will not make known to others, matters which are to be subsequently communicated to him, or that he will obey a code of laws with which he is not made acquainted until after the oath or promise be given by him. This we believe to be wrong under all circumstances; and all associations founded on this principle are to be condemned, whatever be the object for which they are formed."

The Testimony excludes all associations which require an oath or obligation. If, therefore, it should happen to be claimed that the G. A. R. requires only an obligation, church members should not have fellowship with it. The word "or" shows that either method of enforcing secrecy is opposed to the Testimony.

The G. A. R. is a secret society. The ritual has been somewhat modified, and varies in different places; but the secrets of it have leaked out enough for us to know that no material change has been made in the obligation. The hood-wink has been dispensed with, and the coffin and pretence of shooting. There is, however, in every encampment an oath or obligation to keep the secrets. The following is the obligation in use, except that in some places the oath has been changed to a promise, and in other places it is optional with the recruit whether he takes the oath or the promise:

"I do solemnly swear, in presence of Almighty God, and these witnesses, my former companions in arms, that I will never, under any pretense, nor for any purpose whatever, expose the secrets of this Encampment. That I will never make known, or cause to be made known, any of the hidden mysteries, work, or ritual of this band of comrades, whereby the same may come to the knowledge of the uninitiated. I do further solemnly swear, that I will never wrong a soldier or his family, nor suffer others to wrong them, if in my power to prevent it; but that I will, on all occasions, when not inconsistent with the duty I owe to God, to my country, and myself, assist him and his family. That I will sustain for all offices of trust and profit, other things being equal, the Citizen Soldier of the Republic. I do further swear, that I will yield implicit obedience to the Encampment of which I may be a member, and to the lawful rules and orders of the Grand Encampment, to which this is subordinate; and I do further promise and declare, that should any books or papers belonging to this Encampment come or be placed in my hands, I will neither print nor copy, nor permit to be printed or copied, any portion thereof, except by special permission of the Grand Encampment. I do further swear, that I take this obligation upon myself without any mental reservation or equivocation, under no less a penalty than that of being treated and punished as a Traitor by this order. So help me God, and keep me steadfast."

It is manifest that a man cannot consistently make the promises which are required of him in joining the United Presbyterian church and join the G. A. R., which requires "an oath or an obligation to obey a code of unknown laws."

Either the Testimony of that church must be altered, or the obligation of the G. A. R.

The question is not whether the church has a right to make such a requirement of her members. It is not whether there is any thing wrong in the G. A. R. It is purely and simply whether the promise he makes to one is consistent with the promise he makes to the other.

We know that a man cannot belong to the M. E. church and the Presbyterian at the same time. When he joins one he drops out of the other. This is the fact, no matter which may be right. Much more cannot a United Presbyterian belong to the G. A. R., because the promise he makes to one is opposed to the promise he makes to the other.

In respect to this matter, we make the following challenge. We challenge anybody to deny that the Testimony of the United Presbyterian church forbids the taking of an obligation to obey a code of unknown laws. We challenge anybody to deny that the G. A. R. requires of its members implicit obedience to the encampment of which they may be members, and to the lawful rules and orders of the Grand Encampment, to which this is subordinate.

"Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."—Birmingham Free Press.

THE UNITED BRETHREN CASE.

In 1826 the Miami Conference declared that all ministers who should join the Masonic fraternity should lose their connection with the church. In 1827 the conference in the East declared that all preachers and members who should connect themselves with the order of Freemasons should lose their membership. The General Conference of 1829 declared that all that should connect themselves with the Masonic fraternity should be excluded from the church. This law continued unchanged until 1849. In 1849 the expression, "There shall be no connection with secret combinations," was inserted—being taken from the constitution of 1841. In 1849 began also the systematic effort for the enforcement of the law. Later changes have all had reference to the method of enforcement.—Religious Telescope.

SOUNDING A RETREAT.

[From the Wesleyan Methodist.]

The General Conference of the United Brethren church which met at Fostoria, Ohio, May 14th, sounded one of the most humiliating retreats in the presence of the secret society foe which ever characterized the history of religious conflict. It has been known for these recent years that the satanic legions of organized darkness have been polluting the sanctuary of that church with their blood-stained cloven foot-prints of conspiracy against the character and peace of her communion, in spite of her law forbidding such relation and fellowship. One of Satan's most cherished ambitions seems to be to thrust himself into the Christian church under the guise of an angel of light, and thus to deceive the very elect into the fellowship of his character, and the propagation and defense of his interests. There is no more alarming illustration of the ruinons success of this policy than in the fellowship accorded the secret "abomination of desolation" by professed Christian churches. It is with an inexpressible sense of sadness that we are forced to enroll the name of the United Brethren church on the list of those churches that are the victims of this "deceivableness of unrighteousness." The "seducer" has been singing his siren song of "popular favor," of a "broader basis," of "swelling numbers" in the ear of the church, while unhallowed ambition, pride, and love of applause have been charmed ont of all religious reason and principle by the sweet-toned symphony of its worldly cadences, until, like the fabled mariners, the church has plunged into the yawning, devonring deep of secretism. The address of the bishops clearly indicated the fatal trend of compromising sentiment. Referring to this vital snbject in the way of counsel they earnestly advised the General Conference: "That you limit the prohibitory features of your enactment to combinations, secret and open, to which the church believes a Christian cannot belong." Here is the clearest admission that there are secret societies to which Christians can belong and be perfectly consistent as followers of him who "ever spake openly" and both by example and precept branded those who hated the light, as evil doers. In the wide range of the discussion on the side of the majority the only foundation at the base of their attempted argument was the shifting sands of a trnckling, worldly policy, while a large and able minority built, in principle and argument, on the foundation of the apostles and prophets with Jesns Christ as the corner-stone. Neither Scripture or reason conld influence the popularity-crazed, and truculent majority, and the prohibitory section 3 of chapter 10 of the discipline was repealed, and the following indefinite legal nothingness snbstituted by a vote of 76 to 36: "A secret combination in the sense of the constitution, is a secret league or confederation of persons holding principles and laws at varience with the Word of God, and injurious to Christian character, as evidenced in individual life, and infringing upon the natural, social, political or religious rights of those outside its pale." Provision is made that, "Any member or minister of our church fonnd in connection with such combination" shall be disciplined. The fact is patent that no standard is established by which the church is to be guided and governed in determining what secret societies are "such combinations" as are referred to in the law. All secret societies claim to be the very embodiment of perfection itself, assuming in many instances to outvie every other possible agency in promoting human interests for time and for eternity. The decision of the church as to "such combinations" is left to the fancy or caprice of individual judgment as to the character and general influence of secret societies. The way is clearly and designedly opened for United Brethren to take in the whole catalogue of secret clans in personal membership and personal glorification. It would have been more honorable for that General Conference to have expunged all reference to secret societies from its discipline, than to have sounded a retreat in the face of the foe under the cover of a "glittering generality" of terms designed to mean nothing but the opening of the doors of the church to the membership and fellowship of secret societies. There is, however, a gleam of light cast on this dark picture in the fact that thirty-six entered their solemn protest against such cowardly concession to the kingdom and powers of darkness.

OTHER COMMENTS.

The liberals having gained a glorious victory on the secrecy question thought they could carry every issue without any trouble. They realized their mistake when they found two bishops elected who had opposed their action on the constitution. Past victories never ensure present ones.—The Itinerant.

The Advance spoke in a similar strain of congratnlation and triumph at this defeat of the truth at Fostoria.

The United Brethren have permitted false notions of expediency to triumph over righteousness in their action on secretism. Once that denomination had a noble record on the subject; bnt it has been giving way to a craving for popularity, and finds the lodge too mighty a power to put under its feet. Its declarations against secretism do not amount to much while the door is thrown open for the admission of secretists. If these do not despise it for making concessions and turn all the more against it until it yields everything, they will be very likely to enter in and take possession, forcing the opposition to keep silence or leave the house. For those among the "Brethren" who were convinced of the sinfulness of the lodge the case has become distressing. Whether they will have the grace to stand up for the right and rather to suffer than yield to the encroachments of lodgery, time will show.—Lutheran Standard.

The late qnadrennial General Conference of the United Brethren in Christ had to deal with the question of secret societies. The constitution of the church was strong enough, but the practice under it was uneven, and the body had become somewhat distracted and divided. The Conference so far gave way to the clamor as to provide for a commission, to submit the constitution, or so much of it as denies church membership to those belonging to secret societies, to a vote of the church. This was done on the plea that this charter had never been properly so submitted, though in force for over a quarter of a century! A new chapter against secrecy was put into the discipline, good in sentiment, but so loosely guarded that it may easily be rendered void of effect. Thus the devil gets a temporary victory. —Christian Harvester.

This action was taken, after earnest, able, thorough discnssion, by a decisive vote of 76 to 38, Bishops Glossbrenner, Weaver, and Kephart voting for, and Castle and Dickson against the law. The law thus adopted strikes ont what has always been one of the fnndamental restrictions of the United Brethren church, namely, that no member of any secret society can become a member of the church. Christ sold to the lodge!!—Lutheran Witness.

Traveling on the Lord's Day.—The opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachnsetts, by Allen, J., holding that a person who walks out on the Lord's day for the pnrpose of making a social call, can not be said to be traveling, within the meaning of the section of the statute of that State against traveling on the Lord's day.

There is nothing more pleasant or more instrnctive than to compare experience with expectation, or to register from time to time the difference between idea and reality.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XXIII.—Concluded.

Mr. Basset, with all his seeming openness, had not a little diplomatic craft. So he did not tell Stephen that he was morally sure the Grand Lodge would render an adverse decision in Mrs. Strycker's case; or that he himself had been knowing to more than one similar instance where men had paid in hundreds of dollars, but happening to die slightly in debt to the lodge the moral and charitable order they had so trustingly joined kept their money, but refused all benefit to the widows and orphans supposed to be the objects of its beneficent care. There was one screw, however, that he had not yet turned, and like a good-natured inquisitor of olden times, he proceeded with an easy smile to make Stephen feel this power.

"Speaking about a demit now. Of course anybody is at liberty to leave the lodge, but you remember the closing part of the Odd-fellow's obligation: 'Should I be expelled, or voluntarily leave the order, I will consider this promise as binding out of it as in it.' A demit makes no difference with the irrevocable nature of the vow."

Stephen felt as if suddenly caught in a vice. He had merely been turning the idea over in his mind of leaving the lodge without coming to any definite resolution, for he meant to take no hasty step; though he could not help acknowledging that he had been very hasty in joining a society which by its very constitution he was prevented from knowing anything about beforehand—he could easily slip his neck from under the noose when convinced that it was not a good thing. Now the idea of irrevocableness made the obligation which had before rested on him with the lightness of a silken thread press like a band of iron. But he was too proud to let Mr. Basset discern his mental wincings. So he only said quietly, "I haven't made up my mind whether to leave yet or not, and if I do, it will not be because I have any difficulty with the obligation as I understand it."

"Now that is a very important point—to understand it right," said Mr. Basset, catching eagerly at this latter clause in Stephen's remark. "Unprincipled men creep into Odd-fellowship. There's no denying that. I'm sorry it is so. But you must take it like everything else, the evil along with the good. This report, by the way, I'll leave with you, and you can look it over when you have leisure. You know we may reason and argue about a thing, but when it comes to convincing, facts and figures do the business."

And Mr. Basset departed with a smile so beaming in its friendly cheerfulness that he might have almost sat for the benevolent spirit of his favorite order personified.

Stephen, in an interval of leisure between the study of his law cases, took up the pamphlet and ran his eye over the figures. It was certainly true that Odd-fellow benevolence had mounted up the last year to over two millions. At the same time its collections had reached a sum of over five millions. Stephen's mathematical mind at once perceived that the lodge was very well paid for its "charity" by a margin of three-fifths of the receipts. Would not an insurance company that took 60 per cent to pay its running expenses be called an arrant swindle? And if the church should do so, would not lodgemen like Mr. Basset be the first to call her by even a worse name?

These questions Stephen revolved in his mind and half decided in his next letter home to confess his folly—for folly he now considered it—and ask counsel. But it would pain the old couple to find out that he had taken such a step and kept it so long a secret from them; and his mind, until Mr. Basset had so coolly showed him that he was reckoning without his host, had clung hopefully to procuring a demit; for he flattered himself that then his whole experience as an Odd-fellow would drop out of his life so completely that it need never be referred to or thought of again.

CHAPTER XXIV.

IN RAMAH WAS THERE A VOICE HEARD.

The president of the W. C. T. U. in Jacksonville, like many another woman in the White Ribbon ranks, had known a time when she construed St. Paul with extreme literalness, and would have faeed the cannon's mouth sooner than an average-sized audience. Yet she had conquered early prejudice and native timidity so far as to be not only an indefatigable temperance worker, but one of the most acceptable speakers in the organization, her glowing eloquence and forceful logic being only matched on the platform by the charm of her noble presence and sweet, womanly voice.

There is nothing more wonderful in this whole wonderful movement than the fact that it has developed—not one Deborah, that would be nothing remarkable—but hundreds of Deborahs, eaeh one a host in herself, who have risen in their might "for God and home and native land," unmindful of the sneers or the misunderstandings of smaller and weaker souls. Thank God for the army of temperance Deborahs! Is it not fitting that by them he should judge the traffic which has made so many Rachels.

Martha, however, never thought of herself in this exalted light, for she was in her own humble estimate only one of the rank and file, though she taught a primary class in the Jacksonville Band of Hope; and so when Mrs. Judge Haviland made her an informal call one day, she was as agreeably surprised as one of Napoleon's subalterns might have been, unexpeetedly honored by a visit from his commander-in-chief.

The weather was warm and close. Mrs. Haviland sank down in the easy chair Martha offered her with a look of weariness and exhaustion in her face that might have been attributed to the heat by any one who did not know that in the past six months the number of local Unions and Bands of Hope which she had organized, the addresses she had made to adults, and the talks she had given the children, to say nothing of the time and strength diffused through numberless minor channels, were more than enough to keep mind and body strained to their highest tension.

"I called to have a little talk with you," she said, "about our Band of Hope especially. I want to praise you, Miss Benson, for the admirable way in which you have trained those little midgets. I was quite surprised as well as delighted the other day to see how clearly they seemed to understand politieal economy in its relations to the drink traffie."

"I am a pupil, myself," replied Martha, modestly. "I have only lately begun to study these subjects. My first introduction to temperanee work was when I joined the Good Templars, and the drink question as related to economic or hygienic questions was never once discussed in the lodge to which I belonged; or even alluded to."

"I do not like to say anything against any society which professes to work for temperance," replied Mrs. Haviland, who, though she had never studied the principles of secret organizations, was a suffieiently keen observer to suspect them of being only a millstone around the neck of the cause they pretended to serve; "but I find that these secret temperance lodges educate superficially, if they educate at all, which I am sometimes inclined to doubt, and the result is a host of nominal laborers who may be well trained in lodge work but no farther. I rejoice in the broadening scope of the W. C. T. U. Looked upon merely as a grand edueational agency for woman, it is a most powerful force in the mental and spiritual development of our sex. By it God is training the future mothers of our Republic, for who knows what duties, what responsibilities! I was one of the Ohio erusaders. Perhaps our way was a wrong one, but it was the way God led us. Even now I hear people sneer at that first early movement as a mere craze, a folly, a mistake. Perhaps it was all that, but it was a great deal more. God was in our mistake, our folly, if such it was—guiding us, teaching us, leading us by a way that we knew not of. And better to blunder and have God with us, than not to blunder and walk without him."

"We were native-born American women, educated, religious, home-loving, with all the deep-rooted, moral instincts that belong to such as their native birthright, yet we were bound and helpless. We had to stand by while the temperanee laws were made a dead letter, and 'primaries' packed by ignorant, whisky-drinking foreigners governed the elections. And what could we do? We were desperate and the cry of the desperate is to God. In a week every saloon in the city where I lived was closed. We felt almost as if the millennial day had come. But the time was not yet ready for us to sing the song of Miriam. In less than a year those gates of hell that we thought we had closed forever were opened wider than before. We could not understand it. Would this have been if all the voters who professed temperance principle had stood by us at the polls? Could men who did not love the cause well enough to risk a little personal discomfort and inconvenience to themselves adequately represent women who would have gladly died for it? It was a crisis for us and our work, but in that crisis a great idea was born—the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. There are many things I believe in now that I did not believe in then. We had much fallow ground of ignorance and prejudice to break up; but we did it thoroughly, and we sowed seed—good seed. Who will reap the harvest?"

Mrs. Haviland paused an instant in her rapid retrospection, a shadow swept over her grand face, and she turned to Martha and clasped both her hands with a strangely eager, earnest pressure.

"It is to you we look—young, brave, earnest souls, to take our places when we fall in the battle. For we must fall. We are human; we want to see the end for which we have prayed and labored. But for many of us that cannot be. And we know it; I know it."

Her voice dropped lower, and the brief, detached sentences came slowly as if wrung out by the pressure of some inward suffering.

Martha looked up at her wonderingly.

"Dear Mrs. Haviland; don't talk of any one's filling your place, least of all one so humble as myself, without talents, or wealth, or social rank."

"Martha—Miss Benson, you do not know the place you may be filling twenty years from now. What American girl does?"

Martha colored slightly. Although she was a believer in woman's suffrage, she was a very unambitious little person. If Nelson ever rose to stations of public honor, she felt that nothing would make her prouder or happier than to shine herself in that reflected glory, but she remembered that Mrs. Haviland might not know anything about Nelson, and be even unaware of their engagement, in which case her words were of course quite innocent of any prophetic intent. She made no reply save to listen with eager, reverent attention as the sweet, low, impassioned voice sounded on like the notes of an aneient chorus, half wail, half triumph.

"I entered the warfare like many another woman, because I was forced into it by the presence of the monster in my own home. I had only one child—a son. Oh, how I loved him! How I tried to shield him from every touch of evil! But a taste for drink was hereditary in the Haviland blood, and I did not know it till it was too late. Perhaps it would have made no difference if I had known, for how could my weak woman's arms shield him from the snare set on every side? I did my best, and when I could do no more—when my Henry was brought home to me dead, killed by a fall from his horse after he had been taking too mueh wine, I knelt down by his lifeless form, and I parted the curls away from his eold, white brow, and kissed him over and over just as I did when I hushed him to sleep on my bosom an innocent babe. Oh, it seemed so long ago I did it, almost as though far away in some lost eternity—and I vowed to God then and there never to cease fighting the fiend that had slain my child. For what was my son more than any other woman's son? more than poor Bridget Maloney's, for instance, who gets drunk on the vilest kind of whisky instead of sherry and champagne? God made mothers' hearts alike. The Democratic party wants the Irish whisky vote, and the Republiean party wants the German beer vote, and politicians bid for it, and the work of death goes on. Give these Irish and German women who have suffered so mueh from the brutality of their drinking husbands the ballot, and though many of them drank themselves, they would all vote the prohibition ticket. My heart sickens and my brain reels when I think of all the hideous wrongs and cruelties that have come under my notice while collecting facts and statistics for the work—little helpless children beaten, frozen, starved, burned to death, or made helpless eripples for life. They were not my children; I never even saw them; but they had mothers with mothers' hearts, and I feel like crying, 'O Lord, how long!' Must wrong be forever on the throne? Will the day never come when politicians shall cease to betray the helpless to advance their own petty selfish interests?"

Mrs. Haviland paused, and then she said in a changed tone and with her usual gentle smile:

"I am pouring out all this to you because it does me good. I am a woman and must talk. And now, my dear, as I am old enough to be your mother, allow me to congratulate you on your engagement with so noble a young man as Nelson Newhall. I have had my eye on him for some time. He is worthy of you and you of him."

There are many prohibitionists like Mrs. Haviland who are working, praying, suffering for the cause, and "with brave hearts breaking slow" pass to their rest in the midst of the struggle, and never see the deadly enemy that continually betrays their best efforts. In proof whereof we will only say that there was a Masonic reunion that very night which was attended by the mayor of Jacksonville, several politicians of considerable local note, and a goodly number of saloon-keepers. And "they met upon the level and parted on the square" in all that mutual good-fellowship supposed to be peculiarly Masonie.

(To be continued.)

THE COMMENCEMENT SEASON.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

QUARTER-CENTENNIAL DAY.

Wednesday, June 17th, will be remembered in the annals of Wheaton College as among the brightest of her days. It was the first attempt at a general reunion of the alumni and old students generally; but after such a day the institution need not fear to call together her children at any anniversary. The martial strains of the fine band, and the joyful pealing of the bell called together a fine audienee in the large chapel to attend "morning exercise" after the "former manner." A thousand grave and precious memories roused themselves anew to life, and as the old songs arose from every lip, many a manly, many a tender cheek was not ashamed of the dropping tear. Mrs. C. A. Beecher, the old organist of the College and widow of one of the first graduating class, assisted Rev. C. W. Hiatt of Columbus, O., in conducting the singing. Pres. J. Blanchard spoke with his old warmth and earnestness from Proverbs 23: 17, 18: "Let not thine heart envy sinners; but be thou in the fear of the Lord all the day long. For surely there is an end; and thy expeetation shall not be cut off." An hour or two was given to a kind of experience meeting, Pres. L. N. Stratton, of the class of 1860, presiding. Among the speakers were Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. Amos J. Bailey, A. T. Hemingway, A. E. Wileox, J. F. Snyder, and H. L. Kellogg of Chicago; D. D. Fisher, Esq., of St. Louis; Revs. I. Brown, J. L. Fonda, J. N. Bedford, W. L. Ferris, L. S. Hand; Profs. O. F. Lumry, H. A. Fischer, and others.

The dinner was a notable affair. Several estimates placed the number at nearly 700. There was abundance for all, and joy lit up every face; even the hard-worked entertainment committee viewed with unallayed satisfaction the success of their work.

The afternoon and part of the evening were occupied with class histories, led off by L. N. Stratton of '60. But one of the twenty-five classes, that of '66, was unrepresented in the audience. The addresses of the evening were by Rev. L. S. Hand of Ottumwa, Iowa, on "The Work of a Christian College," and by Pres. C. A. Blanchard on "The Present and Future of Wheaton College."

COMMENCEMENT.

The College Chapel was packed at an early hour of a perfect June day in anticipation of an unusually interesting program, and the verdiet of one and all who were in attendanee is that the anticipation was more than realized.

The walls of the chapel were beautifully decorated with ropes of eedar and flowers of all varieties ,cultivated and wild. Immediately back of the platform in letters of white upon a body of green, was the class motto: Suaviter in modo, fortiter in re, symbolized by a ship pushing bravely and smoothly out to sea with all sails set.

The class numbering six, two ladies and four gentlemen, were ushered to their seats on the platform while the Chicago Quintet Club, under the leadership of Mr. William Lewis, cheered their hearts by sweet strains from Boccaccio.

The exercises were immediately opened with prayer by Rev. Amos J. Bailey, of Lakeview, Ill.

The first oration with salutatory was presented by Miss Juannita Breckenridge, of New Windsor, Ill., subject: "The Foreign Policy of England." Her manner of address was clear, elegant, forcible. She made no display of rhetoric, only as it served to strengthen her argument, which was, that most of the wars of history have been for increase of territory. This is wrong in the eyes of true moralists. England has been no exception to the rule. The elaim that her intention has been to improve the world is false. She has even attacked and vanquished weak and ignorant peoples. While abolishing Juggernaut from India she was introducing the dram shop and has converted a nation of heathen into a nation of drunkards. Her policy toward China and other countries was shown to be characterized by the same principle of agrandizement of self. The lady made a prophecy of the downfall of the United Kingdom unless there were a speedy change in its foreign policy. Her argument seemed to be aimed at Jingoism rather than at the liberal and humanitarian policy which has marked the administration of Gladstone.

Mr. Milton Coe, of Wampsville, N. Y, spoke on the subject, "Centers." Taking his analogy from the circle, he showed that all great movements gather around their central points. No reform can succeed unless it have a human head—a central man to whom the world looks. This leader must train for his work with the zeal and self-denial of the athlete for his place in the game. He must be decided in convictions—in a proper sense an enthusiast. He must build upon souud morals. Moral qualities are the powers that triumph in the end. No skill in arms will maintain a cause or government that has not this sure foundation. Every man has a place of his own which he should find and fill. The way to fill a church is to fill the pulpit. High eulogies were paid to the Nazarene and his great followers, Paul and Luther.

Miss Florence Johnson, of Wheaton, delivered a most charming oration in defence of woman's claim for recognition in the political and professional world. Subject: "A Problem." A theorem is something to be proved, a problem something to be done, and life is a problem. The present age has many political questions to settle, none of which lies nearer to the heart of one half of humanity than this of woman's sphere. Woman has the right to fill the place for which she is qualified. She is not identically, but is equally endowed with man. The age of brute force has passed and the reign of heart and mind has come upon us in all its splendor. If an analogy may be drawn from the rest of creation, woman, the last work of God, was the best. It would seem that she ought to vote; for while two-thirds of church members are women, nine-tenths of the criminals are men—and these make the laws. The thing that most concerns woman is the protection of her home. Shall she not have this power? It is time for this age which has kept woman bound in grave clothes of a dead past to "loose her and let her go."

The next orator, George A. Post, of Varick, N. Y., spoke on the subject, "Momentum." Education does not determine a man's success in the world so much as the power with which he hurls himself into his life work. The small man, like the small ball, must make up for his lack of weight by velocity if he would shake mountains. Poe and Coleridge were cited as failures in life largely because of their laziness. Their high gifts did not save them from well-nigh useless lives. Pope, Cowper, Baxter, and Prescott were cited as men who succeeded under difficulties by their earnest application. The peroration was very fine.

Mr. John B. Russell, of Kewanee, Ill., next spoke on the subject, "Ideal Statesmen." Ships may start out smoothly, yet without skilled pilots they are bound to perish. A need to-day is of ideal statesmen. Never was the supply of great men so unequal to the demand as now. Sumner was eulogized as the type of a true statesman. The statesman never seeks, he accepts office. The golden age is the age of master minds. Statesmanship should be studied by the man who would enter the political field.

Mr. E. R. Worrell, the valedictorian, was greeted with applause, showing him to be a favorite. He spoke upon "Garnished Sepulchers." Earth is a huge grave. Not remarkable then that the dead should receive more attention than the living. Cromwell, the dethroner of tyrants, was slandered by men after his death who never dared look in his face while he lived. The grandest work of Macauley and Carlyle has been to excavate him from a mountain of lies. It is as necessary to engrave truth on hearts of flesh as on slabs of stone. We should not wear out our swords hacking fossil snakes when live serpents are so plentiful. This was the strongest speech of the day, and closed with an impressive farewell address, containing words of true sympathy for President C. A. Blanchard, from whose human sight some of those nearest and dearest have not long since been taken forever.

In the evening Rev. J. P. Hutchinson, late of London, England, delivered an address on education which was heard by an interested audience, who listened eagerly to the numerous anecdotes and historical incidents of English coloring of which the address was replete.

A fine concert by the Chicago orchestra in the evening, followed by a social reunion, closed one of the grandest of the Wheaton Commencements.

MONMOUTH COLLEGE.

The twenty-ninth year of Monmouth college was completed last Thursday. There have been 336 students in attendance during the year, 214 being from Illinois and the remainder representing Iowa, Penn-

(Continued on 12th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—President Cleveland, who, it was feared by some, would set a bad example of private wickedness and public depravity, seems, to say the least, to be fairly respectable, as much so as any recent habitant of the White House. He is a pretty regular attendant at the First Presbyterian church, nor does he seem at all troubled because Mr. Frederic Douglass has rented a slip in the vicinity of the President's. Miss Cleveland is universally respected and beloved as an excellent and talented Christian woman. Nor is there anything in the administration of the President or his Cabinet that is open to serious criticism. On the contrary there is much to commend. True, there have been changes, but probably not more than if Mr. Blaine had been elected, and the great majority of the clerks who were at work here a year ago are at work still. The sweeping changes which were anticipated have not taken place, and a good degree of firmness has been manifested in resisting the importunity of office-seekers.

I am glad, too, to say that there is much being done for the reformation of that great mass of people who are outside the influence of the churches. On every Sabbath afternoon street meetings are held on Pennsylvania avenue, which are large, quiet, and attentive. The preaching is not always learned, or of a remarkably high order, but is simple, earnest, and practical. At 909 Pennsylvania avenue there are noon-day and evening meetings during the week; many hopeful conversions have taken place, and all are being interested in Christian living. The Salvation Army have also rented barracks in the north part of the city, but I cannot say what progress they are making. I am sorry to be able to say nothing good of Washington and its influences. The 1,200 saloons still pour forth their never failing flood of pollution and death. They do this, be it remembered, by the consent of the American people. All licenses are granted by virtue of United States law, nor have the people of this District any voice in determining what its enactments shall be.

I notice, too, that the National Republican of this morning publishes the prizes drawn in the Louisiana lottery. These large amounts are paraded before the ignorant, as lures and traps to induce people to invest their money in these schemes of fraud.

I notice four prizes said to be drawn in this city, of $5,000 each. The sale of these tickets was in violation of law. I believe the advertising of the scheme is also prohibited; but yet a corrupt public sentiment and a venial press panders to this demoralizing influence.

We notice also with sorrow and shame the continued prostitution of young girls in the houses of ill-fame. A law of the District forbids the admission of girls under eighteen. How utterly shameful that this dreadful abomination should be suffered to go on by the national authorities.

What a blessed consummation if truly Christian influences could become the essential element in national law. H. H. HINMAN.

SECTS—BEREA EVANGELIST.

In the Cynosure for June 11th is an article, evidently from the pen of the senior editor, and in which he propounds the question, "How are sects to be destroyed, and the sin of schism stopped?" Then referring to the position of the Berea Evangelist, that Christians cease the practice of schism, he asks the question, "If a thousand should come out of their sects, and come together for worship, would they not be a sect?"

In reply, let us take the writer's own illustration and ask, if those "Methodists, Free Methodists, Wesleyans, Congregationalists, and United Brethren who met in Aurora, Ill., and "were by a baptism of the Spirit" fused into "one body of Christ," had not, when thus fused, returned to their schisms, but remained in that place, assembling from time to time for regular worship, edification and discipline, would Bro. Blanchard have dared to call that "body of Christ" a sect? Would he not have said these who are now holding simply to Christ are the one true body of Christ in this place, whilst the other worshiping assemblies which have gone off and organized on some other or additional basis—a doctrine or polity—and are in complicity with the world in its spirit of party, slavery, caste, secretism, are the sects of the place? Would he not then have said; The body of CHRIST now here in Aurora, Ill., is in attitude like to those who in Corinth were "for Christ" whilst others were for Paul, Cephas, or Apollos; that those who were simply and wholly for Christ were not a sect in the objectionable sense of the word?

We here note, the body of Christ should be separated from the world; and in this sense is a sect, the sect of the Nazarene, "the body of Christ." The word sect in this sense is not objectionable, but to divide this body is the "sin of schism."

To keep in line with the writer's own mode of illustration and to show the position of the Berea Evangelist, let me say there was another prayer meeting—a meeting held in Lewis county, Ky., thirty-eight years ago. In that meeting there was a clear apprehension that human slavery, then existing all around us, was, as far as it prevailed, a subversion of the Gospel of Christ. We prayed that love to God supreme and to our neighbors as to ourselves might prevail; and thus slavery be swept away.

We were of one heart and one mind, "fused into one body." Nominally and ecclesiastically four of us were Presbyterians, two were Baptists, two were Disciples, and one a Methodist. We saw that to remain in our schisms would be to dissipate our little strength, bid God-speed to slavery and the sin of schism, then, as now, so sadly hindering the cause of reform. We had professed faith in Christ as our Saviour from sin—all sin. This was our creed. We had been baptized in his name—baptized as we understood the word. We decided to continue together for worship and mutual edification; to take the Word of God, the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament for our rule of faith and practice; and as we sought to avoid all divisions of the body of Christ, we repudiated all names that marked divisions. We simply took the name of our head, and stood "Church of Christ" at that place. See Eph. 1: 22; Rom. 16: 16.

So in other places. So here at Berea. Those who once were Methodists, Baptists, Disciples, Presbyterians, Congregationalists unite here in the one church of the place—"Church at Berea."

Some have reported us "Congregationalists." We never have accepted the name, and by official vote, years since, repudiated that name and all other denominational names—names that mark divisions. Is this the sin of schism?

Certainly there must be a way to get rid of sin. Forty years ago Bro. Blanchard knew the way. He then used to tell me I ought to come out from a pro-slavery "church," and not bid God-speed to human slavery by giving to slave-holders fellowship. He quoted the Word on me, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." "He that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." I felt the force of the Word. I came out from such fellowship.

Also, Bro. Blanchard knows our work is not "mere destruction." He knows we have no sympathy with mere "Come-outers," anti-church men. We like the true church, the assembly of the saints, the regular assemblage of true believers for worship, edification, and discipline; as at Jerusalem, Ephesus, and Corinth. So we have labored some forty years.

There can be a true church of Christ ready for co-operation in all good works, yet that church may exist without being ecclesiastically connected with those "associations of churches" whose distinguishing feature is some doctrine or polity, not essential to Christian life and fellowship, and which feature constitutes the sect element, divides the body. Bro. Blanchard also knows how sectism lies across the pathway of reform: and Howard Crosby says "there can be no millennium for a divided church;" and yet, as Bro. Pentecost said, Dr. Crosby's speech was indeed able, but you could not "lift him out of the Presbyterian church with a derrick." Great men and good men sometimes do strange things—neutralize their words by their practice—denounce the sin of schism and yet live in it. JOHN G. FEE.

A G. A. R. CASE.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The mania for high-sounding titles is the legitimate out-growth of secrectism. Hence the Drummer Boy, elected Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., now is dubbed Gen. Kountz, in violation of their own rules that know no rank save comrade. They claim not to be a secret order; the Catholic church also so decides in its Plenary Council, hence Catholics can join the G. A. R. without fear of excommunication. But it is a secret order well guarded, also a political order, (this the Catholic priests know right well) though they stoutly deny it. The Catholic church, with an eye to business, sees considerable power in the G. A. R., politically—as priests get it all at the confessional. Mark that, comrades! Father confessor is better posted than most of you are. Yet, father, your parishioners get a taste for secrecy; then away they go till Masonry, your rival, gulps them down: then farewell Pope and priest; out of the pan into the fire. "The wicked grow worse and worse;" made up of all classes of characters; comrades, not a few with their badges on, find sidewalks rather narrow, some quite often so; some very profane, some dishonest, and the best very selfish.

An example: An ex-soldier goes to Brooklyn, desires work, hears of the Employment Bureau, desires assistance in finding work. He is asked for a certificate from a commander of a post to show that he was worthy and in good standing (dues paid up). This ex-soldier is of good moral character, a Christian, has a letter from a pastor of a U. P. church, informs the officer of the fact, and that on account of conscientious scruples cannot connect himself with any secret order; hence has no certificate from a post. The would-be unselfish G. A. R. tells this worthy Christian soldier that his name cannot be enrolled on the Employment Bureau list; he must find work as best he can. This is almost as charitable as Satan, and done to force poor soldiers into posts where they can be bled for the benefit of travelling generals or other official G. A. R's. Now I, an infidel of questionable repute, but a G. A. R., step up to the office of the Employment Bureau, present my certificate, properly endorsed. I obtain an employment card which commends me to any who may need my services. I meet the U. P. comrade at the door of a minister of the Gospel, a G. A. R. He needs a hand. The Christian brother asks for employment; I present my card. The minister hires the infidel; the Christian takes a back seat. Satan says, well done. This is G. A. R. disinterested unselfishness. J. O. R.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS OR PRAYER.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—"'Tis not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Without doubt a "campaign fund" is needed in order to carry on this reform work successfully; but that is not the great need of the hour, or the greatest need of the present time; but rather that the leaders of this reform, as well as all its true friends, retire for a time with Jesus to the mountain and there tarry till they be newly endowed with power, wisdom, and entire consecration from on high.

Something tells me that secret prayer, "knee work," is the true need of this time, and no, or but little, true advancement will be made if this is neglected. Not ordinary praying, but true wrestling with God till the blessing is gained, and prayer must be accompanied with the laying of all on the altar.

M. P. N.

A DISGRACED PULPIT.

WILBUR, Oregon.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—A new light has appeared in the regions of darkness, a distant thunder has been heard for several years in the M. E. church of Oregon. In pioneer years it was little thought in this far western country that the time would come when a minister of Jesus Christ would stand before his congregation to preach a funeral sermon, and after telling his hearers that this deceased brother was a Mason, then in a louder and boastful tone saying, "I am a Mason from the top of my head to the sole of my feet." Only think of preaching Jesus Christ to the people, and to make it more impressive, to tell his hearers that he was a Freemason from the top of his head to the sole of his feet. He ought to have finished his text, and said with a loud voice, Great art thou, Diana of the lodge. The heathen did no more when St. Paul preached Jesus to them.

This funeral sermon was by one of our elders, who is looked upon as one of our best historians. I suppose we will hear the cry of distress in the lodge before long, "O Lord, is there no help for the widow's son?"

Does any one know of any great evangelist in any part of the civilized world to-day who belongs to this band of the great, grand lodge? If so let him come to the front and explain why they choose darkness rather than light. I for one do not believe that there is any good in the works of darkness.

F. REDMON.

SECRETISM AND PRIDE.

DECATUR, Iowa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Some men, who would not shrink from attacking an armed foe on the battle field, will waver when it comes to fighting a foe that is working in secret. They say, we know that the secret lodge is an evil, but oh! what can we do against it? It has in its grasp the principal political parties, and by this means holds the nation in its hands. It controls the largest and most wealthy churches, and proscribes for or holds in check those churches and other institutions which it cannot fully control.

Is it so, that an evil thing that ought to be driven from the face of the earth for its revelry, trickery, swindling, raising mobs, beating and murdering its peaceable and law-abiding opponents, is even now sitting in all the places of power in this nation, and the people willing to have it so, because they lack the courage to put it down? It is even so.

I sometimes think that secret lodges will exist as long as wicked men are in the world, but the governments of the nations will be rescued from them, and they will be driven from the churches into the lowest haunts of wickedness. And this will be done whenever the people have a mind to work with this great object in view. In vain do we boast of our numbers and wealth if Satan's seat be in the heart. It is better to be poor than proud. This will apply to churches as well as to persons. Pride has led a portion of the United Brethren church to be dissatisfied with our present constitution. They say in their hearts, Let us have the King, Secretism, over us also, that we may be "rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing." "The gold tried in the fire" is better than the riches of all the earth. O God, save the churches of this nation from their sins. ELZA OSBORN.

BIBLE LESSONS.

THIRD QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE KINGS.

LESSON 1, July 5.—The Revolt of the Ten Tribes. 1 Kings 12: 6-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He that walketh with wise men shall be wise; but a companion of fools shall be destroyed. Prov. 13:20.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The divine counsels are worked out by natural means. vs. 6–10. Humanly speaking, no sovereign could have a fairer prospect before him of founding a dynasty which would continue to reign for centuries over a united kingdom than was Solomon's. But he had broken the laws of the God who made him king, and punishment must follow; and it comes through a foolish, weak minded son. The prince royal, reared in an Eastern seraglio, surrounded with the corrupting false worships Solomon had so strangely and weakly introduced into his realm, turns out exactly what might have been predicted from the outset. Had Solomon continued a virtuous, God-fearing king, as he had been a prince, he might have had a virtuous, God-fearing son. To-day every thoughtful mind sees causes for alarm in the power which the amassing of colossal fortunes puts into the hands of a few. But if rich men use their wealth to oppress the poor and corrupt legislatures, or even if they spend it in personal gratification without a thought of benefiting humanity, their punishment is preparing. The sons surrounded by luxury from infancy and never taught the nobility of work, sink into vice and mental and moral imbecility, and thus their fortunes are dissipated and scattered.

2. Constitutional government is of God's appointing. vs. 12–15. This gathering of the people was a strictly constitutional one. The pen of inspiration gives us the first idea of constitutional liberty that had ever dawned on the human mind. The Hebrew constitution, given by God himself, forbade any such displays of royal magnificence as would necessitate the laying of heavy financial burdens on the people. They were quiet and orderly in their demonstrations because they knew their strength—the strength of a righteous cause. But Rehoboam could not read the signs of the times any more than some of our politicians can read them now; "the cause was from the Lord." We notice that Jeroboam, though a far stronger character than Rehoboam, was much more decidedly wicked. Hence it does not follow that when God elevates a man or a party to power that they must be better than the man or the party displaced. They may be much worse. When "the party of moral ideas" was defeated at the last presidential election, God's hand was in it to punish them for their cowardly and wicked temporizing with the rum power, and the mortification of making way for a party that is the open patron of free rum, as formerly of slavery, and which is linked with the lowest and most corrupting elements in politics, was no small part of their punishment.

3. The most important revolutions may be accomplished bloodlessly. vs. 16–17. God's time had come for the kingdom to pass away from David, and how easily, how quietly the thing was accomplished. Many far-seeing minds predict that our reforms cannot be carried without bloodshed, but if the spirit of love prevails in all reform counsels, God may be silently preparing the hearts of the people so that the mightiest revolutions may be accomplished without war or strife.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What proverbs of Solomon apply very justly to Rehoboam? P 17: 25; 19: 13. How did he violate the spirit of the constitution in his reply? Deut. 17: 20. What encouragement have we to work and pray for the downfall of oppression? Dan. 4: 17.

THE BOOK OF THE KINGS.—(1) Title. The work is named from its contents, which is the history of the "kings" of Israel and Judah from the accession of Solomon to the Babylonish captivity.—Cook. (2) Author. Unknown. Ancient tradition names Jeremiah. Others think the book was compiled by Ezra or Baruch. It is evidently a compilation from the ancient records. (3) When written. The books of Kings were completed, as we have them, within the space marked out by the dates, B. C. 561–538, or in other words between the death of Nebuchadnezzar and the accession of Cyrus in Babylon. Linguistic and other considcrations favor the belief that the actual completion was early in this period—about B. C. 560.—Cook. (4) Time. They embrace a period of 455 years, from 1015 to 560 B. C.

THE GRIEVANCES.—The point of grievance with the people was excessive taxation. The luxury and cost of Solomon's court, i. e. his family establishment, his harem and his political relationships, had become simply enormous. He levied unsparingly upon his people. This had become so severe that the masses were at one in demanding relief from Rehoboam as the condition of their allegiance.—Cowles.

"Rehoboam consulted with the old men." The first impulse of Rehoboam was good.—Kitto. But there is no evidence that he went to God, the true source of wisdom. According to Bahr, "the old men are not old people, but the elders." No doubt the word is constantly used, as in the expressions "elders of Israel," "elders of the city," etc. (as senatores, from senex, aldermen, equals elder men) without any reference to age; but this is not the case here, as the strong contrast with "young men" (vs. 8, 13, 14) proves.—Cook.

"If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day." He was simply to reign as a kind and true king for the good of his people. and not for his own pleasure or glory. He was to be like the sun, shedding blessings on all, not a focus, to which all rays center. All true kings serve the people.—Pel.

"Whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke." The yoke was the curved bar on the necks of a pair of oxen, by means of which they drew the cart; hence the emblem of subjection (Jer. 27: 2–11; Lam. 3: 27; Matt. 11: 29). The Romans used to lay a yoke on the shoulders of every person in a conquered country, in token of his submission.—Todd. The taxation was very heavy. Then everywhere the immense buildings were raised, not by paid workmen but by conscriptions. Solomon raised a levy of 30,000 men (Israelites). Of these, 10,000 were always one month in service, and free the two following; 150,000 men (hewers of wood and bearers of burdens) were not changed. These were strangers and not Israelites.

"I will chastise you with scorpions." Whips which stung and pained like a scorpion's bite. Gesenius understands by "scorpions" here, "whips having leaden balls at the ends of their lashes with hooks projecting from them." The meaning is, my father used ordinary means to keep you at work, but I will do it with extraordinary and severer means.—Lange.

"Forsook the old men's counsel, . . . spake to them after the counsel of the young men." He made a fatal omission in seeking advice. There is no mention of his praying to God, like his father for wisdom, nor of going to the temple for guidance, nor seeking the help of God's prophets. He trampled every pearl of wisdom under his feet, and revelled in the mire of his own folly.—Pel.

"For the cause was from the Lord." God always does the best thing possible for each nation and for each individual. If they are disobedient and wicked, he cannot wisely do for them what he would if they were obedient and good. Therefore he does what is best for them as they are, and what will most tend to make them what they ought to be. This disruption of the kingdom, the worst thing for Israel had they been true subjects of Jehovah, became the best thing for those who had become tainted with idolatry, proud, self-willed, and luxurious, thus threatening the very existence of true religion and godliness. (1) The origin of this separation is declared to have been a divine judgment for the idolatrous worship introduced by the foreign wives of Solomon. (2) Had this offence remained unpunished, so contagious an example would have infected the whole mass of the people, who would have irretrievably sunk into idolatry and vice. Does not this division of the people, under two monarchs, appear not only as a just punishment for the crimes of Solomon, but the most probable method of preventing universal apostacy? (3) This separation proved the most powerful means of preserving in the two remaining tribes whatever degree of attention to the divine laws subsisted among them. It made it the most obvious political interest of the kings of Judah to adhere with strictness to the law of Moses, and to promote its observance among their subjects.—Graves.

"To your tents." "Disperse to your homes (see chap. 8: 66; and cf. 2 Sam. 18: 17; 19: 8; 20: 1), and prepare for war." This cry—the Marseillaise of Israel—probably had its origin at a time when the people dwelt in tents, viz., in the march through the desert (see Josh. 22: 4; Num. 1: 52; 9: 18; 16: 26).—Pulpit Com. With the house of David, Israel flung aside the great promise (2 Sam. 7: 10–16; 23: 5) which depended on that house.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissette, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimhall, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Iudependent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Trihunc, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Trihune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cowell, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimhall, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Panll, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented hy men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will he just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised hy the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed hy their voices, but sustained hy their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, hy which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with hooks of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted hy our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited hy law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens hy Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should he extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should he settled hy arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should he the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should he immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry. N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oherlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solshury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

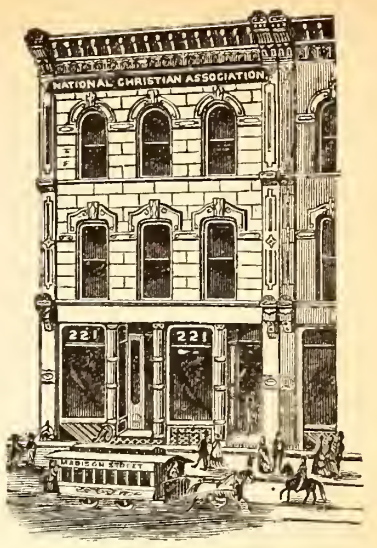
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimhall, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesharre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie: Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Gratton. Treas.., H B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1885.

THE N. C. A. ANNIVERSARY.

The eleventh annual business meeting held last Friday was on the whole very harmonious and efficient in its resolutions, entirely so, if we except the subject of politics. President Capwell makes one of our most popular presiding officers, as is proved by his unanimous and hearty election for a third term. The Secretary, Bro. Nutting, was absent, having a marriage ceremony to attend in Oberlin, early this week, which was of such personal importance that all regarded his absence as perfectly excusable. The action contemplating a national gathering representing the different churches opposing the lodge is an important enlargement upon our usual national conventions and deserves pushing vigorously. The resolution upon meetings for prayer and to educate the children and the Southern work are equally important; and we hope a vigorous Board will push forward the reform on these lines with increasing spirit and with faith. There is no doubt of the men who support it; if they are assured that the work is going on with zeal and courage they will not be lacking in their duty.

IS THE OLD TESTAMENT INSPIRED?

P. B. Reasoner of Adrian, Mich., asks us to explain how certain Old Testament Scriptures can consist with good morals and the idea that God inspired them.

ANSWER.

1. We believe the Old Testament inspired because Christ was, and he gave whatever authority he had to the very books of the Old Testament which we now have. The Jews and Christians both have kept copies of the Old Testament "Scriptures" which were quoted and endorsed by Christ, and if either had altered them we should have known it very quick. But they are the same; of course they are the "Scriptures" which Christ authorized, by quoting and commanding to "search" them, as the rule of eternal life. They rest, therefore, on Christ's authority.

2. The Old Testament books are the very same of which the Apostle says, "Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

OBJECTIONS AND DIFFICULTIES.

1. How could a good God direct Moses to slaughter Canaanites?

Just as he directed Grant to slaughter rebels who had murdered slaves and Abolitionists.

2. Why did he not command Moses to spare prisoners of war?

Because he had no place to keep them, and no oath would bind them; as a Spiritualist preacher said to a crowd of boys who asked him, "How about the Canaanites?"—"The Canaanites! They were the smut of eternity. God could make no use of them." There was wild truth in this wild assertion. "Their iniquities were full," and if God had spared them, they would have made the earth one kingdom of Dahomey ruled by Justus H. Schwabs and O'Donovan Rossas.

3. But some of those Canaanites were innocent; was it not cruel to kill them?

No, no more than it was treachery in Washington to deceive Clinton, or cruelty to hang Andre. It was war.

4. But why did he spare girls who were never married, and kill the rest?

Because they were the only class whom God saw could be spared with impunity to the State, and he knew best.

The Old Testament forbids treachery and cruelty, and like the American government, commands honesty and mercy; and there was no more treachery and cruelty in those Canaanite wars than in other wars; no more than in entrapping and hanging a gang who should rob a train and murder the officers. The Canaanites were such as Paul describes in Rom. 1: 21–31, and God must in consistency have repealed the law of gravitation by which a drunkard falls and breaks his head, if he had repealed the law of war, as waged in that age, by which those beastly men were exterminated. Cromwell put the garrison of Drogheda to the sword. They were "wild Irish" who had helped massacre towards a million of Protestants, boxing them up by dozens and sinking the box by stones in the water. There were several parties of Catholics, as well, who excommunicated and murdered each other. When the garrison of Drogheda had been executed to a man, priests and all, towns and cities thereafter surrendered at summons without blood; and Ireland was even by the testimony of Clarendon better governed, and more happy and prosperous during Cromwell's protectorate than in any eight years before. It does not follow that Cromwell was a monster of cruelty because he inflicted what the Irish still call the "curse of Drogheda." It would be a mercy to the nations if men whose religion is polygamy and assassination had a Cromwell to deal with at the present time.

But the Bible attributes to God what he permits men to bring on themselves. It is not wrong to say that God overthrew and wiped out slavery by the war, but it would be very false to say that God chose the horrors of Libby and Andersonville because he delighted in cruelty and starvation.

The Bible was fifteen solid centuries in the writing, and in that time men have come up from skins and acorns to what we are now; and it is as weak and foolish to reason from the customs of the first centuries to the present as to set before us the meals of Hottentots who live in trees.

Our friend Reasoner must accept these hasty sketches, not as the best we can do, but as the best we have time for. "If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine," says Christ. Our friend has not lived very many centuries, and of course, as Daniel Webster said, "does not understand the mathematics of heaven perfectly." Besides, he is a sinner and he knows it. If he goes to God in humble penitence, he will be guided into all truth, and Christ who "was the truth" is the substance of the Bible. He will get along with Moses and the Canaanites, by reflecting with John Howe, that "God is not efficiently present to the bad actions of bad men, as he is to the good actions of good men; yet so neither is he wholly absent therefrom;" that when God has done the sum of human history, he will doubtless prove it correct; and that he who denys or doubts the Bible will have to settle it with Christ, who did neither and who showed himself capable of knowledge and worthy of trust.

O pity, great Father of light, then I cried,
Thy creature who fain would not wander from thee;
So, humbled in dust, I relinquish my pride,
From doubt and from darkness thou only canst free.

And darkness and doubt are now fleeing away:
No longer I roam in conjecture forlorn,
So breaks on the traveller, faint and astray,
The bright and the balmy effulgence of morn.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

On the notice given in the annual meeting, the new Board of Directors met Monday afternoon. Rev. Joseph Travis was continued as chairman. The Treasurer's bond was approved for the sum of $20,000 as last year. The national convention representing the different anti-secret churches voted by the annual meeting was discussed, without any very definite conclusion. Prof. E. G. Paine reported concerning the work in Minnesota, which he considered as needing assistance and advice from the Board. Adjourned to meet next Monday at 2:30 P. M. All the members elect of the Board are requested to note this appointment and be present.

THE OHIO MEETING.

At our annual meeting in Chicago I was continued in the agency of the N. C. A. as I have been for fourteen years past. There was a manifest determination to renew the conflict with increased vigor, and press forward on the line of Christian work as God shall open the door. The Ohio brethren have been at work preparing the way and getting ready, as I trust, for a grand rally at Cedarville on the 7th of July. This should be a truly representative meeting, and largely attended by friends of the cause throughout the whole State. D. V., I expect to be on hand and do what I can to aid the friends in making this the first in a series of meetings to continue through the year. Who will report for counsel and work? J. P. STODDARD.

Bro. Dissette came up from Kankakee county, and his lecture work in this State to attend the anniversaries at Chicago and Wheaton. He has enjoyed the brief respite, and has made many pleasant acquaintances, upon whom he has impressed himself as a sincere and earnest brother, who only needs a little experience to make a very capable worker. A letter received Monday informing him of the very critical sickness of his father called him suddenly homeward that evening.

THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The old Board of Directors having held a prolonged meeting in the hall, the annual meeting was not called to order by president F. W. Capwell until eleven o'clock. The opening prayer being earnestly offered by Rev. B. T. Roberts, of Rochester, N. Y., and a secretary pro tem being provided, in response to an urgent and general request Rev. B. T. Roberts was called upon for a few words before his necessary departure to the train.

Bro. Roberts responded, saying that he had come some distance out of the way to look in upon this meeting. He had not been able to meet often in the Association's meetings, but he has abated no jot of heart or hope in the reform; but was more confirmed in his convictions as time passed. He mentioned a remarkable case of Masonic intimidation and, in short, kidnapping. Bro. Suggs, a colored man, was lately preaching in a camp meeting in Kansas, and testified in the name of Christ against the lodge. His words were reported and next day a number of men appeared on the ground wearing Masonic badges. The next day a body of men, pretending to be civil officers, came to the camp ground and arrested Bro. Suggs while preaching, though showing no warrant or paper of any kind. They, moreover, shackled their prisoner with handcuffs and took him away, none knew whither. It was supposed that the pretense would be that Bro. Suggs was the colored man who had lately committed murder; but that could be only a ruse. The speaker reiterated his firm conviction in the final triumph of the reform and his unaltered opposition to the lodge, which should be classed with other heathen systems. We must not tolerate the lodge any more than Mormonism or Buddhism or any other paganism. Bro. Roberts replied to a question that he was entirely willing that the N. C. A. should reprint and circulate the tract on Masonry as a false religion.

The minutes of last annual meeting were read and roll of members called, twenty-two responding. Rev. A. W. Hall of College Springs, Iowa, was chosen as a corporate member, and committees on nominations and resolutions were appointed. On the former were chosen: J. L. Barlow, E. A. Cook and M. R. Britten; on the latter: E. G. Paine, Mrs. M. A. Blanchard and L. N. Stratton.

The Corresponding Secretary and General Agent, J. P. Stoddard, read his annual report, which was adopted, and will appear in its proper place in our columns.

In the afternoon the exercises were opened by singing, the grand old singer, George W. Clark, leading. Elder J. L. Barlow led in prayer. A number of new names were added to the membership during the day. They were:

Rev. A. W. Hall, College Springs, Iowa.
Mrs. E. G. Paine, Wasioja, Minn.
Rev. A. J. Chittenden, Wheaton, Ill.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
L. G. Clark, Oberlin, O.
Rev. M. Ranseen, Chicago.
Rev. I. Bancroft, Monroe, Wis.
Rev. Wm. Blanchard, Paxton, Ill.
Rev. Wm. Moerdyk, S. Holland Ill.
J. W. Barnlund, Ravenswood, Ill.

An interesting report was read from W. B. Stoddard, State agent for New York, and the president took the opportunity of commending warmly the work of the agent by which the dormant energies of the reformers of that State were aroused again.

The Treasurer's report was read, with the certificate of the auditor, and received the favorable action of the meeting. Questions respecting the lack of any reference to the Washington property, led to the appointment of a committee to examine the reports submitted from Washington and suggest a line of action for the body. M. R. Britten, C. A. Blanchard, and E. G. Paine were the committee.

The report of the Board of Directors was read and approved so far as completed and referred back to the Secretary of the Board for completion.

The committee on nominations reported, and their report was adopted as follows:

President, F. W. Capwell.
Vice-president, W. T. Meloy.
Recording Secretary, W. I. Phillips.
Corresponding Sec'y and General Agent, J. P. Stoddard.
Treasurer, W. I. Phillips.
Auditor, S. A. Kean.
Directors: Alexander Thomson, M R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, Joseph Travis, Wm. Moerdyk, O. F. Lumry, M. Ranseen, L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read by Prof E. G. Paine. As finally adopted the report reads:

MEMORIAL.

Whereas, It has been the pleasure of Almighty God, to whose inscrutible providence and wisdom we reverently bow, to call from the high responsibilities of earth to the rewards in heaven, Gen. J. W. Phelps, of Vermont, Rev. A. M. Milligan, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. H. W. Pettengill;

Therefore, we express our deep sorrow for the great loss sustained by the demise and departure from us of these noble advocates of God's suffering cause.

Resolved, That while we would express our sorrow for the painful separations caused by the death of these loved and noble friends, that we will do all we can to encourage the despondent friends and seek to toil the harder for the success of the cause of Christian reform in which they have so faithfully labored.

Resolved, That this item of the report of the committee on resolutions be communicated by the Secretary to the friends of the deceased.

Resolved, 1. That the nature of this Association is, as its name indicates, strictly Christian; also that we recognize the Christian principle of independent thought and action under the promptings of conscience, educated and enlightened by the Word of God; and, therefore, while on political questions we sympathize with the party which represents our convictions against the lodge, as an organization we must leave our individual members free to act in accordance with their enlightened Christian consciences.

2. That we are humbly and devoutly thankful to God for every movement and organization, moral or political, that labors to maintain or insert Christian principles and features in State and National constitutions and legislatures, and in the habits and social life of the people; therefore, we commend the aims and methods of the National Reform Association and the W. C. T. U. We also see with gratitude that Christian men increasingly appreciate the demands upon them as citizens and are rousing themselves for political action. We commend the American and Prohibition parties and pray that if Christian principle will admit they be united.

3. That we deem it essential to the best advancement of our reforms that our extensive line of tracts be revised as needed to make them keep pace with the reform, and that renewed energy in the distribution of tracts, books, and papers characterize the coming year. We commend our organ, the Christian Cynosure, and all other friendly papers, to the patronage of the public.

4. That a committee of three be appointed to attend the annual meetings of the anti-secret Christian denominations and represent to them the nature and work of this Association, and secure by resolutions their endorsement to a call and the appointment of delegates pledged to attend an evangelical national meeting against the lodge system, and for the kingdom of Christ; also to secure names of prominent reform workers throughout the Union to the call, and to procure speakers and make all needful arrangements and issue the call for such a meeting.

5. That we appoint and request Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Secretary J. P. Stoddard to bear our greeting to and represent the National Christian Association in the Augustana Evangelical Lutheran Synod of North America, to meet in Rockford, Ill., from the 19th to the 29th of the present month.

Respecting the control by this Association over its agents on the Lord's day, the committee on resolutions refer to former deliverances of the Association.

E. G. PAINE,
MRS. M. A. BLANCHARD,
L. N. STRATTON,
Com.

The resolutions being separately discussed and adopted, those referring to political preference aroused most debate. It was urged by some that a renewed declaration of our principles, and of the practice of the Association would meet the objection of friends; by others, that the statement of the object of the N. C. A. as given in its constitution, "to save our republican government from corruption," would only mean that it must exert an influence in some way upon politics, and the uniform practice of the Association to adjourn its meetings when political meetings were held showed its purpose to maintain a proper distinction. The Association could not declare itself "neutral" without belieing its course for years, and scandalizing itself before honorable men. The resolutions as adopted were not finally opposed by but one or two votes. The committee called for in the fourth resolution to visit generally the general bodies of denominations in sympathy with our reform selected: J. Blanchard, J. L. Barlow and J. P. Stoddard; and this committee was empowered to substitute.

The matter of the Sabbath labors of agents being considered it was voted "that our agents be allowed to preach the Gospel on the Lord's day as they may find the door open."

The editors and publishers of the Cynosure were continued as last year.

The committee on resolutions reported the following in addition:

Resolved, That it is recommended to the opponents of secret societies in every community where "two or three" are found, to meet without regard to sect in concerts of prayer for the downfall of the works of darkness and the incoming of the kingdom of light.

Resolved, That Bands of Hope for children and youth, afford a fine field for woman's earnest work in their instruction in Christianity as opposed to the false worships of the lodge.

Resolved, That the use of the Hall of the Association be tendered to the Band of Hope connected with the Chicago Christian Association under such arrangements as may be agreeable to the officers in charge of the building.

The Board of Directors having recommended action on the roll of membership the following was adopted:

We recommend that the third by-law be so amended as to read: "Belonging to a secret society, denying Christ, or immoral conduct, shall forfeit membership in this Association, and any member of this corporation who shall fail to report at an annual meeting of this body, either in person or by letter, for the term of three years shall by such failure forfeit his membership in this corporate body.

The committee on the Washington building was heard and their report adopted:

Your committee to whom were referred the reports made by Prof. E. D. Bailey to Gen. Sec'y J. P. Stoddard respecting the rents of the Washington headquarters, hereby respectfully report:

That we are unable to understand the accounts, and cannot secure the information enabling us so to do from either the General Agent or Treasurer, and move their reference to the Board of Directors.

M. R. BRITTEN,
C. A. BLANCHARD.
E. G. PAINE.

After further discussion of this report it was voted to instruct the Board of Directors respecting the Washington building, that, after reserving the use of one room for the N. C. A. and such others as are necessary for the business of the American Publishing Co., the net income be then equally divided between the treasuries of the N. C. A. and the American Publishing Co.

The exigencies of the Southern field were reviewed, as the letters from that section have from time to time appeared in the Cynosure, and it was unanimously voted to renew and urge the instructions and recommendations of last year to the Directors in respect to the engagement of lecturers.

Rev. Joseph Travis presented the following resolution upon the late United Brethren General Conference:

Resolved, That, as the general character of the secret orders are substantially one and the same, and as the principle of organized secrecy is of itself adverse to American institutions, and to the genius of the Christian religion, also to the teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ, we contemplate with grief the action of the United Brethren church in General Conference assembled, in that it has so modified its discipline in reference to the condition of membership amongst them, as to make it easy to hold joint membership in some of the secret orders and in their body; And, farther: That the United Brethren General Conference in its recent enactment on this subject has used language calculated to discredit the testimony of such men as Elder Bernard and Rev. C. G. Finney and others who have declared the character and constitution of the secret orders.

At the request of the General Agent, Rev. Jos. Travis, chairman of the old Board, gave notice of the meeting of the new on Monday, the 22d inst., at 2 P. M. The Association then adjourned.

FARWELL HALL.

The evening meeting in Farwell Hall connected with the annual meeting was well advertised, but the audience was disappointingly small. One of the daily papers reported it as a "good audience." It surely was in quality. Mr. Capwell presided with his usual dignity, and George W. Clark enlivened the evening with song. The addresses were by Pres. C. A. Blanchard on the relation of the lodge to the saloon, and of Rev. M. A. Gault on the National Reform movement and secret orders.

L. G. Clark of Oberlin, O., the "George Harris" of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," then spoke at considerable length, giving his experiences as a bondman, and urging on with great spirit the war against the saloon.

THE AMERICAN PARTY CONFERENCE.

The conference called by the chairman of the National Committee of the American party, F. W. Capwell, met in the Carpenter Hall, N. C. A. building, Saturday, June 20, at 9:30 A. M. Mr. Capwell called to order and was made chairman; O. C. Bailey of Washington, secretary; George W. Clark, always ready with a soul stirring song, opened the meeting, and Rev. M. A. Gault, of Iowa, offered prayer. A committee of five was appointed on resolutions, who retired to prepare their report, and meantime the conference listened to remarks from J. P. Stoddard, W. W. Blanchard, and others.

The report of the committee on resolutions was then presented and adopted as follows:

"Forgetting the things that are behind and reaching forth to those which are before," we rejoice that the American party is now of one mind and one heart; and that we have unwavering confidence in the final success of free government against Freemasonry and its multitudinous brood:

Resolved, that we rejoice to have observed that our original platform, adopted eleven years ago, has not been successfully assailed or objected to, by any of the political parties or conventions of the people.

Resolved, that from the origin of this movement in 1868, now seventeen years ago, we have "opposed, withstood," and intend to "remove" the secret lodges from our land, by the help of God invoked, by the co-operation of Christian churches, and by electing men who will withdraw the secret lodge charters, forbid their oaths, and procure court injunctions against secret lodge meetings.

Resolved, that as the N. C. A. has provided a committee for a National Evangelical convention from all Christian denominations, we request our national committee to call for a great political gathering at the same place to precede or follow such evangelical national convention.

Resolved, that we, as our fathers did, rely on God for the success of our cause, and, therefore, rejoice to notice the call for monthly concerts of prayer, such as preceded the fall of slavery, to be composed of all Christian people of all denominations.

WHEREAS, the great need in this reform is a stronger anti-secret sentiment; and

WHEREAS, there is no hope of electing anti-secret candidates for office without such a sentiment; therefore,

Resolved, that our main strength be exerted in the education of public sentiment on the anti-secret issue; that at the ballot-box we make no compromise on this issue, but vote only for those who are pronounced anti-secret men; and that in every political convention we endeavor to secure a recognition of this principle essential to republican government, viz., the exclusion of secret orders.

Resolved, that a tract of not over four pages, comprising the platform of the party and a brief argument for its support, should at once be issued and furnished to all agents and friends who will distribute them, and that the American and the Cynosure be requested to publish an appeal for funds for the expense of printing them.

Resolved, that we recommend and endorse the American as the organ of the American party.

A new national committee was chosen as follows: F. W Capwell, New York; J. A. Conant, Connecticut; Peter Nicklas, Pennsylvania; H. A. Day, Michigan; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; Robert Hardie, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. A. Foldstrom, Nebraska; E. D. Bailey, Dis't Columbia; E. Tapley, Miss.; John W. Moss, West Virginia; J. F. Galloway, Florida; James Kennedy, California; Wm. H. Pruett, Oregon; J. M. Scott; Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

An executive committee of five was voted, and E. D. Bailey, F. W. Capwell, and J. A. Conant elected, with power to choose the remainder, and also to add to the national committee.

The business being completed, the conference adjourned.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

FOR THE YEAR ENDING MAY 31, 1885.

RECEIPTS.

Cash balance	$ 389 17
Subscriptions for Cynosure, etc.	4,210 60
Sale of books	821 23
" " tracts	63 64
Rental of Carpenter Building	1,309 10
Interest on loans	610 00
" " Publishing House notes	30 97
Donations	580 76
Sale of postage stamps	32 98
" " fixtures	7 15
Publishing House notes paid	215 00
Personal accounts	6,650 79
Wilbur estate	150 00
Capwell fund	1,000 00
Bicknell "	1,200 00
	$17,271 39

DISBURSEMENTS.

Cynosure	$ 7,201 42
Salaries	3,401 86
Carpenter Building	577 18
Loans	1,600 00
Books	245 75
Tracts	30 55
Postage	288 93
Convention and anniversary expense	85 00
Expense account	374 12
Personal accounts	3,323 47
Cash in treasury	143 11
	$17,271 39

ASSETS.

Real estate—Washiugton Building, $10,000, Carpenter " 20,000,	$30,000 00
Secured loans	12,100 00
Publishing House notes	5,344 73
Personal accounts (due N. C. A.)	13,511 67
Christian Cynosure (original cost)	5,859 50
Publishing material	1,105 02
Fixtures	144 91
Tracts in stock	626 06
Books " "	517 96
Cash in treasury June 1, 1885	143 11
	$69,352 96

LIABILITIES.

Net capital	$63,522 96
Sally Gilkey fund	800 00
Worcester "	166 65
Capwell "	1,000 00
Bicknell "	1,200 00
Wilbur estate	150 00
Cynosure extension fund	153 39
Cynosure subscriptions paid in advance	1,550 35
Personal accounts (owed by N. C. A.)	809 61
	$69,352 96

Respectfully submitted,

W. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer.

This may certify that I have examined the notes and other accounts and assets belonging to the National Christian Association, as per the above statement, and as appears on the books of said Association, as made and shown by the Treasurer this day.

S. A. KEAN, Auditor.

OHIO'S CALL.

Attention, all who love the light and hate darkness! An anti-secret convention will be held at Cedarville, Green Co., O, beginning Tuesday, July 7th, at 7:30 P M. The main object of the convention is to reorganize the State Association and take steps to make our opposition to the Secret Empire more effective. The importance of this meeting cannot be overestimated. Let every friend of the cause be present if possible. Rev. J. P. Stoddard and other able speakers will be present.

S. A. GEORGE, Sec'y. O. C. A.

The controversy over the Galesburg, Ill., cornerstone laying abates not the least whit as the time draws on for the ceremony. Frank Wells and E. B. Chambers have written learned and able replies to the Masonic arguments, which if they do not prevent the infamy, will at least so ventilate the lodge pretensions that the Masons will find their victory barren, and their triumphs turn to curses.

THE HOME.

EVENING SONG.

"He giveth his beloved sleep."

Be still, my soul, and rest this night
In quiet on thy Father's breast;
'Tis he can make thy burdens light;
'Tis he can still thy heart's unrest.
He knows thy every care,
He hears thy faintest prayer.
Then, when things seem to go most ill,
Just trust in him and be thou still.

How short the range of mortal eye!
The very hour that nearest lies
We may not see; yet, still on high,
Above the mists of earthly skies,
Our Father we behold,
Now reigning as of old.
The universe, above, below,
His guiding hand doth feel and know.

Then, in thy hands, Father, I'll lay
All that I am and e'er would be;
Take thou each anxious thought away
And make my spirit glad and free.
Father, I cling to thee,
Thy Son my only plea.
And when my faith grows faint and weak,
Give grace thy help and strength to seek.

O thou who thine own Son spared not,
Wilt thou not "all things" with him give?
Thou offerest e'en when unsought
Blessings anew each day we live.
On thee, then I'll rely,
And joy that thou art nigh.
And this my prayer shall ever be,
That thou wilt ne'er depart from me.

—Translated from the German of Schoner, by J. V. S., Reval.

THE PRAYER WHICH GOD IS PLEDGED TO ANSWER.

In an idle tale which amused the childhood of many of our readers, there is a worse than foolish fancy of a wishing-cup, which, when the possessor wore it, invested him with the power of obtaining instantaneously whatever he desired. Men sometimes appear to regard the promises of God to answer prayer, as serving a similar purpose. As though they meant that a man, whatever his character, had only to work himself up to a blind and presumptuous confidence, and Omnipotence stood pledged to the accomplishment of his wishes, and unless his selfish desires were gratified, he would almost be entitled to impugn the divine veracity. If this is not the spirit in which men frequently address a throne of grace, or in which they are admonished to make experiments in prayer, it is, at all events, on some such misconception that infidelity bases its objection to the Christian doctrine, and its ridicule of the Christian practice of making our requests known unto God.

Without multiplying examples, we direct attention to the fact, that all the promises of God to hear and answer prayer are addressed to believers, whose highest ambition is that their will should be in strict harmony with God's will. The promise, for example, "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," is addressed, not to men indiscriminately, but to disciples of Christ. Such promises can be urged by the people of God only when they are in their proper position of submission to the will of God. So one of them says, "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me." So the confidence expressed in a passage quoted above, is the confidence of those who can say in the context, "Now are we the sons of God;" and their confidence has this express limitation, "If we ask anything according to his will he heareth us." The promise of a loving Father to his child must not be appropriated by his enemies.

In order to a just view of these promises we must take into account the Scriptural conditions of all true prayer; for, surely, it would be most unreasonable to consider God as bound to any other condition. We are taught in Scripture that "we know not what we should pray for as we ought;" and, on this account, we are assured that "the Spirit helpeth our infirmities;" nay, that "the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us," and this is true prayer—prayer in the Spirit. This harmonizes with the view given above of the character of those to whom the promises are made.

Another Scriptural condition of true prayer is, that it be offered in the name of Christ. He is the only medium through whom prayer can be either offered or answered. "No man," he says, "cometh unto the Father but by me." He is the Advocate and High Priest who ever liveth to make intercession for us; and it is on this consideration that the promise turns, "Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name he will give it you." He is the only way whereby we have access to the Father, the only sacrifice through whose blood we have boldness to enter into the holiest, the only High Priest through whose intercessions our plea can be accepted. All this is acknowledged in all true prayer. We disclaim all pretensions to be heard on our own account, and claim to be accepted and answered only for his sake. We profess our faith in the testimony of God concerning him, that in him we have pardon, peace and eternal life. This implies our renunciation of all that opposes the will of his Father and our Father. And who that knows the meaning of all this, could for a moment think of profaning the holy name of Jesus, by using it as a plea for anything that is not in harmony with the will of the Father. When we rest our cause upon his intercession, who would presume to expect his advocacy of a right that contravenes the Divine will? Thus, whether we consider the parties to whom the promises are made, or the Scriptural conditions of true prayer, which originates in the intercession of the Spirit, is offered in the name of Jesus, and depends on his advocacy, the Scriptures are very far from teaching that the will of God can be controlled by the caprice or selfishness of his creatures.

They teach, on the contrary, that all the interests of his creatures are involved in the prevalence of of his will. The happiness and perfection of his people consist in conforming their will to his, and all true prayer may be summed up in this, "Thy will be done." No child of God can deliberately ask anything contrary to the will of God, or inconsistent with his glory. So far as true prayer is the intercession of the Spirit, it must be according to the will of God. And if, in the obscurity of this present state, a believer asks anything in the name of Jesus, regarding which the will of God is not known, the very fact of asking in that name implies that it is asked in submission to the will of the Father. The end in view is still that God's will may be done, however we may be mistaken regarding the time, means, or manner of its accomplishment; and thus, "If we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petition that we desired of him." When Paul was subjected to bodily affliction which, in his own view, disqualified him for the service to which he was called, he besought the Lord thrice that it might be removed, and received the assurance, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is perfected in weakness." His prayer was answered, though in a way very different from what he expected. He had the petition which he desired of him, not in the removal of affliction, but in the assurance that the affliction would be made subservient to the end which Paul feared it would hinder; and fully satisfied with the answer, he said, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmity, that the power of Christ may rest in me."

The child of God can never cease ardently to desire whatever he knows to be according to the will of God, and subservient to his glory. If his power were equal to his desire the object of it would be at once accomplished. But, while he is conscious that he is utterly destitute of such power, all that remains is that his inefficient will should go out and identify itself with the will of him who speaks and it is done; and, since he has a divine warrant for it, his ardent desire assumes the form and finds the utterance of confident supplication in a name that always prevails.

Here it may be demanded: "If, then, it is the will of God that is done, what does prayer avail, or how does it affect the issue?" If it availed nothing, the child of God could not do less than utter his ardent desire, "Thy will be done." But we are told that "the effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Nor will the infidel be warranted in disputing the truth of this, because a poor, short-sighted mortal, like himself, cannot explain how it avails, or why the Spirit of God should make the prayer of a believer the vehicle of his intercession. The will of God must be accomplished in all things; all creatures combined could not thwart it. Yet God has been pleased to assign an important place to the agency of his servants in carrying out his purposes. They are "laborers together with him" in carrying out his designs, though he no more needs their co-operation than he who fed thousands with five small loaves, needs the co-operation of the husbandman or the influence of sunshine and showers in giving bread to all that live. But if God has left room for the agency of our labors in the accomplishment of his designs, why not also for the agency of our prayers? If, for example, he employs Paul's preaching to the Gentiles as a means of their salvation, why not also employ Paul's prayers for them? If an objector demands, "Would they not have been saved if Paul had not prayed?" it is a sufficient reply to ask, "Would they not have been saved if Paul had not preached?" All difficulties that can be suggested lie no more against prayer than they do against any other form of creature agency. There is only this distinction, that a sanctified spirit, going out in unison with the divine will, and in loving dependence, laying hold on the outstretched arm of Omnipotence, is the most sublime act of creature agency, and one to which it becomes God to give the first place among all the secondary causes which he is pleased to employ. And it surely does not diminish our sense of his wisdom, while it sheds new glory on his condescending love, that in his providential arrangements for the execution of his sovereign will, he should have made provision for fulfilling the promise of his Son, "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name he will give it you." That he has made such provision, we have the amplest proof. Neither in the inspired nor in the uninspired records of the people's experience, their written nor their unwritten testimony, can an instance be found in which their confidence has been disappointed.

Much, it is true, that has the sound of prayer in human ears, falls dead and ineffectual; for God is not deceived by words upon the lips when there is not behind them a soul intent on the accomplishment of his will and the manifestation of his glory. To many professed suppliants it may be said, "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." Their prayers, if not an empty sound, are the breathings of selfishness; or, when not the utterance of selfishness, the doubt in their heart belies the supplication of their lips. There is a plain direction regarding prayer which is often misunderstood or misapplied. The direction is, "Let him ask in faith, nothing wavering;" and the misapprehension is, that a man whose habitual state is one of distrust or unbelief, has only to "work himself up" to a firm belief on any given occasion in order to claim the promise which belongs to the prayer of faith. But the word "wavering" in that direction relates not to a man's state of mind with reference to a particular object, but to his character or habitual state of mind; for it is added, "He that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven of the wind and tossed." Not more positive is God's promise to hear the prayer of the believer than is his assurance of the vanity of the prayer of the waverer. "Let not that man think he shall receive anything of the Lord." Men cannot come and insult God by making experiments in prayer, pretending to plead with him in order that they may see what the result will be. The prayer of faith can be offered only by a believer; the Spirit makes intercession only in the heart where he dwells; and prayer, in accordance with the will of God, can only come from a soul whose ruling desire and aim is that the will of God may be done. As Leighton has it, "He that hath nothing of the Spirit of God cannot pray at all; he may howl as a beast in his necessity or distress, or may speak words of prayer, as some birds learn the language of men, but pray he cannot."—James Inglis, in the Truth.

DON'T JEST WITH THE BIBLE.

A gentleman of keen wit used often to point his remarks with some apt quotation from the Bible. A friend who greatly admired him was present in his last hours, and asked with deep sympathy what was the future outlook.

"Very gloomy, indeed," was his response.

Surprised and deeply pained he hastened to quote some precious promises suited to the solemn hour.

"I have spoiled them all for myself," was his answer. "There is not one but is associated with some jest."

His light went out in darkness, though his name was on the church roll. What a lesson is here for all who are willing to be taught by it! Lay it to heart.—The Life Boat.

The "world" never harms a Christian so long as he keeps it out of his heart. Temptation is never dangerous until it has an inside accomplice. Sin within betrays the heart to the outside assailant.

At the last, when we die, we have the good angels for our escort on the way. They who can grasp the whole of us in their hand, can surely guard our souls that they may make the journey safely.

He that hath promised pardon on our repentance, hath not promised life till we repent.

It is very easy to say: Take things as they come; but suppose they don't come?

PICTURES OF MEMORY.

Among the beautiful pictures
That hang on Memory's wall
Is one of a dim old forest,
That seemeth best of all;
Not for its gnarled oaks olden,
Dark with the mistletoe;
Not for the violets golden
That sprinkle the vale below;
Not for the milk-white lilies
That lean from the fragrant ledge,
Coquetting all day with the sunbeams,
And stealing their golden edge;
Not for the vines on the upland,
Where the bright red berries rest,
Nor the pinks, nor the pale sweet cowslip,
It seemeth to me the best.

I once had a little brother,
With eyes that were dark and deep;
In the lap of that dim old forest
He lieth in peace asleep:
Light as the down of the thistle,
Free as the winds that blow,
We roved there the beautiful summers,
The summers of long ago;
But his feet on the hills grew weary,
And, one of the autumn eves,
I made for my little brother
A bed of the yellow leaves.
Sweetly his pale arms folded
My neck in a meek embrace,
As the light of immortal beauty
Silently covered his face;
And when the arrows of sunset
Lodged in the tree-tops bright
He fell, in his saint-like beauty,
Asleep by the gates of light.
Therefore, of all the pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,
The one of the dim old forest
Seemeth the best of all.

—Alice Carey.

WHO WAS THE COWARD?

"Well, boys, how do you like it?" asked Tom.

Tom and Oscar Blake, Will Turner and Ed Clark were camping out for a week. This was the first day, and they had worked hard to get settled by night. And now, when supper was over, they were gathered around the door of the tent, very tired, talking.

"I never liked anything better," Will said.

"I never liked anything half so well," cried Oscar.

Ed was looking into the deep shadows of the wood near by.

"Boys," he almost whispered, "we're miles from a house."

"Of course we are," replied Tom.

"That's the fun," rejoined Oscar.

"Not afraid, are you?" asked Will, contemptuously.

"No," he answered, hesitatingly, "but I'm glad I haven't to go into the woods."

"I wouldn't be afraid to go there alone at midnight," cried Tom.

"Nor I," chimed in Oscar.

"Nor I," boasted Will.

"We wouldn't have had you with us if we'd known you are a coward," was Tom's rude remark.

Ed said nothing, but looked still into the woods, as if he were fascinated by them.

"I'm tired, boys," announced Will; "it's dark; let's go to bed."

"All right," they agreed, and were soon inside, fastening the curtains of the tent. The candle was lighted, and cots made up. Then the boys unpacked their valises which held their clothes. The first thing which fell from Will's was his Bible. He thrust it back quickly, fearing the Blakes would see it. He knew they would laugh at the idea of reading it. He wished his mother had not put it in; it was very well to read it alone in his room, but it was impossible to do so before these scoffing boys. There was no one but his conscience to tell him he was a coward; for the conflict was secret. He determined to say his prayers, for he could do that in bed, where the Blakes would not know it.

"Hello, parson," he heard Tom saying. "Give us a sermon, will you? on cowardice, for instance."

He turned quickly, afraid Tom had noticed his Bible, and saw Eddie sitting by the candle reading from the sacred Book.

"I am not courageous," Eddie returned. "I know it is wrong, and I am trying to overcome it, which I can never do without the Lord's help."

"I told you," jeered Tom. "Secondly now."

"For shame," interposed Oscar. "If I believe in reading the Bible I'd do it if a thousand stood around, and call myself a coward if I were afraid of a laugh."

Even Tom said nothing when Ed knelt down to pray.

Will was glad when the light was out and all were in bed." He would pray; and to-morrow read the Bible, when no one saw him.

He had been ashamed of his own Saviour before a few boys, and it almost seemed as though He refused to own him, for he could not pray. He tried to ask forgiveness, but he knew, though he was sorry for his sin, he was still afraid to own Him.

A wild cry came from the woods at that moment.

"What's that?" exclaimed Oscar, sleepily.

"Are our curtains well fastened?" demanded Tom.

"It sounded like some one in distress," said Ed.

"Help," came distinctly.

"We didn't come here to help people in distress," yawned Tom.

"Come, boys," called Ed, jumping up.

"Not I," returned Tom. "You don't know what trouble you'll get into."

Ed had lighted the candle and was dressing. Oscar was up too. Will sat on the edge of his cot.

"They may be murderers," muttered Tom.

No one reminded him that he had said he was not afraid to go into the woods at midnight.

Oscar and Ed ran out as the cries continued.

"Let's go back to-morrow," Tom said to Will.

Will did not reply. As he sat still on his cot he despised himself; he was a coward in every way. Suddenly he knelt.

Tom sat up in bed and looked at him.

"What is it?" he asked, when Will arose.

"I am going with them. I began to-night by being afraid of your laugh, and was ending by fear of the dark. My cowardice days are over."

"No cowardice about it; it's dangerous."

"Then I go as Ed does, with the Lord to take care of me," and he ran out.

He met Oscar and Ed returning with an old woman and little girl who had lost their way.

"I say, Will," Oscar said to him the next day, when they were alone, "I would never have dared to go last night, but I was ashamed before Ed to refuse. I had bragged that I had no fear, and he said he was afraid. Wasn't he brave? I had an idea that it was the Bible reading and praying that helped him. I believe there is something in it if it will help a boy that way. Let's try."

"It was true Christian courage," returned Will, "and without it I know, as I never did before, that no boy can be brave. I have a Bible in my valise, Oscar, and I was afraid if I read it before you boys you would laugh."

"Oscar, come here," called Tom from a distance.

Will sat alone, thinking of how Ed had glorified his Saviour, instead of being ashamed of him, and of how he himself did not have the courage to confess Him; how Ed's courage had turned a careless comrade to repentance, and his own cowardice would have kept the same comrade, if it had been known, from the Lord. Will wept; but they were brave tears of real repentance. From that day to this, and he is a man now, he has never been afraid to own his Saviour before men; and that bravery, as did Ed's, has brought many sinners to Christ, and helped the weak.

Boys, are you cowards, and are you afraid of a laugh?—Standard Bearer.

TEMPERANCE.

BREEDING PLACES FOR CRIME.

THE SALOON THE GREAT HOT-BED.

The following testimonies are from a large number of letters written to the Voice by prison officials:

Rev. Jno. M. Rogers, Chaplain of the New Jersey Penitentiary says: "From the observation and experience of some years in this place, I should say that fully one-third come here as the immediate results of intoxication or excessive drinking; that fully one-third more come here as the indirect result of alcoholic drinks; and that of the remaining one-third not more than one-half have been wholly exempt from its temptations."

Chas. N. Allen, Librarian of the Ohio Penitentiary, writes to the Voice: "I should judge that destitution has caused about as much crime as intemperance." But what is the prime cause of the destitution?

Frank Bed, Warden of the Nevada Penitentiary, says that of the 202 prisoners received in that institution during the past four years 178 are drinking men; 167 claimed to have been drunk when the crime was committed.

According to the testimony of Rev. W. H. Hill, Chaplain of the California Penitentiary, at least 80 per cent of the prisoners in that institution owe their incarceration directly or indirectly to intoxicating drinks.

Every prisoner in the Arizona Territory prison used alcoholic drinks to a greater or less extent before entering that institution, and most of them attribute their troubles to this habit.

Rev. W. Searls, Chaplain of the Auburn, (N. Y.) State prison, says: "Seventy-five per cent or more of crime is directly or indirectly due to the use of alcoholic drinks. In general, my opinion is that prohibition would nearly empty our prisons."

Rev. P. Howe, Chaplain of Nebraska State Penitentiary, testifies: "Three-fourths of all the crimes committed in our State are traceable to alcoholic drinks."

Geo. W. Carter, Warden of the Wisconsin State prison, says: "Seventy-five per cent of all crimes against persons are due to intoxicating drinks."

N. C. Justice, Clerk of Erie Co., (N. Y.) Penitentiary, says: "Seventy-five per cent of the prisoners confined here are so confined because of their excessive use of alcoholic drinks."

J. S. Pomeroy, of the West Virginia Penitentiary, says: "Between eighty and ninety per cent of the crimes committed in the State can be traced, either directly or indirectly, to the use of intoxicating liquors."

E. L. Johnson, Superintendent of the Indiana Reformitory for Women and Girls, says: "Fully two-thirds of all crime is attributed to alcohol."

Rev. Chas. Reynolds, Chaplain of Albany (N. Y.) Penitentiary, says: "Eighty per cent of the crime that has come under my observation has been due to drink."

Rev. A. Howard, Chaplain of the Connecticut State prison, says: "I have kept an accurate account of the causes which led to the committal of crime by the convicts of the Connecticut State prison for the past five years, and find that eight out of every ten can be traced to rum."

Nearly every writer also testified that in localities where prohibition or no license prevailed, commitments for crimes were noticeably less than where license or free whisky prevailed.

LIQUOR AND LYING.

Dr. Norman Kerr, one of the most distinguished physiologists of the present century, in an article upon the perversion of intellect resulting from the excessive use of alcohol, says: "If there is one feature which more than another is characteristic of the dipsomaniac, it is that of untruthfulness. Habitual excessive indulgence in strong drink would turn the most truthful person in this country into an unblushing liar. Nor is this all. If he were to forswear his cups and become a consistent abstainer, it would be long ere he recovered, if he ever did completely recover, his former power to speak the truth, and to discriminate between the false and the true." He adds: "This utter overthrow of the truthful sense is especially marked in women."

Mr. Robert Graham, General Secretary of the Church of England Temperance Society, delivered an address the other day in Brooklyn in which he spoke of the duty of Christians with reference to the evil of drunkenness. He said he "would lay down as the first principle to be acted upon, a union on perfectly equal terms between those who are not yet prepared to become total abstainers and those who do abstain entirely from the use of intoxicating beverages." Having laid this down as a base, he would act on two lines—rescue and prevention. "Any man who thinks the liquor traffic can be wiped out easily," said Mr. Graham, "is a dreamer. One way to a better state of things would be to raise license fees which are now $75 or $150 to $500 and $1,000." Has Mr. Graham observed the practical working of the high government tax on whisky a few years ago? The higher the tax the less revenue was collected; but nobody doubted that just as much liquor was drunk as ever. The high tax proves but a premium on crooked whisky.

Once upon a time a hog drank from a trough into which a barrel of beer had been emptied. He became very much intoxicated. When he came to himself he was very much ashamed of his conduct. He was truly pentinent and said to his friends: "I have always been a beast until this unlucky slip, and I promise you I'll never make a man of myself again."—Boston Transcript.

The habit of intemperance by men in office has occasioned more injury to the public and more trouble to me than all other causes; and were I to commence my administration again, the first question I would ask respecting a candidate for office would be: "Does he use ardent spirits?"—Thomas Jefferson.

(Continued from 5th page.)

sylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, California, Nebraska, Minnesota, Virginia, New York, Tennessee, Wisconsin, Washington Territory, and Ireland. The commeneement festivities began Thursday evening of last week with the reception given to the senior elass by President and Mrs. McMichael. Sabbath afternoon the baccalaureate sermon was pronounced by President J. B. McMichael, D. D., LL. D. In the evening the annual sermon before the Students' Christian union was delivered by Rev. W. J. Robinson, D. D., of Allegheny, Pa. Monday evening the annual-prayer meeting was held, and largely attended. Tuesday was field day, and was devoted to athletic sports.

At the meeting of the college senate the resignation of Dr. MaeDill as professor of philosophy was accepted. The doctor resigned to accept a ehair in the United Presbyterian Theological seminary, at Xenia, O.

Tuesday night the class-day exercises occurred, including an address by Miss Emma Wilson; class history by Adam Oliver, of Kewanee; oration by Miss Emma Boyd; ode to the elass memorial by Miss Franc Pierce, and the prophecy, by C. C. Potter, of Wapello, Iowa. Wednesday morning the alumni association held its annual meeting. It was decided not to endow an alumni professorship until at least $20,000 has been subscribed. Fourteen thousand dollars has been already collected. A finance committee, consisting of Rev. George Hamilton, Hon. J. R. Hanna, R. A. Wilson, and Capt. W. B. Young, was appointed to have charge of the alumni professorship fund. The literary exercises were: Essay, Mrs. D. M. Hamnack, of Burlington, Iowa; oration, Rev. G. W. Hamilton, Little York, Ill.; poem, Miss Kittie Hutchinson.

Wednesday afternoon the anniversary address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Herrick Johnson, of Chicago. Thursday the commencement exercises were held in the opera-house before a vast audienee. The graduates were: Miss Addie Wallace, Monmouth, Ill.; Wils. T. Graham, Morning Sun, Iowa; Miss Louie M. Campbell, Monmouth; J. H. Hanley, Monmouth; Miss Lizzie Cunningham, Morning Sun, Iowa; J. B. Jamieson, West Middleton, Pa.; Miss Ida F. Lafferty, Monmouth; D. H. Logan, Tallyrand, Iowa; Miss Mary H. McCulloueh, Monmouth; W. M. Matthews, Ainsworth, Iowa; Miss Ida L. McKnight, Monmouth; F. Mekemson, Biggsville; S. D. Montgomery, Morning Sun, Iowa; Miss Maggie Oliver, Toulon; D. A. Murray, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Miss Franc Pierce, Monmouth; J. Potter, Holt, Pa.; H. H. Robinson, Wyanet; Miss Elma A. Wilson, Monmouth; J. Given Thompson, Dickson, Tenn.; Miss Mabel Pepper, Alcdo. The degree of B. S. was conferred on seven, and that of A. B. on seventeen of the graduating class; A. M. on seventeen of the class of 1882, and the degree of D. D. upon Rev. J. W. Witherspoon, of Allegheny, Pa.

LITERATURE.

Few things are more fascinating in their way than a study of the subterranean history of man, whether in caves or in mounds, whether it be to eorroborate written history, or to take testimony that antedates all writing. President Bartlett, of Dartmouth, contributes an interesting article on this topic to the July number of the North American Review. In the same number appears a conversation between David Dudley Field and Henry George, on land and taxation. Another urgent question, which may soon make a very serious issue, the extradition of dynamite criminals, is debated by President Angell, of Michigan University, George Ticknor Curtis, and Justice T. M. Cooley. Dorman B. Eaton, chief of the Civil Service Commission, gives his views of the results of that reform. William Clarke shows the futile character of any scheme for British imperial federation, and Thomas W. Knox gives a brief but interesting sketch of the progress of European influence in Asia. The other articles are one by Gail Hamilton on Prohibition in practice, and one by Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst on the decline of Christianity. These, with the batch of free-hand Comments, make up a number of unusal interest.

Professor Whitney, of Yale College, is referred to by the Athenæum, in a recent review of his article on "Philology," in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," as "certainly the highest living authority on the science of language in general." Professor Whitney has been engaged for several years in editing the great English dictionary which The Century Co. are to publish on its completion—probably within three years.

New Mexico spent $45,000 for churches and $6,485,000 for liquor last year.

THE CHURCHES.

—The Chicago Avenue Church, to which Rev. Charles F. Goss ministers, holds communion services on the first Sabbath of every month. It is very seldom that on these occasions new members are not received.

—Dr. William M. Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle, says the verification of every Messianic reference of the King James Version is of itself worth vastly more than the $100,000 which the Bible revision cost the University Press of Oxford and Cambridge.

—Three new Quaker missionaries are reported to have arrived safely at the capital of Madagascar, and a second doctor has been appointed to assist Dr. Fox in the Medical Mission there.

—On a recent Sunday, Pastor Berthe, of Brest, France, received thirty converted Roman Catholics at the Lord's Supper. The Presbyterian church at Valparaiso also added to its number 150 Roman Catholic converts.

—Rev. W. P. McNary, editor of the Midland, St. Louis, has taken a pastoral charge in Illinois, in the vicinity of St. Louis, and Rev. J. W. McNary, his brother, of the U. P. church, Sparta, Ill., is appointed stated supply at Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

—Mr. Spurgeon's colporteurs, at their recent annual meeting, reported sales amounting to £9,000. Seventy-eight men are employed, who regularly visit over 1,500 towns and villages.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly recommended the churches to take special collections to pay the debts of the Foreign and Domestic Missionary Boards amounting to about $160,000. Dr. John Hall's church has responded promptly with a collection of $10,000.

—Since Mr. Moody's visit to Richmond, Va., Rev. Dr. Hoge has maintained on Sabbath evenings a service in the Old Market Hall for the masses, who are reluctant to attend the churches. The attendance has been very large. For a few weeks the services are to be suspended that some necessary repairs may be made.

—A remarkable interest in the study of the Westminster Shorter Catechism has been manifested at Minneapolis. In five of the Presbyterian churches 150 young people have recently committed to memory the entire catechism. Rev. R. J. Creswell reports that ninety persons have learned the catechism recently on four fields under his charge, near Duluth, Minn.

—The seventy-ninth session of the General Synod of the Reformed church of America, met this year in Syracuse, N. Y. The statistics of the denomination, as far as furnished, give the following aggregate result: Classes 34, churches 525, a gain of 5; ministers 561, a gain of 15; candidates 16; families 45,654, a gain of 256; received on confession 4,309, 79 less than last year; received on certificate 2,114, 301 less than last year; dismissed 2,019; suspended 78; died 1,361—the losses in all amounting to 3,458, leaving to the denomination a net gain to its total membership of 2,965. Total now in communion 82,089; catechumens 30,236; Sabbath-schools 732; total of scholars 95,931. Religious and benevolent contributions $230,315.10; contributed for church purposes $871,387.26; total $1,101,702.36.

—The Pennsylvania Bible Society, which celebrated, a few days since, its seventy-seventh anniversary at Philadelphia, takes pride in the fact that it is eight years older than the American Bible Society, with which it most efficiently co-operates. During the past year it has put in circulation 136,047 copies in whole or part, of the Scriptures. It is a surprising fact that in a single year, and in a single State, the Scriptures were called for in twenty different languages.

—Statistics of Christian work in Japan during the year 1884, which are approximately correct, have appeared in the Christian newspaper published by Mr. Kosaki, of Tokio. The total number of Protestant churches is put down as 129; church members aggregate 7,791, a gain of 2,200 during the year. The largest church in the Empire is that at Imabari, of which Mr. Ise is pastor, having 410 members. This church also reports the greatest gain in membership within the year, having received 195 new members. The church at Annaka has received during the year 113 members. The city of Tokio is reported as having twenty-nine churches, with 2,279 members. The money contributions of the native Christians for the year are reported as 18,220 yen, which is a gain over the preceding year of 2,382 yen.

—The Madagascar mission has cost the London society $1,200,000 since work was begun there in 1862. An iron-clad frigate costs $2,000,000, and goes forth to destroy lives and property—the missionary to save.

—Missionary work among the Moslems of Egypt has been of an encouraging character for a year past. Many Egyptians listen to the Scriptures and send their children to schools where the Bible is read to them.

—The United Presbyterian church of Scotland has offered $12,000 for the establishment of a mission in the Holy Land, and the management of the same has been undertaken by the English Presbyterian church. The site for the headquarters of the mission has not yet been agreed upon.

REJECTING A KINGDOM FOR CHRIST.—This noble act has been left for a converted heathen in India to do for Christ. The story has lately been sent to this country by Mr. C. A. Elliott, C. B., the Commissioner of Assam, who says he supposes U. Bor. Sing, of Khasia, India, is the one man now alive who has rejected a kingdom for Christ. He was the heir of the Rajah of Cherra, and had been converted by the Welsh missionaries. U. Bor. Sing was warned that in joining the Christians he would probably forfeit his right to be King of Cherra after the death of Ram Sing, who then ruled. Eighteen months afterward Ram Sing died; the chiefs of the tribes met together, and unanimously decided that Bor. Sing was to succeed him as Siim (king), but that his Christian profession stood in the way. Messenger after messenger was sent to U. Bor. Sing urging him to go to the missionaries to recant. He was invited to the native council, and there asked to put aside his religious profession, and that then they would all acknowledge him as their king. His answer was: "Put aside my Christian profession! I can put aside my head-dress or my cloak, but as for the covenant I have made with my God, I cannot for any consideration put that aside." Another was therefore appointed king in his stead. Since then he has been impoverished by litigation about landed property till he is now in danger of arrest and imprisonment. Mr. Elliot has appealed to Christians in this country on his behalf.—N. Y. Witness.

THE CHICAGO BIBLE INSTITUTE.

A month of special Bible study, under the auspiees of the Bible Work of Chicago, has just closed. Evangelists, missionaries, Bible readers, colporteurs and other Christian workers met for the exposition of Scripture and the systematic study of doctrine and of church history, under the excellent leadership of Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D. D., of Xenia, Ohio. Four mornings and four evenings of each week were devoted to the regular sessions. Most earnest attention was paid by the class, and their eager reception of the truth showed how deeply they felt the need of such an institute, and how much they appreciated its privileges. The enrolled members of the class attended regularly throughout, and the number of those who could attend for a few days only steadily increased. The average attendance was 119; the highest on any one evening, 176. It is hoped that a similar Bible Institute will be held in the fall or early winter. B.

OBITUARY.

Monday morning at half past five o'clock our ranks were once more broken by the death angel. This time the call came to EDDIE GEHRING, a lad of fifteen years. Eddie entered the family about one year ago, and was one of the printers. During the latter part of the winter, feeling unable to go forward with his studies, he left us to spend a time at his father's (Rev. J. D. Gehring) in Parkville. For thirteen long weeks he was confined to his bed, and rose from it only when the joyful summons came that allowed him to go where pain is ended; that summons which called him to the Master he loved so well.

The funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church Tuesday. From there the body was taken to Walnut Grove cemetery, surrounded by his fellows from the printing office, and followed by a procession of one hundred and seventy-nine footmen, mostly students.

God has taken this choice flower from His earthly garden to the heavenly for which he has been preparing him. He has passed from us but the perfume of his life will long linger and be fragrant in the memory of his associates. True, faithful and guileless, his life is truly worthy of imitation. As we assembled around his coffin, we were reminded by President McAfee that while we there worshiped and offered prayers to our God above, his voice was blending with those of the heavenly host who sing more advanced strains around the throne. The pastor's message of comfort was taken from the words of our Saviour to the sorrower of old, "Thy brother shall rise again."—Park College Record, May 16, 1885.

MR. THOMAS DUKE died at his residence near Washington, Iowa, January 9th, 1885; aged 86 years, 11 months and 4 days. He was born in Washington county, Pa. His mother died when he was but seven years old, and his father's means being limited, he was obliged to depend upon his own resources, but by diligence and strict application he was enabled to obtain a good education; was a student at New Athens College, Belmont county, Ohio, and was employed in teaching for several years after. The circumstances connected with his becoming a Christian are worthy of note.

At an early age he, by some means, obtained the confession of faith and the testimony of the Associate church, read them, was deeply impressed, and on hearing of a congregation at Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, fifteen miles away, he began attending church, walking that distance, and not being acquainted with the minister, Rev. John Walker, or one of the congregation. In October, the same year, he joined the church. He was married to Miss Agnes Garrett, Jan. 1st, 1824. They lived in Unity Congregation, Belmont county, Ohio, until the spring of of 1836. Thence they moved to Marion county, O., Washington congregation, under the pastoral care of Rev. Samuel Hindman, and in 1852 moved to Washington county, Iowa, where they resided until their death. Mrs. Duke died five years ago at the age of 83 years, 3 months and 28 days. Regarding politics, Mr. Duke, being a man of rare intelligence and sound judgment, was always one of the few whose vote was cast for principle and not party; was a strong supporter of the anti-secret cause and fully intended voting for St. John last fall, but delicate health and inclement weather prevented. When the anti-slavery question came up, he and his oldest son, J. A. Duke, who died in rebel prison, Macon, Ga., Oct. 6, 1862, were among the first to work in its defence, being connected with the underground railroad, and having a depot at his house. He and J. A. voted for J. G. Birney when he ran as Presidential candidate. Thus, through life, it was his purpose to do all in his power to support the principles of Christianity, morality and virtue. He worshiped with his family one evening, and the next morning calmly and peacefully passed away as the setting sun on a bright summer day. He leaves two daughters, one son and numerous relatives and friends to mourn their loss. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

A FRIEND.

[American please copy.]

Died, at Newark, Ill., June 11, 1885, MRS. HARRIET H. BINGHAM, wife of Samuel Bingham, after a painful illness of only a few days, aged 66 years. She had been a member of the Baptist church more than fifty years; was born in Tioga county, New York, and came to Newark in 1854, consequently may be regarded as one of the old settlers. She and her husband have for many years been actively opposed to secret societies and have often suffered persecution in consequence.

The accompanying poem was composed and read at the funeral by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Green. J. S. BIBBINS.

A sister now has fallen:
"Suddenly, yet without fear.
The sad sweet story telling
Of death, but glory near."

A mother now has fallen.
Who knows a mother's care
But those who bear like burdens?
'Tis mother everywhere.

Yes, grandmother has fallen.
Though spared to us so long,
The dear one has departed
To join the ransomed throng.

A companion has fallen.
The union was most sweet;
Each bore the other's burdens
As they trod earth's thorny street.

A Christian now has fallen.
Yes, fallen in the strife.
She may have faltered often
While battling on through life.

But now the strife is over,
The victory is won.
She's gone to meet her Saviour
And wear the golden crown.

A friend indeed has fallen—
Though poor in earthly store;
She now has reached the mansion,
To go out never more!

Sleep now, dear friend; for you
Life's trials all are o'er.
Sleep on in peace, for 'tis true
You have just gone before.

Sleep on, dear sister; though we
Are mourning neath the rod,
Thou hast crossed the narrow sea
That separates us from God.

Sleep on, my mother—yes, sleep;
I'll not disturb thy rest;
Though for sorrow I must weep,
Thou art forever blest.

Sleep on, my wife, my love,
For me life's lost its charms.
But soon I'll meet you above,
And clasp you in my arms.

A little while of waiting,
A little more of pain,
A little time of striving,
And we shall meet again.

Blessed Jesus, hear us pray.
Ease our sorrow, every one,
Grant us grace that we may say,
Let thine own will be done.

Strike softly your harp of solemn sound,
Muffle the strings lest you wake her from sleep;
Her who by earth's fetters no longer bound,
Lies down to take rest—rest that is sweet.

Go to thy grave at eve, from labor cease.
Rest on thy sheaves; thy harvest work is done.
Come from the din of battle, and in peace,
Soldier, go home; with thee the fight is won.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.
Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.
In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire,"	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
35	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	3
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	3

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable enterprises. Shrewd business men will not fail to see the great advantage the paper will be to them in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per inch.

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	10	per cent
" " "	50	15	" "
" " "	100	20	" "
" " "	250	25	" "
" " "	500	30	" "
" " "	1000	35	" "
" " "	1500	40	" "
" " "	2500	50	" "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:
Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"
and a new Portrait of
GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, post-free, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.
SING THEM!
HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.
Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen $4.00.
All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry, Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.
Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.
Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.
This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

FARM AND GARDEN.

TOP-DRESSING POTATOES.

The Ohio agricultural experiment station made some interesting and instructive experiments with different fertilizers as top dressings upon potatoes. Plots were accurately measured, and so far as possible each fertilizer was applied so that its effect or non-effect could be readily determined. Some of the materials tried seemed to subserve no good purpose, but were positive injury. Those tried were wood ashes, coal ashes, lime gypsum, salt, hen manure, and a mixture of ashes and plaster, and one of ashes and lime. They were applied May 20, when the potatoes were about two inches above the ground. It was a rough test, tried upon a crop that was planted without special reference to experimental work, the main object in view being to learn something of the deficiencies and needs of this part of our ground.

The application was rigorous, and the following indications are among the clearest and most obvious:

1. Good hard-wood ashes is one of the best fertilizers that can be applied to the potato. It gave an increase over the natural yield of the land such as to make their use at the rate of 75 bushels per acre, at 25 cents per bushel, profitable.

2. A mixture of ashes and plaster, ten parts by weight of the former to one of the latter, gave about the same results, while plaster alone had no good effect.

3. No advantage whatever was derived from the use of lime, which seems to indicate that there is already a sufficiency of that in our soil.

4. Salt must be used with caution; anything over five bushels per acre did more harm than good; up to this amount its use will generally be attended with profit.

5. Coal ashes had a marked beneficial effect. Spread thickly between the rows and thoroughly incorporated with the soil their mechanical effect was greater than the chemical effect of any of the other fertilizers used.

6. Hen manure, made fine and scattered freely, close to the rows, gave excellent results also. It appeared to be of about the same value of wood ashes.

The following result is given: Early Ohio, wood ashes, 170 bushels per acre; using hen manure, 181 bushels. Snow Flake, using wood ashes, 242 bushels; using hen manure, 235 bushels.

The object of these brief notes is to induce careful observation and incite experiment. These fertilizers can by easily and cheaply obtained. That they can be generally used with profit, I believe. Every farmer should give them a fair, careful trial, and await the result. If they seem to do no good, do not at once condemn, but vary the time and method of application and try again. If good results do not then follow, it may be reasonably concluded that for your soil and climate they are not the fertilizers needed. Whatever the results of individual experiments may be, it will still be true that in many localities, wood-ashes, lime, gypsum, and salt (some one or more of these) are among the best and cheapest fertilizers known.—Am. Farmer.

It is a great mistake to think that the secret of good farming is only to raise what will give immediate profitable returns, without taking into consideration the way the land is left, says the Rural Home. Some farmers say that owing to the price of labor, they can buy corn cheaper than they can raise it. But by raising it a large quantity of fodder is obtained, enabling the farmer to feed more cattle, to make more manure and the next year to raise more corn.

Dr. Hunt remarks that farmers are not as healthy as they ought to be. Rheumatism is common among them on account of exposure. Indigestion is also common, and is produced by a sameness of diet—an overplus of one kind of food. They are also beset with malarial diseases on account of lack of drainage about their homes. The women suffer more than the men from this cause and from decaying matter about the house and yard. Keep the cellar dry and clean.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

A Valuable Remedy for Gravel.

Dr. T. H. NEWLAND, Jr., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used it in diseases of the urinary organs, such as gravel, and particularly spermatorrhœa, with very good results, and think it a very valuable remedy in those diseases."

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lesson.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common version of the lesson text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronunciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter, ... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl... 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 311 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.
Furnished in any quantities at

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engaged upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation.—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrnd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 210,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00.

W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART." AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.
For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.
Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.
In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."
The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

IN BRIEF

There has seldom been a more striking instance of the law's technicality than in the dismissal of the libel suit of C. P. Miller against the New York Tribune, on the ground that no proof that the Tribune was published in New York had been furnished.

Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, says that if every inhabitant of the Congo basin should have one Sunday dress every year, more than 300,000,000 yards of cotton cloth or calico would be required.

During the last nine years France has spent nearly forty-five millions of dollars in increasing and reorganizing her university institutions.

Mrs. R. B. Hayes has bought and fitted up a house in Savannah, Ga., where colored girls can be thoroughly trained in skilled house-keeping.

The number of American women exceeds the entire foreign population (male and female) in this country as three to one. Then let the American mother have the right of ballot as her palladium of defense for herself and home against the incoming flood of whiskey-drinking customers and customs of the old world.

In proportion to her population, Iowa contains more people that can read and write than any other State in the Union. It fools no land away worth mentioning on barren mountain ranges, big swamps, sandy deserts or rocky wastes. Being a prohibition State, free from debt, possessed of a fine climate and fruitful soil it is destined to be the garden State west of the Mississippi.

A book-agent went into a barber's shop and asked the proprietor if he could sell him an encyclopedia. "What is it like?" asked the barber. "It is a book that contains exhaustive information on every subject in the world." "No," said the barber, with an injured air, "I don't need it."—N. Y. Times.

This ancient but still perfect specimen of a "bull" has recently been led out:—"As I was goin' over the bridge," said a native of Erin, "I met Pat Hewins. 'Hewins,' says I, 'how are you?' 'Pretty well, thank you, Donnelly,' says he. 'Donnelly!' says I, 'that's not my name.' 'Faith, then, no more is mine Hewins.' So with that we looked at aich other again, an' sure enough it was nayther of us."—N. Y. Post.

—When Mr. Spurgeon presented Mr. Booth, the American temperance advocate, with a set of his sermons, he said that this kind of present became a more expensive thing every year. He had to ask Mr. Booth's acceptance of the twenty-seven volunes he saw before him, which was about half the weight of books he had oppressed the public brain with. None present knew what those volumes cost him in brain-work. He had preached to the same congregation twenty-eight years, and had to bring something fresh every time. Ordinarily a man might repeat his sermons, but he never could, because they were taken down and printed. It took him one day in the week to prepare his sermons for the press, and that sometimes meant sitting up late after working at the tabernacle: Then a whisper came, "Could you keep on preaching another twenty-five years?" "I don't know," Mr. Spurgeon would reply, "I think I shall go home before that; but if I don't I certainly shall keep on preaching, for the Bible is utterly inexhaustible."

Commodore Truxton, commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, has directed the foreman of shipsmiths and the foreman of laborers at the yard to deny over their signatures a statement that they were members of a recent Democratic city convention at Norfolk, or be discharged. He has also prohibited political discussions in the yard, and says that any employe who takes a conspicuous part in politics will lose his position.

Adjutant General Drum has completed a list of casualties in the Federal army during the late war. The aggregate of deaths is shown to have been 359,496. Of these, 29,498 occurred among Union soldiers held as prisoners of war. The total number of troops reported as furnished by the various states under the various calls is 2,772,408, but some of the returns were duplicated and it is estimated that the actual number did not exceed 2,500,000.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, gripe, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, gripe, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each, per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, gripe, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, gripe, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen. $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Thirteen hundred cars are required for the transportation of the government exhibit from New Orleans exposition to Washington. The Indiana exhibit will probably be presented to the French government.

Col. Bradley, stationed at Santa Fe, telegraphs to the War Department at Washington that there are no hostile Indians in New Mexico. It is thought that the Apaches have also left Arizona.

COUNTRY.

At Whitesburg, Kentucky, Link Banks, a notorious outlaw, who had killed three men this year, was shot dead by a citizen whose life he was attempting. A war between rival factions in Knott county, Kentucky, has resulted in nine murders during the past three weeks.

A hot-air balloon at Charleston, West Virginia, Friday caught fire while being inflated, and shot several hundred feet into the air, when it collapsed, William Patterson, the "aeronaut," falling to the earth a lifeless mass. It was his first ascension.

A conference was held Friday between the officers of the Bay View rolling-mills and the operatives, but no agreement was reached. The Wabash officials at Moberly, Mo., have asked protection for their shops from the strikers. Several hundred shoemakers at Southboro and South Farmingham, Massachusetts, have struck for higher wages. The factories at Exeter, New Hampshire, will suspend next Saturday until September 1.

The Governor of South Carolina has ordered an investigation of reported inhuman practices in the convict camp at Abbeville. Nine convicts out of 125 have died within a few weeks, the alleged victims of overwork and cruel punishment.

A mob of masked men stormed the jail at Coshocton, Ohio, last Friday night and took out Henry Howard, a negro, who had assaulted two young women at Lafayette Thursday. A confession was extorted from the culprit, and he was then hanged to a tree in the Court House yard.

The area planted with oats in Illinois is much larger than last season, and the prospects are favorable for nearly an average yield. The prospects for winter wheat are exceedingly poor, the entire crop being estimated at 11,000,000 bushels.

The French war-ship Isere with the Bartholdi statue on board was escorted up the New York harbor to Bedloe's island, Friday, by an imposing naval procession, one hundred steamers and yachts being in line. The shipping in the harbor was gayly decorated, and enthusiastic multitudes lined the shores of Long Island and New Jersey. The Isere dropped anchor amidst the thundering of cannons, the blowing of whistles and the playing of bands.

Buddensiek, the builder of man-traps in New York, was yesterday found guilty of man-slaughter, and remanded for sentence.

A terrible explosion occurred at Penn Mills, near Albion, Erie county, Pa., June 19. A heading jointer in the mill burst while running at a terrific rate of speed, and spread death and destruction on all sides. The machine burst like a bomb shell and tore the mill to pieces, causing a loss of several thousand dollars. The explosion was heard many miles distant. Four persons were killed or severely injured.

A terrific rain-storm swept over a portion of Central Illinois Sunday morning, doing great damage to the growing crops and washing away fences, bridges, etc. Near Hillsboro many fields of corn are under water.

A special fast train took Gen. Grant and his attendants from New York to Mt. McGregor, near Saratoga, early last week. After the fatigue of the journey had passed away there was an improvement. The patient slept nine hours Saturday night. At 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon Dr. Douglas informed a visitor that the General was decidedly better, and that all the symptoms were decidedly improved over Saturday.

The passage of Texas cattle through Kansas is opposed by the citizens of the latter State, and trouble is anticipated. Secretary Lamar has been appealed to. The claim is made that the cattle are deceased.

Five hundred and forty-one Mormons sailed in the steamer Wisconsin from London Saturday, en route to Utah.

FOREIGN.

Owing to the closeness of the vote on foreign estimates in the Italian Chamber of Deputies the Ministry has tendered its resignation.

Three young Englishwomen have announced their intention to offer themselves as candidates for election to the British Parliament.

Official dispatches confirm the news of the loss of the French gunboat Reynard in the Gulf of Aden. All on board—127 persons—perished.

Mr. Gladstone Thursday surrendered the prime minister's official seals to the Queen, who granted Sir Stafford Northcote an audience at Windsor castle.

In the populous quarters of Madrid the efforts of the authorities to disinfect the dwellings have met with such determined resistance that the enforcement of sanitary regulations has been abandoned. During Thursday there were reported 632 new cases of cholera in Murcia, Castellon de la Plana, and Valencia, and 151 deaths.

It is reported from St. Petersburg that the Ameer has massed nearly all his troops in Afghan-Turkestan under his own command. One detachment of the Ameer's troops is armed with 3,000 breech-loading rifles and fifteen field guns, which were presented by the Indian Government. This action threatens communication between the Russian troops and their advanced outposts and endangers the Russian troops should they move toward the Oxus River.

A private letter from a distinguished American traveler, dated Moscow, June 1, referring to the Anglo-Russian difficulty, says: "The war fever has run its course, and everything is quiet. The Russians believe that they have carried their point, and are proud and satisfied. They say, however, that sooner or later the Russian and English frontiers must come together in Central Asia, and that then and only then will a permanent modus vivandi be secured."

A terrible explosion took place Thursday in the Pendlebury Colliery, near Manchester, England. The explosion was caused by fire-damp. There were working in the mine at the time of the explosion 349 miners. One hundred and sixty of these were at work in the level in which the explosion occurred. The work of rescue immediately commenced, but made slow progress on account of the great masses of rock and earth displaced by the concussion and which partially filled the avenues of egress from the mine. One hundred and sixty lives were lost. Forty-five bodies have been recovered.

A sensation has been caused by the publication of Lord Wolseley's despatches denouncing the evacuation of the Soudan. He warns the Government that on the withdrawal from Dongola the whole province will be given up to anarchy, and will revert from civilization to barbarism. Withdrawal, he says, will not avert the struggle. The Mahdi in a few years will attack Egypt. Years of internal trouble in Egypt has been a burden and strain on her military resources. The best policy, in both a military and a financial point of view, would be to attack the Mahdi at Khartoum.

LETTERS

Containing cash for the Cynosure were received during three weeks ending June 19, from the following:

W H Fischer, Mrs S H Nutting, A S Waterbury, Wm Schmitt, Mrs Jane Dale, W M Sexton, Wm Stewart, Miss L Wheelock, Mrs E S Miller, Jas Bradford, O. Jennings, L. Scoville, G L Emerson, Isaac C Roberts, John Wilson, Jas Frazier, A D Minor, A L Blowers, Jno Kinney, Jno McLeod, A R McCoy, J J Barnes, F L Grundtvig, Geo Brokaw, Mrs Schnellbacher, Mrs. G. M. McCampbell, Mrs S Ward, H Baldridge, W M Baker, A F Spaulding I P Bennett, A C Lemm, C D Coppock, B A Bailey, N Miner, S M Hill, Samuel Hawthorne, R Loggan, John W Wilson, Mrs. John McCrae, Jacob Post, Daniel Hyde, S A Pratt, H Pruett, E Brooks, Wm Patterson, H Maricle, G W Williams, H. Kinsley, A M Acheson, Jno Prothero, Hiram Preston, Sr, Chas Scott, R B Eno, C K Green, J C Card, M E Wood, Rufus Day, Marcus Phillips, Jno Kitchen, Lyman Prindle, Mrs S J M Robinson, C Hillegonds, J S Ragsdale, R Canning, J A Gordon, Jas Barnes Sr, O Katz, John Noble, L. Nash, Henry Stevens, George Eaton, M and M Roberts, E C Andrus, J C Noe, Wm Mitchell, A G Vansyoc, Jas Smith, J McFarland, A F Smith, J L Moore, J P Wilson, Paul Dunken, A Worman, Jas Currie, O C Lindley, Lewis Wilson, J Winkelbleck, Mrs M Wood.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@88⅞
No. 3	79	@80
Winter No 2		@94¾
Corn—No. 2	47	47¼
Oats—No. 2		33½
Rye—No. 2		66½
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		10 20
Butter, medium	10	@15½
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 40
Eggs		11
Seeds—Timo	1 40	@1 53
Flax		1 22
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Gr ...ry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber— ...on	11 00	@18 00
Wool	15	@20
Cattle— ...to extra	5 15	@5 75
...on to good	2 40	@5 00
Hogs	3 00	@4 25
Sheep	2 50	@4 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 00	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	89	@1 02
Spring	93½	94¾
Corn	52	@55½
Oats	42	@42
Mess Pork		11 50
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 35
Hogs	3 60	@3 75
Sheep	1 75	@3 15

COLLECTION BOXES.

Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Patented Dec. 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufact'rs of stamped Rug Patterns & dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
WM. H. MARTIN, 103 Adams St. Chicago.

ANY MAN

Or woman making less than $40 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $4 combination free to those meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill. Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!
ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH. HAY-FEVER. CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.
DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
ORIENTAL CREAM, or MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER.

PURIFIES as well as BEAUTIFIES the Skin. No other Cosmetic will do it.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. MME. M. B. T. GOURAUD, Sole Proprietor, 48 Bond St., New York. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the United States, Canadas, and Europe. ☞Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 41. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1885. WHOLE No. 792.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
"George Harris"..... 8
"Humanum Genus"..... 8
Maine Law and the G. A. R..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Government Reforms..... 1
Secret Societies and the Temperance Cause..... 2
SELECTED:
The Grand Army and the Liquor Law..... 3
N. C. A.—Report of Cor. Sec'y and General Agent 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chap. XXV..... 4
The Commencement Season. 5
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
REFORM NEWS:
The Augustana Synod; Encouragement in Canada..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
CORRESPONDENCE:
More Prayer for Reform; A Lecturer for the Colored People; State Church in Sweden; United Brethren need Educating; The One Spirit..... 5,6
THE CHURCHES:
The Associate Synod and the G. A. R.; Ref. Pres. Synod on Temperance and Tobacco; Madagascar..... 12
LITERATURE..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
HOME AND HEALTH..... 14
FARM NOTES..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

As practice is better than precept, so is the determination of a clergyman of more account than the decree of a legislature in overcoming the demoralizing tendency to divorce. The other day in Baltimore a society belle was to be married to a young merchant, both prominent in society. The ceremony was appointed in the Grace Episcopal church, but the congregation which came together about the doors of the edifice were disappointed. The rector had some conscience on divorce laws, and finding the young man was a divorced person he refused to have anything to do with the ceremony. A like resolution on the part of all our ministers would settle much of the divorce business before the next legislature could meet.

A few days since a popular and earnest young pastor was driven out of a council of Congregational churches by the domineering representatives of a great city church. Nothing could be said against him except the position he took against the lodge several years ago. Had he been a Freemason not a word of objection would have been heard. Such contemptible persecution, though bitter and hard to be borne, has its alleviation in the record of nearly every man whom history and truth have named great and good. Bunyan in Bedford jail wrote the Pilgrim's Progress; the Non-conformists were driven from their "livings" in England, but they made America.

A remarkable illustration of suffering for truth was the history of President Jonathan Edwards, who was driven in 1750 from his church in Northampton, Mass., after having given to its service twenty-three of the best years of his life. While his resistance to the "half-way covenant" is generally regarded as the immediate means of his leaving the church, the real trouble lay a few years back. Some young persons of his flock had procured some obscene publications, and propagated them for the infection of others. Edwards called the leading members of his charge together, and told them of these doings. He mentioned the names of the persons who were implicated. It appeared that almost all the families in the town had some relation or other concerned in the matter. The heads of the congregation set their pastor at defiance with the greatest insolence and contempt; and he was eventually dismissed by a majority of two hundred against twenty. And so this man, who has been "justly pronounced one of the most eloquent preachers of his own or any age," was driven off to a mission among the Indians. But during the six years of his seclusion he wrote his profoundest and most valuable works, The Freedom of the Will and Original Sin. Had it not been for these six years of trial, Robert Hall might never have said of Edwards: "He ranks with the brightest luminaries of the Christian church, not excluding any country or any age since the apostolic."

The late Victor Hugo has been widely regarded as an infidel, but erroneously. His will affirms his belief in God, but at the same time requests that he may be buried without any religious rites. No other Frenchman could have been borne to his grave with such demonstrations of popular esteem. Communists, republicans, the Academy—all classes claimed him, but the priests and the contemptible remnant of a royalist party. He bequeathed $10,000 to the poor and ordered his body borne to the grave in a pauper hearse, but the Catholic priests were compelled to vacate the Pantheon, which they have held for thirty-two years for the purposes of their religion, and the immense and costly structure, the conception of Madame de Pompadour, the mistress of Louis XV., was for a third time "secularized," that the bones of Victor Hugo might rest peaceably under its pavement. He was perhaps the most representative of Frenchmen—brilliant, witty, versatile, hating to the death the cruel empire on whose reeking altar France cast the bravest of her sons by hecatombs. The intensity of his resentment toward the old regime made him seem a communist; the bitterness of his contempt for the priests made him seem an infidel. But back of all appearances his regard for a true, well-regulated social condition made him respect that form of government that equalized all orders of society, and that religion which interposed the least formality betweeu the soul and God while it taught, without impoverishing, the poor.

The extreme financial depression in France which has followed the efforts of the greedy aud ambitious Ferry in Madagascar and Tonquin must have clouded the last days of Victor Hugo, and force the regret that he had not used his powerful pen agaiust the war spirit that has robbed France for nearly a century of her best blood and immense treasure. This is the evil which gave imperialism its opportunity and which set all the little farms of France, all her factories, her shops, her markets to the task of raising five milliards of francs for the German treasury. The present condition of France is alarming; the building trade is prostrate, only one-third as many houses were erected in Paris last year as in 1882, while 42,000 apartments are vacant; and as a desperate remedy the government proposes to undertake a vast system of public works to "keep the wolf from the door." A workingmen's revolutionary congress was lately in session, which proposed the abolition of the Presidency and the Senate, the reference of acts of Parliament to a plebescite, confiscatiou of ecclesiastical property, the abolition of judges, juries, and arbitrators taking their places, gratuitous litigation, gratuitous education of all grades, prohibition to work more than six days a week, etc., etc. It is believed, however, that this programme, radical as it is, will be rejected by other socialist and anarchist sections as uot going far enough. Altogether, the situation is reasonably exciting apprehension among the French officials.

If you come to the Holy Scriptures with growth in grace, and with aspirations for yet higher attainments, the book grows with you, grows upon you.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

BY ALEXANDER THOMSON.

Why keeps the whole land holiday, in summer's royal prime,
With glowing eyes of hopefulness, strong joys unuttered rhyme?
Why run the boys on all the streets in uproar, at their will,
And there is not an arm to check, or voice to say, "Be still?"
This is the day our state was born, our freedom's natal day;
And palsied be the hand would check the voice of joy to-day.

See how the strong-armed blacksmith stands beside his anvil now,
The sinews of his strength relaxed, and clean both hand and brow.
To-day he swings no ponderous sledge, on iron bright and red,
But makes his lifeless anvil speak in thunder tones instead,
The language of his manly heart, while there erect and free,
He makes his humble smithy roar with Freedom's jubilee.

From every flag-staff on the land, and mast-head on the deep,
From every fort that grimly towers our Pilgrim land to keep,
Out proudly sweeps in silken folds, above both wood and water,
Blue with the beauty of the skies, red with the hue of slaughter,
White with the hopes from battle clouds, and sacrifice ascending,
Like God's own benediction kind above the whole land bending,
The emblem of our nation's strength, forever let it fly,
The meteor of all people's hopes along their morning sky.

To-day let maidens deck their hair with roses red and white,
And look from eyes of deepest blue their patriot delight.
To-day, one day of all the year, we'll make a truce with noise,
And give full scope to all the wild exuberance of the boys.
To-day let every sect and class spring from their social ring,
And each man grasp his brother's hand as if he were a king:
And each man pledge his brother man, while he has breath to draw,
To guard the homes of freedom well, and dignify the law.
Let all the fiery things of war to-day their thunder join,
Though no proud bannered ship goes down along their battle line;
Though o'er no heaped and stricken fields the hovering Furies brood,
To call from all the fields around the buzzards to their food.
Yet let the dog of war speak out—who better speak than they,
Who by the God of battles won the glories of to-day!
Lift up! lift up! through all the land strong Freedom's trumpet voice,
For dark and traitorous the heart that will not now rejoice.

Once more we see stern Paul Revere go dashing through the gloom,
And send his stirring warning forth as 'twere the trump of doom.
Once more we see on Bunker's Hill the matchlock's sudden flame,
And over Howe's proud face and brow the flush of angry shame:
Once more the tattered veterans stem the wild and icy tide,
By one swift falcon swoop to tame the hireling Hessians' pride.
Once more the fiery soul of Wayne leads on the gleaming steel;
Once more from Morgan's iron front the British veterans reel.
Again we see the dauntless Green wring triumph from defeat,
And force the victor of to-day, to-morrow to retreat:
Again on many a moonlight raid, beneath the Southern pines,
The daring Swamp Fox dashes forth before his scanty lines.
Once more in gloomy Valley Forge we see the veterans go
Bootless, for freedom's holy cause, to duty in the snow;
And there, deep in the wintry wood, beneath the moaning pine,
The Chief in sorrow, gloom, and doubt, cries out for help Divine.
Nor cries in vain—within the cloud the bow of hope appears,
And freedom's holy temple towers above the vale of tears.

GOVERNMENT REFORMS.

BY REV. M. A. GAULT.

[Address before the N. C. A. in Farwell Hall, June 19, 1885.]

I wish to preseut to you a few thoughts ou the national reform issue, and its relation to moral reform questions. The issue is known as the Religious Amendment movement, and also by the phrase, "God in the Coustitution." It may be stated as the question, Shall our country be ruled by Christiau morality or infidel licentiousness? It is a question of moral anchorage for the government. Should goverument appeal to diviue authority in national legislation, or is there no higher authority for government than the will of the people? Has the ship of state no anchorage outside of itself? Has it no compass or pole-star? Or is it like a ship auchored only to its own keel? Banks, railroads and other corporations are creatures of the government. They are subject to its laws. But what law binds the nation, and who created it?

Our movement teaches that this legal corporatiou we call the state, is a creature of God. It is a subject of the moral law as much as the individual. We believe that our obedience to civil government should be qnalified by the Higher Law. The idea is well expressed in the 16th Article of the Baptist Confession of Faith: "We believe that civil government is of divine appointment, for the interests and good order of human society, and that magistrates are to be prayed for, conscientiously honored and obeyed, except only in things opposed to the will of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the only Lord of the conscience, and the Prince of the kings of the earth."

The question, shall the divine law be recognized as the supreme standard of national legislation touches every moral question. It is fundamental. Its settlement involves the settlement of every moral question. It is the ultimate question in moral reform. It is a question we have not yet solved. It is one that this nation is only experimenting on. We should not be satisfied with any halting, half-way theory. Let us follow this logic down to the bed-rock. We are working out the problem for the fourteen hundred million of the world's population. Their eyes are upon us, and if we fail the hopes of liberty will die in the breasts of millions.

On the question of the relation of government to God, there have never been but four theories proposed. The first is the Roman Catholic theory. It is that the church has authority over the State, and can dictate laws for presidents and kings. The second is the English theory, and is the opposite of the first. It is that the state has authority over the church; and kings and governors can prescribe and administer laws for the church. It makes the church a tool in the hands of the state. The third is the infidel theory, which is that the state has not only no relation to the church, but no relation to God; that it should recognize none but human authority. It is that government should have nothing to do with religion, and should make no discrimination in favor of one religion, more than another. This is the theory taught in the Constitution of the United States, although in the practical administration of the government there is a practical discrimination in favor of Christianity. The fourth or National Reform theory is, that the church and state must not be united; their relation is like that of two planets revolving around the same sun, both moving in separate orbits but around the same center. Christ is the supreme Lawgiver around which both the church and state revolve. His law binds one as much as the other. Their relation is like that of the two hands of the body, both moved by the same will, but not to be bound together. Our government in its fundamental law should recognize its relation to the law of God, for itself. It should do this without recognizing any church. There can be no union of church and state unless the state single out some denomination and favor it to the exclusion of others; and this the state should not do.

The national reform idea is that government should base all its legislation on the law of God. We admire the superstructure of our government. It is in many respects the best ever framed. We teach that the best form of government is republican. It is the fonndation of onr government we aim to correct. Some years ago a large brick building, seven stories high, used for a hotel, in St. Louis, was found to be nnsafe. Large fissures opened in its walls. which threatened to fall in ruins. An experienced architect was employed. He fonnd the defect was only in the foundation. He employed several hundred men with jack screws, placed under the building. At a given signal each man tnrned a screw a qnarter of an inch, and so the great building went up eleven feet. A solid foundation was placed under it, and all this was done while the business of the hotel was going on. Thns by means of the press and platform, and pulpit, and multiplied conventions, we mean to elevate this nation, and place underneath the solid granite of the divine law; and while this is done, we want the business of the nation to go on.

We want a recognition of the divine law in the Constitution, becunse it is the supreme law of the land, and the only deliberate expression of the will of the whole people of the United States. No State legislation can rise higher than the national Constitution, as water can rise no higher than its fountain. The Constitution is the only law binding the government. Statute law is made by legislatnres to bind subjects, but statute law cannot bind the nation. It is as worthless as the paper on which it is written, nnless it conforms to constitutional law. It has been truly said that the United States Constitution is a part of the constitution of every State. Constitutional law is made only by the nation, while statute law is made by the legislature. The former is made to govern the legislature in making statute law.

The great defect of our Constitution is, that it leaves out of the government the idea of a God and a higher law. In it there is no law binding the government on moral questions. People often say we have good enough Sabbath laws. But we have no Sabbath law to bind the nation, and it is the greatest Sabbath-breaker. The Congress of United States holds its sessions frequently on the Sabbath. The Government through its Postoffice department, and railroad corporations, employs tens of thousands of men every Sabbath day. You cannot be a postmaster and keep the Sabbath.

An attempt was once made to enforce Sabbath laws in New England in the case of those traveling on that day. But while they arrested and fined the traveler in the stage, yet they could not touch the driver, because he was employed by the government in carrying the mail. When street cars in Allegheny City were prosecuted for running on Sabbath, they escaped the penalty by attaching a letter-box to the car, and saying that it carried the U. S. mail. Judge Cole of the Supreme Court of Iowa testified in a national reform convention that no legislation in Iowa could prevent trains carrying the mail from crossing the State. When our government tramples upon our Sabbath laws with impunity, there is little use in attempting to enforce statute law on this subject. If God and his law were recognized in the Constitution, we could then enforce such legislation on the ground of its constitutionality.

This amendment has also a vital connection with the prohibition qnestion. Prohibition implies a power to prohibit. Where does government get that power? All legitimate anthority is derived from God. Men may plead that temperance is the best policy, and the eternal fitness of things but back of these there must be the idea of a God. Without this idea, what is there to determine right from wrong? Without God there is no authority for virtue, no standard for virtue, no definition of virtue, no virtue. Virtue must ever be under the dominion of law. Law to have force must have behind it an authority greater than the subject. The anchor to hold the vessel must fasten upon something firmer than the vessel. Laws having no other basis than mere human authority are no laws at all. Men may make and men may unmake such laws. What is law to-day may be changed by another majority to-morrow. It is a dangerous falacy to say that legislatures can make laws. They can no more create law than they can create a world. If the legislature of Illinois shonld enact that twice six are nine, would it change the God-ordained fact? If they shonld enact that if I would step out of a third story window I would go upward instead of falling to the gronnd, would it change God's law of gravitation? Men must be educated to know that God alone has the right to create law. His law only has force enough to bind the conscience, and make men respect it. Without this idea of Divine authority all onr prohibition legislation is only built upon the sand. I have as much right on my own authority to prescribe a law for another as he has for me. It is only a qnestion of expediency whether I obey snch laws or not. If I disobey I offend my neighbor. If I obey I perhaps offend myself.

Until men are taught to believe that law is the will of an unchanging Law-giver, and that government is the agent to interpret and administer that law, they will not respect and obey it.

It is easy to see the connection of this idea of a Divine law with the anti-secret movement. The best definition of government is that "It is an institution of rights." Its chief function is to protect the rights of the individual, the family and the church. Whatever infringes upon the rights of these, the State is bound to prohibit. It has often been shown that secret societies do this. They have undermined all the foundations of society, and have their sappers and miners at work preparing to scatter in mines every institution that stands in the way of their selfish and ambitious schemes. They are like cancerous blood in the body politic, poisoning all ranks of our social life.

It has been said that the anti-secret question belongs more to the chnrch than the state. But it is easy to prove the antagonism of Masonry to civil government. The true theory of government is that its power and authority is derived from God. Bnt this authority comes through the people. We believe that both in church and State the divine theory of government is the republican form. Its authority is from God, and through the people. What is the Masonic theory of government? It is a secret empire in direct antagonism to republican government. Whenever our laws and their secret government conflict, they disown and defy our laws. The oaths and obligations which they impose are, according to their own testimony, paramount to every other.

Webb's Monitor, page 240, says: "The covenant is irrevocable. No law of the land (that is civil law) can effect it. No anathema of the church (that is divine law) can weaken it." Here we find Masonry, by one of its standard authorities, claiming absolute supremacy. Any institution claiming supreme authority, and not recognizing divine authority, is virtually a conspiracy against God. There is nothing independent but Almighty God. All the nations are as ciphers and God alone is the unit. There cannot be two supremes. If there is a second it must displace the first. By substituting another supreme, Masonry in effect displaces God from his own moral system, and, as Dr. Blanchard says, there is in reality no obligatory right and wrong in a Masonic lodge.

Masonry is a despotic government, whose very nature is to prohibit free speech, and liberty of the press, and it is thus the greatest obstruction in the way of moral reform. As a power within many of the chnrches, it operates powerfully to shut out discussion of reform questions. It is a sworn system of favoritism, and defeats the administration of justice in our civil courts. The greatest barrier to the enforcement of prohibition legislation is sworn secretism. Where judge and jury are bound by these obligations, the impartial administration of law is impossible.

Government administrated on the basis of the decalogue would blot out Masonry and kindred orders. The third commandment would prohibit their extra judicial oaths. In fact, if this law was enthroned in the nation, and public sentiment educated up to it, there wonld be no murder, blasphemy, secretism, intemperance, Sabbath breaking, profanity, licentiousness or stealing. It would be the triumph of every moral reform. It would be the ushering in of the millennial day. Let us then keep our eyes fixed on this one grand ideal, a nation anchored to the Divine Law.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE.

BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

[Address in Farwell Hall, before the N. C. A. Annual Meeting.]

No problem is more practical, or more difficult of solution than what to do with the dram-shop. If the secret orders are in their spirit and tendency opposed to these snares for the unwary, these pitfalls for the weak, it is a point in their favor. If these societies are on the other side they are of the devil.

First, I ask you to remember that we cannot always know from names and appearances what facts are. The liquor dealers call themselves temperance men; "copperheads" call themselves "Sons of Liberty;" infidels call themselves rationalists; and the devil professed to desire Adam and Eve to become as gods, while he really intended to make them dark, tormented spirits like himself. Calling a scoop-shovel a teaspoon will not fit it for drinking tea, and calling a society the Good Templars does not show that it is not a feeder to the drink shop. This fact is so important that you will pardon me if I detain you on it a moment longer.

The sun seems to be revolving about the earth and all those distant suns, centers of other systems as well. The earth seems to be solid, unshaking, immovable. Yet we know that the sun, so far as our system is concerned, stands to-day where it did when Abraham dwelt amid the hills and groves of Palestine, and we know that the earth is whirling along on axis and orbit, a thousand miles, sixty-eight thousand miles per hour, never once for a moment resting by the way.

The one who sees only appearances, sees really nothing, and in asking you to take up this question with me to-night, I want you to look below names to things. Two general divisions of our theme we have: 1st, Secret temperance orders; 2nd, Other secret societies. Two sub-divisions we will have in each case: 1st, The effect of these orders on individual members; 2nd, Their effect on society at large. So you see onr subject has like the river of the Garden of Eden, parted into four heads.

THE TEMPERANCE ORDERS.

In the first place the secrecy of these orders has nothing whatever to do with the cause they profess to desire to serve. Drunkard making is a painfully open business outside of prohibition States and the effects are obvious there. The means of banishing this trade are all apparent: edncation of the people, enactment and enforcement of law, and personal appeals to drinker and seller? What is there here to call for secrecy? Nothing. The end is praiseworthy, the means honorable and secrecy a hindrance rather than a help. It keeps away the very persons who need argument, protestation and appeal, sets persons to learning grips and signs who ought to be serving God and saving men. Their effect will be two-fold, demoralizing and belittling. To say temperance is my object, when grips, or signs, or courting, or fun is the object, is lying. And for persons over ten years of age to be whispering pass words through holes in doors and giving in a time of peace in an orderly community, signs as if among deadly enemies, is a very small business.

Then take the titles and regalia. How dwarfing to the mind. Here is a man or woman who professes to see the long procession of murderers, thieves, harlots, suicides, paupers and lunatics which passes steadily along from the law-and-order saloon to the drunkard's dark and terrible hell. He professes to desire to do somewhat to dry up the waters of that river of death, to save those who are ready to perish. He is interested in the cause of temperance. Does he take the poor drunkard by the hand and with tears implore him for the sake of self and wife and child and Christ, to turn back before it is too late? Does he go to the saloon-keeper and thunder in his ears the denunciations of God's Word against those who make their fellows drunken, to professors of religion who vote for license and in their ears thunder the denunciations of God's word against hypocrites? Oh, no; he goes up into the top story of a building, curtains the windows, puts a man at the door to keep out all who have not promised never to tell what is done there, puts on a paper collar with some rosettes on it, and reads a prayer or a bit of a lecture from a card.

The simple statement of the fact explains how it is that serious and earnest men are so seldom found in such organizations; why only those who delight in fuss, feathers and grandiloquent titles can abide them. They do not vote nor pray nor pay for temperance, but buy tissue paper ornaments and make speeches for the good of the order.

FREEMASONRY

and the other greater orders to which the temperance orders are simple feeders are justly subject to more serious charges. But before taking them up allow me to call your attention to the fact that almost every good cause is made a pack-horse to carry this same secret system into popular favor. They not only seize on the popular interest in the cause of temperance, but on patriotism and organize a secret Grand Army. They take up the wrongs of labor in secret labor unions. They take desire to provide for ones family and organize secret insurance companies. They pretend to desire to promote brotherly love, relief and truth, and lest some of it should leak out into the world they bottle it up in a lodge and salt it down with an obligation. In fact it seems as if men now desire to put patriotism, love of home, pity for the fallen, and every other good cause under contribution to keep up the principle of secret association. There is here a mystery which cannot be explained without a discussion of the existence of a personal devil. But let us return to our subject. What is the effect of Freemasonry and the like societies on the temperance cause?

NO CANDID OBSERVER

of wide experience can think, if only a little time, on this question without seeing that these lodges are specially adapted to produce vicious habits.

In organizations as a rule there are the good, the bad and the weak. Turn twenty-five men out of a lodge room at midnight when all doors are shut except two that lead to hell and the bad men will enter those doors taking the weak with them. Any one can see that this is naturally true; any one with an extended experience knows that it is true. Two cases are now in mind. A gentleman for fifteen years a drunkard and liquor lawyer, now a distinguished temperance worker, said to a friend that he had personally known six young men in one lodge ruined by those older in vice who led them into the pits of death after the night meetings. I know personally a man recently converted after living forty years in sin. He was a Knight Templar Mason and Noble Grand of an Odd-fellow lodge. He told me that his worst steps were aided and assisted by his knightly companions under these circumstances.

Association of good and bad men in a secret lodge will injure the good and will not benefit the bad. If you rub a golden eagle and a lead quarter together the gold will get lead-colored and the lead will not take on gold. But let us pass to the effect of these organizations on society at large.

IT IS AN AXIOM

that whatever makes the operation of law uncertain endangers society and of course every valuable interest in it. Masonic and similar lodges do not exclude distillers, brewers, saloon keepers, bartenders and the like, but, as every one knows, receive them to all the honors and privileges of membership.

It may also be assumed that all men know that the liquor business is the great law-breaker. If the police of a city desire to find a criminal whose whereabouts are unknown they go to the saloons. Sabbath selling, selling to minors, to drunkards, defrauding the government, all these things are part and parcel of the liquor business. Now Masonry furnishes a medium through which the men who commit crime can co-operate with those elected to punish crime without the knowledge of the general public. Judge, juror, witness, sheriff—somewhere along this Masonic line there will be a point for the law-breaker to get through. This explains two facts: first, the difficulty of getting temperance laws passed; and, second, the difficulty of enforcing them after they are enacted. A Masonic clerk in a legislature by omitting a few lines in a record, if there be a supreme court to assist can neutralize the vote of the whole State, render abortive the labor of Christian churches for four long years and give to an infamous traffic a new lease of life.

This interference with the administration of law is all the more dangerous that it is secret, hypocritical, hidden. The attorney is shouting at and denouncing the culprit and at the same time telling him by lodge language not to be uneasy. The judge is charging the jury justly and at the same time has an understanding with a brother lodgeman that he is to hang the jury. Or when the law-breakers are locked up a Masonic sheriff heeds their signof distress and sets them free, while the people foot the bills. The effect of the lodge system on the temperance cause is the same as its effect on the Christian church, the home or any other valuable interest. It is ruinous, and we may be sure that the sword which pierces the heart of the liquor trade will go through the shield of the lodge.

The thing upon which we must move and more insist is that the church of God should cease to maintain her criminal silence concerning these connecting links between the saloon and the court-house; for the church is the God-appointed agent for the redemption of the world. If she be unfaithful there is no hope of relief until Jesus comes, but if she will deliver an honest testimony against this and all other iniquities, God will bless her word and save by means of her agency many precious souls.

THE GRAND ARMY AND THE LIQUOR LAW.

The members of the Grand Army who are assembling by thousands in Portland, Me., to participate in the annual national encampment, are putting themselves in a bad light before the country by seeking to override the laws of the State which prohibit the importation of intoxicating liquors. The Law and Order league of Portland, having learned that large amounts of liquor had been and would be consigned to the soldier visitors, issued a circular declaring that all such consignments would be seized and destroyed according to law. Thereupon the Grand Army organizations of fourteen States, including Illinois, issued a formal protest against any such proceeding, and, after calling attention to the fact that they had come as guests of the city, said in substance that the law should be suspended in their case. This is an extraordinary—a "cheeky" —request.

When the soldiers accepted Portland's invitation they knew that the law of Maine prohibited the use liquor as a beverage. They also knew then as well as they know now whether the drinking of liquor is an essential part of an encampment programme, and if they knew it was they should have declined the invitation.

Perhaps it is not too late even now to remove the camp to some other State, but if the soldiers stay in Maine they should obey the laws of Maine, and if they will not do so, then the Law and Order league should make them.—Chicago Daily News.

A Sabbath protection association has been organized in Pittsburg, Pa., and starts out with considerable promise. This has been occasioned by new and more daring aggressions by the saloon elements. A roller coaster company, from Cincinnati, started out with the announcement that they would run seven days in a week. They were officially notified that law and Gospel were against their violating the Sabbath, and with discretion worthy of a better cause they have been satisfied to let Sabbath coasting alone for the present. It is intended to prosecute a vigorous war against all violations of the law by saloonists and amusement caterers. The leading newspapers are in sympaty with the movement.—Interior.

Temptation brings ruin to one, and strength to another; not by its innate power, but by simply evolving the character that is tried.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

REPORT OF THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY AND GENERAL AGENT.

My first appointment as lecturer and general agent of the National Christian Association was in July, 1872. I had been doing volunteer work on the field for some time previous but this was my first official recognition by the national body. A slight change has been made the name of the office, but the duties have remained substantially the same for the term of thirteen years which I have occupied the position. When I accepted my commission I was informed that my duties were:

1. To lecture, hold conventions, organize auxiliaries, and secure as many efficient workers as possible in the field.

2. To obtain funds for the expenses of the work, and co-operate with the executive committee in carrying out such plans as they might adopt.

3. To disseminate our reform principles and scatter anti-secrecy literature as widely as possible among the people.

My efforts have been chiefly on these lines, with such variations as new phases of the movement seemed to require, and while less has been achieved than the merits of the cause justified you in expecting, yet comparing the present condition of the N. C. A. with what it was thirteen years ago, you will find abundant cause for gratitude and thanksgiving to God for what he hath wrought and I trust catch a new inspiration and obtain fresh courage for enlarged faith and work. * * * *

In the prosecution of field work, I have lectured in nineteen different States and held conventions in sixteen states, usually with a fair attendance and good results. During the past year I have attended nine conventions in eight States, beginning with Iowa, August 26th, 27th and 28th, 1884; at Monmouth, Illinois, Sept. 12th, Normal, Illinois, Sept. 24th and 25th; Lawrence, Kansas, Sept. 29th, 30th, and Oct. 1st; Milton Junction, Wisconsin, January 13th and 14th, 1885; Fredonia, N. Y. January 21st and 22nd; Reading, Mass., Feb. 3rd and 4th; Gilford Village, N. H., Feb. 11th, 12th and 13th; and in Brighton, Michigan, April 21st, 22nd and 23rd. Neither of these gatherings was large, but in some the interest was good.

Rev. S. C. Kimball was employed to arrange for a series of meetings in the six New England States to occur in the months of January and February, but failed to find sufficient encouragement to warrant an attempt except in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. In New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Iowa and Michigan the local attendance was good, and a single session of the Illinois State Association held in Dr. Hanna's church in Monmouth, was animated and earnest in its spirit.

There have been during the year obstacles to overcome not previously encountered, at least to so great an extent. A divided sentiment and diversity of views among friends upon the wisest political methods have had an effect upon the work of the National Christian Association, while the absorbing interest in the Presidential campaign which was well nigh universal, rendered many inapproachable who could otherwise have been reached and won to our cause. Then too, as is well known, there has been a stringency in financial matters, more particularly among farmers and men of limited means from whom we have derived our chief support, which has made retrenchment a necessity, and prevented us from occupying the Southern and other inviting fields, to the extent that would be exceedingly desirable.

Rev. H. H. Hinman has given the year to reform work with his accustomed success. His name is familiar wherever our literature is read or our reform known. His sphere of usefulness is constantly enlarging through those who know him personally, and especially by his able articles published not only in the Cynosure and American, but in the reformatory press throughout the whole country.

Rev. Geo. T. Dissette has been doing radical and thorough work in Illinois, under the supervision of the State Association, which provides for his support. Having seceded from both the Masonic and Oddfellow lodges, he has received marked attention from his former brethren; but hitherto the Lord hath delivered him out of the power of the enemy.

Bro. Robert Loggan left his pastorate to take the field in Kansas, and during the time he has been in the active work has received partial support from your treasury. His active connection with this reform dates back to the annual convenion in 1868, and during the intervening years he has encountered the foe in every form but never has he been discomfited or trailed the banner in the dust. He has been a loyal minister to the anti-lodge plank in the platform of the United Brethren church as it was, and believes in fighting it out on that line.

Rev. Isaac Bancroft has devoted himself and means to the work in Wisconsin with a singleness of eye and of heart that is not common in this selfish age. He not only gives his whole time, supporting himself, but gives liberally to sustain other departments in which he is especially interested.

Friends in Minnesota have raised funds and secured the services of Rev. J. P. Richards, who is a veteran familiarly known to all who are accustomed to attend our annual and occasional gatherings. The Board voted to aid the true and energetic brethren who have taken hold of this work in Minnesota, from the general funds of the Association.

Rev. J. F. Browne, of Berea, Ky., gave two months of his summer vacation to work in Illinois, Pres. J. Blanchard has answered as many calls as his health and editorial duties would permit, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard has found time in addition to other and constant calls to deal some heavy blows which have left their impress upon the flinty ramparts of the pagan orders. Elder Barlow so long and well-known as an active anti-lodge minister; Elder W. W. Ames, whose faithfulness has called down the vengeance of the craft upon his head; the redoubtable Ronayne; the affable Starry, and many other clerical and lay brethren and sisters have not holden their peace, so that the work has been moving on steadily and with a healthy growth. [The labors of W. B. Stoddard, New York State Agent; A H. Springstein, Michigan Agent, and E. D. Bailey, editor of the American, Washington, D. C., were mentioned verbally, but are not included in the written report.—ED. CYNOSURE.]

The rostrum and the pulpit have been ably supplimented by the publications of the Association that have had a wider range if not a more numerous circulation than ever before. This is especially true of the Christian Cynosure, your official organ. A friend, whose mind and money have been in this reform from its first inception, said to me recently, "I am not able to read much, but I have been trying to look over the Cynosure, and it seems to me that the last few numbers are the best I have seen." Not a few of the careful, intelligent readers of your organ will agree with Mr. Carpenter to the extent at least that they are able, forcible, and transparent as the light at noonday. For courage in the cause of reform ; for perspicuity in style and purity of morals; for historic sketches of men, living or dead; for close analysis of character and crucial tests in religion; for freshness of thought and independence of human creeds and fashionable conventionalities, and for outright, upright, downright perseverance in pushing apochryphal or authentic theories to their practical and legitimate results, the Cynosure is the peer of its competitors for the patronage of an appreciative public. Could this body devise means by which to increase its readers, from tens to hundreds and multiply those hundreds by thousands you would merit and in time receive the grateful acknowledgments of a people emancipated from that serfdom now imposed upon society, the state and the church by the "secret empire."

A small fund has been secured to send the Cynosure gratuitously to ministers. This money has been largely, though not exclusively, appropriated in the ex-slave States. By this simple, economic method light has gone into dark places and sympathizing friends found in regions remote. The field is an inviting one and work inaugurated should be followed up as far as practicable without delay.

We are obtaining a better acquaintance with some of our near neighbors and find several strong Christian churches in this city that make connection with any secret lodge a disciplinary offence, and demand entire separation as a term of communion. They are mostly of foreign birth or their immediate descendants, and are not likely to yield their convictions upon so vital a question. I have spoken in five Swedish congregations on the issues involved in our reform, and invariably met with a cordial reception. Bro. Hinman and Pres. C. A. Blanchard have been warmly welcomed in other congregations that are ready to co-operate in measures for the extermination of what they recognize as a great evil. One tract has been printed in the Swedish language showing the anti-Christian character of Freemasonry by its approved standards, and is being circulated with the approbation of their leading pastors. There are at least two hundred of these Swedish churches in the United States, with an aggregate membership of 100,000, and each in its individual capacity and all combined stand squarely opposed to all secret societies. One of their pastors said to me, "We have found that we must keep secret society members out of our churches if we would have harmony and peace among the brethren."

Other churches besides the Swedish Lutherans are coming to this same conclusion and many that attempt to stand neutral will ere long be compelled to take one side or the other as a means of self-preservation. Masonry and vital godliness can no more walk together in Christian fellowship than life and death can reign supreme in joint occupancy of the human heart at the same time, and as this fact forces itself upon the attention of the church, in her practical work, the Bride of Christ will cast off this body of death, and take the only safe and scriptural ground of "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness."

The question of toleration or fellowship once looked upon as a question of theory or mere expediency is becoming pre-eminently practical in church and state, and the people must settle it either by the ballot, by legislation or by more heroic measures. It is the dreaded question of the hour in all ecclesiastical gatherings where there is the least freedom of utterance, and the man who has the courage to mention it is tabood, and in nine cases out of ten if not directly turned out he is frozen out of the body. When the late Congregationalist State Association was in session at Rockford, the chairman and other prominent members, when privately approached on the subject of bringing the question before that body, invariably referred it to the business committee, and, with one exception, declined to give an opinion. The business committee suppressed two resolutions presented, and when interrogated, gave as a reason that the introduction of that question would create discussion and dissension and therefore it must be ruled out. This committee was composed in part of Masons and their fears were indicated by great sensitiveness and a fixed determination not to allow any discussion or expression of opinions in the general body, lest the chaff of the lodge should be disturbed by a little wholesome agitation of the elements. I consider these efforts to strangle every attempted investigation a most emphatic confession of weakness and a plea of guilty to the counts brought against them, and we may confidently expect a reaction; for the Christian people in our churches will not always submit tamely to the domination of the lodge.

Another significant omen appears in the ultimate courts of legislation and jurisprudence in denominations having anti-lodge laws on their statute books which have been laxly administered. This seems to have been a year of overhauling and as in every case a thorough ventilation of the dark closets and cleaning up of the house is attended with more or less inconvenience to its occupants, so in these ecclesiastical households there has been some variance and strife among brethren. While we should deplore dissensions and schism in the body of Christ, it is perfectly legitimate to rejoice when the temple is being purified and purged, even if the instrument is a "scourge of small cords." The Master who wept in compassion over the doomed city of David, when he saw it corrupted by false worships and ruled by "wolves in sheep's clothing," said, "I came not to send peace but a sword." "I am come to set a man at variance with his father." "And a man's foes shall be they of his own household." When the right can only be maintained at the expense of culpable silence, it is not a privilege simply, but the solemn duty of every Christian to rejoice that there are heroes, and if needs be martyrs, in the church to-day, who rise up to "contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." As an Association we have doubtless had less of the personal co-operation of these brethren in our work than we should have received had they not been so thoroughly occupied with their home affairs, but we have their sympathy and should give our prayers and whenever practicable our hearty co-operation in return.

When in the East last winter I saw in the papers several notices of a dissension among the secret brotherhood the exact cause of which I did not understand. Learning that Dr. Darius Wilson, of Boston, was the leader in one faction, I sought out his office at No. 5, Temple Place. Much to my regret the doctor was absent, but I learned from his representative that the "bone of contention" was certain rites or general departments of the order. The Dr. maintained that the Rite of Memphis with ninety-six degrees was the only legitimate and ancient Masonry in existence, and consequently the American and Scotch and other Rites were spurious. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts took issue with the Dr. and ordered "non-intercourse" with all lodges or Masons within its Grand jurisdiction that should acknowledge the claims of the pretender. My informant said the Dr. was meeting with less opposition beyond the bounds of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, but admitted that great disaffection existed among the craft. It is an old adage that when rogues quarrel honest men get their dues, and now that these "loving brethren" are warring among themselves each faction demonstrating that its rival is a fraud, we may congratulate ourselves on the advent of a new and what may prove a very important factor in our work.

The number of seceders is increasing as the work progresses, and the lodge has less power to tyrannize over its own members, and is less feared by all classes of intelligent citizens. There is greater freedom of utterance on this vexed question than heretofore, but we should not for a moment lose sight of the fact that "this kind comes not out but by prayer and fasting."

I wish before closing to call your attention to some things that I hope will receive your careful consideration at this time.

1st. You should, in my judgment, clearly define and officially announce the attitude of the National Christian Association, as an organized body, on the question of party politics. I call attention to this because some of our friends are confused and in doubt as to whether this Association stands independent in politics or in alliance with the Prohibition party or is running a party of its own. While this doubt exists it will seriously interfere with the progress of our work and especially with the collection of funds, as men want to know definitely for what purpose they give their money.

2nd. The literature of our reform should be revised and a few additional tracts published in Swedish, German and perhaps other languages. A tract made up largely of extracts from standard Masonic authorities, is needed to show the attitude of the secret system to civil government. M. M. Butler, of Missouri, has made a valuable collection in this line, but it is too extended for general use. A tract of two pages of the most pointed extracts with very brief notes would be read by thousands who would not stop to examine a lengthy paper. The demand is not so much for lengthy documents or a large number of tracts as for a few brief, pointed ones presenting the issues involved in our reform in the most clear and concise manner possible. The Cynosure embraces the whole field and canonades the secret fortress with pointed shot at every point of approach, but it is not always at hand, while tracts may be ready for use at any moment, and do their work in the assembly, on the street or train often, in a quiet, effective way. While I would counsel increased efforts in extending the circulation of your organ and renewed energy in the lecture field, I would emphasize the importance of circulating tracts as a most effective and economic means of reaching multitudes who need the truth.

3rd. To me it seems of the utmost importance that this Association cultivate amicable relations with all Christian bodies opposed to the lodge, and labor to secure their councils and co-operation in the work. While it is true that "on the side of the oppressors there is power," it is also true that there are Obadiahs and prophets who fear the Lord and who are reserved to act an important part in this struggle. Without their support our movement, however vigorous and determined, will be crippled in its efforts and circumscribed in its means for carrying out plans, however wise and well directed.

It seems highly important that we should find who our friends are and how we can help them in carrying out such measures as they may adopt and we can approve. In response to a circular sent out containing a brief statement of the position of the N. C. A., and requesting a reply, there have come back many encouraging words. In this way the acquaintance of many valuable auxiliaries have been made already and there is a large field open in this direction. I find many pastors who are glad to receive aid in this department of their work who resist any approach that would seem like interferring with their own plans or methods of work. The pastor of a large church in this city, and an influential member in a large ecclesiastical body said to me, within a week, "These secret abominations are pressing us on every side, and if you can do anything to help us maintain our position we shall be very glad." I suggested a tract, to which he responded by tendering his assistance in preparing one for his people in their mother tongue, and spoke very favorably of lectures in his church. There are two M. E. churches in this city which heartily indorse our principles and whose pastors are circulating tracts in the Swedish language among their people.

I might speak of the openings in foreign fields. In Africa, in France, in England, in Sweden, and in fact wherever the Gospel is preached and civilization prevails, but I will only add, the field of the whole world seems ripe for the harvest. The secret conspirators are becoming known by their fruits, and nations as well as churches and individuals are compelled in self-protection to take them into account. As an organization we have before us a plain path in which to proceed. In this we need the wisdom of the serpent along with the gentleness of the dove. Taking Christ for our model, the Scriptures for our guide, the spirit of humility, self-sacrifice and devotion to the truth for our inspiration, we may see results of which the past is but a shadowy precursor to that prophetic era when He "shall so come in like manner" to set up his kingdom, into which "there shall in no wise enter anything that defileth, worketh abomination or maketh a lie. Passing this landmark in the receding years of our work, let us reconsecrate ourselves and enter with renewed energy the field, resolved to do what in us lies to "prepare the way of the Lord."

J. P. STODDARD.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XXV.

TWO WAYS OF ASKING A QUESTION.

Both the prohibition and anti-prohibition sides were silently marshalling their forces; and, while the political sea remained outwardly ealm, one at all familiar with that fickle and dangerous element would have heard and felt the distant groundswell that prophesied of another and still more closely contested conflict than the last.

"I hope all prohibitionists will unite in one solid party phalanx and not play at cross purposes any longer," said Stephen Howland. "People may talk about making temperanee a non-partisan issue as much as they like; it won't alter the faet The prohibition question has got into politics fairly, and all the king's horses and all the king's men can't get it out."

These remarks were addressed to a Good Templar who did not vote the third party ticket at the previous election for reasons which make an interesting subject of inquiry. He was a staunch prohibitionist at heart, and had fully resolved to cast his ballot for Col. Hicks, till over the hidden wires that connect Masonie lodges and Grand Army posts with the secret temperanee orders, flashed the word: "Gen. Putney is a Mason and a Grand Army man, and you must vote for him."

Let not the unsuspecting reader suppose that this eommand was ever orally communicated to the assembled lodge. It is one of the blessed advantages of organized seereey that no such vulgar and clumsy method need be employed. It is true that our Good Templar and the majority of his really "worthy" brethren cast their ballots exactly as their Masonic leaders told them to; and yet so gently was it insinuated by those same leaders that the idea of voting for a man they never expected to elect was too ridieulous for sensible men; so solemnly was it set before them as a patriotic duty, in a crisis like the present, to choose the least of two evils, that they marched to the polls and voted for the Republican candidate, honestly believing that they were following their own sober second thoughts instead of the cue thrown to their chiefs from Masonic headqnarters. In fact, Stephen was answered with one of the very stock arguments that had been so successfully employed on himself the year previous.

"But you know to vote the third party ticket when there is no reasonable hope of electing it is simply playing into the hands of the Democrats."

"There is no hope just because prohibitionists don't unite," said Stephen, quickly. "And as to 'playing into the hands of the Democrats,' better open war than secret betrayal. I come of old Republican, anti-slavery stock, and I am proud of it, but the sceptre has passed into the hands of men who know not Joseph, leaders as stiff-necked and obstinate as Pharoah ever was; and the question is whether we shall follow their leadership and be all destroyed together in a political Red Sea, or follow the Moses of Prohibition even if it means a forty years wandering in the desert before we come to our promised land."

Stephen had been brought up on Old Testament history, and this Hebraistic illustration came naturally to his tongue. In his own mind Col. Gail Hieks was the prohibition Moses, and he could by no means understand the pusillanimous half-heartedness of temperance men who would go back on such a leader. Why did the Good Templars first indorse Col. Hicks and then vote solidly against him? We have, however, presented the reader with a key to this enigma, and merely mentioning that the key in question will fit a great many other puzzles, social and political, we will leave him to apply it at his leisure.

A coming event which is about to startle Jacksonville already throws its shadow over our pages, and we must hasten on to the denouement.

Stephen did not procure a demit from the Odd-fellows. He wanted to see first what could be done in Mrs. Strycker's case; and possibly—O vainest of vain delusions!—his leaving the lodge might tend to make it worse, for where was the purifying element to come from if all the virtuous members abandoned it? Would it not be giving a rich and powerful organization right over into the hands of the devil? So questioned Stephen, forgetting that an organization which professed "to give rest to the soul," yet rejected that Holy One in whom alone satisfying peace is to be found, must be of the devil from the beginning; and that even where Satan is concerned it is always best to pursue a strictly honest policy, and if he can show the shadow of a claim to give him back his own straightway.

There is a temptation here to make a digression. What is this talk so common nowadays in certain circles about "purifying the stage," and making even the dance and the card-table serve the cause of religion and good morals by bringing them into the category of home amusements, but a plan to rob the devil of his own property—that which he can prove by affidavits dating thousands of years back has belonged to him from time immemorial? Fighting the devil is all right; it is grand enough work for an archangel, for Michael himself, diamond-panoplied, and wielding the lightning for his sword; but to cheat the devil, to drive Shylock bargains with him! —in the name of common honor and honesty let us have none of it.

The Rev. Theopilus Brassfield, to whose church Stephen naturally gravitated on joining the lodge, preached sermons of a very advanced type of theology; so much so, in fact, that he was not only a great ways ahead of Paul, but the cross itself loomed dimly through his flowery sentences like a beautiful but rather obsolete symbol of something that had happened a great while ago, but which the fashionable congregation to whom he preached was much too "advanced" to need. Eating husks when it is an altogether new thing may be endured a while for the sake of the novelty, and there are those who are spiritually and mentally enough like donkeys to feed patiently on a daily course of thistles; but Stephen after a time when a Sabbath proved rainy, or hot, or cold, or he had got tired by sitting up too late over a law case the night before, began to find that he could get as much good by reading a sermon alone to himself. And Mr. Basset, though a member of this same church, and superintendent of the Sunday-school, never took him too task on the subject as he had done for neglect of his lodge duties.

Stephen was still moral, upright and manly. These were inherited qualities, and like the color of his hair and the shape of his nose could only be changed to opposite ones by some violent and unnatural process. The hardy, virtuous yeoman race who "had put to flight the armies" of the Spanish "aliens" under Elizabeth, "subdued kingdoms" under Cromwell, and done more than that when it founded in the untrodden wilderness of the New World a theocratic Commonwealth which should be an ideal of free government for all succeeding generations, had left upon him their mental as well as their physical impress. His hatred of dissimulation, his scorn of a lie, his innate chivalry to the weak were inbred, and came from the same source to which he owed his six feet of stature, his firm health and supple sinews. But that New England Hannah, whose life, ever since Stephen was born, had been a daily prayer that he might be worthy of sonship in Christ's eternal kingdom, knew that heavenly grace was no hereditary gift; that the kingdom of which she longed to have him an heir must be peopled by them "who are born not of blood nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Some subtle, spiritual clairvoyance told her that all was not right with Stephen; that he was keeping back something, and after, when writing to him she had half a mind to put the question directly, but always shrank from doing so with a feeling that she had no right to force even her son's confidence in a matter that perhaps lay only between himself and God.

Stephen parted from his Good Templar friend, and stepped out from his den to take an airing, and rest his head which ached with being all day in a hot, ill-ventilated court-room, where a case was on trial that should not have taken more than a few hours to decide; but, thanks to law technicalities, and the fact that the defendant and most of the jury were Masons, seemed likely to last as many days, with an excellent prospect of coming to nothing in the mazes of some higher court.

Passing the Jacksonville Bank he saw before it a crowd, mostly of the laboring class—a quiet, orderly crowd, and yet with painful excitement manifested in their faces, and in their low-toned talk. What did it mean? Stephen was not long left in ignorance, for a passing acquaintance hailed him with the inquiry:

"Heard the news? The bank has suspended. They can't find the cashier nowhere, nor a hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the funds."

(To be continued.)

THE COMMENCEMENT SEASON.

WHEATON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

The closing exercises of the Seminary were held on Tuesday evening, June 16th, before a large and encouraging audience. Rev. A. W. Hall, of College Springs, Iowa, offered the opening prayer. The gentlemen of the class made thoughtful and earnest addresses, much longer than is usual on such occasions. Marcellus Elliott, Jr., spoke on "Propheeies from the Approaches of a New Century," much of his thought turning to the work of Christian missions, in which he himself hopes to engage.

James B. Knappenberger gave a fine apostrophe to Christianity with much felicity of manner and exeellence of thought.

Rev. A. J. Chittenden followed with a brief but pointed address on the mission of the theological seminary. Prof. L. N. Stratton's final words to the class conveyed in earnest words his sympathy and encouragement, and commended them to the work of the ministry of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

BEREA COLLEGE.

Several literary men—among them George W. Cable, Roswell C. Smith, of the Century; Washington Gladden, Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and Robert West, of the Chicago Advance—are expecting to attend commencement at Berea College, Kentucky, Wednesday, June 24th. This institution, which was founded by the American Missionary Association, has about as many white as colored students. The forenoon of Wednesday will be given to the graduating exercises, and in the afternoon Mr. Cable and other visitors will speak. Monday and Tuesday will be occupied by examinations, and on Tuesday there will be an oration before the three literary societies. The commencements have for several years attracted large audiences. Last year—the first since the completion of the railroad of Berea—5,000 were present.

The Free Will Baptist organ, the Morning Star, says of this announcement: "Many of our readers will remember this college as the movement with which Rev. John G. Fee was connected. A few days after the raid of John Brown at Harper's Ferry, (October, 1859,) Mr. Fee delivered an address in our church in New York city on the condition and wants of the South. Some reference was made to John Brown, perhaps as a moral hero, but by no means approving his course. The address was reported in the Herald and other New York papers, and, of course, reached the South.

"Great indignation was manifested by the neighbors of the college, and a 'vigilance committee,' after the manner of the South in those days, gave notice to the college people 'to get out or be blotted out.' The college people escaped to Cincinnati with their lives only, and more than half gone with fright. The chief offense of the college was that it educated the whites and blacks as if both belonged to the human race for whom Christ died. It won its way. Now, Radicals and Bourbons hold a love feast at the commencement and the people come by thousands to cheer the good work."

Park College, Parkville, Mo., has just held its tenth commencement. The graduating class consisted of six, two young men, both of whom intend to go to the theological seminary, and four young ladies, one of whom has already decided for India as her field and medical work for women as her mission. The village church is altogether too small to hold the crowds that gather to attend the graduation exercises, and a large arbor had been erected by the side of the church under the shade of which all present found comfortable quarters. A large delegation of friends came up from Kansas City. The weather was pleasant, and everything combined to make the occasion a delightful one. By the reports made to the board of trustees, it was found that President McAfee had received for the expenses of his great family, and needed improvements for their accommodation, over $1,700, besides the sum needed to purchase eighty acres of land. The amount assumed by the board of trustees for the support of the corps of teachers employed by them was $4,800. The number of teachers had been nine, and of students considerably over 300. It is not surprising that those who have watched this work since it began, ten years ago, with fifteen students, look on with wonder as we think that without endowments or any assured income, all this growth has been accomplished.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MORE PRAYER FOR REFORM.

CARBIN, Kansas.

"Reader, whatsoe'er thou art,
What thy God hath given, impart,
Hide it not within the ground;
Send the cup of blessing round."

For this cause I cry out "Let your light so shine." Paul said he consented to Stephen's death simply by holding the murderers' clothes. So we, by holding our voices, when the missiles of death are being hurled at the truth. We are to seek for national righteousness in faith and prayer. A day is coming when the kingdom of our risen Lord shall be established on the ruins of every system that is doing its work in midnight darkness. For this let us pray I would that we had more faith than we seem to have in prayer as a reforming power.

Paul exhorts us to this in 1 Timothy 2: 1, 2. It was in answer to Elijah's prayers that a drought prevailed, and again that rain fell in abundance.

All things work together for good to them that love the Lord. Then we ought to let our light so shine, that the works of darkness may be revealed, when light and immortality shall be brought to light through the Gospel, and purity of heart possess all.

(Rev.) N. C. PEIRCE.

A LECTURER FOR THE COLORED PEOPLE.

To Rev. Joseph Travis, Chairman Board of Directors, N. C. A.:

Lewis G. Clark, ex-slave, and the "George Harris" of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," conceived his first abhorrence of Masonry from the terrible abuse and sale of his sister, Delia, ("Emeline," in Uncle Tom,) by a high Mason. He sees with intense clearness, and utters with great power the disastrous influence of the lodge on the colored people; and, by a little study, would make a most efficient lecturer against lodgery. Would it not be wise for the Directors to have Secretary Stoddard communicate with him on the subject? QUERY.

STATE CHURCH IN SWEDEN AND FINLAND.

ASTORIA, Oreg., June 9, 1885.

I have given you my views of secret societies here on this Pacific coast. As for the Christian Cynosure, you say that the object of the paper is "To expose, withstand, and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular." This object is very good, "more than excellent," I say it again. But is that the only object of the Christan Cynosure? Is your paper an organ of "an undenominational organization?" What is the object of the articles published in your paper in which only the dark sides of the State Church in Sweden and Finland are spoken of? Is it only the dark sides you know about in the Lutheran churches of Europe? Are you sure that those are the only true Christians in Finland who "were converted by that missionary family," stated in the article, "The Gospel in Finland," in the Cynosure of June 4th? I hope you know more about the State Church—the lighter sides, a true Christian life, etc., also—in Finland and Sweden, than the writer of that article seems to know. I think you know all about the "Fosterlands Stiftedsen" in Sweden and the "Lutherska Evangelii fareningen" in Finland. Several more Christian societies and many faithful ministers (whom you call "priests") has the Lord used as instruments in the State Church to vitalize its members. I hope they have done just as much, if not more, in this respect as those who are called "missionaries," sent by the Congregationalists, Methodists and other sects. F. F. HAIKKA.

NOTE.—The Cynosure is the organ of the National Christian Association which is undenominational, and supported by Christians belonging to perhaps a score of denominations. The editors have endeavored to print what they could learn, from correspondents and otherwise, of any good work for the kingdom of Christ being done in Sweden or Finland. If the brother can write us anything more it will be welcome.

UNITED BRETHREN NEED EDUCATING.

Many are well pleased with the loyal brethren of the late general conference of the United Brethren in Christ. They "quit themselves like men," and stood with God and the principles of the church, and "one with God is a majority" as far as religion is concerned. The disloyal and unposted had the majority. A majority of this anti-secrecy church are uneducated on the secrecy question; and any one who will not be diligent enough to inform himself, generally goes wrong and is controlled more or less by the wrong party. The disloyal have resorted to the cunning craftiness and sly wire-pulling of lodge politicians. That excellent man, Bishop Wright, would not have been elected but to destroy the Star and get him out of the way as far as possible; but the devil has overshot the mark, for he can do more as Bishop, as he can get over more territory and will be respected as a correspondent of the Telescope. He has friends who can make the Star stronger and larger perhaps. This paper and the United Brethren in Christ should be consolidated, but let there be no falling out by the way, and may the Lord grant that loyal Brethren may all be one in Christ Jesus.

The disloyal have been so inconsistent that it makes it easy for us to resist the Masonic devil, and loyal Brethren everywhere should positively determine that by the grace of God he can have no rest or peace in the U. B. church. How can it be consistent to say we should save men from the evils of secret societies, as well as other evils, and then plead to have the law so changed that they may be fellowshipped in the church in order to have rest? We need such a man as Dr. Davis, or Dr. S. B. Allen, to discuss this question all over the church and impress it on the minds of the brethren that the Lord is on the right side, and that we should be on the right side where God is. A brother who is able told me he would "pay twenty-five dollars for such a man." A man can be suported in the field now, but it could not be done before. Brethren begin to see that positive action and thorough work is needed to save the church to Christ, else we will "have a name to live and be dead."

Let us redouble our diligence and do all we can to help the Brethren to come to the Lord's side on this question, and in the next four years Anti-masonry will grow enough in and out of the church that the powers of drakness, the Masonic kingdom of Satan, will be completely overthrown in every church of Christ.

It is necessary for Anti-masonry to grow out of the church as well as in, the same as it was with the slavery question. If slavery existed now, quite likely the church would have wearied of the struggle and been captured, but as God would have it when we were as nearly gone on the slavery question as we are now on the secrecy question, anti-slavery grew in and out of the church by agitation, and the church is glad that she stood fast. Let us rejoice that the time has come to spread the truth on this question. Efficient action should be taken at once. The commission will not let us have time for discussion if they can help it. Education on the secrecy question is what every member of the church needs, so they may vote intelligently.

CYRUS SMITH.

THE ONE SPIRIT.

LASALLE, Ill.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The subject of division among "the holy people," "the redeemed of the Lord," is one that is agitating the church at the present time and has been a source of regret by all who love the Kingdom, for years. But no individual is willing to surrender his peculiar views for the sake of his brother's eternal salvation. Oh, that they might all be one is the cry of the followers of Jesus, but that one must be to follow us. This is no harsh judgment for we all judge ourselves in saying this, and must be honest, God judging us. This was the spirit of his disciples when Jesus was in the flesh and until endued from on high by the Holy Spirit they were not converted from this error. "Peter," Jesus said, "when thou art converted." Peter was a representative man, as you shall see from the prominence he manifested afterwards. It was he that withstood the Jews on the day of Pentecost, and gave us those epistles so rich in wisdom. And now, if we examine ourselves we shall find that we are actuated by the same spirit that controlled Zebidee's children before the crucifixion, the love of prominence of preeminence in the Kingdom. This is one of the evidences that we have not possessed the Spirit of Christ, only in a very small measure, since the papacy, a larger measure coming to us in the Reformation.

This prophecy you shall see in Zech. 5: 6, 11. The ephah was the measure of meal or bread representing the church which contained the anointing (Christ). "This was their resemblance in the earth." Now there was wickedness in it and one feature of this wickedness was closed or irrevocably attached to it, "cast upon the mouth;" and so, as in Revelation 12: 6, went into the wilderness, (14th v.), and the creature had wings given it and carried the ephah (church) into the land of Shinar (where Babel was built), Zech. 5: 11, and shall be established there on her own base (a confusion of language in the Scriptures). Now if you will read Dan. 12: 7, the end was to come "when God shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people" into these sects. You see it is the scattering of "the power," not the people; and the "holy people" were a future people, not his holy people, or present people of God, as the Jews were.

This desire of yours, brethren, is to be met where you see the sin and intereede with the Spirit, with the whole heart, for its being done away in very truth by that enduing from on high that came to the apostles in that upper room. His coming and kingdom is the Son delivering all up to the Father, that the Spirit may be all and in all, then and not till then, shall we see eye to eye and be of "one mind and one way," as the Apostle enjoined the Corinthians to be.

If we wish to know further what the Word says on this subject look up Rev. 11: 3. The two witnesses (prophets and apostles,) prophesying in sackcloth or in mourning, the two candlesticks, vs. 4., you will find in Zech. 4: 6. This is the word of the Lord saying "not by might, nor by power but by my Spirit." The word of the Lord is the Holy Scriptures. In our day this is to appear, showing that a spiritual apprehension is what is needed; so that, being spiritual, we may discern the things of the Spirit. IRA TODD.

BIBLE LESSONS.

THIRD QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE KINGS.

LESSON II, July 12.—Idolatry Established.—1 Kings 12: 25–33.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Thou shalt have no other god's before me. Ex. 20: 3.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. An unsanctified ambition is unbelieving, and through its want of faith in God works its own ruin. vs. 25–31. Jeroboam had received from the Lord the promise of ten tribes on Rehoboam's accession, and was told at the same time in the most explicit terms that as the passing of so large a part of the kingdom into the hands of one without natural or legal claim to the crown was a divine judgment on Solomon for his apostasy, if he served the Lord faithfully as did David, God would build him a sure house like unto David's, whose dynasty should still retain Judah in token of his covenant-keeping mercies. But, as soon as firmly seated on his throne, Jeroboam began to fear revolt, and instead of seeking strength and wisdom at the divine oracles, "the king took counsel"—we are not told of whom, but probably some worldly wise prime minister who advised him to set up a state religion of his own as the surest method of keeping his people loyal. Jeroboam was an ambitious man as evidenced by the wording of the prophet's message: "I will take thee and thou shalt reign according to all thy soul desireth." But it was a selfish ambition. It had no root of faith in God's Word. His was the "vaulting ambition that o'erleaps itself," and so through cowardly distrust he took the very step to insure his overthrow. Want of faith both in God's threatenings and promises are really at the bottom of our great national sins. Politicians bid for the influence and votes of the rum power much as Jeroboam set up his calves of gold—to avert an imaginary evil, and in this way they are bringing upon themselves the very fate they would avoid. Jeroboam's god was expediency. Both our great political parties are worshiping that god to-day. Saloons may be an evil that is wasting the nation's substance, and delivering to bodily and spiritual death hundreds of thousands every year, but they represent immense wealth and great political influence, and it would not be "expedient" to legislate against them. So ministers and editors, though they may think secret societies an evil, are willing to court their favor by not opposing them. They are afraid of losing patrons and hearers. And thus in their faithlessness they commit the sin of Jeroboam.

2. False religions are subversive to the State. vs. 31–33. Jeroboam's new state religion must be different enough from the old to make a dividing line between the two nations, yet retain enough of the features of Judaism to deceive the majority into the belief that they were still worshiping Israel's Jehovah. It was simply a parody and travesty of the true religion as Freemasonry is at the present day. But it proved acceptable to the mass of the people. Jeroboam forgot that national virtue corrupted is the fruitful source of conspiracies and revolutions. In the next reign his whole family was violently cut off by a usurper. They who would tolerate Masonry in church or state for the sake of expediency are fostering the fruitful mother of future anarchy and civil strife. The truest patriot is the man who trusts God best.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How was Jeroboam's religion like Masonry in seeking sacred places to celebrate its rites? Gen. 28: 19. How was Israel's old sin repeated five centuries afterward? Ex. 32: 4. Is secrecy a very old sin? Is. 29: 15; Ps. 64: 2, 4, 5.

"Whereupon the king took counsel." With his counsellors, or the heads of the nation who had helped him to the throne.—Keil. He then made them partakers with him.

"And made two calves of gold." Not calves like Aaron's (Ex. 32: 2.) For Jeroboam could hardly be so short-sighted and unwise as deliberately to reintroduce a worship which had provoked the "fierce wrath" of God, and had nearly resulted in the extermination of the Jewish race. And it is as little likely that the worship of the calves was derived from the worship of Apis, as practiced at Memphis, or of "Mnevis, the sacred calf of Heliopolis" (Stanley), though with both of these Jeroboam had recently been in contact. It would have been but a sorry recommendation in the eyes of Israel that the first act of the new king should be to introduce the hateful idolatry of Egypt into the land. There can be little doubt, consequently, that the "calves" were imitations of the colossal cherubim of Solomon's temple, in which the ox or calf was probably the principal form (1 Kings 6: 23).—Pulpit Com. The cherubim also guarded the mercy-seat over the ark of the covenant. In the description of the cherubim in Ezek. 1: 10 (comp. 10: 1, 20), we find that one of the faces had the form of the ox. That this is the true view appears (a) from the fact that the Israelites would most easily be led to adopt as their own, objects of worship like those they were accustomed to in Jerusalem. (b) The whole history of Israel shows that Jeroboam did not intend to introduce idolatry or polytheism.—Lange. It appears from Ex. 32: 4, 5, and 1 Kings 22: 5, 6, that, in worshiping the calf, the Israelites did not regard themselves as worshiping the image or the Egyptian god, but professed to be worshiping Jehovah by means of the symbol. The calf-worship was not, therefore, wholly repugnant to devout worshipers of God.—Todd. But this visible representation was in direct opposition to the fundamental Mosaic law, which just as expressly forbids the making an image of Jehovah as the worshiping of other gods beside him (Ex. 20: 3, 4).—Lange. Such worship almost certainly leads to idolatry.

"Of gold." Hardly of solid gold. Possibly of wood covered with gold plates, i. e., similar to the cherubim (1 Kings 6: 23–28); probably of molten brass (see 1 Kings 14: 9, and cf. Psa. 106: 19) overlaid with gold; such images, in fact, as are described in Isa. 40: 19.

"It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem." The exact meaning of the original here is a little doubtful, but the bearing of the passage is clear. Jeroboam appeals to the people's love of ease, recalling to their thoughts the toil and trouble of constant journeys to Jerusalem, which they would now be spared.—Cook.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissette, Cynosure office.

Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion

Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.

Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.

Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.

New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.

Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seccders.]

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetsou, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F.W. Cr well, New York; E.W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Wauheck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oherlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

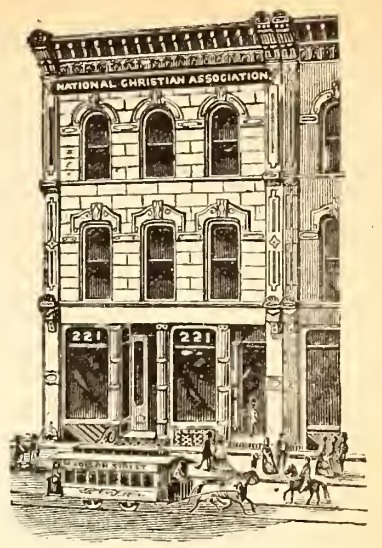
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. ZAIRAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent

☞Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRES.—O. F. Lumry, Wheaton, Ill.

REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin

COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, O. F. Lumry, A. G. Laird, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton W. T. Mcloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie: Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton. Treas., H B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1885.

OLD GEN. FESSENDEN, father of William Pitt Fessenden, was a Freemason, marching in full regalia, when a Quaker friend said to him: "Well, General, has thee got on thy gospel armor, marching in honor of the murder of poor William Morgan?"

Fessenden used to tell this story, and said, "I have never put on that regalia since."

A letter from M. C. Hazard says: "I did not drop the name of Pres. J. Blanchard from the roll referred to, (that of the General Congregational Association of Illinois,) "nor did I have any part whatever in so doing; nor any knowledge concerning it." He asks the Cynosure to retract the statement that the name was dropped by him.

The facts are these: M. C. Hazard was assistant scribe of the said Association, in Galesburg, Ill., May 28th, 1878. He took up the minutes of a previous year to make out the roll, as customary, and read from it the name of every church and every minister except the name of Pres. J. Blanchard, which name had been in the minutes of the preceding thirty years. This name Mr. Hazard omitted—dropped; the effect of which was to put Pres. J. Blanchard out of the roll of the Association. The last Moderator, Rev. Richard Edwards, was informed that the scribe had omitted the name, and he called the attention of the house to the fact; and Rev. Mr. Stevens offered a paper asking for a committee. There were above a hundred persons present who saw and knew that Mr. Hazard omitted the name; and what he means by the above denial is beyond our knowledge. The Association had taken no action previous. He dropped the name while making up the roll; an act without a precedent and without a name! Such action by scribes, if allowed, would dissolve every deliberative body on earth.

"GEORGE HARRIS."

Lewis G. Clark (the "George Harris" of "Uncle Tom's Cabin") spoke in the Wheaton College Chapel last week, Wednesday evening, with the accompaniment of the "Sweet Singer" of the anti-slavery Israel, George W. Clark. The people of Wheaton honored themselves by filling the chapel and making up a good collection for the expenses of the brethren. Mr. L. G. Clark's father was a Scotchman and his mother a light mulatto, the slave of her own father. He has a wonderful mind, the metaphysics of a Scotchman and the playful wit of the African race. He has for years lectured North and South, and below is his testimony concerning the lodge. He was well acquainted with the Kentucky Logans, who were Freemasons, and were the Legrees in Mrs. Stowe's book. They were remote relatives of our Masonic Senator Logan. Read and ponder his testimony, which here follows:

Pres. J. Blanchard:

DEAR SIR: You ask me, after my speaking in the South for years, what effect secret societies exert on the ex-slave population. I answer:

1. The colored people are being roped into secret orders. When I was in Kentucky there were eighty-two secret societies in Louisville alone.

2. As a rule the meanest men are the leaders of these secret societies, and they prevent their members giving to any church, unless the pastor is a Mason; or to any other benevolent object, so far as they can. They thus starve wives and good pastors and pay secret dues.

3 Secret societies, poor whiskey, and poor preaching keep the colored people's noses to the grindstone. Were it not for these three things, the colored people of the South would flourish beyond all our conception. LEWIS G. CLARK,

(George Harris of Uncle Tom's Cabin.)

NOTE—Mr. Clark helped bury Uncle Tom, having heard his last words. His owner, Tom Kennedy, of Garret county, Kentucky, had three charges against him, viz.:

1. Tom refused to act as plantation whipper.

2. He stole visits to his wife and children.

3. Having shod a horse and received a dollar for it, he went to slack the fires of a neglected coal pit to save his master's property, and failed to get the dollar to his owner that night. Being drunk, Kennedy killed him the next morning without allowing Tom (whose real name was Peet,) to explain. Tom's last words were: "Mamma, Ise goin'. Tell massa he needn't killed me ef he'd 'lowed me to explain. But if God'll forgive him, I will."

"HUMANUM GENUS."

These words begin and give name to the Encyclical Letter of Pope Leo XIII. Confederate General Albert Pike has written two replies to the Pope's letter. The last, in the Voice of Masonry for June, is an exceedingly able document, in which he recounts, with much historic learning, the crimes of the popedom in centuries past; doctrines and practices of horror and persecution and torture, which the present Romish church might be supposed to have outgrown, but for its insane doctrine of infallibility.

But it is one thing to convict popery, and quite another to justify the lodge. Let us lay these two systems side by side and compare them. The papacy is something more than thirteen hundred years old. Grand Lodge Masonry was born in 1717, but yesterday, compared with the date of popery; and, yet Masonry, like popery, has murdered its victims; with this difference, that the lodge has killed its heretics under cover of night and sworn concealment, while Rome held her auto de fes in the sight of the world. Rome burned men in an age of darkness; while Pritchard and Priest were assassinated by Masons in 1730. The author of "Jachin and Boaz" had his throat cut from ear to ear about the year 1770. Livingston, of New York, and Noah Smith, of Manchester, Vt., were murdered about 1798, one for republishing "Jachin and Boaz," and the other for admitting it was true. William Michener, near Philadelphia, revealed Masonry and was murdered. Loren Simonds, of Albany, made one or more Masons clandestinely and was murdered in 1809. William Miller was murdered in Belfast, Ireland, in an execution lodge, for saying "Jachin and Boaz" was true; Oliver Gavet, made a Mason contrary to Masonic law, disappeared mysteriously in 1824. Joab Hunter, after Morgan's disclosures, spoke too freely about them, was summoned to the lodge, and returned to his family a corpse. The Masons said he died in a fit. There was a black circle around his neck which they explained by saying he fell with his neck on the back of a chair!

But the space of a single article fails us to notice David Brownlee, murdered near Monmouth, Ill., where his children now live; of Artemus Kennedy, Knight Templar, who seceded in February, 1829, was found in Milton river, February, 1830, the two or three men last with him, and who allured him from his bake house, fled. The Grand Duke of Tuscany took measures to suppress the lodge and died suddenly. So did the Emperor Alexander of Russia in 1825, and his death was attributed by Masons in this country, to Masonic vengeance for suppressing the lodge. And the story of Morgan, and his long agony and final death, because, as he said, "I owe to my country an exposure of her dangers," and acted upon that honorable conviction, is familiar to all intelligent Americans.

These are but a few instances of Masonic murders for infidelity to the secret inquisition of the order which have crept out through the loop-holes of the lodge. And from the secret cut-throat oath of the Apprentice, to the "year and day" sentence of the Templar, with his human skull libation, the whole damning system is one prolonged contrivance to sear the human conscience, and familiarize the mind to deeds of blood. And, be it noticed, while the tortures of Rome belong to the dark ages, these Masonic persecutions and tortures belong to our age of Republican light.

But our "Sublime Sovereign Grand Commander of the Scottish Rite, Southern Jurisdiction," indicts his holiness not only for murdering his members for violating the by-laws of his Grand Lodge, but he charges Leo with opposition to "Constitutional Government" and the "Republics of the world." (See Voice of Masonry, p. 500).

But did not this same Albert Pike raise, initiate, and swear into the Federal Lodge, No. 1, Washington, D. C., a corpse of Indian officers for his two regiments to tomahawk our wounded soldiers on the battle-field of Pea Ridge? And was he not practicing this Indian torture upon our troops to overthrow our Republic, and exchange "constitutional government" for an "empire whose corner-stone was to be American slavery, the vilest that ever saw the sun?"

Yet, Gen. Pike, in this same article, lest he should be suspected of favoring Protestant Christianity, brings in New England (he was born in Massachusetts) guilty of murdering Quakers; Calvin, Servetus; and Kirk and Claverhouse, of the Covenanters. But the last two were but executing the mandates of the Stuarts, who overthrew the English Commonwealth, by the aid of Masonry, which the second Charles, who died a thrice perjured Papist, called "The Royal Art," because that by its instrumentality, mainly, he was raised to the throne, and monarchy restored to England. (Rebold, His. of Masonry in Europe, p. 54.)

Yet with his rebellion record, and with this history of Rebold's staring him in the face in a book dedicated to all the lodges in America and in Europe, Gen. Pike is not ashamed to represent Masonry as the friend of free government. Nay, in this very article now under review, though dissenting from French atheism, Pike says: "We will not forget that the Freemasonry of our Rite and of the French Rite, has always been the Apostle of civil and religious liberty." Yet "our" (Scottish) "Rite" swore in about fifty Indians in a lodge a few blocks from where he now lives, which Indians were to help raise two regiments of their red brethren to induce them to fight the government which had fed them; the flag which had sheltered them; and to aid in destroying our Republic, the last hope of free government on earth!

"Oh, Shame, where is thy blush?"

This same friend of free government, who fought to overthrow it, was but acting out the spirit and principle of Masonry which attacks government wherever it exists, whatever that government is, monarchy or republic, and seeks to control it.

This same strange man in this reply to the Pope, states with clearness the religion of the lodge, which puts heathenism and Mormonism on a level with Christianity, in theory, but in practice prefers heathenism. He says (p. 504): "One" (faith) "is in no wise, in the eye of Masonry, superior to another." That is to say, the worship of a horse in Spain, of an ox in Egypt, of a monkey in Hindostan, and a bug or worm in Africa, is just as good a "faith" as that of our Bible! Yet this man is the head Mason in the United States; and of fourteen large M. E. churches in Washington, the pastors of thirteen of them were Masons a year ago; and Byron Sunderland, of the First Presbyterian church, where President Cleveland worships, is a Knight Templar, having drunk "the cup of devils" from a skull! These, these are the disciples and followers of Gen. Albert Pike, who has twelve huge manuscript volumes of Asiatic heathenism translated by himself; and which he prefers to the Bible, on which witnesses are sworn in our Supreme Court on Capitol Hill, and on which our Presidents lay their hands when sworn into office. Surely the religion of Washington City is struck with leprosy. And if the wrath of God does not come on this nation "to the uttermost," it will be because speedily averted by prayer, fasting, and repentance.

MAINE LAW AND THE G. A. R.

The national gathering of the Grand Army of the Republic last week at Portland, Maine, will be remembered long for its open and inexcusable attack upon the cherished traditions and laws of the State. A national meeting of the Grand Army without the presence and predominating influence of General Logan and his ambitious wife would be an anomaly. The prospective candidate was early on the ground to receive the homage of an enthusiastic order. As he rode in the procession he received an ovation from men who would find it difficult to point out the reason of his popularity from his public acts. Unlike the late standard-bearer in the Republican party, who could lead men through measures of State policy, General Logan has nothing as a public man in his favor but the reputation of a good fighter in the war, in politics, and in the Fitz-John Porter case—and he understands how to work his lodge affiliations for a good profit.

In the secret executive session of the National Encampment it was reported that the order four years ago had a membership of only 70,000. On March 31, 1884, there were 5,026 posts, and 269,684 members, while the present membership is 287,637. Large as these numbers may be it is encouraging to read that 54,292 members were suspended during the past year, an evidence that there is too much native sense and practical piety among many of the members to allow them to remain in a secret organization with even the popular pretensions of the Grand Army. The badge trade has been a profitable one during the year, 50,000 being sold for $6,630. The relations of the order and the Roman Catholic hierarchy have been harmonized during the year, and good Catholics will be allowed hereafter to become members. The Commander-in-chief deprecated the participation of the organization as such in politics, and urged that Decoration day should not be "desecrated by devotion to recreation and pleasure." He also said, as is reported:

"I am opposed to the perpetuation of the Grand Army, believing the mission of our great comradeship will have been fulfilled when the last comrade has joined the final muster-out."

An assurance that this would be the definite resolution of the order would remove many suspicions from the public mind. But there is none. The addition of subsidiary orders for women and children, the advantages presented for political ambition, and the power and influence already gained by the organization which less scrupulous leaders than Mr. Kountz will take care shall not be diminished,—these and other considerations we might mention make such a limitation very improbable. The very election of General Burdette, of Washington, as the national Commander forbids us to entertain the idea. He was urged by his friends because his services would be useful as a lobbyist, though the recommendation was confessedly disgraceful and compromising to the order.

But the significance of this meeting is in the collision of the order with the laws so long and faithfully maintained by the good citizens of Maine against the liquor traffic. A day or two before the meeting of the Grand Army the Law and Order League of Portland, (not the prohibition wing of the temperance army, but that represented by Dr. Crosby and Mrs. Foster,) issued a circular to the members of the order promising to seize all consignments of liquor to the Encampment. The visitors were outraged; prominent officers of the G. A. R. declared their intention to keep possession of and use such consignments. Regarding themselves insulted, a protest was issued on Monday from Newport, Vt., signed by the departments of Ohio, Tennessee, George, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas, Iowa, (the temperance States!) Colorado, Minnesota, Oregon, Dakota, Missouri, Nebraska and Michigan, claiming the privileges of guests who should be unmolested by police supervision. Nevertheless, some seizures are said to have been made; but the temperance people seem to have been overawed, for the press reports of Wednesday say: "Whiskey and beer have been all day as free as the flowers of May." The protest indicates that the Grand Army Encampments, like the Knight Templar Conclaves are expected by the members of the order generally to be places of conviviality and drunkenness, in spite of all law and authority forbidding the use of intoxicants. The indignant words of the Daily News, quoted elsewhere, are just and reasonable. Let the secret orders that anticipate a debauch at their meetings avoid prohibition States and towns. And let the war on lodge and liquor be pushed until organizations which patronize either evil shall find no place in America where their gatherings will be welcome.

—In preparation for the "Glorious Fourth" the Birmingham Free Press publishes a new declaration —of independence from the secret lodges. It would make old George the IV., stubborn as he was, almost an Anti-mason to read it.

—While commending other people we must say a word for the Cynosure also. Boys and men will find as much satisfaction in reading the poetry suitable for Independence day, as in spending the same amount of time letting off fire-crackers or shouting for the country.

—Bro. M. L. Worcester, of Kingston, Ill., in a late trip to Dakota gave his labors to a generous distribution of tracts. He was much encouraged in this work, as it gave him frequent opportunities for conversation, the effect of which will not be lost.

—Our aged brother Increase Leadbetter, of Auburndale, Mass., sends five dollars to help Bro. Dissette in his State work. "I want it to go to our persecuted standard-bearer," he writes.

—The late return of Rev. Joseph T. Cooper, D. D, to the editorial care of the Evangelical Repository in Pittsburg, is an agreeable acknowledgement on the part of the United Presbyterian board of his ability and taste. It is also an evidence that the distinct and well maintained position of the magazine on Christian reforms will be held unswervingly.

—The Ohio State Convention will meet in Mitchell & Ervin's Hall, Cedarville, Greene county, Tuesday next, July 7th, at 7:30 P. M., and continue through Wednesday. This will be a most important meeting for the reform in Ohio, not only renewing the battle, "which for a space has failed," but taking it up with tenfold energy, we hope. A fine beginning is already made under the devoted efforts of the State Secretary, Rev. S. A. George, of Mansfield, for the State lecture work. Such determination and faith as he has shown is sure promise of success. Let there be hundreds at Cedarville to share that labor and victory with him.

—The Telescope last week says the Cynosure is pleased more and more with the new law of the United Brethren church. This is a serious mistake and misrepresents the opinions of the Cynosure for the encouragement of the friends of the lodge in that denomination. This paper did say that on reflection there was more hope of the United Brethren church than at first appeared; but this was in view of the whole action at Fostoria Conference, not the nugatory, eviscerated regulation adopted there for the rule of the church, which is an invitation to every member to interpret the character of secret societies according to their own notion.

OHIO'S CALL.

Attention, all who love the light and hate darkness! An anti-secret convention will be held at Cedarville, Green county, Ohio, beginning Tuesday, July 7, at 7:30 p. m. The main object of the convention is to reorganize the State Association and take steps to make our opposition to the Secret Empire more effective. The importance of this meeting cannot be overestimated. Let every friend of the cause be present if possible. Rev. J. P Stoddard and other able speakers will be present.

S. A. GEORGE, Secretary O. C. A.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

An adjourned meeting of the Board was held Monday afternoon. Rev. Joseph Travis was elected chairman, and Alexander Thomson, secretary. The bond of the treasurer was approved. Thomas A. Gault, Wm. Moerdyk and Joseph Travis were appointed finance committee; L. N. Stratton, O. F. Lumry and J. L. Barlow committee on publications; and W. I. Phillips, J. P. Stoddard and Alexander Thomson committee on the building. The expenses of the annual meeting and of the delegates to the Augustana Synod were ordered paid. The salaries of the officers of the Association and Cynosure editors were continued. The needs of the lecture field were discussed earnestly and the subject was referred to a committee and the board adjourned till next Monday at 10 o'clock.

THE AUGUSTANA SYNOD.

LETTER FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

ROCKFORD, Ill., June 25, 1885.

It has been my good fortune to make the acquaintance of some of the grand men who compose the Augustana Synod of North America, now holding in this city its 24th annual session and celebrating its quarter centennial anniversary. I find this body without exception in hearty sympathy with the position of the National Christian Association in opposition to the lodge and on temperance questions, and ready to co-operate in efforts to overthrow the "Secret Empire." They have given every opportunity and granted every favor asked as far as consistent with the great amount of business they have in hand, as the pastors and delegates gathered to represent an aggregate membership of over 100,000 souls.

The services have thus far, with few exceptions, been conducted in the Swedish language, and I am not able to give the facts and figures as I should like to do. The discussions have been animated and orderly, and the president, Rev. E. Carlsen, has shown himself a skillful presiding officer. At the secretary's desk sits Rev. S. P. A. Lindahl, of Galesburg, an efficient scribe, and long and favorably known as a staunch opponant of the secret orders.

President T. N. Hasselquist, who was, I believe, one of the founders of Augustana College and Theological Seminary, and whose wise administration and counsels have had very much to do in bringing that institution forward to the prosperous and important position it now occupies, is prominent among the venerable members of the Synod. He inquired earnestly after the senior editor of the Cynosure, related some of the reminiscences of their early acquaintance and wished to be affectionately remembered to his esteemed brother in Christ. His lengthy address before the Synod was presented with vigor, and said by some who could understand the language in which it was written, to be very able, and appropriate to the occasion.

The tall form of Rev. Sjoblom, surmounted by his pleasant but earnest face, is a conspicuous feature of every gathering, for Bro. S. seems to be a "minute man," always on hand and ready for the emergency.

Rev. C. A. Swenson, editor and pastor at Lindsborg, Kan., is a quiet but constant worker, and I judge from appearances one of the most influential young men in the Synod. He has a fine physique, and is the very picture of health. He has been actively engaged against the secret lodges in Kansas, and wants to co-operate with some suitable man in a series of meetings in his State and Nebraska. Rev. Hill, of Wahoo, Neb., and Folgerstrom, of Omaha, are both vigorous in the prime of a well developed, Christian manhood, and I suggest that these three brethren be a committee to arrange a series of meetings beginning at Wahoo, Oct. 27th, next.

Rev. M. Ranseen, president of the Illinois Evangelical Lutheran Synod, is a fluent and impressive speaker, as I infer from the close attention he commands when on the floor of the house. Pastors Evald, Bowman, Nibelius, and Vibelius have each put me under personal obligation for their kindness.

In this gathering of over 300 who have come up to this annual feast, there are many of whom I would gladly speak, but must pause for want of space with the mention of one more, to whom not only myself, but every member of the Synod, is indebted for wise forethought, unceasing care and unremitting toil for the general comfort and good of the Synod. I refer to Pastor Gustav Peters, whose fidelity to the truth and self-sacrificing endeavors have resulted in the erection of the magnificent structure in which the Synod meets, and which will long remain a worthy monument to the faith and works of a devoted pastor and the generous flock gathered about him. May the Lord reward this body of believers with his richest blessing.

By somebody's blunder I am announced in the city papers to speak this evening, before the Synod on secret societies. The time assigned is 2 o'clock to-morrow, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard is to give the address. I have made the correction through the papers, and hope that even this reportorial blunder will work for good. Over 3,000 tracts in the Swedish language have been put in circulation, and the request to Joseph Cook is being numerously signed. While in this city Providence has brought some of the dignitaries of the craft in my way, and I have been learning and teaching the mysteries of Freemasonry ever since I came to Rockford.

Pastor Peters has completed a service of twenty-one and a half years on this field, and is on hand early and late looking after the comfort of his many guests. He has been a conspicuous and active worker during the period of the almost marvelous growth in the Swedish population of Rockford, to the present number of about 5,000, or one-forth the entire population. They have a still larger proportion in churches, being seven to nine of the sixteen organizations meeting statedly in the their own houses for worship. The first Swedish congregation was organized in 1854. The first house of worship, a wooden structure, 28x45 feet, was erected in 1856. The second, of brick, 35x95, was dedicated in 1869. The Synod is now in session not only in the largest and finest church house in Rockford, but of the Swedish connection in America. It is 120x80, of brick, and centrally located. Its seating capacity is 1,850. The church has a membership of 1,050, and a Sabbath school roll of between five and six hundred. A spacious gallery encircles the entire main audience room, and a $3,100 organ, standing just back of the pulpit, gives ready response to the touch of skilled fingers. The wants of pastor and Christian workers have been anticipated and ample accommodations for study, committees, and Sabbath-school classes are provided. If the spiritual life and activity of this church is commensurate with its facilities and opportunities there is before it a great and glorious future.

J. P. STODDARD.

ENCOURAGEMENT IN CANADA.

BERLIN, Ont., June 18, 1885.

I am on my way to Elmira, Waterloo county, Ontario, to give my first lecture on Odd-fellowship; and at the summons of Rev. A. R. Shutz, of the Evangelical Lutheran church. He has, by God's blessing, saved his church from Masonry. They will have no more to do with the order, and ask me to come on.

On the 11th I lectured at Eglinton, a suburb of the city of Toronto. It was known as "Muddy Little York," when Capt. Wm. Morgan brewed ale and made a little fortune, only to see it vanish before his eyes, in the fire that consumed his worldly all.

Mr. Robt. Jones, a wealthy farmer and class-leader, asked my help against the Freemasons. He had seen my name in the Christian Cynosure. This was a beginning. Mr. Jones has sustained a severe accident which he fears will render him helpless for life. When he could not labor on his large and beautiful farm, he has turned his time, money, and talents to account in the cause of Anti-masonry.

His sister, who keeps house for him, is both intelligent and zealous in distributing and circulating tracts. Converts are being made by them from Masonry, and the church is aroused.

Mr. Loveless, a member of the Free Methodist church, came to our meeting and arranged that I should stay over and give an address at the Free Methodist chapel which he has fitted up on his model farm, as no other place could be had. I gave them a history of Freemasonry. Hope it will do good. Mr. Jones also addressed them ably.

JAMES DONALDSON.

THE HOME.

MY REFUGE.

[These lines were written by Ellen L. Goreh, a Brahmin of the highest caste, adopted daughter of W. T. Stone, Bradford, England.]

In the secret of his presence,
How my soul delights to hide!
Oh, how precious are the lessons
Which I learn at Jesus's side!

Earthly cares can never vex me,
Neither trials lay me low,
For when Satan comes to tempt me,
To the "secret place" I go.

When my soul is faint and thirsty,
'Neath the shadow of his wing
There is cool and pleasant shelter,
And a fresh and crystal spring;

And my Saviour rests beside me,
As we hold communion sweet;
If I tried I could not utter,
What he says when thus we meet.

Only this I know: I tell him
All my doubts and griefs and fears;
Oh, how patiently he listens,
And my drooping soul he cheers.

Do you think he ne'er reproves me?
What a false friend he would be,
If he never, never told me
Of the sins which he must see.

Do you think that I could love him
Half so well, or as I ought,
If he did not tell me plainly
Of each sinful word and thought?

Oh, no! He is very faithful,
And that makes me trust him more;
For I know that he does love me,
Though he wounds me very sore.

Would you like to know the sweetness
Of the secret of the Lord?
Go and hide beneath his shadow,
This shall then be your reward;

And whene'er you leave the silence
Of that happy meeting-place,
You must mind and bear the image
Of your Master in your face.

You will surely lose the blessing
And the fullness of your joy,
If you let dark clouds distress you
And your inward peace destroy.

You may always be abiding,
If you will, at Jesus's side;
In the secret of his presence
You may every moment hide.

—Times of Refreshing.

TO LIVE IS ONE THING, TO DIE IS ANOTHER.

BY J. F. AVERY, EDITOR "BUDS AND BLOSSOMS."

Listen whilst I tell the dying experience of a young man. Born in a village of Devon, England, amid the scenes of a country farmstead, was W. Sparks. His early life was spent among the lowing of cattle and the daily round of farm life. Blessed with kind parents and friends he was blithesome as the squirrel that gamboled in the copse hard by, as free from care as the sparrows that burrowed deep into the thatch of the old barn. His cup of boyish delights was full to overflowing, and doubtless he said in after years, as many others have said, as they paused in the hurry and strife of life to watch the "children going home from school," "Happy days of childhood, how soon ye pass away." As he merged into manhood, and looked upon school-days as things of the past, his stalwart frame and manly feelings led him to launch out with true diligence into the trade and occupation of his choice; soon he found—or fancied he did—a country town too dull, and wishing for improvement he "gathered all together" and started for the great metropolis, the mart where all nations buy and sell. Here he still continued to push his way onwards and, commercially speaking, upwards; being bright and intelligent, and not less diligent, his hopes and prospects for the future expanded, all seemed fair to fulfill his ambition, which was to become a salesman in a firm where money would be liberally bestowed.

But his golden harvest received a check; a withering blight came to his fond expectations. For that young man with ruddy cheeks and broad shoulders found amid his toil and labor that even his strength was only mortal. Others hinted but he heeded it not—the paleness and wasting were nothing, only a little rest was needful. So he took a trip to the country-home, full of aspirations for the futnre.

Rest and fresh air somewhat recruiting his strength, he again returns to toil towards the goal; once more he seeks the place of childhood, he knew not that it had lost its power to bind his shattered energies, and as fond friends daily made anxious inquiries, his reply was, "I am better; shall soon be well." Although he tried to deceive himself, friends and doctors knew his time was short. His delight was to tell of the busy scenes of a city life, and to lay and draw plans for the future; dreaming, like a child, of fairy palaces and greatness which can never be grasped. Strange one so quick in business should be so dull to comprehend that his stock and capital was being daily depleted, and that his earthly house of this tabernacle was dissolving, and crumbling in the death grip of consumption. His uncle, a follower of Jesns, felt that he must no longer trifle with one so near to eternity. After long trying to obtain his ear, and to turn him from earthly to heavenly subjects, at last he said, "I fear you must soon die." These words struck hard, the spell was broken, the dream of years was gone, the strong spirit seemed to break, and then the young man said, "I know it." "Are you prepared?" was the next anxious inquiry ere the uncle departed. The young man sought his Bible, he read, and soon his carelessness gave place to a spirit of anxions inquiry, and he said, "What mnst I do to make it right?" Darkness filled his soul and terror seized hold of him. For although he had, as a nominal Christian, taught in the Sabbath-school, yet he knew not Jesus as the Enlightener, the true light of life and peace. Satan, the prince of darkness, had been so long in possession that he seemed determined not to let one so near dissolution escape. After many prayers and much searching the Word, light and peace drove out the darkness, night gave place to morning dawn, the power of Christ's atonement was realized, and he could say,

"I can believe, I now believe
That Jesus died for me,
That on the cross he shed his blood,
From sin to set me free."

Feeling that,

"If all the world his Saviour knew,
All the world would love him too."

He resolved to see his old companions and to tell them of God's great love. For he could now say,

"My old companions, fare-you-well,
I will not go with you to hell,
I long with Jesus Christ to dwell;
Will you go?"

His ungodly relatives' and friends' company he wished to dispense with, and to speak and learn from the uncle, who, as God's messenger first sought to lead him to life and truth, was his delight. The quick, hard breathings convinced him and others that his time was short. As weakness increased, again darkness gathered round his soul, comfort fled, his room seemed filled with terror, he could not remain but came down stairs, when his uncle came in haste to see him, and prevailed upon him to return to bed. After conversation and prayer, when about to depart, a smile played upon the sick youth's face, he said, "It is well—all right." Ere morning light his soul had fled.

Reader, can you say it is all right, or are you seeking wealth and fortune, to the neglecting of your soul's salvation? If so, you have need to cry, "Woe is me, for I am undone."

Bnt, "why will ye die" and suffer loss? Young men and maidens, seek health and wealth aright and you shall find, "length of days," "gold seven times purified," "fullness of joy and pleasures for evermore." But this treasure is not of earth, it is the gift of God, through Christ, who said, "He that seeketh findeth."

Halifax, N. S.

ALONE WITH GOD.

In every instance the man who prevails in prayer is the man who is alone with God as he prays; Abraham leaves Sarah behind when he pleads with Him for Sodom; and if he fails, it is because he ceases to ask before God ceases to grant. Moses is by himself besides the bush in the wilderness. Joshua is alone when the Lord comes to him as an armed man. Gideon and Jephthah are by themselves when commissioned to save Israel. Once does Elijah raise a child from the dead, and Elisha does the same, and in each case not even the mothers come in, while the prophet, alone with God, asks and receives.

So of Ezekiel, so of Daniel.

Although others are present, Saul journeying to Damascus, is alone with Christ. Cornelius is praying by himself when the angel flashes upon his solitude; nor is any one with Peter npon the housetop when he is prepared to go to the Gentiles for the first time. One John is alone in the wilderness, another John is by himself in Patmos, when nearest God. It is when alone under his fig-tree, in prayer, that Jesus sees Nathaniel. All religious biography, our own closest communion and success with God, show what Christ means, when, as if it were the only way to pray, he says, "And thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly."—Wm. M. Baker.

NEARNESS TO CHRIST.

Not long ago I read a sketch from the life of one who had been a slave of rum, which showed how he was released from his chains by the continual presence of either his wife or child, who was constantly with him for thirteen years. In their united effort as a family to overcome the former mastery of that cruel monster "strong drink," it was found an expedient remedy for the father and husband to have by his side, by day and night, when on duty and when at rest, either one of those most beloved and most immediately affected by a return to his former inebriate life. Hence there was not an hour of the day for all this period of years in which the gladsome presence of either his loving wife or affectionate child was not immediately warning and cheering and encouraging him. It had its desired effect; the father and husband became a man again.

Ought not this to encourage those who are striving to overcome all manner of evil habits, such as still cling to the Christian and give him so much annoyance? If man can do so much for man, cannot God do more? Christ has promised his children never to leave them nor forsake them, and we should ever bear in mind this continual presence. We cannot go astray if we always remember that he is with us. We can no more sin deliberately with his loving eyes upon us than could the man raise the intoxicating cup to his lips in the almost hallowed presence of the wife and child who were so dear unto him. Then how important that we follow Christ closely, not "afar off" as Peter did, who in this condition denied his Lord and Master. How easy to bear the petty cares and trials of every-day life when Christ is by our side upholding and strengthening us! Brother, sister, are you downcast because of trials, temptations, and troubles? Ask Jesus to draw you near to his side, and then remain there. There alone is safety and joy. Let the young Christian now starting out in his way to heaven remain close to Jesus. Daily and hourly realize that he is with you, and you will be saved from many a slip.—Am. Messenger.

MISS SMILEY'S LESSON.—In the summer of 1879 I descended the Rhigi with one of the most faithful of Swiss guides. Beyond the services of the day, he gave me, unconsciously, a lesson for life. His first care was to put my wraps and other burdens upon his shoulders. In doing so he called for all; but I chose to keep back a few for special care. I soon found them no little hinderance to the freedom of my movements; bnt still I would not give them up until my guide, returning to where I was resting for a moment, kindly but firmly demanded that I should give him everything but my Alpenstock. Putting them with the utmost care upon his shoulders, with a look of intense satisfaction, he led the way. And now, with freedom, I found that I could make double speed with double safety. Then a voice spake inwardly: "Oh, foolish, wilful heart! hast thou, indeed, given up thy last burden? Thou hast no need to carry them." I saw it all in a flash; and then, as I leaped lightly from rock to rock down the steep mountain-side, I said within myself: "And ever thus will I follow Jesus, my Guide, my Burden-bearer. I will rest all my care npon him, for he careth for me."

THE SACRED TENTH.

"How much for missions?" The person addressed was a young man only twenty years old. His pastor was the questioner. The young man held up both his hands as much as to say ten dollars. "You do not mean ten dollars," said the pastor, "it is too much for you." "Yes, I do," said he, "I mean ten dollars," and so his name was announced. The next day the pastor went over to see his mother about it, and said to her, "I think Frank gave too much yesterday." "Let him alone," said the mother, "let him alone. Before he was converted and joined the church, many a time we did not know where our next meal was to come from, and now we have all we need. He provides for us. He gives one-tenth of his income to God's cause. He has vowed to do that. Let him alone." Boys who give to missions do not neglect widowed mothers.

TOM BROWN'S FOURTH OF JULY.

Tom Brown was an urchin just eight summers old,
But the heart of the wee little man was as bold
As if he were twice that age,
And his muscles were strong and his blue eyes were bright,
And his brave little heart was as merry and light
As a bird let loose from its cage.

Now Tom had been reading, as every boy should,
Of the glorious deeds of the brave and the good—
Of Washington, Warren and Lee;
And the Fourth of July—it was now near at hand—
Was the day the glad sound had rung out through the land,
"We are free! we are free! we are free!"

Now Tom got to thinking how grand it would be,
Like the patriot heroes he loved, to be free—
'Twas too bad to be kept so at home.
There were lots of nice boys in the streets just below,
And they had such good times! He did wish he could go
And the wide world along with them roam.

Then all on a sudden, one morning in bed,
A brilliant idea popped right into his head,
And he laughed out aloud in his glee:
On the Fourth of July, at the breaking of day,
When Liberty triumphed, he'd up and away,
To dwell independent and free.

And so Master Tommy, when no one was by,
Slipped out through the gate on that Fourth of July.
And thus was he "armed and equipped:"
Three packs of fire-crackers, a long stick of punk,
A huge slice of gingerbread, plenty of "spunk,"
And a dime in his hand tightly gripped.

Our hero marched on through the din and the heat
Till he entered at last, by mere chance, a side street,
Where a crowd of rough boys were at play.
'Twas a tenement quarter, low, dirty, and mean,
And the rabble of gamins, hard-featured and keen,
Were keeping "the Fourth" in their way.

Ah, those sharp-witted Arabs! how quickly they knew
What sort of a boy Tom was! Around him they drew.
And to chaff him began "Hullo, Bub!
Does yer mar know ye're out? Where'd ye git yer nice clo'es?"
"Oh, ain't he a daisy!"—so the mocking talk goes—
"Say! give us a hunk o'yer grub."

In a jiffy his packs of fire-crackers were grabbed.
His pockets were rifled, his gingerbread "nabbed,"
And his clean clothes were all in a muss.
Then they daubed him with mud till he looked like a fright,
And shouted with glee at his pitiful plight,
"Now, sonny, ye're like one of us."

But Tom had the "spirit of 'seventy-six,"
And finding himself in so sorry a fix,
Struck out like a man, might and main.
But the battle was sorely unequal; in spite
Of his stout little fists and high courage, the fight
Must have proved in the end all in vain.

Just then rose a cry, "Cop's a-comin!" Away
Sped the fleet-footed Arabs like night before day,
And Tom stood alone in the street.
"Look a-here, you young seamp—Oh! are you Tommy Brown?
I'm in luck. Why the whole force is scourin' the town,
And here you are, right on my beat!"

Poor Tom? What a pitiful sight to behold
Was he—not a bit like "heroes of old"—
As homeward he limped, sad and sore!
His face was all swollen, his right arm was hurt,
His jacket was torn and bespattered with dirt,
And he'd ne'er felt so wretched before.

And when, a warm bath and a poultice applied,
He lay in his bed, with dear mother beside,
Tom drowsily said, "now I see
It may have been good for the heroes of old
To be free, for they were men, mighty and bold,
But it is'nt a good thing for me."

"No, Tom," said his mother; "mistaken again,
True freedom is good both for boys and for men,
As your heroes—and mine—clearly saw;
But they knew—and the truth is worth learning, my boy—
The freedom that's good for us all to enjoy
Is Liberty governed by Law."

—Thos. O. Conant in Law and Order.

"VIENNA ROLLS."

All of you are familiar with the appearance of those crescent-shaped rolls so often seen upon our breakfast tables. How many, I wonder, have ever heard the curious legend which, it is said, gave rise to their manufacture? Here it is:

A great many years ago there lived in the city of Vienna a worthy baker, whose trade, though small, afforded a comfortable support for his little family.

At the time of our story there was war between the Turks and the Austrians, and the city had been for weeks in a state of seige. Hemmed in on all sides by the Saracen armies, it was impossible to obtain food from without, and the supply within was rapidly failing.

The people were in utter despair. If they did not surrender they must die of famine; while if they did they could expect no mercy from the cruel Turks, and would certainly be massacred. Prayers were daily offered in the churches for deliverance, but it seemed as if nothing could avert the dreadful fate that must soon overtake them.

So the days passed on.

One evening our baker was in the cellar kneading the dough (and what a little lump it was) that was to furnish bread for himself and his neighbors on the morrow. He was intent upon his work, when suddenly he was roused by a slight rattling sound, which seemed to be in the cellar, and to come and die out at regular and short intervals. He stopped his task, listened carefully, and tracing it to a distant corner soon discovered its cause.

On the floor stood a little toy drum belonging to one of his boys, and upon its tightly stretched head several marbles dancing about produced the sounds he had noticed.

"This is curious," said the baker; and he watched the drum closely. Every second or two the drum-head would vibrate, and the little marbles would rattle upon it as if alive. Putting his ear to the earth, he heard what seemed a distant tapping or hammering, and he noticed that at each faint tap the dancing of the marbles repeated itself.

For a long time he could not account for the raps, until it suddenly flashed upon him that they were caused by the steady blows of a pick, and that the Turks were doing what had been much feared—they were undermining the city.

There might still be time to defeat their plans.

To tell of the difficulty the honest man had in getting the authorities to listen to and believe his tale, of the sneers and mockings he met with everywhere, would make a long story. It is enough to say that his firm belief in his own idea, and the earnest efforts he made to impress this belief upon others, at last reached the general in command of the city, and an investigation was ordered, which proved that the baker's suspicion was correct.

His timely information enabled the Austrians to construct a countermine, which at the proper time was fired and exploded, and the Turks were put to flight. So the city was saved. When quiet was restored, and thanksgiving offered for the victory, the baker was sent for, and ushered into the presence of the emperor himself.

"My worthy friend," said the emperor, "we owe our deliverance, under God, to you. Name your reward."

"Sire," answered the baker, as his face flushed with pride, "I ask but one thing. A poor fellow like me is not fit for riches nor rank, and I want neither. Grant me but this one privilege, your majesty, and I am content: Let me, and my children after me, henceforth make our bread in the form of that crescent which has so long been our terror, so that every day those who eat it may be reminded that the God of the Christians is greater than the Allah of the infidel."

The baker's request was granted. An imperial order was at once issued conferring upon him and his descendants the sole right to make bread in the shape of the Turkish emblem, and forbidding any one, under heavy penalties, from ever infringing this right.—Harper's Young People.

TEMPERANCE.

APPETITE.

No man ever drank rum with a prayer to Jesus on his lips. A great many claim to have the appetite removed. If you ask me if I have, I will answer, I don't know. Desire is all gone, but I don't know if the appetite is or not, and I won't know! Heaven helping me I will never find out, for the only way to test it is to take a drink, and I advise you not to try it. I don't know what appetite is. It is a mysterious something we can't explain. Colonel Blank was a periodical drunkard. He would have a spree, then for a long time let it alone, then his shoulders would begin to twitch and jump, and his friends knew the appetite was coming on, and he would go off on a lengethened spree again. Finally he became a Christian, and every one rejoiced with his careful walk and consistent life.

He united with the church, and on a certain Sunday was to take his first communion. A friend was talking to one of the deacons on the day before the communion service, and spoke of the Colonel's conversion. "Yes," replied the church officer, "he is to commune with us to-day for the first time."

"Where do you get your wine for sacramental purposes, deacon?"

"Oh, at any of the stores."

"What!" exclaimed the questioner, starting back aghast, "you don't mean to tell me you use the wine of commerce, the alcoholic, intoxicating wine, do you?"

"Why, yes; what harm?"

"I would not dare to do it; for God's sake don't let the Colonel have the cup to-day with that wine; pass him by any way; but don't let him touch his lips to it."

"Oh," replied the deacon, "the Colonel's a Christian now; it won't hurt him."

The hour for the administration came, and the Colonel was there with the rest; grateful friends were made happy with the sight, as he bowed there with tearful eyes for the first time in his life. The cup was passed, and the Colonel's turn came to taste the wine. He raised his head slowly, touched the cup with his hand and raised it reverently to his lips, tasting it, and started like a man affrighted, quivered from head to foot a half a second, and then clutching the glass drew it fiercely to his mouth; they tried to tear it away but in vain; nor would he release his hold, in spite of all their efforts, until the glass was empty. Before night he was drunk, and in ten days was dead!! He died in fearful torment. The appetite was not dead, but slumbering. —John B. Gough.

THE STRONGEST DRINK.

Water is the strongest drink. It drives mills; it is the drink of lions and horses, and Samson never drank anything else. Let young men be teetotalers if only for economy's sake. The beer money will soon buy a house. If what goes into the mash-tub went into the kneading-trough, families would be better fed and better taught. If what is spent in waste were only saved against a rainy day, workhouses would never be built. The man who spends his money with the publican, and thinks the landlord's bow and "How do ye do, my good fellow?" means true respect, is a poor simpleton. We do not light fires for the herring's comfort, but to roast him. Men do not keep pot-houses for laborer's good; if they do, they certainly miss their aim. Why, then, should people drink "for the good of the house?" If I spend my money for the good of any house, let it be my own, and not the landlord's. It is a bad well into which you must put water; and the beer-house is a bad friend, because it takes your all and leaves you nothing but headaches.

He who calls those his friends who let him sit and drink by the hour together is ignorant—very ignorant. Why, red lions and tigers, and eagles and vultures, are all creatures of prey, and why do so many put themselves within the power of their jaws and talons? Such as drink and live riotously, and wonder why their faces are so blotchy and their pockets so bare, would leave off wondering if they had two grains of wisdom. They might as well ask an elm tree for pears as look to loose habits for health and wealth. Those who go to the public-house for happiness climb the tree to find fish.—Spurgeon.

The importance of the liquor traffic in Paris may be judged from the fact that more than $12,500,000 is annually raised there by octroi duties on alcoholic drinks alone, and the consumption per head of population is as much as forty-five gallons of wine, a gallon and a half of spirits, and three gallons of beer. That the consumer, in Paris at least, has much to put up with in bad wine appears from the municipal laboratory report. Taking the month of June last, 552 specimens of wine were officially tested, only 113 were good, 39 were bitter or acid, 53 had an unpleasant taste, 129 were plastered, 132 had water added, and lastly, 86 had various mixtures added to them.

It is usually said that a man never becomes a drunkard after he is thirty years of age. But in the case of a Mr. Simpson, who seven years ago was a prominent commission merchant of Atlanta, Ga., with $40,000 on deposit in a bank, this rule does not hold. He suddenly took to drink, lost his property, alienated his friends, abused his family, and the other day was sent to jail as a drunken vagrant.

Now and then a criminal gets into Clerkenwell Prison, London, who is not a drunkard. The occurrence would seem to be somewhat rare, however; for the prison chaplain, who is presumably acquainted with the facts, declares that three-quarters of the twenty thousand persons who have been incarcerated in the prison during the year were confined for crimes directly or indirectly attributable to drink.

We do not pray God to change his will; but we believe that it is agreeable to his will that we should express our will, always in subordination to his will, in the assurance that somehow he will answer us.

LITERATURE.

OBITER DICTA. pp. 115. Price 40 cts. John B. Alden, Publisher, New York.

The novel yet very convenient and handsome exterior is the first attraction as the reader takes up this book ; the enigmatic title is next; and the title page without a hint of the author next. But whoever begins to read these essays on Carlyle, Truth-hunting, Actors, Mrs. Browning's Poetry, The Via Media, Falstaff, and a Rogue's Memoirs, will find their classic style, clear analysis, and wide range of historical and literary knowledge too attractive to lay aside for any ordinary reason. It is a refreshing, thought-provoking book, handy to slip in the pocket and easy to read during the first days of a summer jaunt.

A most useful little pocket volume, suggestively called "Look within for five thousand facts that everybody wants to know," is just issued by A. H. Andrews & Co., Chicago. It contains 75 pages of condensed information on Mechanics, Statistics, History, Medicine, Astronomy, Finance, Mythology, Education, Mathematics, The Bible, Politics, Agriculture, Religion, Science, Temperance, Trade, etc., etc., in fact there seems to be something for everybody and nothing that some one will not be glad to know. It is embellished with a number of colored diagrams, and is about the most valuable and complete pocket cyclopædia we have yet seen. The chart showing the relative growth of church membership and population in the United States is glaringly defective if Dr. Parkhurst is correct in the last North American Review. Price 15c.

The Library Magazine for July includes in a long and interesting table of contents: "Cuckoo Notes" by Maurice Thompson; "On Some Modern Abuses of Language" by Edward A. Freeman; "A Study of Ghost Stories" by Andrew Lang; "On Leaves" by Sir John Lubbock; "What Dreams are Made of" by Andrew Wilson; "Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty" by Albert Gorden; "Planting Trees in School Grounds" by F. B. Hough; and a discussion of the communistic movements in America by E. V. Smalley, who writing evidently as a freethinker or infidel, falsely includes a large proportion of the working men in the same category of unbelief and darkness. The brief articles on Current Thought are a popular feature lately introduced by the publisher, John B. Alden, New York.

St. Nicholas for July is a patriotic number, opening with an interesting sketch by Edward Eggleston, entitled "A School of Long Ago," which shows us the odd methods in which some of our forefathers gained their education; while in "Washington's First Correspondence" we can read the first letter ever written by the Father of his Country ; "Among the Law-makers" contains a description of the organization of our National Government from the time that the bell of Carpenter's Hall rang out the good news of the Declaration of Independence; and in "A School Afloat," Ensign Gibbons, of the Navy, and Charles Barnard explain how patriotic American boys are made into practical American sailors.

General Longstreet, in his article on "The Seven Days' Fighting about Richmond," in the July Century, after discussing the Confederate leaders, says, "Without doubt the greatest man of rebellion times, the one matchless among forty millions for the peculiar difficulties of the period, was Abraham Lincoln."

In the World Travel Gazette will be found a useful collection of maps and tables of routes from New York for summer excursionists.

THE CHURCHES.

—Rev. E. W. Hicks, for some time pastor of the Baptist church in Sandwich, Ill., has lately removed to Toulon in the same State.

—Nashville is deeply stirred under the preaching of the noted revivalist, Sam Jones. People gather in crowds of six or eight hundred as early as six o'clock in the morning to hear the Word. The Tabernacle, holding four or five thousand, is crowded an hour before the time of preaching, and thousands go away unable to gain entrance. Such a state of things makes one think of the days of Whitefield and Wesley.

—The General Synod of the Lutheran church, in session at Harrisburg, decided to undertake a mission among the Hebrews in Chicago, to be under the supervision of the Board of Home Missions.

—Many new chapels in connection with the work of the London Missionary Society in Madagascar were built last year. A marked result of the aggressions of France was to deepen the spiritual life of the people, leading them to fuller reliance on God. Regular religious services were kept up among the soldiers at the seat of war by evangelists and preachers in the camps.

—A church consisting wholly of Japanese members has been organized by the Presbytery of San Francisco; 16 united by letter and 10 on profession of their faith.

—Influenced by a suggestion of Mr. Moody when here early in the spring, the committee of Chicago Avenue church has arranged for a series of evangelistic meetings through the month of July. The pastor, Rev. C. F. Goss, will be assisted by Major Whittle, Mr. C. M. Morton, Colonel Clark, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, and others. The meetings will begin next Sabbath.

—Dr. Samuel David Ferguson was consecrated a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church last Wednesday in Grace church, New York. Bishop Ferguson is the first colored member of the American House of Bishops. He was born in Charleston, S. C., forty-three years ago, and emigrated to Africa with his parents when six years old. He was educated altogether in the mission schools in that country, and was ordained in 1865. He will go to Cape Palmas in about two weeks. His official title will be "Missionary Bishop of Cape Palmas and Adjoining Parts."

—Old Andover's Divinity School—long the centre of Orthodoxy for New England—has, according to the Congregationalist, gone over to those modern doctrinaires, who, in the face of all Scriptures, flatter poor sinful souls that they will have another probation after death. As the only Bible authority on this most important question says, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," and "Now is the accepted time," it may be seen what a dangerous depth of error Andover has fallen into; an error which its students for the ministry will be likely to scatter far and wide to the great peril of the people. Procrastination is the thief of time, and in this matter of eternity also.—N. Y. Witness.

—Mr. Moody announces that a convention of ten days will be held in Northfield, Mass., commencing August 5, and closing August 15, 1885. Christian workers are invited from all parts of the country. Application for accommodation will be received until July 10, addressed to D. L. Moody, Northfield, Mass.

—The Religious Tract Society of London stands in the front rank of existing evangelical institutions. At its eighty-sixth anniversary, recently held in Exeter Hall, the report showed that although from various causes there had been a slight falling off in the income from subscriptions, the trade receipts had been large. During the year the society had issued seven hundred and thirty-seven new publications, including one hundred and eighty-two tracts, and the total issues, including those from foreign depots, had been 85,966,650, or 2,368,277,880 since the formation of the society.

—Bishop William Taylor's entire party, excepting those left at Mayumba, are still at Loanda, studying Portuguese, getting acclimated, and preparing to penetrate into the interior. Several of the party have been prostrated with the African fever, but none have been dangerously ill, and it is believed that each, in a short time, will be quite inured to the climate and ordinarily proof against the local diseases. The bishop and his co-laborers have made explorations into the country in different directions to eligible points distant from Loanda about 300 miles. They have located four mission stations, to which by this time, it is probable, detachments of the company have been sent. The plan is to open industrial farms and march on toward the centre of the continent, inviting Christianity and Christian civilization to lock arms and move abreast in the grand procession. The chiefs and governors of the country contiguous to Loanda are all favorable to the missionaries, and promise to give, or lease for 99 years, all the land they need, and to furnish other facilities for the prosecution of their enterprises.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD ON TEMPERANCE AND TOBACCO.

At its late meeting at Morning Sun, Iowa, this Synod adopted a strong report on this subject unanimously. The following are the resolutions contained in the report; we have not room for the whole paper:

1. We urge all our people to recognize the importance of the temperance cause, and its claims on their active and earnest support. That our Presbyteries be enjoined to hold temperance institutes or conventions for the discussion and advocacy of this cause. That sessions be urged to give practical force to the recently adopted article on temperance, in admitting members, and faithfully to enforce the discipline of the church in all cases where the law is violated.

2. We denounce the whole license system as wrong in principle and most pernicious in practice, involving the nation in the guilt and shame of the liquor traffic to which it gives its consent, as ineffectual for the restraint or suppression of the evil, and an utter violation of the high trust God has committed to civil government as his ordinance.

3. Support of political parties that favor or ignore this nefarious business, or even incorporation with the government, is inconsistent with fidelity to Christ and involves those who continue in such alliance in the guilt and ignominy of the liquor traffic.

4. That it is our duty as a church to give to all Scriptural measures, moral, political or legislative, for the suppression of this traffic, all that support and advocacy which is consistent with our position of political dissent, and especially that our women be encouraged to co-operate with the W. C. T. U. in its noble work of faith and labor of love.

5. We reaffirm the former actions of this court, enjoining sessions as far as possible, to use only unintoxicating wine in the administration of the Lord's Supper.

1. We express our strongest disapprobation and condemnation of the traffic in, and indulgence in the use of tobacco, and warn our members against this blemish on Christian character.

2. Synod reiterates all its former brotherly admonitions to ministers, elders, and deacons, and Sabbath-school teachers, that their continuance in this practice is inconsistent with their position as ensamples to the flock, and is most ensnaring to the youth of the church.

3. Presbyteries are enjoined to carry out the law of Synod, by not receiving or retaining under their care students that continue in this habit, refusing them licensure; and we will respect the request of those Presbyteries that have asked that no tobacco-users be assigned to them, and they will be justified in refusing appointments to any such offenders, as may through oversight be allotted to them.

4. We most earnestly and kindly warn our youth, precious sons of Zion, not to be misled by the evil practice of many professing Christians, who mourn their bondage. We remind them that if these fathers had been taught the evil of this practice as we have, they would not deliberately have chosen this course. The fact that professing Christians are addicted to the habit does not change its abominable and sinful character, nor will it in any way avert its consequences in your lives.

THE ASSOCIATE SYNOD AND THE G. A. R.

The action of the United Presbyterian General Assembly on the Grand Army of the Republic might have been strengthened in favor of the church and against secretism had it been taken after the Portland meeting of the order. The meeting of the Synod of the Associate Presbyterian church lately in Richmond, Kansas, took up the same question more fearlessly and with a more definite and satisfactory conclusion:

Whereas, The G. A. R. is modeled after known secret societies, has its grips and passwords as means of secret recognition, its rites and initiatory ceremonies are acknowledged to be unmeaning and foolish, systematic secrecy is one of its peculiarities: and

Whereas, We are assured by the editor of the National Tribune, Washington, D. C., that the members are sworn when mustered in; therefore,

RESOLVED, That membership in the G. A. R. is incompatible with the principles of the church, and that Sessions be instructed to maintain our principles in the matter by a judicious exercise of discipline.

MADAGASCAR.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the progress of the Malagasy toward civilization and Christianity is not by slow steps, but by leaps. The recent assault of the French has doubtless, to some degree, shaken the faith of a few, but on the whole it seems to have strengthened and deepened the spiritual life of the people. The results have not been as deplorable as might have been anticipated. From a recent volume of Rev. Mr. Shaw, we learn that the value of the American commerce with the island is about equal to that of the French and English put together. The people are advancing in all the arts ; carpenters, stone-masons, clock-makers, tailors, have learned to turn out work which would be no discredit to any land, and some of the church edifices of the island would ornament any town in New England. Travelers comment upon the fact that there are no roads on the island, but the reason is apparent. The ruling race of the interior is too intelligent to build a highway by which the armies of France can reach their capital. Though slavery exists, it is in a mitigated form, and the slaves and freemen sit side by side in the churches. The houses of the people also, instead of being filthy little hovels of one room only, are rapidly improving. The present missionary force of the London Missionary Society of the island, is twenty-nine, including single ladies. There are now over 300,000 adherents and 4,134 men are enrolled as preachers, though it is to be said that many of them have no special gifts or fitness for the position. The educational system is on a new and firmer base. One of the eight secretaries of state has been put in charge of the department of education. All children between seven and fourteen years of age are required to attend school. In the school, according to recent government schedule, there are over 150,000 scholars; the promise for the future in all respects is very bright, if only the Malagasy can be allowed to work out their social and religious problems free from the assaults of France.—Missionary Herald.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—The Ohio Masonic Consistory are raising funds to purchase church property in Cincinnati, which they propose to remodel into a Masonic Temple that will be one of the finest in the country.

—Scouts in the Pennsylvania oil regions who furnish information as to the discovery, or condition of wells, have organized an oath bound society, the object of which is to control the oil market for their special benefit.

—The Ancient Order of United Workmen in this city has shown itself stupidly and slanderously ignorant in naming one of its lodges after Wendall Phillips, who while living denounced them.

—The saloon-keeper, ex-alderman Frank Lawler, of this city, is a member of a United Workmen lodge. He is an ignorant demagogue, if his actions and speeches for several years are any criterion. He lately made a speech eulogizing his lodge for the blessings it confers upon "widowless orphans."

—The twelth annual session of the Supreme Lodge of Knights of Honor concluded with the election of the following officers: Supreme Dictator, Frank D. Sloat, New Haven, Conn.; Supreme Vice Dictator, A. Gratz, Knoxville, Tenn., Supreme Recorder, B. F. Neilson, St. Louis, Mo.; Supreme Treasurer, Joseph W. Branch, St. Louis.

—The lodge can make itself supremely ridiculous, if its supremacy appears in nothing else. Read this note from a late city paper: "With many mystic characters the 'Senoferun Observance' of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Medinah Temple, Oasis of Chicago, is announced as follows: "Illustrious Noble —On the eighth day of the eighth month, Shaaban, A. H. 1302, corresponding to to Saturday, May 23, 1885, at thirty minutes after the nineteenth hour, at Corinthian Hall, will be observed, as has been the custom from time immemorial, with all Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, the Feast of the Marriage of Senoferu, Egypt's best King, whose whole life was spent in a labor of love for the betterment of his people, and during whose saltanat the nobility of the Mystic Shrine were seldom called upon to enforce the laws or to administer justice. 'Hash-at-eleven' is the grand pass-word. The arrival of the pilgrims; their introduction to the temple; the Arab's vow; the Noviatc's last whirl; justice tempered with mercy; the implacable vengeance of the Shrine.'"

—In localities where the so-called chapters of the Eastern Star flourish not one Mason in twenty belongs to or known anything of them. They have but as ephermeral existence and soon die out.—Detroit Freemason.

—The Freemason's Journal of Canada in a recent article says; "Among the matters that will engage the attention of the Grand Lodge at the coming session will be the connection between a belief in the Supreme Being, the Volume of the Sacred Law and Freemasonry. The subject will come up in the shape of an appeal and one committee will have an interesting time in delving into theological points, and either harmonizing them with Freemasonry or showing that there if no affinity betwcen the Bible and our institution.'"

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $9.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.
Furnished in any quantities at

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prcs. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finncy was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.
No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.
Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.
In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A.	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry.	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family.	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge.	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men.	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire,"	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan.	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies.	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason.	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—
Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.
SING THEM!
HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!
Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.
Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Master's Carpet

BY

E. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying

Freemasonry at a Glance,

which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 420 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.
Address
National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

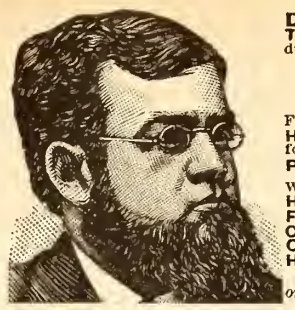
HAND BOOK

OF

Freemasonry,

BY

E. Ronayne,



Past Master of Keystone Lodge. No. 639 Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. In short, it is

A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.

The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of high Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of ACTING LODGE OFFICIALS, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price. 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edges and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored. Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:
Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"

and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY

AT A GLANCE.

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100. $3.60. Address.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifully bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan.
By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.
This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

HOME AND HEALTH.

PURE DRINKING WATER.

The importance of having pure drinking water is such that every care should be taken to secure good water supply and then to keep it pure.

Impurities are either animal, vegetable or mineral. Where the organic matters are animal, they tend to become putrescent, and when taken into the system they produce fever or other disorder. When the matter is introduced in smaller quantities, it undergoes decomposition more or less rapidly, according to the condition of the air or temperature. In such cases no smell or taste may be perceptible. The constant use of such water sometimes causes disease even when the quantity is small. Some persons seem more susceptible than others, and their own systems either cause or accelerate changes which had not been noticeable before. Vegetable impurities also tend to decomposition under favoring conditions. These disorder the system, or cause malaria or other special forms of disease. Mineral impurities are owing to the suspension or solution of mineral particles in the water. Some of these, as sulphur or iron, give taste to water, but do not injure it unless present in too large quantities. Others, as lead, may, in small quantities seriously affect the human system. Others, as lime, are chiefly injurious by producing too great hardness of water. The taste of water, fresh from the well, is not by any means a perfect guide as to its purity. If it has much organic matter in it which is already undergoing decomposition, there may be taste and odor, or its organic impurities may have been so far destroyed as to yield no unpleasant taste or odor, and yet there may remain some dangerous contamination. Its being an agreeable drinking water to those accustomed to its use does not prove its purity.

Where cistern water is relied upon, the first care must be exercised to receive it from a clean roof, to see to it that the first water of a rain does not go into it, and that the main supply is derived from long heavy rains, rather than from occasional showers. If a leader ends in a hogshead or tank proportioned in size to the water capacity of the roof or its single leaders, and is arranged with an overflow tube to the main cistern, or with an automatic float, it will, when nearly full, divert the purer water into the main cistern and leave the former, to be used for non-drinking purposes. Cistern water, unless collected and kept with care, may be charged with organic matter. The cistern should in size bear proportion to the needs of the family, so that it can be empty enough to be cleaned twice a year If in the ground, it should be tightly cemented and kept so well covered that small animals and foul gases cannot enter it. The pump fitted in it should be of metal. When it is claimed that air should be admitted to the cistern other than that from the ground, it is best to have an upright shaft of a few feet, in the top of which there is a wire gauze to protect from leaves, etc.

Wells and springs must be most carefully protected from any possible defilement. To this end, it must be remembered that it is not safe to place any well within one hundred feet of any cesspool, privy, cow or pig-pen, or other deposit of foul matter. Sometimes, without knowledge of where these have been before, wells are dug in too close proximity. The well should be carefully stoned or bricked and for at least four feet from the top the bricks should be laid in cement, and come up higher than the surrounding ground. The soil should not be rich just about the well. The cover of the well and its pump should be such as not to admit of any foul matter. People are too often careless in rinsing vessels about a well. Even a cistern may be defiled by the soil or spillings about it, and wells often are. The cistern may have crevices, or may have something fall into it, or may have its water become dead by long standing. The well may have its surrounding soil so saturated with decaying material as finally to become unable to oxidize it. Some new crack or underground rill may let into it foul liquid from sources that have never reached it before, and which are especially liable to reach it in dry weather. The same, may, more or less, happen to springs. Therefore, it is not enough to say that a water supply has been good, as it may have suddenly become bad from causes not visible. Where, because of sickness or for other reasons, there is suspicion as to the purity of the water, resort should be had to some simple test, or at once to chemical or biological examination.—Independent.

SIMPLE TESTS FOR THE PURITY OF WATER.

In suspected potable water for persons who cannot command chemical analysis, the following tests are recommended, as being generally available and reliable:

Color.—Fill a bottle made of colorless glass with the water; look through the water at some black object; the water should appear perfectly colorless and free from suspended matter. A muddy or turbid appearance indicates the presence of soluble organic matter, or of soluble matter in suspension. It should be "clear as crystal."

Odor.—Empty out some of the water, leaving the bottle half-full; cork up the bottle and place it for a few hours in a warm place; shake up the water, remove the cork and critically smell the air contained in the bottle. If it has any smell, and especially if the odor is in the least repulsive, the water should be rejected for domestic use. By heating the water to boiling, an odor is evolved sometimes that otherwise does not appear.

Taste.—Water fresh from the well is usually tasteless, even though it may contain a large amount of putrescible organic matter. Water for domestic use should be perfectly tasteless, and remain so even after it has been warmed, since warming often develops a taste in water which is tasteless when cold. If the water at any time has a repulsive, or even disagreeable taste, it should be rejected.—The Sanitarian.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Advantages in Dyspepsia.

DR. G. V. DORSEY, Piqua, Ohio, says: "I have used it in dyspepsia with very marked benefit. If there is deficiency of acid in the stomach, nothing affords more relief, while the action on the nervous system is decidedly beneficial."

LIGHT AND LIFE LESSON LEAF.

new Lesson Leaf with two large pages thoroughly filled with able and evangelical aids to the lessou.

IT CONTAINS:

1. Common versiou of the lessou text arranged for responsive reading; memory verses in brackets. 2. Revised version of the text. 3. Golden Text; Central Truth; Topic, and Outline, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Home Readings. 5. Introductory, including Review Questions; Connecting Links, and Opening Remarks. 6. Lesson Dictionary, containing the time; places; persons, and contemporaries of the lesson, with the proper pronounciation of the names, and places. 7. Notes and explanations. 8. Questions. 9. Review Exercises for the whole school in concert. 10. Next Sunday's Lesson, including reference to memory verses and Golden Text. Conveniently arranged, and tastily printed.

Be sure and see this leaf before you order for next quarter. Price, $7.20 per 100 copies, per year. Address

T. B. ARNOLD, 106 Franklin St.,
Publisher and Dealer in Sunday School Supplies.
SAMPLES AND CATALOGUE FREE.

Sunday-School Papers.

MONTHLY.

THE PEARL,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

THE LILY,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 3cts.
Per year..... 12cts.

PURE WORDS,

To Sunday-Schools, per qnarter, ... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

SUNSHINE,

To Sunday-Schools, per quarter..... 21-2cts.
Per year..... 10cts.

Single subscriptions for either one of the above papers, one year, 25 cts.

We have excellent facilities for furnishing Sunday-School Supplies of every description including trade papers at publishers' prices. If you wish any publication send to us for it.

T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

WEBSTER'S PRACTICAL A NEW DEPARTURE IN DICTIONARIES.

An Industrial Revolution.—In a large Connecticut manufacturing establishment there is in operation a new style of furnace which produces more steam-power from a consumption of 1,000 lbs of coal than can be generated from 20,000 lbs burned in the ordinary way. In other words, the new contrivance already saves nineteen-twentieths of the fuel, and it is believed that before being publicly announced it will be so improved that the saving will reach 49 fiftieths! The facts already developed are simply incredible to one who has not actually seen them verified.

A Remarkable Coincidence.—While the new Furnace was in process of construction, the editors and publishers of Webster's Unabridged were engagod upon their new work which is as great an improvement upon all previous Dictionary productions, and just as valuable in its way as is the incredible fuel economizer above alluded to. Webster's Practical is not only a new compilation by the leading Dictionary House of the world, but it embodies several new features which, for ordinary use, render it pre-eminent among dictionaries—not excepting even the Unabridged.

1st, Condensation.—By grouping all derivative and compound words under their root or leader (as in the "Book" example quoted below), such words are adequately treated in one-third of the space required by the old arrangement. By this means nearly all the desirable material of the four and five-dollar dictionaries is presented in a convenient and handy form in Webster's Practical.

2d, Association.—We comprehend as well as remember things chiefly by their associations. For this reason any one who shall carefully read the "Book" paragraph which we reproduce from Webster's Practical Dictionary, will not only comprehend it more readily, but will be able to remember two or three times as much as would be gained by reading about the same words when treated separately as in other works.

3d, Ready Reference.—Not only do we comprehend and remember more readily by the new grouping method, but we do it in less than a fourth of the time required when the words are classified in the old way. Hence, no one who values time would hesitate to pay one dollar for Webster's Practical rather than accept the best of the older dictionaries as a gift.

4th, Derivative Terminations.—Only the larger dictionaries hitherto published give the derivative terminations. The New American Dictionary, for instance, does not give any of the four variations of so common a word as forbear, while they are all given in Webster's Practical.

5th, The Illustrations in Webster's Practical are more numerous and better executed than those of any other abridged or low-priced dictionary.

6th, Prefixes and Suffixes.—Another important feature of Webster's Practical is its peculiar treatment of prefixes and suffixes, which is believed to be more desirable than a separate department of two or three hundred pages which is sometimes allotted to them.

7th, Compendium Matter.—Still another invaluable feature of Webster's Practical is its compendium matter, over one hundred pages of which is devoted to the most complete Pronouncing Vocabulary ever compiled of Biblical, Classical, Mythological, Historical and Geographical Proper names. With Webster's Practical Dictionary at hand, one need not be at a loss to correctly pronounce or spell the most difficult words.

8th, An Invaluable Book.—The importance of supplying every child with Webster's Practical for his very own, is not generally appreciated. As an educator it is worth a hundred times its price, and a little self-denial to provide one or more copies in every family will prove a better economy than an endowment of hoarded bank-stocks later on in life.

The following paragraph is reproduced from Webster's Practical.

Book, bŏŏk, n. A collection of sheets of paper, etc., bound together; a literary composition, written or printed; a subdivision of a literary work. (Mer.) A volume in which accounts are kept. — v. t. [BOOKED (bŏŏkt), BOOKING.] To enter, or register in a book. — Book'ish, a. Given to reading; more acquainted with books than with men. — Book'-bind'er, n. One who binds books. — -bind'ery, n. A place for binding, etc. — -bind'ing, n. Art or practice of, etc. — -case, n. A case with shelves for holding books. (Bind.) A book-cover. — -cov'er, n. (Bind.) A case for a book; a cover of cloth or other material prepared for casing a book. — -keep'er, n. One who keeps accounts. — -keep'ing, n. Art of recording mercantile transactions and keeping accounts. — -learned, -lĕrn'ĕd, a. Versed in books; ignorant of life. — -learn'ing, n. Learning acquired by reading,—esp. as opp. to practical knowledge. — -mak'er, n. One who writes and publishes books; a compiler; a sporting man who makes a record of bets. — -mak'ing, n. The practice of, etc.; compilation; systematized betting. — -mark, n. Something placed in a book by which to find a particular place. — -plate, n. A label indicating ownership, place in a library, etc., usually on the inside of the cover of a book. — -post, n. The post-office arrangement by which books are mailed. — -sell'er, n. One who sells books. — -shelf, n. A shelf to hold books. — -shop, -stall, -store, n. A place for selling books. — -stand, n. A stand for selling books in the streets; book-stall; a support to hold books. — -worm, n. A worm or mite that eats holes in books; one excessively addicted to study.

THE QUANTITY TEST.

(The following exhibits are from the texts of the dictionaries named).

Webster's Practical Dictionary, ($1) 600,000 Words and 1,400 Illustrations.
New American Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Popular Dictionary, ($1) 240,000, Words and 116 Illustrations.
National Standard Dictionary, ($1) 310,000 Words and 612 Illustrations.

Quality Test.—Aside from all advantages above alluded to, there is still another and very important feature of the new work to be considered, viz.: its quality as compared with the cheap dictionaries which have had the largest sales, and which have been compiled chiefly from the old editions of Webster on which the copyrights have expired. Hence Webster's Practical contains more matter than any other dollar dictionary. Its quality, to say the least, is the very best, while its arrangement and all other new and desirable features, including first-class illustrations, paper, printing and binding are added without extra charge.

A Subscription Book.—As Webster's Practical is not for sale at book-stores, our readers will be able to procure it only from canvassing agents, unless it be ordered in connection with this journal in accordance with our special offers.

☞We offer the Christian Cynosure for one year and the Dictionary, postpaid, both for only $2.00.

W. I. PHILLIPS.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Five Dollar

LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM NOTES.

OLD STRAWBERRY BEDS.—The inquiry is made, How long can a strawberry bed or plantation remain to advantage without renewing? A correct answer would be, From one to ten years, or more, varying with conditions and treatment. Large market plantations are often set out in one year and a heavy crop obtained the second year, after which a new planting is made on fresh soil and the old plants plowed up—this treatment being cheaper and easier than weeding, if the soil is much infested with foul stuff. But on clean ground, if the weeds that exist are destroyed before they reach the surface, and a copious application of manure made every year, the plants will often bear a number of seasons, some, like the Cumberland, lasting longer than others like the Wilson. If the plants are set in check rows, so as to be cultivated both ways, and the large stools stand 2½ or 3 feet apart, they may continue to grow and bear well for several years. If they grow in narrow matted rows, kept clear of grass and weeds, and properly enriched, new plants may be allowed to form from runners in the spaces between the rows, and the old plants plowed up or spaded under. In this way the plantation may be continued indefinitely, provided a sufficient quantity of fertilizers are applied to supply any exhaustion.—Country Gentleman.

A GARDEN WITHOUT WEEDS.

A correspondent of Vick's Magazine tells how he managed to keep his garden free of weeds. He says: I have a one-fourth acre garden that I have not allowed a weed to grow on for twenty years, but it took five years of clean culture before I could see much improvement, and it was ten years before the old seed in the soil ceased to give trouble. As an aid to keeping the garden free from weeds, put everything in rows running the length of it, and put together those varieties which will ripen about the same time. For example, one of the narrow lands or beds I speak of can be planted in early peas, lettuce, spinach and radishes, and these will all be past use in June, when the ground can be worked by horse-power till mellow. Then follow with some later crops, as cucumbers or sweet corn. Another bed can be planted in potatoes, and the middle of June, Hubbard, or some other variety of good winter squashes planted, and a full crop grown. In my latitude, forty miles north of Cincinnati, the Hubbard squash matures if planted the last week in June. If nothing else is wanted plant sweet corn to grow fodder for the cows, even as late as the last of August, for you will be more likely to keep the land clean and you will get some benefit from the crop.

One more point. Make all rows straight not only because the garden looks better for it, but much hand-weeding is saved by it, especially when carrots, parsnips, onions, etc., are raised.

ROSE BUGS.—It is said that Paris green applied to rose bushes and grape vines infested with rose bugs will kill the insects as surely as it does the potato bug, when used on potato plants. The application can be dry, mixed with flour, or land plaster, or in liquid form, mixed with water, and sprinkled on in the same manner as for the potato bug.—Vick's Magazine.

The humble toad, with his dingy, warty skin, sluggish movements, and generally unattractive appearance, was for a long time doomed to calumny and persecution. Writers maligned him and boys persecuted him. Some observing poet brightened his life a little by noting the jewel in his head, his lively and beautiful eye. Later, since pains-taking naturalists have studied his habits and described him as a most industrious destroyer of noxious insects, he has been given the freedom of the garden and the lawn, where he amply pays for the protection which his acquaintances among men gladly give him.

There is a great variation in the potato crop from different hills in the same field. In digging for seed, dig each hill by itself, and when enough are hauled out to select from, go over the field and save for seed only from the best hills. If only a bushel be selected, this quantity will pay for planting separately for raising seed for the next year. The same process continued year after year would weed out the inferior blood from the variety and give stock for planting that could be depended upon to yield well and give smooth, sizable tubers. Early varities that yield well are to be preferred, since the quicker the crop matures the less danger from rot and insects.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

Holden With Cords. OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, Author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," Etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story accurately true to life because, mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth $1.00; paper 50 cents. In

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan. By Samuel D Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents, per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2 00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher In cloth, 25c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each: per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each: per dozen $7.50.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75 cts.

Freemasonry at a Glance Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00 per dozen, $9.00. Paper covers, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00. ☞The Masonic quotations are worth the price of this book.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Eloeta, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scriptnre, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on MaSONRY. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian Church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Contrary to the ChrisTIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DeGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear disension of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the RePUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machinists and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Prest. J. Blanchard, before the Pittsburgh Convention. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocat. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Drury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church is clearly shown. 10 cents each: per dozen, 75 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees" 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives says that from present indications there will be fewer contested election cases before the next Congres than there have been in any Congress for forty years. There will not be more than four and probably not more than three.

According to the receipts from internal revenue, customs, and from miscellaneous sources, the falling off in the estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30 will be about $10,000,000 – $2,000,000 in the internal, $4,000,000 in customs and $4,000,000 in the miscellaneous. The expenditures have been greater for pensions and deficiencies than was anticipated, so that the surplus for the fiscal year will probably be between $15,000,000 $20,000,000 less than was calculated.

The June crop report of the Agricultural Department estimates the total wheat crop of the country at 360,000,000 bushels, of which 207,000,000 is winter and 153,000,000 spring. The condition of winter wheat is lower than ever before in June, the general percentage having declined from 70 in May to 62.

COUNTRY.

The annual camp-meeting of the National Prohibition Association will be held at Decatur, Ill., beginning July 31st, and closing August 8th.

At the Cheyenne Agency the Indians are drilling preparatory to an outbreak, have sent spies in all directions, and picket their ponies every night. The whites and soldiers at the agency fear they will be massacred. Five companies of cavalry passed through Wichita, Kan., Friday, for Port Reno.

The Illinois Senate arrived at a compromise Friday on the convict labor bill by adopting a joint resolution submitting the question to the people direct. The bill appropriating $200,000 for the construction of a soldiers' and sailors' home passed the House Tuesday. Gov. Oglesby has signed the bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants within two miles of any fair ground, church or school-house.

A sentence of ten years imprisonment and a fine of $5,000 was passed Tuesday, upon C. A. Buddensiek, the New York builder, some of whose structures collapsed in April, killing one man and injuring others.

Kentucky whiskey men owe the government $5,000,000 back taxes which will be due Aug. 1. The law is peremptory, and the penaltics for non-payment are heavy.

Reports from the "outlying districts" swept by the recent tornado in Iowa, show that in Plymouth and Cherokee counties twenty persons were killed, nine fatally injured, and eleven dangerously injured.

A mad dog at Pike Woods, ten miles from Racine, Wis., bit six other dogs, several cattle, and many horses. Several persons in other parts of the county have since been bitten, and one had the hydrophobia so badly that it took six men to hold him. Hunting parties have been organized to kill all animals known to have been bitten. Several of the bitten dogs are running at large.

In the bottoms and lowlands of Montgomery county, Illinois, the wire-worm is destroying whole fields of corn.

An epidemic of glanders among horses which has been communicated to cats and dogs, has broken out at Knoxville, a suburb of Pittsburg, Pa. A disease called "breining" is spreading among hogs in the Lebanon (Pa ,) section.

By a runaway accident Wednesday, at Elgin, Ill., a daughter of Alderman D. E. Wood was killed, his wife probably fatally injured, and his father, Jackson Wood, badly wounded.

George Griggsby, his wife and two sons, who formerly lived in Lorain township, Stephenson county, Illinois, were killed by the cyclone, on the 14th inst., in Cherokee county, Iowa.

The grand jury in Salt Lake City presented in court Friday nine indictments charging as many Mormon elders with the crimes of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. One of the parties presented was William D. Newson, whose polygamous wife, Lucy Devercaux, was committed to the penitentiary for contempt five weeks ago, for refusing to answer questions before a grand jury.

At North Salem, Ind., Wednesday night a freight train knocked Sarah Wilson and her two children (girls,) from a trestle, resulting in their death.

Apple trees are being killed by hundreds in some counties of Virginia by the ravages of an insect called the dumb-locust.

Frank Marker, of Coatsville, Ind., recently appointed railway mail clerk, appeared for duty at Indianapolis, in an intoxicated condition, and was discharged. He retired to his room, took a dose of morphine, and died next day.

The new gold discovery on Snake River, Oregon, is believed to be genuine and bona fide. The new fields are in Union county, Oregon, among the Eagle Creek mountains in the peninsula formed by the junction of Powder and Snake Rivers. The nearest point on the railway is at Durkee or Baker City, thirty miles.

A few weeks ago three members of a gang of horse thieves were lynched in the Indian Territory. Information is now received that officers with posse of citizens continued the chase until fifteen of the gang have been hung.

FOREIGN.

It is believed that the Mexican government has an extensive financial project on foot. The $4,000,000 worth of nickel coin, stored in the palace at the City of Mexico, has been sold to European parties for $800,000

The French Canadians at Quebec have formed a committee to raise subscriptions to defray the expenses of Riel and other half-breeds implicated in the Northwest rebellion.

Admiral Jouett reports the political differences between the two parties in the United States of Colombia are of such a nature that a peaceful settlement is quite impossible at this time. Hostilities are likely to continue indefinitely. Government troops, he reports, are marching on Barranquilla. The troubles on the isthmus result from local politics and from the fact that many depraved characters congregate there. He anticipates hard fighting in Colombia.

It is reported that ex-Minister Daggett has been intrusted with a secret mission to the United States by King Kalakaua of the Sandwich Islands, which is believed to be the opening of negotiations for the annexation of the Islands to the United States.

The Marquis of Salisbury has accepted the invitation of the Queen to form a cabinet. His selections are: Sir Stafford Northcote, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Sir Hardinge Gifford, Viscount Cranbrook, Lord Harrowby, Sir Richard Asheton Cross, Colonel Frederick Stanley, the Rt. Hon. Wm. H. Smith, Lord Randolph Churchill, Lord George Manners, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, Hon. Edward Stanhope, the Earl of Carnarvon and the Right Hon. Edward Gibson.

Mr. Gladstone has made a promise to Lord Salisbury to give the new government as much time as possible during the remainder of the session. It is stated that the leaders have arranged to make an effort to carry the Welsh intermediate education bill, the Australian confederation bill, the Irish national educational bill and the minister for Scotland bill.

In the Chamber of Deputies at Paris, M. de Freycinet, Minister of Foreign Affairs, submitted the draft of the Franco-Chinese treaty, which definitely confirms the rights of France over Annam. The latter country must henceforth treat with foreign powers only through France. The treaty fixes the boundary lines between China and the French dependencies, and determines the conditions upon which commercial relations between France and China are to be maintained. France undertakes to pacify Tonquin, and expel the bands of marauders infesting the country, and will respect Chinese territory. China will respect treaties between France and Annam.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@81⅞7
No. 3	79	@80
Winter No 2		@93
Corn—No. 2	47	47½
Oats—No. 2	33	35
Rye—No. 2		63
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		10 25
Butter, medium to best	10	@15½
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 25
Eggs		11
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 53
Flax		1 22
Broom corn	01	@ 05⅛
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	15	@20
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 40	@6 10
Common to good	2 40	@5 25
Hogs	3 00	@4 25
Sheep	2 50	@3 90

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 00	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	89	@1 02
Spring	93½	94¾
Corn	45	@53
Oats	38	@43
Mess Pork		11 50
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 55
Hogs	3 60	@3 85
Sheep	1 75	@3 10

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas, etc.

Her book is neither fiction nor founded on fiction, but is an interesting narration of facts of a most thrilling character, as every one will find and testify who will get and read her book, now on sale at the Cynosure office, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill. Price, cloth, $1,75; half Russia, $2.25.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

Our advertising columns are carefully edited to avoid all improper, private medical, and questionable advertisements. By such careful discrimination an indorsement of genuineness is given to all advertisements accepted. The confidence of its readers is sought by the careful exclusion of all questionable ente[r]s. Shrewd business men will not fail t[o] see the great advantage the paper will be [to them] in promoting their interests.

Advertising rates 70 cents per in[ch]

AMOUNT DISCOUNTS.

All orders amounting to $	25	10	per cent
" " "	50	15	" "
" " "	100	20	" "
" " "	250	25	" "
" " "	500	30	" "
" " "	1000	35	" "
" " "	1500	40	" "
" " "	2500	50	" "

Business notices double the price of display agate measure.

LOOK AT THE
YELLOW TAG
AND SEE IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION EXPIBES THIS MONTH. IF IT DOES, PLEASE LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE.

COLLECTION BOXES.

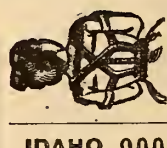
Do You Want Money for missionary, church or Sunday-school purposes? It is surprising how much the children will collect with the

FAIRBANKS' SAVINGS BOXES

They are simple and cheap. Price 3 cents each
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher
106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

Lesson Quarterly.

Contains the same matter as the Light and Life Lesson Leaf, bound in a quarterly form, with maps and other helps. It also contains many suggestions and instructions concerning the management of the Sunday-school. Price, per quarter, 3 cents.
T. B. ARNOLD, Publisher.
106 Franklin street Chicago, Ill.



NOVELTY RUG MACHINE. Patented Dec. 27, 1881. For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc Sent by mail with full directions. Price $1. Agents wanted. Manufact'rs of stamped Rug Patterns & dealers in Yarns. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, O.

OPIUM! Morphine Habit, Opium Smoking, easily cured. Advice free.
DR. J. C. HOFFMAN, Jefferson, Wis.

FRIENDS SCHOOL For both Sexes. Founded 1784. $150 per half year for board and tuition. First term begins September 9, 1885. For circular address
AUGUSTINE JONES, A. M., Prin., Providence, R. I.

ASTHMA. Smithnight's Asthma and Hay Fever Remedy. Sold under POSITIVE GUARANTY. Sample FREE.
L. SMITHNIGHT, Cleveland, O.

LADY AGENTS can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters. Sample outfit free. Cincinnati Suspender Co., 179 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

IDAHO COLONY 300,000 ACRES In Snake River Valley—near Eagle Rock, Idaho. 80 to 640 acres to each settler. $1.50 per acre—50 cts. cash—$1. in 3 years. Climate and soil same as California. Send for circular and prospectus. Also Colony lands in California. Monthly excursions, $52.50.
Wm. H. Martin, 126 Washington st., Chicago.

ANY MAN Or woman making less than $10 per week should try our easy money-making business. We offer energetic persons a splendid chance to make money. Our $1 combination free to hose meaning business. Address A. E. Merrill, Chicago.

$1 Sample, Free.

Men and women making less than $50 per week should investigate our offer and secure Territory for Faith's Patent Dish-Pan Drainer. The fastest selling Household Article ever invented. We pay salary or commission. Send stamp for terms.
PAUL TABEL & CO., 243 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

A BEAUTIFUL HOUSE FOR $1200

* * * This marvelous house has been built more than 300 times from our plans; it is so well planned that it affords ample room even for a large family. 1st floor shown above; on 2d floor are 4 bed rooms and in attic 2 more. Plenty of Closets. The whole warmed by one chimney.
Large illustrations and full description of the above as well as of 39 other houses, ranging in cost from $400 up to $6,500, may be found in "SHOPPELL'S MODERN LOW-COST HOUSES," a large quarto pamphlet, showing also how to select sites, get loans, &c. Sent postpaid on receipt of 50c. Stamps taken, or send $1 bill and we will return the change. Address, BUILDING PLAN ASSOCIATION, (Mention this Paper.) 24 Beekman St., (Box 2702,) N. Y.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!
ALL-NIGHT INHALATION

[The above Picture shows a person using the Pillow-Inhaler.]

Cures CATARRH, HAY-FEVER, ASTHMA and CONSUMPTION, by enabling the sufferer to inhale powerful, healing, soothing and curative vapors ALL-NIGHT—eight hours out of the twenty-four—whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. Used the same as an ordinary pillow. No pipes or tubes. Concealed reservoirs in the Pillow hold the liquid and volatile balms. There is no dosing the stomach, no douching or snuffing, but, just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall, so the PILLOW-INHALER, for eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. It is a constitutional and local cure at the same time. Its success is wonderful—a success that is changing despair into hope, and filling homes with joy. It is inexpensive and can be used by any one. Call and see it, or send for pamphlet and testimonials.

CATARRH. HAY-FEVER. CONSUMPTION.

THE PILLOW-INHALER CO.,
Central Music Hall, State and Randolph Sts., Chicago.
(Main Office: Philadelphia, 1520 Chestnut St.)

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVII., No. 42. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1885. WHOLE No. 793.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT
W. I. PHILLIPS,.....PUBLISHER.

SUBSCRIPTION PER YEAR..... $2.00.
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... $1.50.

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Is Masonry a Religion?... 8
Secret Control of Colleges 8
State of the Anti-secret Cause..... 8
The Chicago Strike..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
A Political Reform Party. 1
The Grand Army in Maine 2
Week-day Sermon..... 2
Needs of the Times..... 2
SELECTED:
Religion of Masonry..... 3
Reputable Gambling..... 3
REFORM STORY:
Between Two Opinions.—Chaps. XXV & XXVI.. 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Work and Finance..... 9
N. C. A. Board Meeting.... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Washington Letter; Waukesha National Reform Convention; Letter from Transvaal; The Devil or Men, Which? Pith and Point..... 5,6
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERATURE..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
THE AMERICAN PARTY..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
MARKETS..... 13
CLUBBING LIST..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16

Mackin, the manager of the Chicago election frauds in November, though postponing for the time being his penitentiary sentence from the United States court, has just been tried in the criminal court for perjury in that affair and found guilty with a sentence of five years. His attorney will use all the arts of law to avert this sentence, but every honest man in all parties hopes for his ill success, so clear and overwhelming is the evidence against him. It is a singular coincidence that the able attorney who defends this Democratic ballot thief is a prominent Republican, once proposed by the press for a cabinet office, and selected to nominate John A. Logan in the last Republican convention here. Mr. Storrs probably has his private reasons for attempting to clear one of the most desperate rogues who ever attempted to overthrow by fraud one of the most cherished rights of Americans. Opposed to him was a leading Democrat. The circumstance proves the indifference of the legal fraternity to considerations of honor that weigh heavily with men in other professions. No matter how villainous the crime, money will buy the best legal service to defend the criminal.

Next to Gladstone, John Bright must be regarded as the ablest and wisest of British statesmen; and, from his Quaker convictions of war, must be esteemed even in advance of the great ex-premier upon the means of settling international disputes. In a letter last week to a French Deputy he writes down the following sagacious statement, which shows that he has not studied in vain the strained situation of European governments and the reason for their difficulties. "If European nations," he says, "would accept commercial liberty—that is, moderate or abolish customs—Europe might soon tend to an era of perpetual peace. At present all resources are swallowed up by military exigencies. The people's interests are sacrificed to the most miserable and culpable fantasies of foreign politics. The real interests of the masses are trodden underfoot in deference to false notions of glory and national honor. I cannot help thinking that Europe is marching toward some great catastrophe of crushing weight. The military system cannot be supported with patience, and the populations, driven to despair, may possibly before long sweep away the royalties and pretended statesmen who govern in their names. I hope your country and mine will remain at peace and be real friends."

The city of Brooklyn is building a new Hall of Records and the supervising board has asked the Masonic lodge to lay the corner-stone. It is to be regretted that the press of that city and New York have generally left the work of remonstrance to the Catholic press, as if it were a matter relating not to Christianity and American principles but to Catholicism. But at least these journals speak with vigor and deserve to be honored for it. The Catholic Review asks by what right the building is to be made in a sense "the property of a sect which is not and does not pretend to be Christian." "The absurdity as well as the injustice of the action, may be conceived by any Protestant or Mason asking himself how he would feel were the sometimes acting Mayor to invite Bishop Loughlin, or the Honorary and Reverend President of the Columbian Club, to perform religious rites at a public manifestation. Yet there are over 300,000 Catholics in Brooklyn, and we doubt, if all told, there are 3,000 Freemasons." The Catholic Examiner speaks no less earnestly: "This interjection of the clown Masonic into all our public celebrations and ceremonies is growing monotonous and nauseous. There is no reason or excuse for it. There does not exist, and there never has existed, any reason why this organization, with its ridiculous trappings, its beaproned members, and its absurd ceremonies should be singled out to take charge of the dedication of buildings which are the property of the general public. If private individuals like the jingle of the cap and bells at the laying of corner-stones owned by themselves, they have a perfect right to their preference, but buildings such as the Hall of Records belong to the people who, as a rule, do not approve of this mountebank business. If the members of the Supervisors' Committee were asked to allow the Ancient Order of Hibernians to officiate at the laying of the corner stone of the Hall of Records, they would doubtless scout the proposition as being absurd and impertinent. And yet it is a fact that this organization has just as much right to lay this particular corner stone as have the Freemasons."

An excellent plan of helping to ameliorate the woes which the "bitter cry" of destitute thousands all over the country proves to exist, is suggested by a correspondent who has proved its efficiency. It is for Christian bands to be formed in separate districts without regard to sect or party, having for their object to visit and assist the poor, under the guidance of city missionaries, where such are at work, and that with a view of cheering and strengthening the hearts and hands of these good men in their arduous task, as well as mitigating the sorrows of the poor. Such methods tend to unite Christians in Christ-like sympathy, and unobtrusively but effectively testify to the practical worth and influence of the religion inculcated by the Gospel of the grace of God. As a sample of the work done by such means our correspondent gives the following account of the little society she worked last winter: "Our amount for distribution was only about £30, and yet with that sum we were able to make and distribute nearly 200 warm garments; to give two tea-meetings, by which some who had never entered a 'Mission Room' were induced to attend; to help the poor, the sick and aged ones especially, with coal, bread, and groceries, besides rendering special aid, in other cases in times of sore need. Not only has relief been thus afforded to the needy, but the hard-working and faithful missionary, with whom it has been our pleasure to work, has been much encouraged, while by his advice misapplication of charity has been prevented."—The (London) Christian.

—Dr. Thos. Dunn English, of Newark, N. J., who has used tobacco from a boy is now at the point of death with a tobacco cancer in the throat.

A POLITICAL REFORM PARTY.

BY REV. C. C. FOOTE.

[Published by request of the Michigan State Association.]

The late Senator Howard, of Michigan, said there had been so many palpable Divine interpositions in the war of the slave-holder's rebellion that an atheist ought to be convinced that there is a God who rules in human affairs. He is a poor Bible student who does not know there are few truths in the Bible more clearly revealed than that of an overruling Divinity in national affairs. And the principle of Divine administration is clearly set forth. Here are two out of a hundred illustrations: Jer. 17: "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it. If that nation against whom I have pronounced turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom to build and to plant it. If it do evil in my sight that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them." Prov. 14: Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

Without the Bible it were an easy task to show that vice has been the ruin of nations. A rule of unrighteousness is therefore a fatal malady in national existence. A people or party that undertakes to run a national government by any other than a rule of righteousness becomes thereby disqualified for administering government. And a political party that seizes the reigns of government to run the same principally for the party, or in its interests, becomes thereby a traitor and an enemy to the people whom it undertakes to govern. And a political party that connives at, or refuses to put down, great national crimes becomes thereby guilty of the crimes it refuses to suppress.

Let us now call the two great national parties to judgment and try them by these righteous principles.

What are the great national crimes these parties connive at and refuse to suppress? That there are such crimes, and that they are connived at and unsuppressed "he that runneth may read."

Take first the liquor traffic. We parade before the eyes of the people the $900,000,000 as the annual cost of this traffic, licensed by the political parties that make laws for the nation. It is indeed a criminal waste of vast magnitude, that should consign the parties that sanction such a waste to everlasting infamy. But that item, appalling as it is, is but a drop of the sum total of the wickedness and woe involved in the licensed rum traffic. That $900,000,000 would not pay a tithe of the ruin wrought in a single family. Ask that broken-hearted wife whose husband, ruined by rum, is brought to her desolate home dead, how much gold would make her loss good? Your strange question would but add amazement to her sorrow. Go to that father, that mother, whose only child has been worse than murdered by rum; what amount of gold would fill the interminable depths of their sorrow? But these ruined families are multiplied by tens of thousands, from ocean to ocean. It is not in the power of numbers to give the sum of this appalling loss and ruin. A revolution of language that should make it a thousand times stronger would be too tame to describe the hell of this traffic legalized by the dominant political parties. Could we intensify and enlarge our sympathies a thousand fold until our consternation and anguish should be terrible as a moral volcano, even then our appreciation of these woes, horrible and eternal, would fall infinitely below the reality; no brush can paint it, no angelic eloquence can describe it. It can be known only by the millions who are the victims of the horrible experience. These ten thousand times ten thousand horrors piled on horrors awaken not a ripple of solicitude in the political parties that have the power to terminate them in a twelve month.

Are we not then justified, amply justified, in the inauguration of a reform party that shall slay this monster rum? lest the wrath of heaven fall upon a nation guilty of such crimes and ruin.

WHEATON COLLEGE LIBRARY
Wheaton, Illinois

Second, there is fastened upon the vitals of the nation another enemy to the national weal, working a ruin possibly not personally so disastrous, but nationally quite as fatal. An enemy all the more dangerous : 1st, because it works in secret; 2nd, because the people so largely regard it as harmless; 3rd, beeause they know not that it is an enemy; and 4th, because in publie it wears the garb of friendship, but in seeret it plots treason and binds its devotees by treasonable oaths. Do these charges hold good concerning the oath-bound secret societies of the land? That they do can be proven by volumes of evidence.

These societies elaim the right over life and death without law or judge or jury. They assume to be a law and government in and of themselves as against all law and all government.

1st. What is the meaning of Masonic mobs? They mean that these secret organizations are so supreme, so above all law, that we have no right to examine or discuss their merits, or to expose their character, or warn men against them. I ehallenge the world to give any other reason for their murders or their murderous assaults.

2nd. Pres. Finney, Dr. Colver, Elder Bernard, and thousands of other ex-Masons declare Masonry to be a conspiracy against the State.

3rd. All Masonic writers of note confess and affirm absolute despotism to be a vital prineiple of Masonry. Thus affirmed Chase, Mackey, Morris, Pierson and Sickles.

4th. The Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich, Grand Commander of the "Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of Massachusetts and Rhode Island," said in the opening of a lodge in Providence, R. I.: "If I could speak worthily of the Grand Lodge I would say it was one of the most important organizations in this country. If this form of government was adopted in the country would it not be better than any now in existence?" And Grand Master T. T. Gurney, of Illinois, in his official report for 1880, says: "We do not believe that every construction of fraud as recognized by eivil law should be governing in a fraternal estimation of wrong. As Masons, we must determine what constitutes an offence in business transactions." These words are black with treason. Have the lodges of the United States, has a solitary lodge protested against such treasonable words? No. Why not? Because Masonry itself is treason.

And what are the politieal parties doing about this national foe to our free institutions? Doing? These parties have placed the administration of affairs largely in the hands of these enemies of republicanism. What more proof need we of the necessity of a reform party? More than half a century ago the Masons, by secret plottings had seeured nearly every office in the nation. Then you could not punish the crime of Masonic murder, as was proved by the trial for the murder of Wm. Morgan. Now they are again at their old game of monopolizing publie places.

Third, look now away to that vast territorial region between and among the mountains of the West. Already a curse and a blight politically and morally, worse than the ten plagues of Egypt, has settled upon it. Mormonism is the image and likeness of Mahomedanism: 1st, in the obscurity of its origin; 2nd, in its pretended revelation from heaven; 3rd, in its false religion; 4th, in its polygamy; 5th, in its aggressive spirit; 6th, in its purpose of universal ascendency.

The rapid strides towards its present alarming dimensions have all been made nnder the eyes of the two great national parties.

And there in the Distriet of Columbia, in the very capital of the nation, is the miniature sister of this latter day abomination. In a recent report of Mrs. Charlotte Smith, who has been employed by a Congressional committee to gather statements coneerning women engaged in various professions, she says: "1,600 rum saloons flash out their red lights to entiee the multitude, lieensed and fostered by Congress. Police reports show 100 houses of ill-fame, 300 assignation houses, and 600 women of doubtful virtue in the departments, plaeed and kept there by Congressional influence. Surely no further evidence need be given for the necessity of a reform party.

THE GRAND ARMY IN MAINE.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The greatest obstacle to the progress of the antisecreey reform is the disposition to apologize for, if not to justify, those orders that have been undertaken for benevolent and patriotic purposes. It is assumed that the end justifies the means. It is presumed that an order that originated with the defenders of the Union and whieh claims pre-eminence in loyalty to both national and state governments, should not be condemned, especially as it is powerful, popular and united, and ean control both money and votes. True, it must be admitted that whatever occasion there may have been for the organization in the dangers of the past, that occasion has passed away; and whatever may be the desirability of such an order for social purposes, the end could be just as well attained without the secreey; but so long as no fault eould be found with the conduct of its members it would be difficult to awaken opposition against them.

But when a great and powerful order throws its influence on the side of disloyalty, when in a bitter and terrible conflict it takes sides with the greatest foe to peace and prosperity that any people were ever called to encounter, it ceases to have any claims to forbearance, and becomes the open enemy of the laws and of the people. Doubtless the liquor dealers know their men in the Grand Army or they would not have shipped their whiskies in advanee. Doubtless, too, the temperance people of Portland knew what to expect or they would not have found it needful to make extraordinary efforts for self-protection, and the fact that we find these false defenders of the people inviting violations of the law and practically rebelling against its execution, will, I trust, open their eyes to the danger of every secret organization.

More powerful than the restraints of law is the force of public opinion, and any society or order that by reason of its secrecy is exempt from the criticism of its individual members, is largely exempt from the power of moral influences. Members of the G. A. R. are not worse than average citizens, but the system under which they aet is worse, and like every other organized system of secrecy will be found in the end to be the enemy of good government.

Washington, D. C.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

In the course of my daily Bible reading there is one text over whieh I have often lingered with peeuliar delight. It is found in Romans, 6: 7. "To them who by patient continuance in well-doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." The majority of us do to-day what we expect to do to-morrow. Our lives have no great heights nor eorresponding depths, but a very uniform level of homely tasks, petty erosses, and trials that are interesting to nobody but ourselves. Yet all the Lord wants of us is patient eontinuance therein. St. Paul's ideal Christian is not a creature of moods and tenses. He stands before us with that calmness, that equability, that God-poise, which will not be moved away from a single hope or principle or duty,—a model, not so much of remarkable heroism as of every-day faithfulness and fortitude.

I like that old theological phrase, "the perseverance of the saints," for it embodies the same precious truth which runs through the whole of the Pauline Epistles like a golden thread; that it is by the patient, faithful doing of God's will day by day that we come at last into "the glorious eompany" of apostles and martyrs. When patience has had her perfect work we are fit for such society and not till then. Patience is like a heavenly artist laboring to develop our lives to the perfeetness of a beautiful statue, bringing out a line here and adding a touch there, and so fitting it at last for an eternal plaee in the upper temple. And so let us be careful that we do not hinder her work. Beautiful lives are always patient lives, always steadfast lives; their only change is growth, but they have the grand persistence of all growing things, and if they find themselves imbedded in some rock of popular evil or wrong, the worse for the rock. They will rive it in sunder.

There is no moral foree in the great eoming conflict with the powers of evil like the family altar where prayer goes up continually for national righteousness and pure government; or like the men and women whose spiritual powers and eapabilities have been slowly, steadily developed under the homely discipline of common cares, common joys, common trials. And I could wish it might be given to those patient, humble souls, who unable, perhaps, to say or do much for reform yet pray and think aright on all the great questions of the day and thus create around them an atmosphere of right thinking upon these subjeets, to know that they are a part of the spiritual dynamite which God is preparing for the overthrow of the open and seeret iniquity that raises its defiant front all over our land to-day.

There is surely no need to be discouraged when the Lord requires of us but one step at a time. I am convinced that the stupendous amount of labor accomplished by some Christian workers and their power to hold out under it even to old age, is due not so much to any remarkable physical strength as to their observance of John Wesley's rule "to live by the hour," thus continually at work but never unduly strained. And what is that rule but a humanized version of our text, "Continuance in well doing." Let us take the encouragement to heart, we who cannot do great things, and remember that it is patient perseverence which shall win the crown of life, lighten the heaviest burden, shorten the weariest pilgrimage, and fill our hands with golden sheaves at the coming of the Heavenly Reaper.

NEEDS OF THE TIMES.

BY REV. LEVI KELLY.

We may need many things, but often that which we eonceive to be needed the most is the least we should seek for. The believer needs much grace in order to show the nature of his faith. He seeks this in preferenee to all other things. It may seem the least in demand in the market, but its value will not be disputed in the outcome. The unsaved look with disdain on that which humbles human pride, but to the "tried and true" the reverse is their highest enjoyment.

The need of the church is grace. The dispute about sects, and how to unite them, and what methods are best, will all vanish when she gets just what she now professes to have. Great pretensions to numbers, wealth, influence and intelligence are simply used as a disguise. One may paint a dead body in likeness of a living one, while rank putrifaction is dissolving its parts. The nominal church is almost crazed in the pursuit of seholastie distinctions, just as if sueh things made the Bride, the Lamb's wife. She needs humbling in the dust and to give up her worldly display and pompous assumptions.

We demand, yea, the times demand, a church such as Bro. Paul deseribes: "Christ also loved the ehurch and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious ehurch, not having spot nor wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish."

Show us a ehureh whose ministers prefer poverty to wealth, suffering to ease, persecution to popularity, death to life, hunger to fullness, want to plenty, humility to pride; and its members of the same make-up, and we will show you an apostolie church over whieh the Lamb of God would rejoice.

Will you, reader, hear us for a moment? What resemblance has the ehurch to-day with the one the New Testament describes? The easy-lamp, lavender style of Christianity which meets us on a fair Sunday morning on the way to the so-ealled house of God, one would suppose was a turn-out expressly to show the latest style of how dry goods could be cut to pieces and sewed together in a most marvelous way, as intricate and unartistic as human genius could devise; and that the God such creatures worship must deal heavily in dry goods, or took particular delight in seeing his worshipers dressed in the latest style. O tell us, what are the moral perceptions of such people as regards the spirituality of divine worship?

Do you, my reader, (Christian reader,) really believe that under the divine sanction, the church was anointed and empowered to reclaim this world, and that we need such fullness less now than then? or do you, like some, entertain the idea that by some unaccountable way we have this same power hid away in a very mysterious succession from the fathers down and absorbed in the church universal? Let me tell you, each of us needs individually just this Holy Ghost outfit, or we are shorn of our strength. Here lies the ground of sueeess. If we build without the corner-stone we build on the sand. Will you bend your knees in humble prayer and ask and insist until you get it?

Wm. Lloyd Garrison, the son of the noted abolitionist, recently read a paper before a "liberal elub" —a better name would be infidel club—on the question, "What religion can liberals give their children." Although this unworthy son of a worthy father repudiated the religion of the Bible, yet he eonfessed his inability to find a satisfactory substitute in any of the teachings of infidelity. Speaking of his ehildren, he is reported as follows: "He sorrowfully confessed that his churehless children have lost 'the noble, uplifting hymns' by which 'martyrs and saints have been sustained.' They have lost, also, 'familiarity with the Bible, which, interpreted aright, is, after all, the Book of books for the inspiration and eomfort of humanity.' He had been to hear Ingersoll, and was not sorry that he left his little ones at home. Materialism fills no void and brings with it animalism. He had rather have his children Calvinists than drunkards, smokers, and geuerally morally loose. The transcendental worship of humanity he pronounced absurd."—Gospel Messenger.

RELIGION OF MASONRY.

It can clearly be shown that the ancient mysteries of Egypt, Asia, India, Judea, Greece and Rome conformed to the prevailing religions of the countries in which they existed. In fact the religions of these countries were but the outgrowth of the ancient Masonic mysteries which were veiled in allegorical fables, teaching the masses from their symbols and emblems, the knowledge of the one God and the immortality of man. But in the main fundamental characteristics, the ancient mysteries of all the nations of antiquity were similar, differing only in detail and in minor ceremonies. The ancient emblems and symbols of Osiris and Isis in Egypt were exemplified in the Egyptian pantheon. In Greece and Rome by the Grecian mythology. The outward details in India conformed to the religion of Brahma; in China to the teachings of Confucius; in Judea borrowed from the Persian Empire and the Kingdom of Tyre, with whose king a close alliance was formed by Solomon, King of Israel, and the religion of Masonry conforming to the peculiar ideas of the Hebrews, was curiously interwoven with the Jewish religion.

Coming down through the ages, from the advent of Christ, it was carried along by the operative Temple and Cathedral builders of the middle centuries until its ritual and ceremonies became still further modified and revised about 200 years ago, and even in this century has changed in minor details.

How natural to conform to the prevailing Christian religion, and in all countries where a belief in the Jewish or Christian religion prevails, on every Masonic altar the Bible is recognized as one of the great lights in Masonry. At the same time in India the sacred writings of Brahma, the teachings of Zoroaster in Persia, the Maxims of the illustrious sage Confucius in China, and the large number of the followers of Mohamet place on their altars the sacred books of all their different religions and recognize the rules and maxims therein contained. And in every land wherever Masonry is practiced, under whatever religion may be prevailing the institution preserves the universality of its two grand fundamental characteristics, believed in by all nations and all religions of the unity of God and the immortality of man. Hence all difficulties vanish, and recognizing these two cardinal principles, Masonry is universal. Across its threshold, believing in God, no other test of faith is required, no questions can be raised as to what creed a brother may believe in, or what his political affiliations may be and all are united in advancing the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God, and circling the globe, following the course of the sun, the gavel of the master calls the craft at work and welcomes around its altars the natives of the Occident and the Orient, the east, west, north and south, as a universal brotherhood, as extensive as the dimensions of a lodge.—The Freemason, Detroit.

REPUTABLE GAMBLING.

[From a sermon by Rev. E. Frank Howe in the First Congregational church, Peoria.]

Those who engage in respectable gambling resort to all sorts of quibbles to make their gambling appear to be a species of legitimate business. They varnish it over with smooth names, "buying and selling." The places where it is done are called "Boards of Trade," "Stock Exchange," "Broker's Office," and so on. I do not mean that all transactions in Boards of Trade, Stock Exchange, or Brokerage are gambling operations, but I do say that these respectable names are made to cover transactions which are no more nor less than gambling, as dramshops are labelled "Office," "Sample Room," and the like. And every transaction, wherever made, or by whosoever made, in which the only value given is the chance to make what another loses is of the nature of gambling. Now I know very well that by sophistical twisting and turning it can be made to appear that much legitimate business is of this nature. But an honest man, I mean one honest with himself, need not be in doubt where the line between gambling and legitimate business runs. Did you buy wheat, or did you simply buy the chance to make the difference in the price of wheat to-day and to-morrow? Did you buy wheat or did you stake so much money on what the price of wheat will be at some future time? If the latter then you staked your money on a contingent issue, and that is gambling. One of the very worst results of this respectable gambling as carried on in speculating is that it so blunts men's moral sensibilities that they fail to see the distinction between right and wrong and put upon themselves all sorts of deceptions to justify their course.

It is easy for a man who is not dealing in options or margins to see that it is nothing but gambling, and it is very difficult to convince one who is dealing in options, though he be intelligent and an active member of the church, that this business is not just as legitimate as buying and selling strawberries.

A man will go into a room and see men staking their money on a game of cards or the turn of a wheel, and when these men call themselves "sporting men," and talk about their "business," he calls them gamblers, and their "business" gambling. That same man will squat for hours before a blackboard upon which the ups and downs in the price of grain, stock, etc., are written, waiting for what he thinks a good chance to stake his money on what he thinks the price will be an hour, a week or a month hence, and call it buying or selling wheat, stock, etc. He does not want any wheat, and he knows that the man with whom he is dealing has none to sell. Neither of them expect that one kernel of wheat will ever be moved one inch on account of their transaction. It is as much gambling as staking money on a horse race or a cock fight. Or he will go into a room full of men who make bedlam by shouting that they will sell so much of this, that or the other to be delivered at a certain time, and watch his chance to stake his money on the chance that the article will be worth more or less at that time, and call this buying and selling; call this business. Perhaps probably not one of the men shouting themselves hoarse as to the price at which he will sell this or that or the other, has a particle of this, that or the other to sell, or expects to have a particle of it. And the one buying knows that he has none, and he himself does not want it if he has any. All he wants or expects is the difference in price if it shall be worth more at what is called the "time of delivery." And if the price is less he expects to pay the difference. He simply stakes his money on the contingent issue as to the future price of the article. It is gambling pure and simple.

SIMPLE, PURE BETTING,

ITS DEMORALIZING EFFECTS.

And this leads me to the other point that this gambling has all the demoralizing effect of the disreputable gambling. It blinds to moral distinctions. It comes right into the church and takes men who are honest and makes defaulters, forgers and swindlers of them. It has taken multitudes of church members who were not hypocrites, men who were sincere in their desire and purpose to lead a true Christian life, and has put them into the State's prisons of our land, and, worse than putting them there, it has made them such that they ought to be there. It makes them moral wrecks on every hand.

A SAD STORY.

It takes promising young men and ruins them financially and morally. Let me give you an instance. I knew intimately a young man who went into a store in Boston. He proved to be very capable in business and was rapidly advanced in position and salary. When one firm went out of business another that had seen him at once engaged his services. After a little he began to tell of the talk in the store about making money in mining stocks. One day one man had made so much in a single day. I saw the danger, and I said to him over and over again, "Stick to your business and do not touch mining stocks or any other form of speculating." One Sunday I found him and his mother in great trouble, because, as he said, he had lost from his pocket $50 of his employer's money. He told a plausible story about it, and yet I knew it was not true and so told my wife when I went home. He induced his mother to draw $50 from the savings bank to make good his loss. He promised to return it from his wages. He not only never did, but he never even gave her any of his wages for their support. What I feared was true. He had begun gambling, following the example of business men about him. He kept at it till he lost every cent of his mother's little patrimony, till he committed forgery and was kept from prison only by settling the matter, till he lost his situation, till he became so thoroughly untruthful and dishonest that no confidence could be placed in him.

HEARTLESSLY CRUEL.

Again, like disreputable gambling, it is heartlessly cruel. One of the most terrible results of all gambling is its destruction even of natural feelings of sympathy. This is a natural result, for the whole purpose of gambling is to secure what is another's without rendering any value in return. As I said in the outset, it is covetousness in its purest form, entirely unadulterated or unassociated with anything good. It is selfishness without one particle of regard for another. It is not strange, therefore, that gamblers come to look with indifference upon the most revolting scenes of distress. Gambling houses are the frequent scenes of suicides from remorse. Gamblers look with indifference upon this distress. They also will, by tricks and treachery, lead the innocent and unsuspecting into ruin. They fleece their victims mercilessly. Respectable gambling is as cruel as the disreputable. It aims to bankrupt men. It attempts it by tricks as cruel as any resorted to by those who are now for a time slinking out of sight or keeping quiet in our city. It attempts to force up prices that it may win the stakes. It resorts to all sorts of trickery that it may do this. It aims to get the control of all there is of a commodity, that those who have sold to be delivered at a certain time may lose their stakes. They call it getting up a "corner" and never was there a more appropriate name. It is as selfish, as cruel, as fiendish as putting a man in a corner by superior force and then compelling him to give up his money. It has in it the very force which makes it robbery. The man who gets up a corner is not only a gambler, he is a robber. And he not only robs his fellow-gambler, but he robs the community generally and especially the poor. A few winters since parties in New York got up a "corner" on coal. Prices were put up enormously. The rich who had laid in their winter's supply did not feel it, but the poor who could buy only a few pounds at a time and had no bin to which they could go, but must needs buy day by day or week by week, these who with difficulty could get money with which to buy at ordinary prices, were compelled to freeze or pay their royalty into the hands of grasping gamblers. Thousands of dollars were thus wrung from the hard earnings of the poor that these gamblers might win their bet. They laughed at their trick and cared not a straw for their shivering victims. And yet men get up these corners deliberately and still stand high in society, in church, in Sunday-schools, in Y. M. C. A., and enroll themselves among the "Christian workers." Out upon such respectability as that! Out upon such Christianity as that! It is time for the church to make her voice heard and cleanse her skirts and her roll from such degrading practices. No man who deals in margins is fit to be in the church, in the Sunday-school, in the Y. M. C. A., or among Christian workers, no more fit to be there than any other gambler. I think this church refused to give a letter a few years since to a member who had been caught gambling. I wonder if it would refuse to give a letter to a member caught dealing in margins!

DEMORALIZES LEGITIMATE BUSINESS.

This respectable gambling also demoralizes legitimate business. Prices are no longer governed by God's beneficent law of supply and demand. But they are pushed up and pushed down by artificial means—by trickery. The legitimate dealer does not know but that to-morrow a set of gamblers will push up prices so that it will be ruinous for him to buy and yet if he is to keep his business going he must buy. He does not know but that to-morrow a set of gamblers will push prices down so that his stock must be sold at a discount. This abominable practice which prevails to so large an extent in our land sends out its demoralizing influence through all branches of trade. It is the bane and curse of the business of to-day. These gamblers not only fill no necessary place in the business world, or in the community, but they prey upon it. They contribute nothing to the good of the community. The community and legitimate business would be a hundredfold better off if the whole herd of them were swept away. Not seldom is it that with them begin our financial pains. In fact the trails of their evil influence are legion.

NOT SO BAD AS RESPECTABLE GAMBLING.

Talk of disreputable gambling! Bad as it is, it is not a thousandth part as bad as this which is so respectable that it in no way affects a man's standing in society, or even in the church. The effect is as bad upon the individual as the disreputable gambling, and upon the community it is a thousand fold worse. I recollect a residence in Terre Haute which was pointed out to me as having been owned by a man whom I knew who had lost it by gambling. I recollect the impression it made upon me. There came before my mind the picture of his family going out of it, deprived of a pleasant home with nothing to show for it, and of the other man and his family moving into it. It was the only house that I ever had seen or ever have seen which was lost by gambling—disreputable gambling. But you can find hundreds of homes, and you need not go out of this city to find some of them—homes in city and country which have been lost through this respectable gambling. You find like devastation from this respectable gambling everywhere. Where you will find one home lost through disreputable gambling you will find a hundred lost through this respectable gambling. It is estimated that $800,000,000 go into this maelstrom annually in New York city alone. And no small part of this comes from the country towns of our land; represents the small earnings and savings of the country. Some of it has been invested there by the owners, and much by those to whom it had been committed in trust.

But worse than devastated homes, worse than lost fortunes in old age, worse than the wastings of hard earnings and frugal savings, worse than any material loss, is the moral ruin which is wrought by this respectable gambling. It is time, it is high time, that the public conscience was aroused and educated in reference to this matter. It is time for society to put its ban upon this respectable gambling, and make it, too, disreputable. It is time for ministers to speak plainly and strongly upon this matter. It is time for the church and religious movements to be done with the gamblers of this sort. It is time for honorable business men who care for the true interests of commerce to shake off this vampire which has fastened itself upon the vitals of legitimate business.

—"One ounce of 'it is written,' gives more confidence than a ton of what we have felt."—C. H. Spurgeon.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS:

OR

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR.

BY E E. FLAGG, AUTHOR OF "HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

CHAPTER XXV.—Concluded.

Stephen turned pale as death. He had not a cent invested in that bank or any other, and the news involved no personal loss to him—but the absconding cashier was no other than Mr. Felix Basset.

"It's bad business—will be for a good many, I am afraid," continued the other. "He's been falsifying his accounts a good while, and nobody suspected it."

Stephen's heart was heavy within him. He grew dizzy. It was like a moral earthquake. Could this be true of a man who had always seemed honest and upright, who had been so friendly to him, and whom he had trusted with the entire trust of a frank and unsuspecting nature? Yet there was the crowd, and a bank official on the steps talking to them, though it was cold comfort for these poor laboring men and women to be told that the law would do what it could to recover their stolen property, in the face of the bad success which had attended the law's efforts in so many similar cases.

Nelson Newhall was standing near. He turned round, saw Stephen, and nodded in recognition.

"I hope you are not one of the losers," said Stephen, forgetting Mr. Basset for a moment in pity for the many obliged to see the hard earnings of a lifetime swept away.

"All I have laid up was in that bank," was the quiet reply. "But those who have work and are able to work are not to be pitied. I know an aged couple whose all was invested there, and now they will have to eat the bread of public charity, which will be bitterer to them than death; and I can tell you of other cases almost as sad. God pity them."

"Amen," said Stephen, and he moved away.

The next scrap of talk which reached his ears was this:

"Church members ain't a bit better than folks that ain't. Things have got to such a pass now that when I hear of a man's cutting up as Basset has done I begin to ask what Sunday-school he is superintendent of."

"Come now, there's a question more to the point than that," gruffly put in another voice which Stephen recognized as Martin Treworthy's. "Basset was an Odd-fellow, wa'n't he? I say, better ask what secret society he belongs to."

It is a curious fact that while the press will record of a noted defaulter—the secular part of it with great gusto—that he belongs to the church and teaches in the Sunday-school, he may belong to the Masons, Odd-fellows, or any other secret society, and not a word on the subject be breathed by those same respectable journals. And we ask in the name of common fairness, why proclaim the one fact, and be silent about the other?

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE TRUE LIGHT SHINETH.

The crowd did not linger long around the bank when the uselessness of doing so became apparent. They dispersed quietly, and the building was left to itself, with its closely-drawn shutters, barred doors, and rifled vaults.

Stephen, in his first shocked bewilderment, had felt as if every prop of trust in his fellow-man had been knocked from beneath him. The facts proved to be that Mr. Basset had speculated on a large scale and under an assumed name, and when fortune turned against him he had to face two alternatives: discovery and the State's prison, or a lengthened exile in some country out of the reach of extradition laws, leaving discovery to come afterwards. Strictly speaking, however, there was but one alternative present in Mr. Basset's mind—the one last mentioned; and as in the words of the homely old proverb, "one might as well die for an old sheep as a lamb," why not crib enough of the bank's remaining funds to enable him to live comfortably in the strange land he must make his future home? But was Mr. Basset all those years during which he had passed in society for a Christian man and an honest citizen, a conscious hypocrite? By no means. He had caught the fever which seems almost indigenous to American life, to get rich suddenly, and had only verified the words of inspiration that "he who hasteth to be rich shall fall into a snare." He had gravitated to Odd-fellowship from the natural instinct of a man of weak principle to seek alliance with some system that in its "show of will worship," its teachings of a mere outward morality would flatter him with a sense of self-merit and prestige in the eyes of the world; and at the same time give him what a weak man always wants—an invisible advantage over others. "But did Odd-fellowship really have much to do with his fall?" inquires the "candid reader." We will try to be equally candid in our answer.

The writer once heard it remarked on the death of "the oldest Mason in the country"—one of that ubiquitous race which the order is continually burying, and of whom we are obliged to record that he had robbed the widow and cheated the fatherless, not on so grand a scale as Mr. Basset, but in ordinary business ways through the greater part of his life—that "Mr. H— would not have been such a rascal if he had not belonged to the Masonic lodge;" which remark has a true and a false side to it. "Mr. H—" had a turn for sharp practices, and a heart that was like the nether millstone when it was a question of his beloved dollars, but with neither of these two circumstances could the lodge be properly chargeable. It was chargeable, however, with being a secret, oath-bound organization, and as such affording just the right kind of covert for men to hide under who wanted to swindle helpless cowans, keep saloons, or rob banks; an indictment by the way to which every secret clan must answer sooner or later at the bar of an enlightened Christian public. I once heard a physician express the opinion that the common use of anæsthetics had a deterioriating influence on physical bravery. The very knowledge that an agent exists which will give perfect insensibility to pain takes away the courage to bear severe operations, and the same principle may account for some other things. People lament the prevailing dishonesty, the frauds and peculations too common even to excite surprise, and never stop to ask whether the prevalence of secret societies, each with their Masonic protection clause, may have anything to do with this state of things. Does not the fact that such societies exist, bound to shield each other against the consequences of "imprudent" acts, virtually tempt to the commission of such acts and thus put a premium on crime? We respectfully submit to all the philanthropists, moralists and reformers in the land whether it is well for government to charter these institutions and then tax law-abiding citizens with the enormous expense of following criminals through their secret labyrinths in a vain attempt to bring them to justice. And still more solemnly would we put the question to every pastor, "How far is the church responsible for the fact that our most noted forgers and defaulters are almost without exception nominal members of her fold?

The pulpit is silent while the young men of the country are being drawn into the countless lodge-traps which borrow their religion from the idolatries of ancient Egypt, and their laws from the despotisms of the dark ages; it lifts no voice of warning, no announcement of future woe against "them who seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us? Is it strange that her children fall an easy prey to the masked destroyer? that the clerk or the cashier becomes a Mason, an Odd-fellow, a Knight of Pythias, submits to their degrading ceremonies, adopts their "universal religion," and finally startles the community with some gross betrayal of public or private trust? Those readers who expect me to heap maledictions on the head of Mr. Felix Basset, and pursue him with scathing denunciations for his fraud and hypocrisy, will be disappointed. I prefer to keep my execrations, richly though he may deserve them, for others more deserving than he—for those who proselyted him to the service of the lodge in his penniless young manhood to make him tenfold more the child of hell than themselves, and last, but not least, for the pastor who could, by officiating at its Christless altars, give the lie to all his pulpit ministrations.

Stephen had not yet come to the point where he saw these things clearly, but Martin Treworthy's brave defence of the church against the lodge gave him a new respect for the old soldier; and what did him no harm, an added dissatisfaction with himself who had lost his right to do the same.

He re-entered his office with the feeling that it was a miserable kind of a world, shut his law books, turned down the gas and went to bed. But refreshing sleep after such a mental shock was impossible. He tossed restlessly about thinking over his first meeting with Mr. Basset, how companionable and kindly he had seemed; and how he had urged him to become an Odd-fellow. He went over in memory the initiation scene. He did not want to and struggled against it, but in that half-sleeping, half-waking state the will, like some captive Arabian genii, seems the victim of a power that revels in setting it all manner of grotesque tasks. As soon as he shut his eyes he saw before him the grinning skeleton, the lighted torches, the masked faces; and every time they passed before him the thing seemed more and more diabolical—like a dream of infernal regions. And then he seemed to be again in the little hill-country church of his fathers. It was communion Sabbath, and the candidates for admission, himself among them, were standing in a row before the table on which were displayed the simple emblems of our Lord's broken body and shed blood. He saw the pastor at the baptismal font as with uplifted hand he pronounced the solemn words, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." And how in its heavenly pureness that scene contrasted with the other! Like the pearl and jasper glory of the New Jerusalem with the sulphurous smoke of the pit.

He finally dropped into a troubled sleep and overslept himself. And in the hurry of getting ready for the early train, for he was obliged to go away on some court business, he had no time to think of troublesome matters. And after all why should he be troubled? It was sad, it cut him to the heart that a man who had stood high in the esteem of the community should turn out a consummate rogue, but this was not the first experience of the kind, nor was it likely to be the last. Still he could not dismiss from his mind a thing that everybody around him was discussing, and which formed the staple news of the morning papers. He could not help overhearing one stranger tell another of a shocking suicide in a neighboring town, the result of a mind unbalanced by the loss of property consequent on the bank's suspension. Of course it must have been a weak mind at the outset, with no strong supports in either philosophy or religion, but this did not tend to make the case less, only more pitiful.

"Basset's safe in Canada by this time," remarked one of the two strangers, both of whom had a decidedly clerical look, and were in reality two D. D.'s returning home from a conference meeting.

"Yes," returned the other. "All our successful rogues will be likely to make Canada their place of retreat till we can have an extradition law that will reach them. But how a man enjoying so high a degree of public confidence and esteem could forfeit it all for wealth he can never properly enjoy is a mystery that even the power of a sudden and overwhelming temptation does not to my mind fully explain. I account for it rather on the ground of a general and widespread corruption, a kind of moral miasma that taints church and state. One of the unfailing signs of that national decadence which ends as in the French Revolution with the wreck of all law and government, is the lack of trust between man and man, which always follows where God is practically dethroned as he certainly is in our American nation to-day. As a patriot and a Christian I tremble for my country. The public conscience needs a great arousing. We want a Pentecostal outpouring of the Spirit on our sleeping congregations. This nation must be brought back to the basis of the ten commandments, but then that will only be by the lever of a living church behind it."

His companion, who wore glasses, and had a mild Melanchton-like face, shook his head in sorrowful assent.

"You are right, brother. There is too little pungent preaching on the subject of common, everyday morals. We are puffed up with denominational pride when we ought rather to mourn our spiritual deadness. Oh, that the Lord would remember Zion and comfort again her waste places!"

These ministers were good men. They really felt what they said while they had not the smallest idea that they stood in imperative need themselves of "a great awakening" on one very important subject. Their churches swarmed with Masons and Odd-fellows, and though the reverend doctor with the face like Melancthon's hated secretism, he bore no testimony against it. The seal on his lips was partly ignorance. He did not know much about the secret orders and he did not want to know anything more about them. He believed, so he would tell you, if you hinted gently at his duty in this regard, in the expellant power of pure Gospel preaching. And while he preached the Gospel—and he certainly did preach it and live it—women filled his church, at the same time that their husbands and fathers and brothers were receiving a mock regeneration and new birth in Mason and Odd-fellow lodges. And yet he could mourn and mourn sincerely over the desolation of Zion!

But Stephen suddenly forgot their talk. Standing on the platform, ready for the northward bound express train, stood two men, one of whom carried a carpet-bag, and had a face so covered with huge red whiskers that scarcely a feature was distinguishable; and yet this one glimpse gave Stephen a curious feeling of having known him in some long ago period, as if they had met and become acquainted in some pre-existent state. It was not till hours afterwards that a strange suspicion flashed through his mind. Could this Esau-like stranger have been Felix Basset?

(To be continued.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The statement of the funded debt of this district ($21,279,500) shows that this city, if not so populous or wealthy, is, at least, as extravagant as others. Estimating the population at 200,000, it gives a debt per capita of $106, or for each adult male of more than $500. I doubt if any other city is so greatly involved. Considering that one-half of all expenses are paid by the national government, it is a little remarkable that the debt should be so great. The fact however that it is represented by bonds at 3.65 per cent interest shows that the credit of the city has not been impaired. Since 1878 there has been a reduction of the amount by $1,641,400, and the interest charge of $96,349.

Political and official decapitation seems to have gone on briskly for some time past, but it is also true that many Republicans have been reappointed and more still remain as they were. It is a matter of congratulation that President Cleveland evidently tries to obey the Civil Service law in letter and spirit, and that he steadfastly resists the political pressure that party leaders bring upon him. Among those reappointed I see the name of our friend and co-worker T. F. Dolan, who has doubtless demonstrated that he is worth more to the pension department than the office is to him.

Among the names mentioned for District Commissioner, the most important office in this District, I notice that of Hon. S. C. Pomeroy. As it is expected to be a non-partisan appointment, there seems to be not a little probability that the distinguished ex-Senator will be designated for the place. The President has presumed to give the matter his earliest attention.

The following, clipped from the Star, does not seem to show a very prosperous condition of Chapter Masonry:

THE CONVENTION OF THE HIGH PRIESTHOOD.—At the semi-annual convention of the high priests and past high priests, R. A. M., of the District of Columbia, held June 29th, the following officers were elected: Jose M. Yznaga, G. H. P., president; Joseph Hamacher, P. H. P. No. 1, vice-president; Wm. R. Singleton, P. H. P. No. 7, secretary; Wm. Pittis, P. H. P. No. 8, chaplain; Wm. M. Hurley, P. H. P. No. 7, master of ceremonies; H. M. Gilman, P. H. P. No. 2 conductor; E. C. Elmore, P. H. P. No. 5, herald; Thos F. Gibbs, H. P. No. 3, guard. The present membership is 86. Lost by death since organization in 1872, 10 members.

It would be well if the Christian people of this country could be brought to consider that the Great and only High Priest known to the Christian religion is entirely ruled out of this order. Not only is his name not mentioned in its ritual, but is cut out and excluded. It follows of course that such a priesthood cannot be in any sense Christian or in harmony with Christianity, and yet, strange to say, many professed Christian ministers are giving their aid and comfort to this anti-Christ. When will they awake from their profound moral stupidity and look at this matter from a Christian standpoint?

Among the grand(?) things that have recently transpired is a grand reception given to the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. Of course it was at the Masonic Temple, and a man heretofore unknown to fame received an ovation, not because of any service done to his country, but in order to advertise and honor an order by which its members seek political power and other selfish advantage.

H. H. HINMAN.

WAUKESHA NATIONAL REFORM CONVENTION.

KOSSUTH, Ia., June 26, 1885.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I snatch the first spare moment to tell you of our convention on the 17th and 18th in the Vernon U. P. church, Waukesha county, Wis. Prof. D. McAllister of Geneva College, Pa., was with us, and was the leading speaker in all the discussions. He was lecturer for the National Reform Association for several years, and is well posted on questions relating to government and religion. He made the address the first evening, clearly explaining the relation of constitutional and statute law. The national Constitution, he said, was part of the constitution of every State. Statute law had little force except where it conformed to Constitutional law. We had no basis for moral legislation in our Constitution. There was no law binding the government on the Sabbath question. He showed that the most important reform was to bring the nation to the standard of the Divine law. This covered the whole field of reform.

Sessions were held forenoon and afternoon on Thursday, the people spreading a sumptuous dinner at noon. I spent sixteen years of my early life in this neighborhood, and remember the exciting anti-slavery meetings held by these Scotch-Irish Presbyterians before the war. The last session Thursday evening was held in the Baptist church, Prospect Hill. Here Dr. Ingersoll, a brother of the noted infidel, enlivened the meeting by asking questions, and advocating the secular theory of government. Rev. J. B. Galloway acted as chairman.

Two sessions were spent in discussing the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

"WHEREAS, Our beloved country is now more seriously threatened than ever before by elements of demoralization and ruin; such as intemperance, Sabbath desecration, infidelity, licentiousness, secretism, and the spirit of lawlessness in general, therefore,

Resolved 1. That as the only means of counteracting these evils, we should labor to secure the rule of Christian morals for the nation as well as the individual

2. That one great source of our danger, and political corruption is our lack of moral anchorage for the nation.

3. That after long experiment we have found that Sabbath laws, the Bible in the schools, the Christian law of marriage, and temperance legislation, can only be efficiently maintained by constitutional law.

4. That secretism in general, and Freemasonry in particular, is one of the greatest obstructions to moral reform, and the enforcement of such legislation. This evil is contrary to the law of God and to the genius of our free institutions; and, therefore, the charters of all secret lodges granted by our federal and State legislatures should be withdrawn and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the religious amendment, instead of infringing any individual's right of conscience, or tending in the least degree to a union of church and state, affords the strongest safeguard of both the civil and religious liberties of all citizens."

Those who took part in the discussion besides Prof. McAllister were Rev. J. B. Galloway, Rev. Isaiah Faris, Mr. Orvis, James Begg, Mr. Cristison, and others.

Prof. McAllister lectured in Waukesha on Friday evening, and I preached there in the Baptist church Sabbath. We had intended to work up the convention for Waukesha, but other meetings were announced at the only time when we could hold it. Secretism and sore-headed Republicanism are serious obstacles to reform at Waukesha. One of the pastors pledged me not to touch on prohibition, before allowing me to occupy his pulpit. I was struck by this sign over a livery stable attached to a saloon: "Free stabling. No accommodation for temperance men." I was told of some church members who complied with the condition—taking a glass in order to get accommodation. M. A. GAULT.

A LETTER FROM TRANSVAAL, SOUTH AFRICA.

We have for several months been engaged in going about through South Africa, while preaching the Gospel and praying for the healing of the sick. "He sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick." (Luke 9: 2.) A great number have already asked our prayers, and no small proportion of them have been healed, either entirely or in part, even of diseases that baffled all skill of physicians. Often, at once, remarkable cures are effected by the power of the Lord upon the prayer of faith. White and black, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, are equally asking our prayers, and the Lord proves to be willing to heal them all, upon the fulfilling of the necessary conditions. For sick ministers of the Dutch Reformed church we have even been asked to pray for healing.

At present we are laboring in the Transvaal, or South African Republic, as it is called. The civilized portion of South Africa is mainly divided in three parts: namely Cape Colony, Orange Free State, and South African Republic, or the Transvaal. At first after commencing the work of faith-healing, we spent a few months in Cape Colony, then in the Orange Free State, and recently arrived in the last named State.

I have been at work at and in the vicinity of Kimberley, where are found the extensive diamond diggings, which have yielded already millions of dollars worth of diamonds; but the price of diamonds is presently very low in comparison with what it has been.

From this place we were brought by a gentleman from Transvaal, by oxen-wagon, a distance of about 180 miles, which took us ten days and nights. This was a wagon weighing over 3,000 pounds by itself, being covered with linen, and furnishing accommodation for two families, those of the owner of the wagon and ourselves. This gigantic wagon was drawn by sixteen oxen, which was no hard work for them, for the same number of oxen is able to draw on this wagon a load of 8,000 pounds, if needs be. During these ten days of our journey we did not enter any hotel to take our meals, but the mistress, with her colored servant, did the necessary cooking in the field. Sometimes they found wood on the way which would do for fuel, but usually dried cows-dung must serve the purpose, and really made an excellent fire. In fact the fuel of the country people, in general, consists almost exclusively of this material, which, in the absence of other more desirable fuel, may be considered a great blessing. The gentleman who brought us had a cancer on the nose, for which we prayed before leaving, and before we got home, the cancer was taken away by the Lord.

Soon after our arrival sick people came to ask our prayers, and the Lord gave his blessing upon it. We also hold Gospel meetings every night, by which a general interest is created in religion. From all quarters we receive invitations to pray for the sick. We experience also much enmity in our work, just as well as Christ and his apostles did in the same kind of work. Satan cannot keep quiet when he sees a work going on by which his dominion is very much endangered. Scripture teaches us that bodily sickness is a work of the devil, and when Jesus, by means of the prayer of faith, gets a chance to destroy these works, then the devil is very much dissatisfied. Especially as the loosening of these physical bonds has a tendency to deliver the soul out of the snare of the devil, as both Scripture and experience teach. (Luke 13: 16). For this purpose he engages even some so-called ministers of the Gospel in his service, knowing they may greatly promote his cause. These persons have in this country still more influence than in America, since the people here feel more dependent upon their spiritual leaders. The ministers are mostly considered among the Dutch in South Africa as a kind of small popes, in their respective dominions. Disobedience to them seems to expose them to the ruin of their souls. Some of these unconscientious ministers consider what may be the most effective weapon against us, and they appear to come to the conclusion that it is to make the people believe that we heal the sick by resorting for aid to Beelzebub.

May this glorious work progress more and more over the whole world, in spite of the devil and his servants. Children of God pray earnestly and continually that all the works of the devil may soon be destroyed, for which purpose Christ, the Son of God, has been manifested. John 3: 8. W. HAZENBERG.

Cape Town.

THE DEVIL OR MEN, WHICH?

A brother urging a division of labor between the American and Cynosure, stated that the American should meet men in schoolhouses and the Cynosure should meet the devil in the church. Before going to battle, it is well both to count the cost and see who the enemy is. This injunction comes from the captain of the host, and we do well that we heed it.

The friends of the reform don't half realize the nature and power of the enemy they must meet and vanquish, entrenched as they are, in the dark lodges led on by Freemasonry. Not only men, but devils confederate are enlisted, organized, drilled, and disciplined, barricaded in dark lodges, and under the god of this world have full possession of church and state, and all social, financial and political influences. All, I say, the exceptions of the friends of the reform are only as the dark spots on the sun compared with its flood of light. This is the enemy we are to meet. He has one organized body, one spirit, one commander, and one work to do. He aspires to the control of the kingdoms of this world. He offered them to Christ, if he would only submit to his control, that is, worship him. Christ conquered him, and how did he do it? He did it by fasting and prayer; by toil, self-denial, suffering and death. He counted not his life dear, and he lived, prayed, fasted and toiled for no other end; and God gave him a triumphant victory.

In this way, and in this way alone, we must get the victory if ever we get it. We cannot divide the labor so that we are relieved from a direct conflict with the devil. Those who propose to so divide the forces that they meet only men in schoolhouses, will be only a paralyzed member of this army corps, and if they amount to anything, it will be only as they are attached to a living body, that drags them through the struggle as an incubus—a dead weight. Did Washington make such a division, when he sought God on his knees while leader of the colonial soldiers? Did Lincoln do it, when he not only prayed but called on the people to pray? Did Cromwell do it, while the diseipline of the army was conducted upon the plan of a prayer-meeting? It simply cannot be done in any other way.

The work of the reform is losing its power, becoming feeble, and the power of the enemy is becoming mighty, irresistible, because reformers cease to fast and pray that Almighty God may be always in the conflict, the power of his people, sending weakness, consternation, defeat and death into the ranks of the enemy. Instead of this many of the leading reformers resort to scheming, planning human inventions, dividing labors so that a part shall meet only men in schoolhouses, while others are assigned the terrible task of meeting devils in the church. And in this division they take to themselves the easier side, and assign the fearful work, which neither men nor angels unaided by the grace of God can do, to others. The Cynosure must meet the devil, the American must meet men. The Cynosure editor is a man of like passions with ourselves, even as Elias was; he claims no especial sanctity over his brethren, but his work has been a success. * * * The measure of success he has obtained has been by suffering, and this endured by toil, self-denial, fasting and prayer. While it is far from me to become his eulogist, I would call special attention to his suffering in his struggles in the reform work. Who would be willing to endure what he has endured? Let it be closely studied, for it is the only method by which the reform can triumph.

Those who aspire to be successful workers in the reform must answer to Christ the question, "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I drink of? can ye be baptized with the baptism I am baptized with?" All that the editor of the Cynosure has accomplished, has been done by suffering. The editor of the American must succeed in the same way. Reform work cannot be so divided that he "can meet only men in schoolhouses." Though he leads in politics, he will be called like Cromwell, Washington, and Lincoln to meet the devil, and he must triumph as a toiler and a sufferer. He must be fitted for his work and victory by suffering. The Cynosure has done it, is doing it, and must do it. But, brethren, we need not stop here. We shall triumph. Cromwell triumphed, Washington triumphed, Christ triumphed, and you will triumph. The Cynosnre has gained its present position by suffering and toil. It must advance upon the same plan and so must the American; undivided, joined heart and hand we must stand side by side meeting the world, the flesh, and the devil, by fasting and prayer, by toil and suffering and the day of triumph will certainly come.

THE OLD MAN AGAIN.

PITH AND POINT.

THE HOLY SPIRIT AGAINST MASONRY.

The Cynosure, sent by some friend, unknown to me, has been a blessing to my home. My children and wife enjoy it with myself, very much. I have been a Mason myself; but, praise God, before I ever heard any spoken opposition against it the Holy Spirit spoke against it in my inmost being. When I would be in the lodge with all manner of sinners, the whisper was, "What fellowship hath Christ with Belial?" I praise Jesus Christ our Lord that he has given me grace to witness a good confession, even in Texas, against Masonry, and by his grace I expect to do all in my power to pull down the secret empire. I have circulated some of the copies of the Cynosure, and will still do so May the Lord help us to see that the body of Jesus Christ is "one body" and every one that is in Christ are members of that body.—PHILIP ALLEN, Ennis. Texas.

THE CHURCH UNION CONGRESS.

In the Cynosure of June 11th there was a notice of the Church Congress, held at Hartford. That "Unique Assembly" was certainly working for a very worthy object. Allow me to say that there is quite a large body, or "sect" if you please, of Christians that are working for this same object. In the "last great day" when we all shall meet around the judgment throne, if we call ourselves Wesleyans, or Lutherans, etc., the Supreme Judge may profess unto us, "I never knew you;" for Wesley, Luther, etc., were but men after all. If we are followers of Christ let us call ourselves Christians. Without the Bible there would be no Christians in the world, therefore, let us throw away all man-made doctrines and take the Bible and that alone for our guide.—IVANHOE, Wayland, Mich.

LODGERY AND TEMPERANCE.

I saw in a late Cynosure the views of an old mother in Israel on temperance and Masonry: first temperance then Masonry. Let me say, in due respect to this good old mother, that is impossible. Wherever Masonry has obtained a foothold in church or state it has brought them under its fearful influence. What can the poor temperance people do with a Masonic jury that has sworn to stand by each other right or wrong, with no less penalty than having their body severed in two, etc. May God help the American party to cut entirely loose from all secretism. This is the prayer of one who was once hoodwinked, but now is free in Christ, whom Masonry denies. My life for prohibition and the American party, cleansed and purified from lodgery.—D. BENJAMIN, Seymour Lake, N. Y.

THE UNDERTOW OF TRUTH.

Everything is moving along quietly here, but there seems to be an undercurrent working against secretism that augers no good to the many societies now forming. —E. R. ATWOOD, Lostant, Ill.

BIBLE LESSONS.

THIRD QUARTER.

STUDIES IN THE KINGS.

LESSON III, July 19.—Omri and Ahab.—1 Kings 16: 23-34.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the Lord.—Prov. 15: 9.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Success is no measure of character. vs. 23–28. Since the death of Jeroboam Israel had been governed by usurpers and torn by fiercely contending factions. The people had license but not liberty. The false worships he introduced had spread like a vine through the body politic and this was their legitimate fruits. The successful adventurer who cut off all Jeroboam's family, meets himself with a similar retribution. His son is slain in a drunken carousal by a traitorous captain, who seems, however, to have had a no hold on the affections of either the army or the people, and after a brief reign of seven days he burns the palace over his head and escapes capture by suicide. We have now our first glimpse of Omri, as a successful general waging war against the traitor who has murdered his sovereign; and so far it is a favorable one. The army by whom he is evidently idolized want to make him king, and they carry their point, for the notice as another proof of Israel's decadence that the people no longer rule. There is a sad alteration since the days when that orderly and dignified assembly met at Shechem to claim their constitutional rights from Rehoboam, but it is only a picture of the state to which false worships will reduce any nation. Where there is no fealty to God there is no trust in man, and the springs of patriotism dry up. It is recorded of all these usurpers, that "they walked in the ways of Jeroboam who made Israel to sin." Even the lightnings of God's judgments could not open their eyes. In the words of the prophet, "they had become brutish, they had no understanding." Masonry in modern times takes away the true God, and substitutes the Grand Architect of the universe; and the effect is the same as in all false worships,—blinding to the mind, deadening to the conscience, stimulating to the passions. Omri is loyal to his master. Will he be loyal to his God? From beginning to end his reign is one of unparalled success, yet "he did worse than all that were before him." Unlike his predecessors, he receives no warning of future judgments, but finishes in peace a career unexampled both in prosperity and wickedness, and leaves his son to mount an uncontested throne.

2. The tendency of evil is always to worse. vs. 29–34. Judgments have but hardened the hearts of these Israelitish kings. Will the goodness of God lead them to repent? But the record grows only sadder and more shameful. Ahab marries the infamous Jezebel and openly establishes the worship of Baal Jeroboam had instituted a false and corrupted Judaism, but in Ahab's reign we have pure and simple Baalism, unconnected with a single pure rite or established ordinance of the true religion. The trend of error is always downward. One tiny hole in the dyke will let in the destroying flood. We must fight the beginning of error and base principle, or by and by fighting will be useless. A striking example of the national recklessness is shown in Hiel's braving the curse on the builder of Jericho. There was no fear of God in the land; no dread of his judgments. The nation had become a moral Sahara.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Do God's judgments always come in this life? Ecc. 8: 11. 1 Ti. 5: 24. What is the influence of false worships on the understanding? Is. 44: 19, 20.

"Omri wrought evil." Of Omri it is said that in the eyes of the Lord his conduct on the throne was worse than that of all the kings before him. The particulars are not in the history directly stated further than that he carried out with vigor the fatal and ruinous policy of Jeroboam. But if we refer to the prophecy of Micah (6: 16), we find this remarkable verse: "For the statutes of Omri are kept." We cannot doubt that these "statutes of Omri" were measures adopted for more completely isolating the people of Israel from the services of the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, and of perpetuating—perhaps of increasing—their idolatrous practices. His encouragement of idolatry is incidentally confirmed by the fact that he brought about a marriage between Ahab, his son and heir, and Jezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal, king of Tyre.—Kitto.

"In the eyes of the Lord." If their deeds are hidden from men, they are not hidden from him whose eyes are "in every place beholding the evil and the good." If they sin daringly, and men look on approvingly, God also looks on, who will bring every action into judgment. —Newman.

"And did worse than all." Probably, like Jeroboam and Baasha, he also had his opportunity of restoring the spiritual strength of his people by returning to the pure worship of God, and threw it away, doing "worse than all."—Alfred Barry.

"And Ahab . . . did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him." The same words are used of his father in ver. 25. It is not difficult to see in what way Ahab's rule was worse even than Omri's. The latter had gone beyond his predecessors in the matter of the calf-worship. But the calf-worship, however it may have deteriorated in process of time, was nevertheless a cult, though corrupt and unauthorized, of the one true God. Under Ahab, however, positive idolatry was established and fostered.—the worship of foreign and shameful deities.—Pulpit Com.

"And he took to wife Jezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal." The weakness and the sin of Ahab is seen in his putting himself deliberately in the strongest temptation to forsake God, by marrying such a heathen as Jezebel. That person is already more than half fallen who deliberately rushes into temptation.—Pel.

"And went and served Baal and worshiped him." Baal and Ashtoreth, or Astarte,—whence our word star,—were the chief Phœnician deities, male and female respectively. They correspond to the Assyrian Bel and Ishtar. The sun was regarded as the emblem of Baal, and the moon, or the planet Venus, as that of Ashtoreth. Hence the worship was connected with that of the heavenly bodies. Ashtoreth was to the Phœnicians what the goddess Venus was to the Greeks. Hence the worship of these imaginary deities was associated with fierce, and at the same time the most licentious and infamous, rites. Consequently it was productive of the greatest profligacy and wickedness, and was especially abhorrent to the God of infinite purity and truth.—Todd.

"He reared up an altar for Baal." It was large enough to contain an immense crowd of worshipers. It stood apparently within a great walled enclosure, and rose in such strength as to seem like a castle. A huge image of the Sun-god, flanked by idolatrous symbols, was seen within, amidst a blaze of splendor, reflected from gilded and painted roofs, and walls, and columns. A staff of 450 priests in their vestments ministered at the altars, and Ahab himself attended the worship in state, presenting rich offerings: doubtless amidst all the wild excitement and license which marked the service of Baal.—Geikie.

"And Ahab made a grove." Rather, a wooden pillar which represented the Phœnician goddess Astarte. The original word is Asherah, the primary sense of which is fortune, happiness, prosperity, just as Fortuna is deified by the Romans. Etymologically, it is the goddess Astarte, so famous among all the people at the extremity of the Mediterranean. She was the eastern Venus, sometimes represented as the Stella Veneris, or star of Venus. —Tayler Lewis. A temple to Asherah, the Canaanite Venus, was built, apparently in the precincts of Jezreel, 400 priests ministering in its courts and offering on its obscene altars. Of this Jezebel was the especial patroness, maintaining the whole establishment at her own cost. —Geikie.

"He laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born." In exact accordance with the words of Joshua's curse, he lost his first-born son when he began to lay anew the foundations of the walls, and his youngest when he completed his work by setting up the gates. We need not suppose that Jericho had been absolutely uninhabited up to this time. The contrary is implied in 2 Sam. 10: 5, and perhaps in Judges 3: 13. But it was a ruined and desolate place, without the necessary protection of walls, and containing probably but few houses Hiel re-established it as a city, and it soon became once more a place of some importance (see 2 Chron. 28: 15).—Cook.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN THE POSTAL LAWS.

Important changes in the postal laws went into effect July 1. That of most general interest is the practical reduction of the rate on letters, a letter weighing one ounce being carried for two cents, in stead of the limit being one-half ounce as heretofore. Under the act of 1883, the letter rate on each half ounce or fraction thereof was reduced from three to two cents, and now while the price remains the same a person is enabled to send just twice as large a letter. By this law it is also provided that drop letters shall be mailed at the rate of two cents per ounce or fraction thereof, including delivery at letter carrier offices, and one cent where free carrier delivery is not established. It is further provided that all publications of the second class when sent by the publishers thereof from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers or to other news agents, shall be entitle to transmission through the mails at one cent per pound or fraction thereof, such postage to be prepaid as now provided by law. Another important change is that authorizing the issue of a special stamp of the face value of ten cents. When this stamp, in addition to the lawful postage, is attached to a letter, the delivery of which is to be at a free delivery office or at any city, town or village of four thousand population or over, it shall entitle such letter to immediate delivery at any free delivery office designated by the postmaster general as a special delivery office. Such specially stamped letters are required to be delivered immediately within one mile of any special delivery office between 7 o'clock in the morning and 12 o'clock midnight.—Public Ledger.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

H. H. Hinman, Willimantic, Conn.

STATE AGENTS.

Illinois, Geo. T. Dissette, Cynosure office.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion
Mich., A. H. Springstein, Warren.
Missouri, M. N. Butler, Burlington Junc.
Minn., J. P. Richards, care Prof. Paine, Wasioja.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe
Kansas, Robert Loggan, Clifton.

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
D. P. Rathbun, Syracuse, N. Y.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Williamstown, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
R. J. Williams, Winnebago City, Minn.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cl. 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The American Party.

FIRST NOMINATION for President at Oberlin, Ohio, May 23, 1872.

PLATFORM ADOPTED at Chicago, June 28, 1872.

NAME ADOPTED at Syracuse, N. Y., June 3, 1874.

PRESIDENTAL CANDIDATES:

1872—Charles Francis Adams and Joseph L. Barlow.

1876—James B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick.

1880—J. W. Phelps and Samuel C. Pomeroy.

1884—J. Blanchard and J. W. Conant nominated; the former withdrawing, Samuel C. Pomeroy was nominated. Both nominees withdrawing, the support of the party was generally given to John P. St. John and William Daniel, candidates of the Prohibition party.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

F. W. Capwell, New York; E. W. Kirby, Pennsylvania; N. Stratton, Illinois; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts; P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needles, Missouri; S. P. Poole, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884.

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religious or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Llma, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.; Strykersville, N. Y.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

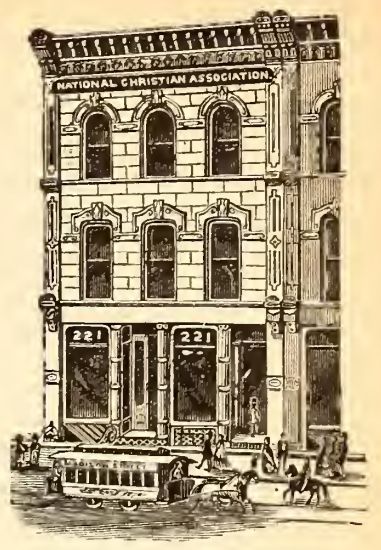
Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.

ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.



A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

C. B. WARD, Secunderabad, India.

The Evangelists associated with Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent

☞ Readers ordering goods, or making inquiries concerning articles advertised in this paper, will confer a favor by stating that they saw the advertisement in THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Rev. W. T. Mcloy, D D., Chicago

REC. SEC'Y.—W. I. Phillips.

COR. SEC'Y and GENEAL AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

DIRECTORS.—Alexander Thomson, M. R. Britten, John Gardner, J. L. Barlow, Joseph Travis, William Moerdyk, O. F. Lumry, M. C. Ranseen. L. N. Stratton, Thos. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D

SECRETARIES.—Rev. S. A. George. H. L. Kellogg and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Wm. H. Chandler, Dover; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., William H. Figg, Reno; Sec., S. L. Cook. Albion; Treas., Benj. Ulsh Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Geo. Warrington, Birmingham; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., T. C. Maughlin, Washington; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. P. Richards, Ft. Scott; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., S. Alexander, Linden.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A Richards, Brighton; Sec'y, H. A. Day, Williamstown; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec. M. N. Butler.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount, Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., A. H. Lamprey, Laconia; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., George Crosby, Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott, Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie; Treas., M. R Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John [illegible]ey, Gratton, Treas., H B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1885

IS MASONRY A RELIGION?—A brilliant and popular young minister says: "Nine out of ten Masons do not regard Masonry as a religion, and when we assail it as such, they are not reached or influenced by our arguments. How are we to reach and convince them?"

Read to them the following from The Freemason, Detroit, June 13th:

"RELIGION OF MASONRY."

"It can be clearly shown that the Ancient Mysteries of Asia, Egypt, India, Judea, Greece and Rome conformed to the religions (polytheistic,) of the countries wherein they existed. In fact the religions of these countries were but the outgrowth of the ancient Masonic mysteries which were veiled in allegorical fables, teaching the masses from their symbols and emblems, the knowledge of the one true God and the immortality of man."

Read the whole article elsewhere. If the worship of Isis, Osiris, and the idol gods of India, Greece and Rome were religions, then Masonry is. To deny it is self-stultification. Its one god is Satan, the god of this world.

SECRET CONTROL OF COLLEGES.

"AMHERST, Mass., June 14, 1885.

DEAR SIR: The following circular note from the alumni of Amherst in Columbus, O., speaks for itself:

"'COLUMBUS, O., June 1.

"'DEAR SIR: The alumni of Amherst college in Columbus have decided unanimously to vote for George A. Plimpton, of New York, to fill the vacancy in the Board of Trustees. They trust their action will command your approval, and have some influence to persuade you to vote in like manner.

"Signed, J. R. Smith, Henry J. Booth, Thomas P. Ballard, L. D. Kaufman, George T. Sparks, George M. Lattimer, G. Stanton Coit, H. N. Galloway, Committee.'

"In a trustee our college needs earnest loyalty; the strongest desire to see Amherst yet more prominent among the leading colleges of our country; tried business ability and energy; a wide and thorough acquaintance with the educational men, methods, and institutions of the day, and withal, as a baiance, a wise conservatism.

"In every particular Mr. Plimpton meets the requirements. His loyalty needs no statement. His business capacity and his thorough acquaintance with educational affairs are fully assured by his position as a leading publisher of educational works.

"Yours, very respectfully,

"SIGMA CHAPTER OF DELTA KAPPA EPSILON."

The Nation (N. Y.) gives the above circular with stringent comments. It condemns this attempt to control colleges by electing secretists as trustees. But, like almost the entire American press, it omits the chief point of the indictment, which is that the lodge system is organized deism and so anti-Christ. When Cambridge went back on its motto, "Christ and his Church," Amherst took it up. The lodge is now seeking to smother it.

STATE OF THE ANTI-SECRET CAUSE.

Duff Green, speaking for the slave-holders, in the United States Telegraph, 1836, said: "Our chief danger lies in the Abolitionists' organized action upon the consciences of our own people. If suffered to go on, we shall soon find springing up among ourselves a belief that slave holding is sin. And if that sentiment prevails, a man's life will be worth nothing to him so long as he owns a slave."

The Abolitionists did "go on;" and so did the slave-holders. The one appealing to God by "concerts of prayer," and to men by argument. Two world's anti-slavery conventions were held in London. The slave's cause was pressed in the general religious bodies and mission boards which were rent asunder by "the dark spirit of slavery." And in 1857 a convention was held in Chicago: "To divorce American missions from American slavery." The divorce was soon effected. Six years before, a Methodist Bishop (Andrews,) had been set aside for slave-owning; and though the slave-owners controlled Congress, assaulted Sumner, spit upon Representatives, as Gov. Slade, and planned and nearly executed an empire, comprising our slave States, with the purpose of adding Mexico and the States of Central America, prayer and testimony prevailed against the best plans of rebellion ever laid; though predicated on cotton, the leading article of commerce; and backed by the money power which owns Egypt, directs Turkey, governs two hundred millions of people in India,—whose religion is that of "beasts" and "false prophets."

During our long agony with the slave power, whose council-chambers were Southern lodge-rooms, the lodge itself was spreading North and South; initiating in the North and starving and shooting in the South. But when slavery fell, the lodge-question was resumed. A National Christian Association was formed, Bishop David Edwards, president, to explain the difference between the religion of Christ and the religions without Christ, between the religion which takes the soul to God and that which leaves it in the lodge, the religion of God and the religions of Satan. And though, during our national agony and bloody sweat, the lodge has made its way into and silenced the presses and pulpits of the leading Christian denominations and political parties, something has been done. Old staid German and Scandinavian Lutheran churches, which supposed themselves proof against the lodges, have found its serpents winding up the legs of their communion tables. Synods, conferences and associations have discovered the identity of the lodge religions with the strange altars and shrines of the Scriptures; and hundreds of good men have repented of their oaths and wicked obligations, and turned their rituals inside out; and light has so far spread that if now those who abhor the lodges and their hateful brood can be brought to act up to their present convictions, the false worships must speedily fall. How shall this be done?

1. We answer, by united, and not by separate denominational testimony. A Lutheran, Wesleyan United Brethren or Presbyterian body fights, or is supposed to fight for its "distinctive principles." This is contending in denominational armor and not "in the whole armor of God."

2. Still, to avoid confusion and misunderstandings, the method proposed by the Wheeling Presbytery to the United Presbyterian General Assembly seems eminently sensible and just, viz.: that the denomination appoint, and by collections and contributions, pay its own agents, to canvass the churches under their respective care, and to call the people to repentance, fasting and prayer. The commission of the United Brethren Conference at Fostoria, of twenty-seven brethren to "revise" the Constitution and Confession of Faith, is about on a par with calking and painting the ship while the enemy is in sight and the guns in battery.

Fifty one years ago the Andover Faculty (Woods, Stuart, Porter and Skinner,) petitioned their Legislature to rescind Masonic charters and prohibit their oaths. All the churches in their vicinity, inspired by the example of their leaders, required applicants for membership to abandon the lodge. Even Episcopal bishops took part then in the holy work of church purification: and if the thorough methods of Nehemiah, Hezekiah, Josiah, and the other reformer kings had been faithfully followed, our churches would not now be in the condition of God's ancient church, when by the infiltration of heathen ways and worships, God hated and despised their religious meetings. Amos 5: 20–26.

The National Christian Association at its late annual meeting in Chicago, appointed a committee to procure and provide for a "National Evangelical Convention," to consist of all denominations of Christian people, to meet perhaps in the early autumn. By thorough previous visitation it is believed representative men can be induced to co-operate in such a convention, who would fairly represent the opinions of three or four millions of people. And if the religious prints which exchange with the Cynosure will favor such an American gathering, and nominate men whom they would desire to have take part in its deliberations, those men will be visited, consulted, and put in communication with each other, before anything definite is determined. No convention should be called unless there shall be found a concurrence of sentiment sufficient to make the meeting desirable and to ensure success.

THE CHICAGO STRIKE.

The traffic that rolls by the office of the Cynosure on West Madison street dropped out of its roar last week Tuesday, the rumble of the street cars that pass every minute. The conductors and drivers of the West Division Street-car lines had left their familiar places on a strike. Next morning three cars started down town on Madison street. Some hundred and fifty police, deputy sheriffs and men from the dective agencies guarded them, but a mob of thousands along the eight-mile trip finally overpowered them at Halsted street, near this office, and the strikers, hitching the cars together drove them in triumph back to the barn. Toward noon two other cars, manned by police and flanked by patrol wagons, attempted to run the gauntlet. They fought their way down town followed most of the way by a roaring mob. Returning, they were nearly overpowered at Halsted street, and the officers in desperation drew their revolvers. A shot or two was fired without effect, while the stones flew freely and the horrible roar of the mob surged past. The officers were finally driven from the last car, and it was immediately upset across the track. Thursday was quiet, but a thousand men waited nearly all day to renew the battle. Friday it opened in earnest. With 400 policemen, cheered on by Mayor Harrison, and their chief Doyle, nine cars in procession were driven up and down the street. Some seventy-five officers were about the only passengers, and every few minutes a stop was made while they charged on the crowd. Every man who made a show of resistance, or shouted an opprobrious epithet was arrested, and over a hundred and twenty had been gathered in before night. Never was a Chicago mob attacked with more spirit, and the effect was immediately seen. Officers on every corner and in patrol wagons allowed no crowd to gather. Move on! was the word. By afternoon no one ventured to lift a finger and passengers began to board the cars. Two days more of quiet passed and on Monday cars were put onto four of the ten deserted lines and were unmolested, with a single exception. The mayor's proclamation in the morning had a good effect upon the mob, who realized that the police have heavy arms and hard clubs. And so, although a number of the railway employes were attacked severely by the strikers, there was no general scene of blood as was at one time feared.

Now for the cause. The street-car company had lately made several concessions to their eleven hundred men by way of better wages, less time and the discharge of a disagreeable superintendent. The company took advantage of the opportunity to discharge sixteen men. These were members of the Conductor's and Driver's Association, a secret labor union, connected with the Knights of Labor, Trades Assembly and other labor lodges, so-called. These have all combined to support the strikers in their demand that the discharged men be reinstated. This is the bone of contention, though the men, and the public generally, have many complaints against the great corporation. But after the city authorities came upon the ground the contest changed, and the mob, augmented by the rabble from the slums, made its fight with the guardians of the peace. Had the lodge leaders and professional agitators had their way Friday, every one who looked upon their rage a day or two before knew that a large portion of the city would have been in their power, and nothing but a desperate and bloody battle could have put them down. It was a vivid and fearfully impressive scene, and we tremble to contemplate the struggle that must come upon us when the grapple does come on in earnest between the lodges and the authority of the people.

—The thanks of the Cynosure editors are herewith given to Theodore S. Parvin for a copy of the proceedings of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Iowa, for 1885, of which he is a secretary. We propose to make this copy of more real value to Freemasons than any other issued.

—A protest is in circulation among the United Brethren "against the action in the General Conference held in Fostoria, Ohio, May, 1885, in authorizing and creating an unconstitutional commission to revise the constitution and confession of faith, and in enacting an unconstitutional rule on secret combinations." The protest is to be signed by conferences and classes and returned to Rev. Halleck Floyd, Dublin, Ind.

—Brethren in Iowa will please note the call of their vice-president. Their State work has been completely checked for months by an unfortunate personal difficulty, but that should no longer be in the way—it should never have been allowed to interfere with the work of the Association. Let there now be a universal response to Bro. Robb and Iowa be again put in the forefront of the battle.

—Rev. John Boyes, of Grimsby, England, whose interesting articles reviewing the leading movements in the political and religious life of England, have been an attractive feature in our columns, has been for some time in ill-health. The keen winds of the east coast have been very trying during the past season, and he has been constrained to forego for a time all his press correpondence. He hopes, as he is now recovering, to resume it immediately.

—The Masons of Southwestern Iowa, have been for some time preparing for a grand celebration at the expense of the tax-payers of the State. The corner-stone laying of the State Insane Asylum, at Clarinda, was the opportunity they siezed upon, and the 4th of July the time. They succeeded in doing their job, but the protesting voices were powerful and their echoes will not die away soon. The Blanchard Record, Birmingham Free Press, and Amity Index speak to the point, and a protest was circulated from College Springs through the neighboring country, condemning the interference of the lodge. The College Springs brethren will not allow the matter to rest until the lodge is sorry it ever undertook the business.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard made a Fourth of July address at the celebration at Cherry Valley, Ill.

—Rev. William R. Roach has removed from Pickering, Ontario, to Avening, Simcoe county, in the same Canadian province.

—Bro. Geo. T. Dissette returned to his home in Sabetha, Kansas, soon after the annual meeting, having learned of the severe illness of his father. He hopes to return soon to the Illinois work.

—Elder Isaac Bancroft has been attending to some items of business in Illinois for some two weeks. He is expecting to return to Wisconsin and his field work this week.

—Secretary Stoddard is this week attending the Ohio State Convention at Cedarville, near Xenia. He persuaded Rev. Joseph Travis, editor of the Free Methodist, and chairman of the N. C. A. Board, to accompany him and address the Convention.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman has applied for the consul ship of Sierre Leone, West Africa, and has some expectation of securing the appointment, as it is a position few office-seekers care for.

—The possible appointment of Senator Pomeroy as Commissioner of the District of Columbia will be noted with deepest interest, since his positive temperance convictions would be felt by the domineering saloon interest of that city.

—Prof. O. F. Lumry intends visititing, with his wife, the National Educational assembly at Saratoga, N. Y. He will keep the Cynosure readers informed of the interesting features of that meeting. It is possible that the senior editor of the Cynosure will also attend the meeting.

—The Cynosure office has been lately cheered by the visits of Bro. J. T. Hobson, of southern Indiana, who is now preaching, but will be remembered as the former editor of an able anti-lodge monthly at Hartsville; of Lucian Prince, Esq., of Worcester, who has been in Chicago to appear before the Senate committee inquiring into the matter of inter-State railway transportion; and of Rev. B. F. Worrell, of Beloit, Kan., who came all the way to see his son graduate at Wheaton, and no one gainsays him when he declares himself well repaid for the expense and trouble.

—The brethren Clark, George C., the singer, and Lewis G., the ex-slave, yet remain in the vicinity of Chicago. After their fine meeting at Wheaton on the 24th ult, they visited old Mrs. Haviland at Englewood, just south of the city, and for a day or two were thronged at the private houses of friends. On Sabbath evening June 28th, a great crowd gathered in the Universalist church, so dense that it was impossible for the pastor of the church to get within, and Mrs. Haviland presided with befitting grace, forming with speaker and singer an illustrious trio, each the hero of a wonderful career in the days of slavery. So large was the disappointed audience out of doors that the rink was engaged and the brethren constrained to return last Sabbath, to speak again for God and liberty—from the bondage of man of liquor and of the lodge. Independence day they spent in Evanston, and on the 13th arrangments have been made to receive them at DeKalb, Ill. Everywhere the enthusiasm they create is of the genuine, old fashioned type, for the victories they recount and the stories they tell are of the triumphs of the truth over superstition and error.

The outrages of secret labor Unions are becoming more and more frequent and blood-thirsty. It is coming to be a question whether secret societies or civil law is to rule both capital and labor in this country. The following item of news, clipped from the Syracuse Journal, is given as a sad example:

"CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 27.—Six weeks ago, Arnold Abbuhl, a Swiss, came to this country with his wife and two children. He went to Barnhill, Tuscarowas county, to work in the mines, and being very poor lived in a tumbled down shanty. Recently, the miners and operators had trouble about wages, and the miners quit work. Abbuhl continued, however. Tuesday night a committee waited on him and ordered him to quit also. He did not understand them, and yesterday morning started to the mines as usual. He had gone but a short distance, when some one crept out of the bush and emptied the contents of a double barreled shot gun into his breast. Abbuhl fell dead. Robert Banks, John Watkins, and G. W. Rogers, the committee who waited on him, are in jail, and citizens threaten to lynch them."—Wesleyan Methodist.

WORK AND FINANCE.

In the meeting of the N. C. A. Board of Directors, June 29th, the report of the committee on Washington building referred by the annual meeting, was taken up, considered and approved. As Bro. Phillips suggested when the matter was before the annual meeting, a little time and explanation of certain items of rents and the payment of diverse sums, sometimes in cash and sometimes in orders to Bro. Hinman as the employe of the N. C. A., removed the difficulties and rendered the account clear and intelligible. Unfortunately one statement made by Bro. Bailey in September, 1884, covering a part of what he had previously reported I had overlooked, and this oversight on my part added to the difficulties encountered by the committee to whom the matter was referred.

It was deemed advisible by the Board and the annual meeting to have only one committee to take charge of the Association's buildings for the present year, and it was so decided.

A careful inquiry into the management of assets and trust funds is highly commendable on the part of those who are interested, and where made in Christian candor is a safe-guard against loss or mistakes liable to occur where a large amount is handled in a multitude of small sums, appropriated to a number of special objects.

The books of the Association are always accessible to any member of the corporate body as provided in by-law, No. 11, and by the courtesy of their custodian can be examined by any friend on proper application.

As provided in by-law 10, the treasurer, who has all monies and other valuables belonging to the Association (not otherwise committed, by conditions of donors or special action of the Board to others) in his charge, is required to give a good and sufficient bond "for the faithful performance of his duties;" the Association is thus protected against loss where the bondsmen are competent. The present incumbent is under a $20,000 bond signed by F. W. Capwell, A. H. Hiatt, and Philo Carpenter.

The mode of procedure in handling the funds has been frequently stated, but for the information of some who may have forgotten or who may have become interested recently, I will state briefly the plan adopted:

1st. The Board is elected by the corporate members at their annual meeting each year.

2nd. This Board vote what monies shall be paid out and for what purposes.

3d. Three of their number examine all bills and give written vouchers for such as they approve and the treasurer pays bills on those vouchers.

4th. Mr. S. A. Kean, one of the best known bankers and Christian workers in Chicago, has for several years examined the assets, books and vouchers of the Association at the close of each year and certified to their correctness.

5th. A summary of such certified statement has been published soon after the close of each fiscal year, in addition to special reports of donations as appearing from time to time during that year.

The Board wisely, as I think, resolved upon a forward movement in the line of State work and an increased lecture force, which will necessitate the use of more means, and it is believed result in a corresponding increase of good results.

There is less surface agitation now than at some times previous, but so far as I can understand the the state of public sentiment there has never been a time when such a deep and strong sentiment existed in the public mind, especially in the Christian public, against secret societies as at present. Let there be much wrestling with God in prayer, remembering each other, and especially those to whom have been committed important trusts in carrying forward this great work.

J. P. STODDARD.

—The Pennsylvania Bible Society, which celebrated, a few days since, its seventy-seventh anniversary at Philadelphia, takes pride in the fact that it is eight years older than the American Bible Society, with which it most efficiently co-operates. During the past year it has put in circulation 136,047 copies in whole or part, of the Scriptures. It is a surprising fact that in a single year, and in a single State, the Scriptures were called for in twenty different languages.

—The Misses Leitch, of Ceylon, ask for special prayer with thanksgiving from friends at home in view of the fact that within the past year fifty-two persons have united, on confession of faith, with the churches connected with their station, while there are now one hundred and fifty who are inquiring for the way of life.

ATTENTION, IOWA.

Where shall the Iowa branch of the N. C. A. hold its annual meeting? The time is short. Our constitution calls us to meet on the last Tuesday of August. The brazen-faced effrontery of the secret clan in assuming the prerogative of the State in dedicating her public structures, laying corner-stones, etc., ought to stimulate every loyal man and woman. Speak out, freemen of Iowa! Where shall we meet?

T. P. ROBB,
Vice President Iowa State Association.

Linton, Iowa, July 4, 1885.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

According to adjournment, Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock, there were present brethren Travis, Thomson, Gault, Moerdyk, Blanchard, Lumry, Barlow and Gardner. The report of the special committee on State-agency work being first considered, after very full and prolonged discussion the following was adopted:

Resolved: 1. That an agent to lecture and canvass for the publications of the Association be secured in co-operation with State Auxiliary Associations in the following States and districts: Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, New York (with western Penn.), New England (with eastern N. Y.), Iowa, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Kansas and Nebraska. That the work be made self-supporting in every case where possible, as it is already in some of the States named; and where this cannot be done that the N. C. A. assist in maintaining an agent, but not to a greater amount than $25 per month in any one case.

2. That immediate correspondence be begun with the officers of the State Associations, to have this work entered upon at the very earliest moment; advising that the plan which has proved successful in Illinois be used by them for raising funds so far as practicable.

3. That a Training School be held at Wheaton, Ill., before Sept. 1st 1885, for the instruction of agents and lecturers for field work, to provide men for the above State agencies, and for such others as desire to enter this work. This class to be composed of ten or more whose board and railroad expense be paid from the treasury of the N. C. A., with the agreement that they enter this work.

4. That Secretary J. P. Stoddard, Presidents J. and C. A. Blanchard, Rev. Jos. Travis and Elder J. F. Browne be recommended as instructors, and that general arrangements be completed by the Secretary and General Agent.

5. That the services of Rev. H H. Hinman be secured for lecture work in the South during the year.

6. That the plan of the N. C. A. in the purchase of the Washing property, to place an agent in the district of which that should be the headquarters, should be fulfilled.

The Board being unable to fix upon a permanent agent for the Washington district it was voted that Pres. J. Blanchard take that position temporarily in addition to his editorial work. The Board was unanimous in desiring the chairman, Rev. Jos. Travis, to take this position, but his present engagement as editor of the Free Methodist at present prevents.

The proposition of the publisher of the Cynosure that the assistance rendered to State agents be in Cynosure subscriptions in whole or in part, was adopted, and brethren W. I. Phillips, J. P. Stoddard and H. L. Kellogg were made a permanent committee on this matter.

To the request for information in the American of July 2, the Board vote a brief explanation. Rev. Isaac Bancroft and Bro. W. B. Stoddard were endorsed and recommended to any State where their services may be desired. A vote of thanks was also tendered Bro. Bancroft.

State conventions were urged in the following:

Resolved, That this Board recommend to the supporters of the reform in the various States and districts named in the report which have auxiliary associations, that a State Convention be held in each at the earliest convenient time before December 1st, 1885, in order to appoint State agents and begin the work with vigor before the winter season begins.

The thanks of the Board was voted to the Augustana Lutheran Synod, for their cordial reception of the representatives of the N. C. A.

On the request of the Corresponding Secretary, Bro. W. I. Phillips was appointed to assist him in the secretary business; and it was ordered that the present price of the Cynosure be continued.

The special committee on State lecture work was continued, to receive future suggestions upon this important work and report them to the Board.

—A very pleasing incident occurred during the voyage across the Atlantic of Mr. Wm. Taylor's band of missionaries, en route to Africa. One of the children of the Rev. Ross Taylor was very sick—it had brain fever, and the physician in the company pronounced it critical. Himself and wife were full believers in the Scripture promise, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick." They determined to commit the case to God without the use of medicine. Faith was honored, the child almost instantly restored.—Words of Faith.

—The Scandinavian missionary of the American Sunday-school Union reports that he is greatly encouraged by his success in organizing schools, and especially by the testimony of the people, where denominational efforts to sustain schools have failed because of divisions, as to the harmonizing and stimulating influence of the American Sunday-school Union.

THE HOME.

INFLUENCE.

We scatter seeds with careless hand
And dream we ne'er shall see them more;
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land,
Or healthful store.

The deeds we do, the words we say,
Into still air they seem to fleet:
We count them ever past;
But they shall last—
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet.

I charge thee by the years gone by,
For the love of brethren dear,
Keep, then, the one true way
In work and play,
Lest in the world their cry
Of woe thou hear. —Keble.

HOLY LIVING.

LURA A. MAINS.

That the Bible teaches holiness, Christian perfection, purity of heart, or entire sanctification, needs no discussion. But lest some who read this article should read their Bibles carelessly, we will quote a few texts. First from the prophet: "And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness, and the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men though fools shall not err therein." Isa. 35: 8. Then our Saviour's words: "Blessed are the poor in heart, for they shall see God." Matt. 5: 8. "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your father in heaven is perfect." Matt. 5: 48. Again in the teachings of the apostles: "Be ye holy, for I am holy." Peter 1: 16. "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 12: 14. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 5: 2, 3. And the revelator in his vision of the saved in Heaven, saw a white robed throng, and was told: "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Rev. 7: 14.

Thus we see by the Bible, holiness commanded, a prayer for holiness, and that the inhabitants of heaven are holy. Holiness must be necessary for fitness for heaven. There must be adaptation everywhere to complete happiness. A holy heaven must be occupied by holy spirits. And as Christ is the attraction on the throne, he must draw those to the throne who are, like himself, holy. Then as we see all must be holy to enter heaven, the question arises, when shall we become holy? Not after death. As, "it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." Heb. 9: 27. Our souls are to become pure by the blood of Jesus. "Having, therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus." Heb. 10: 19. Where was the fountain of blood for sin and uncleanness opened, on earth or in another world? Earth holds a bleeding Christ; heaven a glorified Christ. Christ's blood was shed here, hence here we must be cleansed. Saints are purified on earth, glorified in heaven. Then some think that they must wait until upon a death-bed before they can be purified. But we are none of us sure of a death-bed. The Thessalonians were taught to look for the second coming of Christ, and to be sanctified wholly, and preserved blameless unto his coming. When Christ comes to judge the world, it must be the purified that will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. The souls that have been waiting for a time of sickness and death will not be ready. And as we must be purified through the blood, there is nothing in sickness, sorrow, pain, or death, that can do the work. The saints John saw did not wash their robes in tribulation, but came out of it, with robes washed in the blood of the Lamb? There will be no praise given to the devil for introducing the effects of sin in this world. There will be no praise given to man for his earnest work that has made him holy. But One only receives praise in the glory world, "Unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood." Rev. 1: 5.

Then consecration is not purity, neither does it bring purity. Every purified soul is entirely consecrated, of course, but not every consecrated soul is purified. "Purifying their hearts by faith," says the Word. Is this faith in ourselves because we have done something? Certainly not. Then consecration does not bring it. A soul cannot be a child of God a single day, unless he is wholly given up to God with all he possesses. That is both surrender and consecration. Then when he understands "it is the will of God, even his sanctification," then by faith he obtains the promised rest. "We which have believed do enter into rest." Heb. 4: 3.

Can I not grow into holiness, says some one? If it is an attainment of character you can. But that is what it is not. It is a state of grace entered into by faith in the blood. It is obtained at the foot of the cross, not attained to at all. When we are exhorted to seek it, as a preparation for the coming of the Son of Man, and told that he would come in such an hour as we know not, as we see in Thessalonians, Peter, and elsewhere, it is inconsistent to wait and try and grow into it.

How long do you think, dear reader, it will take the blood of the Lamb to purify your soul. If we speak literally, we would say the blood has the purifying property in itself, and the moment anything touched the blood it was made white. Spiritually, the same. The life that gave the blood to the world is in the world. That which purifies was not lost on Calvary. It filled a room on Pentecost. It fills thousands of hearts to-day. Praise God for a living Christ, as well as a crucified Christ. Lay your heart open for the Holy Spirit. "Ask and ye shall receive." The atonement is not a partial failure, it is a complete success. Jesus destroys the works of the devil, carnality. He purifies and satisfies. Glory to the Lamb.

IVORY DUST.

Pœbe Palmer: I rejoiced in the assurance that I was wholly sanctified, body, soul, and spirit.

Bishop Hamlin: The deep of God's love swallowed me up, all its waves and billows rolled over me.

Hester Ann Rogers: I sank down motionless, being unable to sustain the weight of His glorious presence and love.

Bishop Asbury: I live in patience, in purity, and perfect love of God. I think we ought modestly to tell what we feel to the fullest.

John Fletcher: I will confess him to all the world; and I will declare in the presence of the Holy Trinity that I am indeed entirely dead unto sin.

William Carvosso: I was emptied of self and filled with God. I received the full witness of the spirit, that the blood of Jesus had cleansed me.

David Stoner: I feel nothing but love; I want to be filled with God. Whether I hold on, or not. I am very sure God took possession of my heart, July 14.

John Wesley: And immediately I declared to all, we are saved from all sin; we are made holy by faith. This I testified in private, in public, in print; and God confirmed it by a thousand witnesses.

Lady Maxwell: I trust in Him, I dwell in Him. Sinking into Him I lose myself and prove a life of fellowship with the Deity so divinely sweet that I would not relinquish it for a thousand worlds.

C. G. Finney: Since then I have had the freedom of a child with a loving parent. It seems to me that I can find God in me in such a sense that I can rest upon Him and be quiet; lay my head in his hand, nestle down in his perfect will, and have no carefulness and anxiety.

William Bramwell: My soul was all wonder, love and praise. I then declared to the people what God had done for my soul, and have done so ever since, believing it my bounden duty to do so.

President Edwards: So conscious was I of the presence of the Holy Spirit that I could scarcely refrain from leaping with transports of joy. My soul was filled and overwhelmed with light and joy of the Holy Ghost.

Joseph Benson: He so strengthened my heart, as to perfectly banish all my doubts, and filled me with a humble, peaceful love. Oh, what a change God hath wrought within me! Glory be to God! I am indeed in possession of a new nature.

Frances Ridley Havergal: First I was shown that the blood of Jesus Christ His Son, cleanseth us from all sin; it was then made plain to me that He who thus cleansed me, had the power to keep me clean; so I utterly yielded myself to Him and trust Him to keep me. All is all; as we may trust Him to cleanse us from sins, so we may trust Him to cleanse us from all present defilements.—Ch. Witness.

The outskirts of our Jerusalem are dreary; her glory lies within. Where shines the brightest light? It is in the holy of holies, in the innermost shrine. The skin and husks of religion are poor things, but the juice, the life, the vital power of religion—therein lies the sweetness. You must not be satisfied with the "name to live;" it will never comfort you, it will even distress you. The life of Christ mightily developed in you must be the joy of your heart.—C. H. Spurgeon.

CONVERTED THROUGH HELPING.

In the very interesting memorial volume which records the life of Rev. Dr. Horace Eaton, for thirty years pastor at Palmyra, N. Y., we find the following incident:

The Rev. A. M. Stowe, then agent for the American Tract Society, had presented in Dr. Eaton's church a plea for colportage in the destitute portions of our country. Judge Theron R. Strong, an attendant of the church but not a professing Christian, with two others, assumed the salary of a colporteur.

Several months after, Judge Strong sought an interview in his own office with his pastor. He said to him, "I find myself in a singular position. I have been regularly receiving for some time warm-hearted letters from the colporteur I am assisting to support. He speaks of souls brought to Christ through his labors. He never dreams that I have not a responsive sympathy in the spiritual part of his work. But I am not a Christian. What must I do to be saved?"

The two kneeled in prayer side by side. The judge followed his pastor in a sincere, tender, and earnest prayer. An extensive revival of religion followed his conversion. Outsiders said, "If Theron R. Strong thinks he has become a Christian, there's no sham about it. It is real." His testimony and prayers in the meetings were of great value, and much good was accomplished.—Am. Messenger.

CLEAN OUT THE WELL.

A man in the State of Maine was converted, and the work was apparently thoroughly done. When he was fairly out of the darkness, he begun to make things right with his neighbors. Among other things he cleaned out his well. In the bottom of it were found three log chains, and various other articles of value which his neighbors had long missed and could not trace. When the man cleaned out his well his neighbors got what belonged to them; and you may be sure there was very little question as to the genuineness of the work wrought in that man.

There are many persons who claim to have been converted, but their religion has never gone to the bottom of their wells. Zaccheus cleaned his well when he said, "If I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore it fourfold." Many a man is wondering why he does not have the peace, and joy, and blessing which others possess; perhaps a look in the bottom of the well, an investigation of his accounts, an overhauling of his business matters, would give him some light on the subject. Good friend, have you cleaned out your well?—The Christian.

SEVEN "SHALL NOTS" OF JESUS.

These blessed "shall nots" are for believers only—such as Paul speaks of in Rom. 10: 10. Is your faith on this line? If so, take the precious Word; turn to John's Gospel and by the aid of the Holy Ghost, examine the "shall nots" recorded there. Drink deeply. Let each glorious truth find a lodgment in your heart and be so rooted and grounded there, that each wave of tribulation that may visit you, will only leave the truth more firmly imbedded.

Wait patiently, remember "the Lord is not slack with his promises." He will fulfill.

1st. Shall not perish.—3: 15.
2nd. Shall never thirst.—4: 14.
3rd. Shall not come into condemnation.—5: 24.
4th. Shall never hunger.—1: 35.
5th. Shall not walk in darkness.—8: 12.
6th. Shall not be plucked out of Christ's hands.—10: 28.
7th. Shall never die.—11: 26.

When you comprehend and embrace these wonderful promises of Jesus, you will then understand fully, Paul's meaning when he speaks of the full assurance of faith. Hallelujah!—Faithful Witness.

A BRAVE BOY.

I like to read of heroes. I like to see men who have done heroic deeds. I feel strengthened by thinking of what they have done. It acts as a tonic to one's moral nature.

Not long since I saw a hero, I was a witness of his brave deed, and felt a warm glow at at my heart a hundred times since at the thought of it. But the deed of bravery was one the papers said nothing about. They would not have considered it worth mentioning, I suppose; but I do, and I am going to write it down to help others who may be tempted as this boy was. For my hero was only a boy; but there is the making of a strong man in him.

It happened in this way: I was walking down the street and stopped in the front of a saloon to talk with a friend. As we stood there two boys came along.

"Come in and have something to drink," said one of them.

"Thank you," was the reply, "but I never drink."

"Oh, temperance are you?" said the other, in a tone that had a suspicion of a sneer in it.

"Yes," answered the boy bravely; "I don't believe in drinking liquor."

"Well, you needn't drink liquor if you don't want to," said his companion. "Take some lemonade."

"Not in a saloon," was the other's reply.

"Why not?" asked his friend. "It won't make you drunk because they sell whisky over the same bar, will it?"

"I don't suppose it would," was the reply. "But saloons are bad places, and I don't believe in patronizing them."

"What a moral young fellow you are!" said his friend, with contempt in his words. "Do you intend to preach when you get to be a man?"

"No, I don't expect to," was the reply. But I intend to make a man of myself; and I never knew a fellow to amount to much who got into the habit of frequenting saloons."

"I haven't asked you to hang about saloons, have I?" demanded his friend, angrily. "One would think from what you say that I asked you to get drunk."

"You didn't ask me to get drunk," was the reply, "but you have asked me to take the first step in that direction. If I drank now, I would probably drink again. How long would it be before I got the habit formed of drinking liquor?"

Some other young fellows had come up by this time, and the one who had invited his friend to drink turned to them and said:

"You've come just in time to hear a temperance lecture. Go on, Bob; maybe you can convert these chaps." Then they laughed. But Bob did not get angry. He looked them bravely in the face, and said:

"I suppose you think I am 'soft' because I won't drink. I know you think it foolish because I refused to go into the saloon and have a glass of lemonade" (to his friend); "but I don't, and I am not afraid to stand up for what I think is right. If you want to drink, you will do it, I suppose, in spite of anything I could say against it, but you can't coax or laugh me into doing it. I want to have my own respect, and I shouldn't have it if I drank, for I don't believe it is right to drink whisky. You think, I suppose, that I am a coward in not drinking, but I think I should prove myself a coward in doing it."

Wasn't I glad to hear the boy say that? I couldn't help going to him and telling him so.

"Thank you," said he, looking pleased at what I said; "I mean to be a man, and I shouldn't be if I got to drinking."

He was right. God bless the young hero. I wish there were thousands more like him.—The Lily.

GROWN-UP LAND.

Good morrow, fair maid, with lashes brown,
Can you tell me the way to Womanhood Town?

O, this way and that way—never stop,
'Tis picking up stitches grandma will drop,
'Tis kissing the baby's troubles away,
'Tis learning that cross words will never pay,
'Tis helping mother, 'tis sewing up rents,
'Tis reading and playing, 'tis saving the cents,
'Tis loving and smiling, forgetting to frown,
O, that is the way to Womanhood Town.

Just wait, my brave lad—one moment, I pray,
Manhood Town lies where—can you tell the way?

O, by toiling and trying we reach that land—
A bit with the head, a bit with the hand—
'Tis by climbing up the steep hill Work,
'Tis by keeping out of the wide street Shirk,
'Tis by always taking the weak one's part,
'Tis by giving mother a happy heart,
'Tis by keeping bad thoughts and actions down,
O, that is the way to Manhood Town.

And the lad and the maid ran hand in hand
To their fair estates in the grown-up land.

—Standard Bearer.

A NOVEL FORM OF PUNISHMENT.

Mr. A. J. C. Hare, in his book just published under the title "Studies in Russia," relates some curious stories of odd punishment devised by Alexander II., the liberator of the serfs and victim of the Nihilist assassins.

A young poet had written a most scurrilous poem in which he had described and libeled not only the Empress, but also all the grand dukes and duchesses. Some one, the censor of the press, went and told the Empress. "The man had better be sent off to Siberia at once," he said; "it is not a case for delay.

"Oh, no," said the Empress; "wait a little, but tell the man I desire to see him at six o'clock to-morrow evening."

When the poor man was told this, he felt as if his last hour was come, and that the Emperor must intend himself to pronounce a sentence of eternal exile. He went to the palace, and was shown through all the grand state rooms, one after another, without seeing any one, till at last he arrived at a small, commonplace room at the end of them all, where there was a single table with a lamp upon it, and here he saw the Empress, the Emperor, and all the grand dukes and duchesses whom he had mentioned in his poem.

"How do you do, sir?" said the Emperor. "I hear you have written a most beautiful poem, and I have sent for you that you may read it aloud to us yourself, and I have invited all the grand dukes and duchesses to come, that they may have the pleasure of hearing you."

Then the poor man prostrated himself at the Emperor's feet. "Send me to Siberia, sire," he said; "force me to become a soldier; only do not compel me to read that poem."

"Oh, sir, you are cruel to deny me the pleasure, but you will not be so ungallant as to refuse the Empress the pleasure of hearing your verses, and she will ask you herself."

And the Empress asked him.

When he had finished she said: "I do not think he will write any more verses about us again. He need not go to Siberia just yet."

A nobleman had entered into a conspiracy against the Emperor, and was sentenced to Siberia. His eyes were bandaged, and he was put into a dark carriage, and for seven days and nights they traveled on and on, only stopping to take food. At last he felt that they must have reached Siberia, and, in the utmost anguish, he perceived that the carriage stopped, and—he was in his own home! He had been driven round and round St. Petersburg the whole time; but the fright quite cured him.—Sel.

AN INTELLIGENT DOG.

A recent incident reminds the reader forcibly of Byron's eulogy on his dog, wherein he says:

"——Man's firmest friend.
First to welcome and foremost to defend."

A family residing near a railroad allow their girl, aged five years, to play about the yard to their residence on pleasant days with a Newfoundland dog. One day the child ran away—all children do so—and in her wandering about was accompanied by the dog who apparently felt in duty bound to see that no harm befell her. It seems that the two came to a railroad crossing; that a train was coming and it looked a little dangerous. The dog saw the danger and quickly seized the little miss by the skirts of her dress, and, being the stronger of the two, pulled her back upon the sidewalk and stood over her until the train had passed. The little miss scolded and kicked his shins, but he didn't let her up till the danger had passed, when he trudged on behind her as though nothing had happened.—Ex.

TEMPERANCE.

It will not look well upon the pages of the Parliamentary history of England, for the record to show, as it must, that one of the ablest and best (if not the very best) of the prime ministers ever at the head of the British government, was driven from his place by an outcry against increasing the tax on ardent spirits and beer. Church disestablishment and the land act in Ireland, a change in the electoral system giving new votes to millions, a disastrous campaign in the Soudan, and a narrowly escaped war with Russia: all these and other crises were safely overpassed. But making the liquor of the people dearer—this was too much. The terrible effects of the wars, past and prospective, which caused the need of increased taxation, were forgotten. Some time, it must come to pass, that human blood and tears will weigh more in the balance, in every civilized nation, than whisky, or even beer.—Friend's Review.

"The use of beer is found to produce a species of degeneration of all the organs; profound and deceptive fatty deposits, diminished circulation, conditions of congestion and perversion of functional activities, local inflammations of both the liver and kidneys, are constantly present. Intellectually, a stupor amounting almost to paralysis arrests the reason, changing all the higher faculties into a mere animalism, sensual, selfish, sluggish, varied only with paroxysms of anger that are senseless and brutal. In appearance the beer-drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting disease. Compared with inebriates who use different kinds of alcohol, he is more incurable, and more generally diseased. It is our observation that beer-drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer-drinkers. Recourse to beer as a substitute for other forms of alcohol merely increases the danger and fatality."—Scientific American.

DOES MR. SPURGEON DRINK WINE?

[From the Voice.]

A report has been started that Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, the great London preacher, is not a total abstainer. A correspondent write us to ask if it can be true. We were aware of the falsity of the report, but to settle the matter, wrote to Mr. Spurgeon himself, and here is the reply.

Editor The Voice:—I do not think the statement will do me any harm, for every person about me knows that I never touch any alcoholic drinks, and disourage the drinking of such things in others. This is no new thing with me, and no matter of question.

I am almost amused by anyone's asking whether I am an abstainer, for some folks know it to their displeasure. The blue ribbon is a badge in which I rejoice. C. H. SPURGEON.

Westwood, London, May, 8, 1885.

NEW ENGLAND RUM IN AFRICA.

A West Africa correspondent of the Boston Traveler, sends to that journal a vigorous protest against the continued shipments of New England rum from Boston to Africa. The writer has had twenty years of observation of the workings of the rum-traffic in that country, and gives it as his conclusion that "Boston is engaged in an enterprise fully as reprehensible as the African slave-trade ever was, for which men have been hanged." When outside the settlements, "where most of the rum is consumed, and men have little besides their own drunken wills to restrain them from violence and murder," he has himself "seen women and children so cut and mangled from drunken brawls as to be scarcely recognizable," and he has known men who were good friends when sober, to commit, under the influence of New England rum, the most shocking crimes of violence and murder. It is affirmed that many of the native women have become so much addicted to this rum-drinking, that for the sake of it they leave their infant children to perish from exposure and neglect, and that, as a consequence, "since the commencement of the rum-traffic, the population of the African coast has been steadily decreasing." In view of the destructive mortality which this New England rum-traffic involves upon the African people, the correspondent concludes by asking: "When we reflect that this wholesale destruction of human life is kept up by continual shipments, how is it possible that Boston can wash her hands like Pilate and say she is not responsible for such direful results?" There are, of course, in connection with this wretched business commercial considerations which are paramount with those Bostonians and others who are engaged in it. There are not only the large profits on the rum itself, but we are assured that it is often employed as a medium of exchange with the untutored natives to a far greater pecuniary advantage than money, in securing cargoes of African products for the American market. There is still much money expended, and devoted Christian men and women are laboring earnestly to spread the Gospel in Africa. The good results of all this expenditure of money and strength, the continued shipments of New England rum, it is quite obvious, do very much to neutralize. Might not the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, or some other competent missionary board, very properly and profitably appoint a committee to investigate the subject, and to endeavor to persuade the New England distillers and the Boston merchants to give up their destructive traffic, and thus to remove a great obstacle to the progress of Christian civilization in Africa? —Law and Order.

—Rev. Dr. Somerville, the venerable Scotch preacher, was prevented by a mob, incited by a priest, from preaching at Athens, Greece. He had already preached to an audience of about 1,200, at the base of the Olympian pillars.

LITERATURE.

THE WORKS OF THOMAS CARLYLE. Sartor Resartus—Past and Present—The Diamond Necklace—Mirabeau. Pp. 673. Price $1.20; by mail, $1.44. John B. Alden, publisher, New York.

Since the publication of Carlyle's autobiography under the editorial charge of Mr. Froude, everybody has known as much of Thomas Carlyle and his wife Jennie as of George and Martha Washington. The papers have hardly been able at times to praise the wonderful Scotchman enough; at others words struggled in blame of the editor for permitting so much of his human nature to escape into print. But with all Carlyle's reputation is made, his genius will not want for recognition, though many of his writings, because of their relation to passing events, will be on that account the earlier neglected. The selections made for this initial volume of Carlyle's works are such as to show the author's most characteristic points. Sartor Resartus was one of his best efforts. It was first published anonymously in Fraser's Magazine, after being rejected by a number of London publishers. The words mean, "The tailor done over," the title of an old Scottish song. The whole book, says Chambers, "quivers with tragic pathos, solemn aspiration, or riotous humor." Past and Present is a series of papers which reveals the deep, anxious, and almost wonderful interest Carlyle took in the affairs of his countrymen. The last named works concern the times in France preceding the Revolution or the initial stages of that outbreak of the marvelous and horrible. The publisher has left nothing undone which the reader could ask for, when the low price of this volume is considered; and the announcement that the rest of Carlyle's works will follow will be hailed with delight by thousands of his American admirers. For a short time this volume will be sold for $1.00, postpaid, to introduce.

Two portraits of marked interest, in the July Century, are the frontispiece picture of Frederic Mistral and the full-page portrait, after a daguerreotype, of Henry Clay, which is a remarkable portrait of that no less remarkable man. Not less striking than the portraits are the articles accompanying them. George Bancroft contributes a vivid sketch of Clay's personality, and Alphonse Daudet writes of his friend Mistral, the Provencal poet. Of timely importance is the Indo-Afghan paper, "The Gate of India," by W. L. Fawcett. It deals only briefly with the present political situation, its chief interest being in the way it shows ehat the evident Russian trend towards the Khyber Pass—which has always been known as the Gate of India—is only one of a long succession of advances from the direction of Afghanistan upon the wealth of India, from before the time of Alexander the Great's conquest down to 1750, the year the founder of the Afghan empire invaded India. A description of "George Eliot's County"—the scenes of her country life and her novels,—by Miss Rose G. Kingsley, the daughter of Canon Kingsley, is the opening illustrated paper. Others, are Dr. Edward Eggleston's profusely illustrated paper on "Social Life in the Colonies," one of the most popular of his series; and an account of the explorations of the late "Frank Hatton in North Borneo," by his father, Joseph Hatton. The war papers of the July number are profusely illustrated, and comprise a description of the Confederate pursuit during "McClellan's Change of Base," by General D. H. Hill; "Rear-Guard Fighting at Savage's Station," by Gen. W. B. Franklin; "The Seven Day's Fighting about Richmond," by Gen. James Longstreet; and points of minor interest in "Memoranda."

Vick's Magazine for July is a good number for the midsummer worker amid flowers, fruits and vegetables. It has facts for some, encouragement for others, and is beautiful and useful for all. Those engaged in the preservation of fruits will find hints of great value.

—John Ruskin's autobiography is in preparation and the first part has just appeared. In the preface Mr. Ruskin says: "My mother's influence in molding my character was conspicuous. She forced me to learn daily long chapters of the Bible by heart. To that discipline and patient, accurate review I owe not only much of my general power of taking pains, but the best part of my taste for literature." To the same training Ruskin attributes his power of contemplative imagination. As a boy he was without sugar-plums and toys. He was reared in monastic poverty. His father taught him habits of close observation during a series of excursions through England and Scotland.

—The Presbyterian Church in Ireland embraces nearly one-half the Protestant population of the country. There are 553 churches, 520 ministers and 101,452 communicants.

THE CHURCHES.

—The following resolution was passed by the quarterly conference of North Robinson circuit, Sandusky conference, United Brethren, in their fourth session:

"Resolved, That we, the official members of North Robinson circuit, will not accept as minister or presiding elder, a man sent us by the Annual Conference, who belongs to any secret organization, or favors them in any form whatever.

—The Reformed Presbyterian Synod at its meeting in Morning Sun, Iowa, resolved to appoint a standing committee on secret societies. An excellent one was made up of the following: Ministers—D. S. Faris, Sparta, Ill.; J. A. Thompson, Avery, Iowa, and M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa. Elders—John D. George, Cedarville, O.; and John G. Miller, Illinois.

—The Missionary, Publishing, Educational and other Boards of the Wesleyan Methodist church were held June 24th to 26th, in Syracuse, N. Y. A determination was made to enter the foreign work in response to the desire of some of the young men and women of the church to go abroad preaching the Word. Rev. A. W. Hall, of College Springs. Iowa, was appointed a special agent to carry forward this work among the churches. The interests of the Theological Seminary at Wheaton received also careful attention.

—Rev. U. D. Lathrop, formerly of Viola, Mercer county, Ill., has lately accepted a call to the Wesleyan church in West Chazy, in Northern New York.

—The June American Bible Society Record thus concludes a reference to the now completed revision of the Scriptures: "In response to inquiries which are frequently made, it may be well to state that the managers of this society, under its constitution as it now stands, have no authority to publish the revised English Bible, and they have not regarded it as expedient as yet to take any steps for an amendment of the constitution in this respect."

—It is computed by a Dublin statistician (Mr. J. Lambert Jones) that the Protestants at the close of the last century were 40,000,000, while the Roman Catholics were 120,000,000; but now in 1884, the Protestants are 148,000,000 and the Romanists 184,000,000. Thus Protestants have increased about 250 per cent., and Romanists meantime only fifty per cent.

—Rev. G. Grenfell, accompanied by his wife and child, has made a successful missionary tour on the Upper Congo, from Stanley Pool to Stanley Falls, over 1,000 miles, in the Baptist Mission steamer Peace. The trip occupied five months and covered 4,000 miles, a third of which was on territory never before visited by a white man.

—The efforts of skeptical scientists to discredit the Bible record seem destined to ignominious failure. Sir John Lubbock, having assigned an age prior to Ninevah and Babylon, if not to Adam and Eve, of some coins and relics from the lake dwellings of Switzerland, it has now been discovered that those dwellings were actually occupied 900 years ago.

—The Rev. Mr. Clark, of Prague, reports the reception of eight more persons who were formerly Romanists into the Free Evangelical church of that city, making twenty new members since the beginning of the year. Two of these eight are the first fruits of God's blessing upon the copy of the New Testament which a strolling peddlar carried into a village.

—It was reported at the Religious Tract Society of London at its 86th anniversary, recently held in Exeter Hall, that during the year the society had issued 737 new publications, including 182 tracts, and that the total issues, including those from foreign depots, had been 85,966,650, or 2,368,277,880 since the formation of the Society.

—It is estimated that within the past twenty-five years over 100,000 copies of the Bible have been circulated in Greece, besides many thousands among Greek residents in Turkey. The government permits the free dissemination of the Scriptures, and affords protection to colporteurs against the opposition of the clerics in the Greek church. The four Gospels are used as a reading book in the high classes of the primary schools throughout Greece.

—When the children of Israel were bitten by the fiery serpents, they did not look to the tabernacle and the holy things in it, nor even into the holy of holies, where stood the cherubim and where shone the glory of God; for if they had, they would have died; but they looked simply at what God had commanded they should look at—the brazen serpent. Just so must we, who are bitten by the old serpent, the devil, look simply unto Christ.—Am. Messenger.

—Rev. Dr. Henry H. Jessup, of Beirut, Syria, writes that the Turkish Government is becoming more hostile toward the mission work. They have already closed six of the village schools, and it is feared that they will interfere still further.

—Statistics of Christian work in Japan during the year 1884, which are approximately correct, have appeared in the Christian newspaper published by Mr. Kosaki, of Tokio. The total number of Protestant churches is put down as 129; church members aggregate 7,791, a gain of 2,200 during the year. The largest church in the Empire is that at Imabari, of which Mr. Ise is pastor, having 410 members. This church also reports the greatest gain in membership within the year, having received 195 new members. The church at Annaka has received during the year 113 members. The city of Tokio is reported as having twenty-nine churches, with 2,279 members. The money contributions of the native Christians for the year are reported as 18,220 yen, which is a gain over the preceding year of 2,382 yen. This report is very encouraging.

—When one of the secretaries of the American Board heard of the action of the Municipal Court, in fining several leading ministers and Christian workers of Boston for preaching on the Common, he remarked that there is not a heathen city on the globe where such preaching would not be allowed; at least it would be permitted in India, China, or Japan.

—The necrology report of the Presbyterian church for the past year shows that one hundred and two ministers died. One of these was one hundred years old, two over ninety, and forty-five over seventy. Fifty-five were not in active work in the ministry, having been laid aside mostly through the infirmity of age.

—Over 400 colporteurs have been employed by the American Bible Society for a longer or shorter period during the year. Of this number twenty-three labored in Alabama, thirty-five in Arkansas, six in California, three in Colorado, four in Dakota, seven in Florida, sixteen in Georgia, eight in Illinois, thirty-six in Indiana, twenty-two in Iowa, twenty-seven in Kansas, seventeen in Kentucky, two in Maine, fourteen in Michigan, twelve in Minnesota, three in Mississippi, twenty in Missouri, thirteen in Nebraska, one in New Jersey, three in New York, eleven in North Carolina, twenty-nine in Ohio, three in South Carolina, forty-one in Tennessee, twenty-nine in Texas, five in Utah and Montana, fifteen in West Virginia, and thirteen in Wisconsin. The salaries and expenses of the colporteurs, including freight on books, amounted to $106,308.63, which with the volue of the books donated makes a net expenditure of $126,158.27 for this department of the Society's work.

Dr. Crummell observes a radical difference between the English and American missions on the west coast of Africa, in favor of the former. When the re-captured Africans, rescued from slave ships by English cruisers, were set free in Sierra Leone, they were sent into the various villages around, and taught not only to read but to work. If you go to Sierra Leone at the present time, you will find all the different trades and industries among the native Africans there. The result is that the English Mission in Sierra Leone is self-dependent; builds its own churches, supports its own ministers, and contributes very largely to Christian missionary societies in England. The laymen are merchants, mechanics, and traders; have founded families, and, in some cases, send their sons and daughters to the English universities and schools. The American missions on the coast of Africa have been deficient in just these respects. That is, there has been a neglect of trades and of industrial teaching. The missions are consequently feeble, and have to be supported from America to a very large extent.—Southern Workman.

Chinese Sunday-school work in New York city had a beginning sixteen years ago in the establishment of one little Chinese Sunday-school in the Five Points House of Industry. Now the cause has grown until the first anniversary of the New York Chinese Sunday-school Union, held May 13th, aroused enough enthusiasm to fill the Broadway Tabernacle to overflowing. Of an estimated total of 3,500 to 5,000 Chinese in New York and Brooklyn, the names of 1,000 are on the books of some Sunday-school, and about 500 are regular Sunday-school attendants, while the number of church communicants is some forty or fifty. The work is slow and difficult; each scholar, for the most part, requires a teacher entirely to himself; and some of the learners, it afterwards appears, attend the schools rather to study English than to be instructed in Bible truths. Yet there are many evident signs of progress.—S. S. Times.

MARRIED.—At Oberlin, O., Tuesday, June 23, Rev. John D Nutting, pastor of the Congregational church, Wauseon, O., and Miss Nannie K. Miller, of Oberlin. Ceremony by Revs. James Brand and J. K Nutting.

The happy pair followed by a thousand blessings started around the lakes for a brief visit in Chicago and Wheaton.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

The present assessed value for taxation of the Masonic temple at Boston is $316,000 and there are insurance policies on it amounting to over $200,000.

—A convention of the colored Masons of Iowa met recently at Keokuk and organized a grand chapter of royal arch Masons for the State and also a grand commandery of Knights Templar.

—The Detroit Post is caustic on the lodge organs of the Dominion: "The Canadian Freemason objects very strenuously to the daily press publishing news concerning secret societies. It does not say that its business is injured in just so many words, but that is what is meant, undoubtedly. If the Freemason is no more use to the members in its jurisdiction than similar papers which could be mentioned are to other localities, the brethren of Canada should congratulate themselves that there are other channels through which information concerning their order can be obtained than to depend upon these semi-advertising sheets."

—An official circular from the supreme lodge Knights of Honor contains some facts not very edifying to the membership. It recites the fact that the suit brought against Judge R. J. Breckenridge to recover $145,078.60 due the supreme lodge resulted in obtaining $111,490.18, leaving $31,088.43 still due.

—A lodge in England has been suspended for issuing a circular inviting members to disclose their votes on a ballot which had taken place on a candidate for initiation—the candidate being rejected by five black balls.

—The rite of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes is described thus in an Australian Masonic journal: "The Lodge of 'Three Globes' was established at Berlin in 1746, and in 1765 was constituted as a Grand Lodge. It, for a long time, practised only the three primitive degrees of Ancient Craft Masonry; but afterwards adopted seven others, borrowed from France. The three ancient degrees are under the control of the Grand Lodge, but the seven higher ones are governed by an Internal Supreme Orient, whose members are, however, elected by the Grand Lodge. The rite of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes is practised by one hundred and seventy-seven lodges in Germany."

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		@87⅜
No. 3	79	@80
Winter No 2		@93
Corn—No. 2		45½
Oats—No. 2	32½	35
Rye—No. 2		60
Bran per ton		11 50
Flour	1 75	@5 00
Hay—Timothy	8 00	@17 00
Mess pork per bbl		10 20
Butter, medium to best	10	@15½
Cheese	05	@10
Beans	55	@1 25
Eggs		11
Seeds—Timothy	1 40	@1 53
Flax		1 22
Broom corn	01	@ 05½
Hides—Green to dry flint	06½	@ 14
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	15	@20
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 40	@6 20
Common to good	2 40	@5 40
Hogs	3 60	@4 40
Sheep	2 50	@3 90

NEW YORK.

Flour	3 00	@6 15
Wheat—Winter	86	@1 01
Spring	93½	94¾
Corn	45	@54
Oats	38	@44
Mess Pork		11 50
Eggs		13½
Butter	8	20
Wool	13	@37

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 00	@5 55
Hogs	3 60	@3 85
Sheep	1 75	@3 10

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire,"	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin	4
16	Selling Dead Horses	4
17	History of Masonry	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction below is, that the person ordering any of the papers must subscribe for the Cynosure.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.00
Christian Herald (N. Y.)	2.75
The Truth (St. Louis)	2.50
Illustrated Christian Weekly	3.90
New York Witness	2.50
The Union Signal	3.00
Christian Statesman, (Phila.)	3.50
The Interior	3.85
The Independent	4.25
The S. S. Times	3.50
Gospel in All Lands	3.50
The Nation	4.50
N Y. Tribune, (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Tribune (Weekly)	2.50
Chicago Inter Ocean (Weekly)	2.50
Harper's Magazine	4.75
North American Review	5.75
The Century	5.25
Scientific American	4.25
Buds and Blossoms	2.10
Pansy	2.35
Vick's Magazine	2.50
Am. Agriculturist	2.60
Prairie Farmer	3.00
Rural New Yorker	3.30
Western Rural	3.00
Country Gentleman	3.50
Poultry World	2.50
Am. Poultry Yard	2.65

After receiving the first copy of any periodical, if any necessary complaints arise, write direct to the Publisher or to us (if more convenient) and we will forward your request.

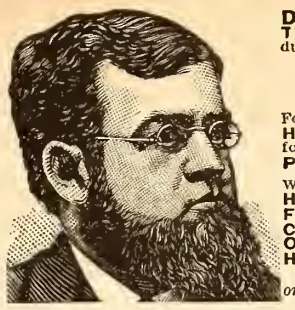
If several of the above papers are wanted, or any paper not in the above list, write for special rates.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Publisher.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

The Master's Carpet

BY

E. Ronayne.



Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 631 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying

Freemasonry at a Glance,

which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 422 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.
Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. PEIRO has devoted 23 years to the special treatment of Catarrh, Throat, Lung Diseases, founder of the Am. Oxygen Co., for the production of that wonderful remedy, used by Inhalation, so widely known as the

OXYGEN TREATMENT

For the relief and cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Nervous, Prostration, etc. Send stamp for the "Manual," an interesting book of 120 pages Four Colored Plates. Address DR. PEIRO, Chicago Opera House, [Clark and Washington Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

We refer by permission to a few of our patrons:

Hon. Wm. Penn Nixon, Ed. Inter Ocean, - - Chicago.
F. H. Tubbs, Esq., Manager W. U. Tel. Co., - Chicago.
Gen. C. H. Howard, Mrs. T. B. Carse, - - Chicago.
O. W. Nixon, M. D., Mrs. Netta C. Rood, - Chicago.
Henry R. Stiles, M. D., - - - - New York.

N. B.—Our Oxygen is safely sent anywhere in the United States, Canada or Europe by Express, Easy, plain, complete directions with each treatment.

EIGHT MONTHS FREE!

THE "CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE"

Will be sent to any address free for eight months providing you remit $2.20 for

"THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"

and a new Portrait of

GENERAL GRANT.

The American Agriculturist has just issued a magnificent stipple-style line portrait of General Grant, executed by one of the very first artists of the country. The great warrior is sitting in an easy chair in his now famous library; the expression on his countenance is exceedingly life-like, and the whole picture is grand and striking in appearance, far surpassing any previous likeness of the General. Its great merit is due to the fact that it is from General Grant's last sitting; that is, it presents him as a picture of health as he was just before his present and probably fatal malady overtook him. Other portraits, while presenting him in health, do not show his features and general appearance at a late period.

The regular price of the American Agriculturist is $1.50 per year. We have made arrangements with the publishers whereby we are enabled to send, postfree, in a tube specially made for the purpose, this portrait of General Grant, the American Agriculturist from now until the end of the year (eight months) and the Cynosure for the same time, all for the sum of $2.20.

The portrait alone sells for $1 in New York, we are reliably informed; no copies have been disposed of at less than that figure.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Publisher,
221 W. Madison st., Chicago.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contraditions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. But every subscriber to the CYNOSURE who sends to the office $2.50 shall have both for the year.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE.

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

